Lumber—Clear	37 00	55 00
Common.	11 00	12 00
Lath		2 25
Shingles	1 50	3 25
WOOL—Washed	40	58
Unwashed	27	37
LIVE STOCK Cattle, extra	6 25	6 75
Good to choice	5 00	6 00
Medium	4 25	4 75
Common	2 75	4 10
Hogs, ...	5 75	7 40
Sheep	3 75	6 50

New York Market.

Flour	$ 4 00	8 00
Wheat	1 04	1 30
Corn	84	85
Oats	68	7½
Rye	90	96
Lard		14
Mess pork		18 00
Butter	15	24
Cheese	12	16
Eggs	34	36

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

"In Secret Have I Said Nothing."—Jesus Christ.

EZRA A. COOK & CO., PUBLISHERS, NO 13 WABASH AVENUE.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 4, 1875.

VOL. VII., NO. 21.—WHOLE NO. 256
WEEKLY, $2 00 A YEAR.

Contents.

	Page
TOPICS OF THE TIME	1
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
Sloughing—Prof. Swing	8
Wolves' Logic	8
An Interesting Renunciation	8
Notes	8
CONTRIBUTED AND SELECT ARTICLES:
Gerrit Smith	1
Objections to the Grange	2
Hash	3
Popular Sins	3
REFORM NEWS and NOTICES: The Ohio Convention; The Wisconsin State Meeting; A Good Work in Northwestern Illinois; Jottings from the N. Y. Field; Elder Hurless in Lanark	4, 5
CORRESPONDENCE: From an Old Seceder; a Defeated Enemy Still Fighting; Skulls; Uncle Jason Threatened; Political; Our Mail	6
Short History of the Reform against the Secret Orders	12
Masonry a Work of Darkness (Concluded)	12
FORTY YEARS AGO: Memorable Cases of Masonic Charity	7
THE HOME CIRCLE	10
CHILDREN'S CORNER	11
The Sabbath School	7
Home and Health Hints	13
Farm and Garden	16
Temperance	13
Facts and Figures	14
Religious Intelligence	9
News of the Week	12
Publisher's Department	16

Topics of the Time.

The Senate has passed the bill for the admission of Colorado and New Mexico to the Union of States. It is a stroke of policy on the part of the Republicans. The population of either does not yet reach the required 130,000. But in the expectation of their eligibility at an early day, and admission under a Democratic rule in Congress, time has been taken by the forelock for the benefit of party rule.

The session of Congress which closes to-day, March 4th, is known as the Forty-third, as there have been forty-three sessions, each having a duration of two years, which have assembled since the Constitution went into operation in 1789. The legislative body which met from the opening of the Revolutionary war till the ratification of the Federal Constitution was the Congress of the Confederated Colonies or States, and not of the United States. The next House is known to be Democratic in sentiment. The Senate elections have just closed in Florida, West Virginia and Minnesota and determine the party force to be: Republicans 41; Democrats 21; Independent 1, and one vacancy. This leaves the Republicans a strong majority but the passage of doubtful party measures will be less certain than for some time past.

English journals are justly proud of a late occurrence which in a very unusual manner proves the stability of England's institutions, the law-abiding character of her people and their respect for the rights of property. In A.D. 875 some church property in Woolwich was leased to the Crown, and now at the expiration of the term, nine hundred and ninety-nine years, it has been quietly returned to the original owners. Such an event is more rare than a transit of Venus, and establishes as many facts in moral science as the latter does in natural. If like the African chief we seek the reason of England's greatness and the steadfast firmness of her institutions, there can be no other reply than that Victoria gave: the Bible is the foundation of England's glory. And Blackstone expressly says, the law of God furnishes the standard of English common law. This feature of political economy is too often and perhaps intentionally overlooked in our judgment of national affairs.

To keep time with the railroad war the two leading telegraph lines, the Western Union and the Atlantic and Pacific, have joined in a battle of rates. The Western Union has grown to an enormous monopoly which business men might combine against as justly as the farmers against the railroads. Its lines are spun all over the country, but the other with less business and compass has introduced several improvements greatly increasing the facility of their operations, and giving the power of successful competition, which they brought to bear on the rates. The Union line replied, and the cheap messages expected in the era of postal telegraphy may yet be had without legislation. A compromise at the public expense will probably be brought about, however, and the only sensible result of the war will be to hasten the day of government telegraphy.

The Brooklyn scandal suit has grazed the editor of the Independent. After the long and tedious examination of Tilton and the damaging testimony of his wife's nurse-maid, her brother, former publisher of the Independent, and Mrs. Moulton, the prosecution unexpectedly rested and Gen. Tracy began a three days' speech on the other side. This gentleman has not been fortunate. He was worsted in cross-examining Moulton; and it was proved that he is acting in bad faith in appearing as counsel. In opening for the defense he has blunderd into charging Bowen with conspiracy against both the litigants to save the Independent. It may not be untrue, but it would not seem wise for Beecher's case to rouse Bowen against him; and the card of pointed denial from the latter is evidently not all he could say. Neither side has seemed anxious for his testimony; he would prove too impartial a witness.

A dead man can drift down stream, but it takes a live man to pull up against it. That is the time that tries a man's soul—when the tide is against him.

Gerrit Smith.

Extract from an address by Hon. Z. Eastman before the Chicago Athenæum.

[Concluded from last week.]

While these were the grand issues on which the abolitionists of the country ranged themselves for a combined assault upon the slave power, they were of one mind on nearly all the other forms of attack. They alike exposed the complicity of the government with this wrong, and made bare, to the nation's own shame, the sympathy of the church and benevolent organizations and educational institutions,—the moral sentiment at large, for this unchristian and barbarian custom of our country. In response to a demand from the plantation, and for the protection of the slave-master's claim to property in man, the people of the whole country were made to regard the whole slave population as out of the pale of humanity; worse than being shut up in one vast prison-house, for all right of access was denied to them. No voice of sympathy or advice was permitted to be sent over to them.

The most revolutionary crisis of the whole anti-slavery history, was when Gerrit Smith claimed a right to address the slaves, and to address them as brothers in bonds. It produced an astonishment unparalleled in this country. It hardly met with a sympathetic response at the North; at the South it was met with imprecations. To speak to the slave as a man and brother was audacious. Gerrit Smith's Address to the Slaves of the United States is one of the most remarkable documents that was ever published. It came out about 1843. To judge of its effects, and to understand its character, it is necessary to know well the state of public feeling at the time. No man, perhaps, was ever more bitterly assailed than was Gerrit Smith for publishing this address. It was interpreted to be an appeal to the infuriated savages on the plantations to rise and cut their kind masters' throats. Yet there was in all of the appeal an admonition to bear patiently their ills, and return good for evil, so long as there was no chance for liberty, that could have been found in an Epistle from St. Paul. True, few slaves ever saw it; very few indeed could have read it had they seen it. It was like speaking to the deaf; for the friends to whom he spoke were deaf and dumb indeed. But the moral effect on the masters was all the same. In it he taught that heretical doctrine,—the right to steal. Having enjoined them to bear with manly patience, as they were true men, the ills that they could not fly from, he told them in the language of the apostle, if they could get their liberty, to use it rather. And he told how they might best take it. That they should flee from bondage as they would flee for dear life, and to take anything of their master's that would aid them in their flight, without twinge of conscience. This was the awful doctrine that was denounced in nearly all the newspapers, and in many a pulpit, as Gerrit Smith's advice to steal—his immorality in denying the sinfulness of stealing. Think of a religion in a civilized community, that could sink to so low a level of mere political demagoguery!

His practice was in harmony with his advice. No wanderer from oppression, seeking shelter at his door, was ever turned away. Whatever might be the perils of the law, it made no difference. Nor was this all. Whatever could be done by organization and concert of action, to aid and shelter and help them on to freedom, he did. For no part of the anti-slavery cause was his money more freely spent than to aid the slaves to escape to Canada. Everybody knew Gerrit Smith's views and practices on that point. He helped all such as needed money in that sort of work. If trouble came upon any who were doing duty in that line, he stood by them. He obtained counsel to defend them before the courts. He always advised caution; he would ever restrain the impetuous, in their zeal in the underground railroad business; but he was the last man on earth to abandon a friend in trouble. Very many of the best people in this country suffered a living martyrdom; some died martyrs in conscientiously aiding the fugitive from injustice in remembering those in bonds as bound with them. Think of the three abolitionists imprisoned in Missouri, and Charles T. Torrey rotting in a Maryland prison. Gerrit Smith proved himself the best friend among men, that these poor prisoners found. There is nothing nobler in the life of this great man, than his sympathy for such afflicted ones. He poured out money without stint for the relief of all such. His left hand never knew what his right hand bountifully did, for all that pertained to the aid of the flying fugitives. We may know, by searching out, something of his beneficence in many directions, but it can never be known how much money he invested in this way, or how many anxious thoughts, it gave him; how many days of hard work.

One of the most cheering of all the aspects of this effort, was the encouragement he gave to the elevation and education of those whose manhood had been crushed out of them on the plantation. He selected some of the best specimens, to show to our hard-hearted and hard-skulled moralists, what could be done in the education of the colored man. By his own means, as his own father had done for him, he gave to Samuel R. Ward and Henry Hiland Garnet, two stalwart negroes, as black and shiny as your boot, a classical education; and both of them proved orators hardly surpassed by Fred. Douglas. Garnet is now a bright and shining light in the Presbyterian church. Sella Martin, another half-black genius, I think was educated by Gerrit Smith. Fred. Douglas, William Wells Brown, William and Ella Crofts, and Remond, are all like samples from the plantation, which our Garrison friends educated, and show what the world has lost by so long shutting this race up in intellectual darkness.

Thus moved on for many years this irrepressible conflict. The slaveholders were ever exacting more; getting all they asked got nothing to their satisfaction. All that the abolitionists demanded was free speech on this as any other subject, and to be absolved as American citizens from all responsibility for the existence of slavery. Slavery demanded guarantees for its continuence. Two things it demanded, which getting and in struggling to get, it came to its own death. These were the Fugitive Slave law and the extention of slavery into the national territory. The passage of the Fugitive Slave law, that great outrage and humiliation of the North, came very near to Gerrit Smith, in all its odious features, as that infamous bill was signed as President by Millard Fillmore, a citizen of New York, and a former political associate. Smith was a man who knew the value of law, and human obligation to obey. But that was a law that this nation could not keep and live. There was no statesmanship that could engineer this country over that crisis, in keeping the law and save the country from degradation. There is no true statesmanship in permitting laws to be enacted which the moral sense of a nation will not permit to be enforced. What folly not to see it! It is not necessary to repeat the history of the attempted enforcement of that law. There was an unmistakable voice throughout the country, none more emphatic than Gerrit Smith's, that these laws should not be obeyed. With all his force he resisted it; and as a good law-abiding citizen should resist. He was determined to defend to the last dollar of his fortune, all such of his associates as might be involved in trouble in resisting, and delivering the victims from the jaws of the devourer. The so-called "Jerry Rescue" at Syracuse, is an illustration. Jerry was captured as a slave in the State of New York, and by the authority of the United States marshal, confined in the city prison. It became a political necessity that the general government should make a demonstration, and bring under subjugation the rebellious instincts of that State where Gerrit Smith's philanthropy held largest sway. That was the fortunate opportunity. However, heavy pieces of timber under the force of exasperated human muscle, smashed through those prison doors, and Jerry went free. This was done, though it was known that back of that authority to keep shut those prison doors and Jerry enclosed within, was the cannon and bayonets of the United States, at the word of a citizen of New York in the Presidential Chair. Bad luck to the cannon ball that has an adverse public opinion for a target! Be assured Gerrit Smith did not abandon those heroes of the Jerry Rescue. He was in every sense their chief defender and justifier.

The other important demand of the slave power, to make slave territory of free, was the next step in the line of aggressions, and from it came the unstatesmanlike act, to call it a no harder name, engineered by the Senator from this State, the repeal of the Missouri Compromise. This brought that heroic chapter in the history of our country, the contest for freedom in Kansas; and the hero of heroes in this country, John Brown, and Gerrit Smith's co-partnership with Brown in the Kansas work, and that sympathy that went with him to Harper's Ferry and to the gallows at Charlestown, and with that soul that there took up his march in the moral campaigns which followed.

Among Smith's numerous schemes of benevolence, was that one in which he had offered a farm away up in the Adirondack mountain regions, to any colored man, bond or free no matter, the more bond the better, who would go there and clear it up. Thence, some years before, went John Brown to be a guide and comfort to these long neglected men. Here is where Brown and Smith found their great affinities, and that they were wonderfully adapted to duplicate each other in some grand enterprise for public good; and that partnership in Kansas work of Smith and Brown began. While John Brown was here, his sons went to Kansas to be free settlers on free lands. While they discovered the necessity of having arms to protect themselves in their rights. John Brown had not much money, and no more guns then were needed for his personal use. So he went where both were more abundant, and made his wants known, and that was at an anti-slavery convention at Syracuse, in June, 1855, the scene of the "Jerry Rescue." Let John Brown tell in his simple style, his first connection with Gerrit Smith in the Kansas work:

"I have reason to bless God that I came. I have met with a most warm reception. All except a few honest peace friends give a most hearty approval of my intention of arming my sons, and other friends in Kansas. I have received donations to the amount of sixty dollars, twenty from Gerrit Smith. John's two letters were introduced and read with such effect by Gerrit Smith as to draw tears from numerous eyes in the great collection of people present. The convention has been the most interesting I ever attended. I made a great addition to the number of warm-hearted and honest friends."

I have given the letter in detached sentences. Sixty dollars to begin the armament of Kansas; twenty dollars of it by Gerrit Smith!

I have no time to tell the story of Kansas. Gerrit Smith, in a private letter to me, written within a year, states that he gave John Brown, for his work in Kansas $16,000. You all believe that Brown faithfully used the money; that not a dollar was spent on his own pride.

Gerrit Smith knew that John Brown was going to Harper's Ferry. But I don't think he knew precisely what he meditated upon doing; if he had known he would have advised him to stop, or measure well his steps, as Fred. Douglas did. There was a malicious attempt made to involve him in the meshes and bring him under the heel of Henry A. Wise, Governor. But that scene of blood, notwithstanding the heroic upbearing of his friend Brown, who felt no more concern for himself than did Daniel in the lion's den, was too much for the fine-strung nerves of Gerrit Smith, for he was not a man of war, he believed not in the efficacy of human blood. He suffered in body and mind, until satisfaction came in the realization that it was God's hand that directed the event; that his money, his advice and sympathy, his faithfully standing by the good cause, and pleading for those that were dumb, had been a strong power accepted by Providence, where John Brown could only offer devotion and his own life for the great end that was finally accomplished.

It is not necessary for the completion of the strong lights of the picture I have drawn of this man's character to refer to the pleasant epoch in the decline of his life, when, not changed himself, the country had of itself fallen into harmony with the spirit of his long and useful life; and he goes down to the grave respected and honored by his fellow-citizens with whom he had held that long irrepressible conflict, which made them cry out crucify him; sustaining himself by the forgiving spirit of his Master.

Objections to the Grange.

BY WILLISTON B. STEARNS.

A Wisconsin man stated through the columns of the Chicago Tribune that, up to July, 1874, 21,000 granges had been formed, with a membership of over 2,000,000. He found that this vast membership had paid for:

"Dispensations," at $15 each,	$ 300,000
Initiation fees at $3 per person,	6,000,000
Six-cent quarterly dues to State Granges yearly,	480,000
Ten-cent monthly dues, yearly	2,400,000
Ten-cent annual dues to National Grange,	200,000
Total expense known,	$9,380,000.

Besides this amount an unknown amount had been paid for "Charters," and by the annual tax of 50 cts. for each female and $1.00 for each male.

Six millions three hundred thousand dollars were expended to organize; and three millions eighty thousand dollars paid yearly to keep up the institution, besides the increase of taxes consequent on the increase of membership since.

What is expected in return for this money? What is considered an equivolant for it? It is this: 'Combination,' 'Co-operation,' 'Social culture,' 'No class legislation,'—and, in the words of the Master of the Illinois State Grange, "Improvement in farming, in the modes of cultivating the soil as well as modes of disposal of the products." This he called the "leading object."

Here are four objects. The first is "Combination and Co-operation." But why combine and co-operate? The avowed reason is, "To wage war against unjust monopolies which enjoy the protection of unequal laws." A resolution of the Illinois State Grange, to "prevent indiscriminate extension of patents," indicates one of the monopolies complained of. No one will deny that this is a great evil in regard to sewing machines, etc., but the remedying of the wrong belongs to the province of legislators. The farmers might co-operate a century and without good legislators fail to mitigate the evil. Then elect good representatives. Come straight to the thing. Don't let us create all the cumbrous machinery of government, expensive, secret, requiring time, subject to fraud and inward corruption, and then have to resort to the old and only republican way of remedying evils, viz.,

BY CONVENTIONS AND PETITIONS.

What a confession was made when the State Grange of Illinois met at Springfield last January and passed three resolutions. A body of men, representing 1533 granges, pleading, not commanding, that evils be abated! Why don't they "wage WAR against unjust monopolies," as they said? Perhaps a slight explanation of their weakness may be gained from the following: "The State Grange of Illinois is in trouble with its secretary and treasurer. It can't get reports. Its officers refuse to settle. The Executive Committee calls upon the secretaries of subordinate granges to send to the Executive Committee of the State certificates of the amounts of money they have forwarded to the State Grange Secretary for degrees and quarterly dues for 1874."

Here is a little unfaithfulness all can see. Unmanagable bodies cannot manage others; and it is probable that the farming community will continue to eat jelly made of old boots, drink coffee manufactured from shirts, use sugar made from linen treated with nitric acid, and molasses made from old rags and muriatic acid for some time to come, unable to remedy the atrocious monopolies and swindles practiced upon them. They will also buy their packages of manufactured articles just the same as usual, thinking they have just weights given them, when the fact is that "everything that is put in packages is cut short" and any weight between four ounces and a pound is called a pound. Do you think a society whose State treasurer and secretary won't show their records, will wage severe war on these swindles? Why, notwithstanding all the grange orators and leaders, the people have not been informed of these swindles, which affect them vastly more than the tariff of railroads, which they patronize comparatively little. These evils demand not secret whispers of reform; not quarterly and monthly taxes, charters and dispensations, but open platform work, popular sentiment against representatives who will not convert these things —open election to those who will. The very objects that have caused the existence of the grange demand that it shall throw aside its constitution which declares it a secret society, "not meddling with politics or religion," binding it under the control of one central body which largely claims its dues, and from the ruins of the grange form a political national party.

There is but one more view that can possibly be taken regarding the supposed necessity for "grange-combination." It is this: they wish to make their own farming utensils and they must combine to do so. At present a large manufactory is being erected on Rock River, by a firm composed of farmers who hold $25 stock shares. They say plows are sold at 200 per cent. above cost. They can do better. We doubt not they will do all they claim and will furnish good machinery at less than present rates; but there is no more argument here for the existence of the grange than there is for an absolute monarchy in this country. And the fact they have agreed to sell only to stock-holders at bare cost of running the concern, while outsiders, grangers or not, must pay full price, proves that the six-cent quarterly dues they send the State Grange, and the ten-cent annual dues given to the National Grange, are at least useless and unnecessary expenses.

So far as the social culture argument is concerned, we agree it is needed; but deny the wisdom of the method to obtain it. If the farmers would make use of the church which should supply this great need, then their children would not be so likely to contract doubtful morals while the old folks are enjoying their grange picnics, and becoming hilarious over their wine. The fact is wine is and will be used. At a grange ball at Bedford, Mich., two roughs became "obnoxious" and one threw a bottle at the Master, "terribly lacerating his face and destroying his eye." Here is a specimen of grange "social culture." This is perfectly consistent with this dancing and wine-drinking institution whose "leading object" is improvement in farming." A ball-room is a funny place to learn how to break raw prairie and cultivate corn! It is also objectionable as a means of social improvement when we consider the little mental discipline "young grangers" receive, their natural want of economy and their all-absorbing love of fun.

Class-legislation is an evil of no little magnitude. We doubt not Wall street has helped make laws, and liquor-manufactories and railroads also. We doubt not patents to rich firms have been extended "indiscriminately," and that Congress has given away too much land. But all these facts prove that the Republican party is insufficient; that the balance of power has been in its hands too long; that there is a need of some George Washington to arise and condemn the "grabbing" of the present administration by giving, without recompense, his services to his country, in leading into the political arena a party which will take the reins of government. The grange claims to not "meddle" with politics therefore it cannot fill the bill.

The improvement-in-farming view of the secret grange is funny if not ridiculous. We believe farmers will become more skillful in their noble profession the more they unite with other people to talk, read and discuss the subject of agriculture; therefore they should admit everybody. They should admit the manufacturer, because he has to learn the needs of the farm before he can invent machinery to supply them; the horticulturalist, for he furnishes trees for the farmer's orchard; the stock-raiser, for he sells to the farmer superior blooded animals that are gradually crowding out the unprofitable runts; the printer, for he is the transcript of all intelligence and the recorder of all actions, without him every discovery sinks into oblivion; the groceryman, for he must furnish an immense amount of merchandise to the farmer, and he can tell what barrel contains his "Orleans drip," and what barrel contains the remnants of rag-bag molasses; the dry-good's man, for the unwitting knowledge he possesses, were it fully understood, would save the farmer more expense than any other one monopoly causes under heaven. As it is now, nearly every dealer in clothing, by carefully manipulating his goods of different quality, maintains his profession of having "one price," and still gets the price of best woolen for "mixed goods" and even for "old rags made over,"from the simple-minded grangers. We insist, therefore, that the grange should take in every one except villains and criminals, should hold its money in its own hands instead of amassing it in the hands of the State and National Granges; and should be a straightforward political society. In short, the grange should cease to be a secret cabal, and become an open, honest, American organization.

Hash.

We may consider mankind as the possessor of a moral stomach, which is the deportment of our moral being that receives and digests things of a moral nature and kind. We propose then, to give our rerders, a sort of receipt for hash prepared for the human conscience, or heart.

Prepare as follows:

1. Presumption (consisting in blind and reckless pledges at lodge door) one part, at $40.

2. Degradation (consisting of nakedness, hoodwinks, cable-tows, etc.) one part.

3. Profane and shocking oaths, two parts.

4. Bloody penalties, of throat-cutting, tongue-eradicating, skull-smiting, heart-tearing, etc., two parts.

5. Mock virtues, as "faith, hope and charity," prayers, benevolence, etc., one part.

6. Heathenish rites, one part.

7. Infidelity, two parts.

8. Hypocrisy, two parts.

9. Lewdness implied ("I will not defile a Master Mason's wife, daughter, etc., I knowing them to be such,") one part.

10. Forbidden titles, from which an angel would shrink, two parts.

11. Pompous display, three parts.

Add to all these lambskins, gavels, &c., with overwhelming supplies of juices of "refreshments," such as brandy, wine, etc.

Then lavish all over and through a flavoring of "concentracted lies of all sorts, white, red and black, but most of the last, and stew them together over the grand cook stove of the grand master of lodges, and in due time you will have a dish too highly seasoned for the weaker sort of fallen ones in the empire of him whose works the Son of God came to destroy; sufficiently seasoned, perhaps, to tempt the taste of Diabolus himself. But, however this might be, experience shows that this is a rare dish to many a dignitary in the churches! Pastors, deacons, class-leaders, presiding elders and bishops all agree that such a dish is XXX But should any be found in the church for whom the dish is not seasoned enough, it is easy to add the fifth libation with the covenant of double damnation, which many D. D.'s relish and highly recommend; then grate in the human skull to taste, as down in the ninth cell of the Knights Templar's degree. And still there is room enough below, way down in the "ineffable" realm of degrees, which seems to be in reference in a very ancient book, where occurs the phrase "BOTTOMLESS PIT."

From this inexaustible source, we may presume, the rare ingredients, here in reference, may be drawn in greater abundance than petrolium from this pregnant earth. It may be added here that to the great mass of those who use lodge hash, the third degree seasoning is all they can find strength to digest, while many fall at the first and second some of whom throw it all up, greatly to the the chagrin of the stronger members of the craft. And there is yet another class, called "Antis," whose stomach will not bear any such dish. They cannot swallow it with seasoning No. 1, nor yet with a tincture of this. How weak! Such men as Herod the Baptist-killer, and Ruloff could relish the strongest dish, but they were giants.—Masonic Journal of Health.

What a capacity he must possess, morally speaking, whose great maw can receive with impunity and pleasure a continental mass of mingled oaths, penalties, imprecations, titles, ad-infinitum called degrees in Masonry! And these beings, some of them, preaching the Gospel! A man loaded down to the thirty-third degree, the first one of which vilifies Jesus Christ, and every succeeding degree intensifies the crime, preaching Jesus the way to heaven! For the only parallel that we can think of see Acts. xvi. 16–18.

What shall he do who has swallowed such a hash of heathenism, popery and infidelity, of blasphemy, selfishness, and savage penalties, amounting to the code of blood, but to eject it from the soul? If such a load does not so offend his moral sense as to compel him to disgorge it by confessions of penitential grief, he cannot be in a healthy state, cannot keep a "good conscience," "void of offense," such a dish on the conscience of a good man would throw him into fits. NATHAN CALLENDER.

We are often puzzled and startled by the conduct of those in whose piety we thought we might place undoubting confidence, and whom we should have pointed out as Christian examples to others. Upon some occasions they exhibit such appearance of conformity to the world as would lead us to suppose they belonged to it.

How desirable, therefore, that we should deal faithfully with ourselves, and see that Christian principles pervade our hearts, and form and fashion our whole lives! Let us cherish a tender conscience. Let us remember whatever unfits us for religious duties; whatever cools the fervor of of our devotions; whatever indisposes us to read our Bible, or to engage in prayer; whatever we could not engage in with a perfectly clear conscience; wherever the thought of a suffering Savior or a holy God—of the hour of death, or of the day of judgment, falls like a cold shadow on our enjoyment: the pleasures which we can not thank God for, and on which we can not ask his blessing, these are not for us.

Let us never go where we can not ask God to go with us. Let us never be found where we cannot act as Christ would have us. Let us pass each day as pilgrims consciously on the way to their heavenly inheritance. Let us press after closer communion with Jesus. Let the love of God reign in our hearts, and thus shall we be kept from a thousand snares, and become possessed of a peace and joy to which the worldling is a stranger.—The Witness.

HUMAN REASON.—"Polished steel," says John Foster, "will not shine in the dark. No more can reason, however refined or cultivated, shine efficaciously, but as it reflects the light of divine truth shed from heaven.

Popular Sins.

One of the popular evils, and a monster evil of the day, against which very many ministers hold their peace and expos not, is novel reading, the popular, fascinating and bewitching periodicals that are flooding the land, scattering widely "firebrands, arrows and death." And can we expect those placed on the walls of Zion to "cry aloud and spare not," declaim against these serpents in the grass, so long as they patronize them, allow them on their center-tables? so long as religious editors advertise and puff them?

—"A novel was a book,
Three volum'd, and once read; and oft crammed full
Of poisoning error, blackening every page,
And oftener still, of trifling, second-hand,
Remarkable and old, diseased and putrid thought,
And miserable incident, at war
With nature, with itself and truth at war;
Yet charming still the greedy reader on,
Till done—he tried to recollect his thought,
And nothing found but dreaming emptiness."

D. F. N.

Notices.

The National Christian Association.

PRESIDENT.—B. T. Roberts, Rochester, N. Y.

DIRECTORS.—Philo Carpenter, J. Blanchard, A. Wait, I. A. Hart, C. R. Hagerty, E. A. Cook, J. G. Terrill, O. F. Lumry. J. M. Wallace, Isaac Preston, Wm. Pinkney.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.—C. A. Blanchard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

RECORDING SECRETARY AND TREASURER.—H. L. Kellogg, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER.—J. P. Stoddard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

AUDITOR.—H. A. Fischer.

OBJECT.—"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved; to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

Life membership, $10.00; annual do, 25 cents. The names of members and general correspondence of the Association should be sent to the Corresponding Secretary. To carry on the increasing and successful lecture work by agents in different States and for promoting the general work of the Association donations of any amount are solicited from all friends of the reform. All donations or bequests should be sent to the Treasurer.

The Seventh Anniversary of the National Christian Association will be held in the City of Pittsburgh, Pa., June 8th to 10th, 1875.

The Corresponding Secretary or his assistant may be seen at the Cynosure office from 9 to 11 A. M.

Michigan State Convention.

After much correspondence and thought it is decided to hold an Anti-masonic convention for organizing the State of Michigan at Linden, Genesee Co., on the 30th and 31st of March.

We hope the Genesee county Association will do all in their power to make the meeting a success and that our readers throughout the whole State will extend the notice and attend the meeting.

Rev. J. P. Stoddard and Prof. C. A. Blanchard will probably be there from out of the State, and we hope a number of good speakers on the subject, resident in Michigan, will attend. A. Oldfield writes: "We must have and must zealously sustain well organized associations. . . Then again we must have an efficient State agent and lecturer in the field." Another brother writes: "The cry should be, 'To arms! to arms,'" using "spiritual" not "carnal" "weapons."

Reform News.

—The General Agent reports in brief from Wisconsin. A full report of this encouraging meeting may be expected next week. It is probable also that some word will be received from Iowa by that time.

—Rev. A. W. Geesling, we learn from the Albany Freeman, lectured at Mt. Pleasant School-house, DeKalb Co., Mo., on the evening of Jan. 26th. It was the first effort of the kind in that locality and a good audience was present.

—Bro. Williams, the efficient co-worker with the Illinois Agent, writes from Warren, Ill., that in spite of the severe cold and drifted snow the two weeks trip through Jo Daviess Co. was fairly successful. Good audiences were generally present, and the lecturer laid open the falseness, blasphemy and heathenism of the lodge with good effect.

—The officers of the Cerro Gordo Co. Association with over twenty others sent last week a statement of the advantages of Mason City, their county seat, for the Iowa meeting. The appointment having been given at Eldora, however, and the time being so short, the General Agent thought best not to change. A subsequent letter from Bro. T. Palmeter, Sec'y of the society, says they will all go to Eldora who possibly can do so.

—G. Crook writes that the first anti-secret meeting ever held in Concord Station, Erie Co, Pa., took place on the 18th ult. A good audience was present and no doubt the effect will be to open some blind eyes in the community.

The Ohio State Convention.—Report of Resolutions, Addresses, etc., from the Secretary.

The Ohio State Convention of Christians opposed to secret societies, met at 2 o'clock P. M., Wednesday, February 17th, 1875, in Smith's Opera Hall, in the city of Mansfield, pursuant to a call signed by President Chas. G. Finney of Oberlin, and fifty-six others. Rev. Wm. Wishart, D. D., of Ontario, called the Convention to order and Rev. H. Cogswell of Mansfield led in prayer. Rev. D. H. French then delivered an address of welcome which was responded to by Dr. Wishart on behalf of the Convention.

The Convention then elected Rev. R. H. Buchanan of Huntsville, chairman, who, on taking the chair, thanked the Convention in few but earnest words, and at once proceeded to call for business.

Col. Rob't. Cowden of Galion, Cor. Sec. of State S. S. Union, was chosen to act as secretary. The following committees were then elected by the Convention:

On Enrollment, Rev. D. D. Hart of Oceola and Mr. J. G. Mattoon of West Unity;

On Correspondence, Rev. D. H. French of Mansfield;

On Finance, Mr. Joseph Roe of Ontario, Mr. Wm. Ralston of Mansfield, and R. H. Pollock, D. D., of Wooster;

To Circulate State Constitution for Signatures in the Convention, Prof. J. A. Ramsey of Iberia, and Mr. J. F. Hanna of DeKalb;

On Resolutions, Rev. J. S. Cutler of Sycamore, Rev. L. Moore of Green Springs and Rev. W. Wishart, D. D., of Ontario.

Rev. J. P. Stoddard, General Agent, then opened the discussion by a powerful argument against secrecy, based on its anti-Christian spirit, exhibiting his thorough knowledge of its boasted secrets and ancient traditions and fully convincing every candid hearer of the folly and extreme wickedness of the institution.

Mr. George W. Clark of Dansville, N. Y., the well-known veteran singer, having just arrived, was called on for a song, after which the Convention took recess until 7 o'clock, P. M.

EVENING SESSION.

The convention re-assembled at 7 P. M. and was led in prayer by Rev. D. S. Caldwell of Nevada, State Agent.

The first address of the session was by Rev. R. H. Pollock, D. D., of Wooster, who made and proved the following points, making free use of Webb's Masonic Monitor, which he held in his hand and read from:—1st. That the degrees of knighthood are no part of Masonry proper. 2d. That Christ's name is studiedly omitted from all their rituals and prayers. 3d. That their quotations from Scripture, especially from 2 Thess. iii., were so garbled as to entirely omit the name. Thus fully establishing the deistical character of the order of Freemasons. The speaker concluded with an encoursging prediction as to the result of these discussions.

The next speaker was Rev. J. P. Lytle of New Concord, well known to Anti-masonic readers. He said some one had formulated the minister's duties as follows: "Preach the Gospel; mind your own business; and let other people alone." The speaker would say, preach the Gospel; attend to the Master's business, and do not let other people alone in their sins. This is a religious-political movement. What is the relation of Masonry to the church of Christ? One of the three answers is inevitable: 1st. It is friendly; 2nd. It is neutral; or, 3d. It is hostile. It does not claim to be directly for. The Bible declares there can be no neutrality. It claims to be religious. Has its Bibles, prayers, hymns, regenerations, baptism, burial service, ritual, and "grand lodge above." It is a solemn mockery, a caricature, a travesty. Drew a contrast between the Masonic "High Priest" and Christ; between the Mason's, and the Christian's heaven. Declared an irrepressible conflict between deism and infidelity on the one hand, and Christianity on the other, until the latter shall have universal dominion.

The Convention then adjourned till 8 1 2 o'clock to-morrow morning.

Thursday, 9 1-4 o'clock, A. M.

President called Convention to order, and Rev. J. S. Cutler engaged in prayer.

Rev. J. P. Stoddard then reviewed the objects and the conventions of the National Association opposed to secret societies, and recommended the election of delegates to the next annual meeting of that body in Pittsburgh, Pa., on the 8th of June next. He also stated the need of the society to have a publishing house and a literature of its own, and the proposition of Mr. Philo Carpenter of Chicago to donate to the society, for this purpose, lot 221 West Madison street of that city, on which is a suitable building, etc., provided certain reasonable conditions are complied with. The Convention went into committee of the whole to consider the matter, and Dr. Pollock of Wooster was called to the chair. The result of the deliberations of this committee was the unanimous adoption of the following:

Resolved, That we approve of the plan proposed for establishing a publishing house; that we recommend, that Mr. Carpenter's proposition be gratefully accepted and that we will use all proper means to render it effectual.

The committee rose and reported, and the Convention unanimously confirmed the action. The more substantial action of the Convention on this question, may be seen in the report of the following committee, appointed to solicit funds in furtherance of the enterprise, to-wit: Rev. W. A. Campbell of Clifton, Greene Co.; Rev. Allen McNeal, Iberia, Morrow Co.; Rev. D. Yant, Bolivar, Stark Co.; James Auten, Galion, Crawford Co.; W. P. Clark, Mansfield, Richland Co.

Prof. J. A. Ramsey of Ohio Central College then addressed the Convention on "Secret Societies in Colleges." The speaker had the advantage of experience and the testimony of many others in Yale, Harvard, Cornell, Indiana, and other colleges and universities, all concurring in their testimony to the unmixed evils resulting from these societies.

The Convention here took recess until 2 o'clock, P. M.

AFTERNOON.

On reassembling Rev. Mr. Patterson of Penn'a engaged in prayer. Rev. D. H. French, committee on correspondence, read a communication from Dr. Edwin Booth of Crestline, which was full of point and pith. A very brief letter was also read from Dr. Bingham. Rev. J. S. Cutler from committee read the following resolutions which were adopted entire:

RESOLUTIONS.

1. Resolved, That secret organizations—oath-bound or the equivalent, such as Freemasonry, Odd-fellowship, Jesuitism, etc.; working by intrigue, craft, injustice and other immoral and anti-Christian means, either in the interest of a selfish, aspiring clan, or an unscrupulous, spiritual despotism; threatening our Christian, educational, social and civil order, call for public convention, discussion, inquiry and mutual counsel.

2. Resolved, That this convention earnestly invite all persons opposed to organized secrecy, especially oath bound, to cooperate with us, whatever may be their estimate of the relative evils of different secret organizations.

3. Resolved, That young men especially should be invited to examine the literature of the anti-secrecy movement, the revelations of conscientious seceding Masons, and their confirmation by adhering Masons under oath before the courts, in New York, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts.

4. Resolved, That it is especially the duty of public teachers and churches to inform themselves of the anti-Christian character of the Masonic system, its deistic ritual and religion, its awful oaths and penalties and use of the names and titles of God.

5. Resolved, That the power of learning is being largely perverted in most of our colleges to the interest of secretism: (1) By secret societies among the students supplanting by craft and intrigue the open literary societies; (2) By the advice or consent of college officials to this most hurtful innovation.

6. Resolved, That the people from whom our colleges receive their charters, their resources and their students, have a right to demand, and should demand the immediate suppression of organized secrecy in said colleges as that which is corrupting and poisoning the very fountains of our social, civil and religious life.

7. Resolved, That the attempt to promote any moral reform by secretism, tends to bring the entire movement into suspicion, to divide its friends, and repel those it seeks to reclaim, and that such attempts are a cunning device to avert from Masonry the odium justly attached to it and to mislead the young men of our country.

8. Resolved, That as in the anti-slavery contest, so now we take issue with this mighty and oppressive power of darkness in the name of Christ alone, reading on his banner, "When the enemy shall come in like a flood, the spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him."

Rev. J. J. Gridley of Greenville then read an original poem on Masonry, amusing and satrical, which elicited frequent applause. Rev. H. H. George, D. D., of West Geneva, addressed the Convention at length on the anti-Christian character of Freemasonry, in which he strongly insisted against their admission to Christian communion. His argument was forcible and convincing.

Rev. D. D. Hart, United Brethren; Rev. D. Yant, Meth. Episcopal; Rev. H. H. George, D. D., Ref. Presbyterian; and Rev. R. H. Pollock, D. D., United Presbyterian, were elected delegates from this body to attend the National Convention in Pittsburgh, commencing an the 8th of June, 1875.

The Convention here took recess until 7 o'clock, P. M.

EVENING SESSION.

Rev. H. P. McClurkin of New Concord led in prayer.

Rev. D. D. Hart of Com. on Enrollment, reported one hundred and twenty-seven delegates present.

Pres. J. H. Fairchild of Oberlin was then introduced and said that he occupied a conservative position on this question of secrecy. Apprehends no direct or intended injury to society or the state. Does not share the belief of some that secretists intend to usurp the government.

I. Causes which attract to, and retain young men in the lodge. 1st. Personal advantage. 2d. Social priveleges.—Dangerous and mischievous. Damages personal character. Has no science. Only theme is secrecy. Enslaves the mind. Confuses the mind as to what is right and what is wrong. Deadens the conscience. Unfavorable to a delicate sense of honor. Advantages to adherents. Contrary to principles of true honor. Encourages a false feeling of dependence.

II. Harmful tendencies on social life. It produces an artificial relationship in life. Takes men out of the family, the neighborhood, and the church. Instead of extending brotherhood it contracts it. Injures wives, mothers and children. Cannot endure discussion. Grows impatient and ill tempered. A disturber of the natural order in business and society. These are the regular operations. But there are reasons for believing that these are irregular operations of great injustice. It defeats justice. Engenders suspicion. Unsettles confidence, and has evil tendencies in great number.

Mr. G. W. Clark then repeated a Scottish quotation and sang a song. A collection amounting to twelve dollars and forty cents was then received to assist in defraying Mr. Clark's traveling expenses.

Prof. J. G. Carson of Xenia was next introduced and spoke more than an hour with great earnestness and masterly effect. The wine did not in the least depreciate as the feast neared its close, nor did the large audience abate their breathless interest till the very last. The closing scene and the crowning interest of the entire Convention was reached when Rev. Henry Cogswell of Mansfield appeared before the audience and said that he was a Royal Arch Mason, and that he regarded this Convention as a Godsend to him, affording him an opportunity of doing what he had already determined on. He had found Masonry to be antagonistic to his teachings and his duties, and proceeded to read his written recantation of all the oaths and obligations he had ever, as a Mason, assumed, and renounced forever all affiliation with the order. He said that in defense of his present act he was prepared, if need be, to give even his life. He was calm but deeply earnest.

At the conclusion of his remarks the Convention was adjourned with benediction by Rev. J. P. Lytle, after thirteen hours of deliberation and discussion.

The large hall was filled each evening. Mr. Clark interspersed the exercises of the Convention with stirring songs and counsels.

Thus closed the most important convention ever held in this part of the State. ROBERT COWDEN, Sec'y.

The Wisconsin State Meeting Sketched by the General Agent.

CLINTON JUNCTION, Wis., Feb. 25, 1875.

DEAR K.—The first anniversary of Wisconsin Anti-secrecy Association is numbered among events past, and those who attended it will recall in future many and pleasant features of the occasion. Fifty enrolled as delegates at the first sitting and others arrived on the same and following day.

President J. W. Wood presided, and under his efficient lead much important business was dispatched and the most perfect order maintained. The addresses were able and characterized by judicious, thorough investigation of the fundamental principles of the secret orders and the results which must inevitably follow in every instance where these are carried out. The entire absence of bitterness, denunciation and railing accusation was a credit to the speakers, and in my judgment a presage of permanance in the work accomplished. The citizens of Delavan are entitled to the gratitude of all friends of our cause and especially of those present to enjoy the hospitality and good cheer so freely tendered.

Among items of business I notice election of officers for the ensuing year: Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo; Vice Pres., Rev. E. L. Harris, Delavan; Sec'y., Rev. R. Cooley, Lima Center; Treasurer, M. R. Britten, Vienna; Ex. Com., J. W. Wood, E. L. Harris and Philo Elzea. Bro. Elzea's labors in the State since Nov. 1st, 1874, have been arduous, and according to reports eminantly successful. He was heartily indorsed by the convention and recommended to the favorable notice of the National Association as agent and lecturer for the State. After raising funds to cancel the expense of the convention, something like seventy dollars were either payed or pledged towards his support. If friends not present will follow the good example of their brethren in convention and give as the Lord's cause requires and their means will permit, Bro. E. will receive a competency and the work be prosecuted with vigor. Bro. E. will report his labors through the Cynosure, and by request of the convention endeavor to introduce our national organ more extensively in the State.

Delegates were chosen to attend the anniversary at Pittsburgh and Bro. Wood was requested to speak at that meeting in behalf of the cause in Wisconsin.

The absence of Bro. Harris from our meetings was regretted by every friend. This excellent and indefatigable worker, to whom the cause of Christ and reform in Wisconsin is greatly indebted, was detained by sickness, but he was present in spirit, "helping together with prayer," and his companion like a true woman, wife and reformer, was on hand to represent both herself and her afflicted husband.

On the whole, I look upon this first anniversary meeting as a decided success. Though not as large, and probably not so learned as either the New York or the Ohio State meetings, yet in some respects it may be justly claimed that it surpassed either. I will not, however, draw comparisons, suffice is to say, that friendsin each did what they could and have resolved by the help of God to do more and do it better in the future. I had purposed to speak of Mr. Carpenter's proposal and the way it was received by the convention, but space forbids. In a word, it was received with devout thanksgiving to God and to his servant, and hailed as an auspicious omen, and I shall bring with me the offering of this generous people as the first fruits of what they hope by the blessing of God to gather and consecrate to this great work. Your Bro.,

J. P. STODDARD.

A Good Work in Northwestern Illinois —From the State Agent.

AVERY, Ill., Feb. 16, '75.

DEAR BRO. KELLOGG:—I left home on the 5th inst. reached Warren, Jo Daveiss Co., on the morning of the 6th; got out an apointment and spoke that evening to a small congregation. On the 7th (Sabbath) I preached in the Wesleyan church in Chelsea twice, lectured again in Warren on Monday evening, and on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings in Chelsea. On Thursday evening my appointment falled on account of the severe storm blocking up the roads. On Friday morning I spoke to a full house in Rush, and quite a number of Masons were present. The impression made on the audience seemed to be good. From thence we went to Stockton, but were disappointed about a meeting at the Free Baptist church and came on to this place. Father Williams, of Warren, though in feeble health, had driven out 25 miles through deep snowdiifts with the thermometer below zero. Nothing but large-hearted faith would sustain a man of his years in such exertion. Late in the evening we reached the hospitable home of Bro. Breed of this place and found a reception and a fire in the ample fire-place, alike warm and cheering.

On Sabbath evening I preached in the M. E. church and though the pastor, Bro. Helsly had designed to hold a series of meetings during the week, yet he very kindly gave way and gave out an appointment for me to lecture in the church on Tuesday evening. Last night I lectured at Weston; am to speak here this evening and to-morrow night at Elizabeth. Owing to the very severe weather and drifted roads the congregations have been generally small, but I find some very earnest workers in our cause.

A notable instance of Masonic charity ought to be mentioned. A prominent member of the Masonic lodge in the village of Elizabeth, who had for years been an officer in the lodge, became diseased and an object of charity. His Masonic brethren supported him for a time, but got weary of it and sent him to the poor-house, where he was supported by the county until he died. The poor old man had strong faith in Masonry until he was sent to the poor-house and then he denounced them as they deserved.

Slowly the eyes of the people are being opened to the abominations and enormities of Freemasonry, and slowly and surely will a public and a divine retribution come down on these false teachers, who in the name of religion call evil good, and good evil, put light for darkness and darkness for light. Yours in Christ.

SECOND LETTER, FEB. 23.

Since I last wrote there has been some mitigation of the severity of the winter and our meetings have been better attended. Our earnest friend, Father Williams, of Warren, has accompanied me for abount ten days, taking me from place to place in his cutter and aiding me by his counsels, prayers, and short, but effective speeches. On the 16th we spoke in the M. E. church in Long Hollow to a good audience. Several Masons were present, and one at least seemed much impressed with the truth. On the 17th, at Elizabeth, we had a full house. Many Masons were present and the Odd-fellows adjourned their lodge and attended in a body. Excellent attention was paid and though one man who was both a Mason and an Odd-fellow lost his jewel, yet the result was most favorable to the cause we were seeking to maintain.

On the 18th and 19th I spoke in the M. E. church at Salem (Houghton P. O.), and found here some earnest friends. I had thought myself a somewhat radical Anti-mason, but some of these M. E. brethren went so far ahead of me that I have concluded I am quite conservative. A liberal collection was taken and quite a number of names signed to the constitution of a county association.

From thence I went to Stockton Center to attend the Free-Will Baptist quarterly meeting. On Saturday afternoon and evening we attended meeting and on Sabbath I preached at 10½ A. M. and also at 7 P. M., on the relation of Secret Societies to the Christian Religion. The attendance was large and the attention excellent.

Last evening (22d) we spoke at Scales Mound, a pleasant villiage east of Galena. The house was full and the attention generally good, but I was seriously interrupted by two Masons, who were as ignorant of Masonic teachings as they are of good manners. At last I declined to speak any farther unless I could be allowed to proceed without interruption. I was allowed to finish and so ends my work in this county. Yours for Christ,

H. H. HINMAN.

Jottings from the New York Field.

"Oaths were not purposed, more than Law,
To keep the good and just in awe,
But to confine the bad and sinful,
Like moral cattle, in a pinfold."—BUTLER.

DEAR K:—After my "vision of eggs," I had a night's rest, and morning found me with Bro. Hathaway, in a blinding snow storm on my way to Cook's Corners, some nine miles in a southwesterly direction. Here I rested Thursday evening, but on Friday and Saturday evenings lectured to good congregations, despite the weather and snow-banks, the people coming from many

[CONTINUED ON 9TH PAGE.]

Correspondence.

From an Old Seceder.

ELLINGTON, N. Y.

I am making calculations to enter upon a campaign against the powers of darkness as soon as spring opens, unsurpassed by any effort in the past, God being my helper. It is high time we all wake out of sleep and buckle on the whole armor of God and fight with renewed energy this battle of the Lord.

We have a subtle and treacherous foe to contend with, lying in ambush and ready to inflict the blow with a hand concealed, nevertheless some of us know full well how to come at them and how to strike. The secret orders dislike very much to have their devilry exposed before an intelligent and respectable congregation. Moreover, they dislike that anyone should call over the many murders committed by the ancient and honorable fraternity, since the commencement of their organization, June 24th, 1717; and therefore in a mixed multitude partly composed of professors of religion, Masons, such as deacons, class-leaders and ministers, and the world's people, it is to some of those like pulling out a hemlock sliver from under their finger nails,—no wonder they flinch as the pain must be exquisitely severe. And when we announce to them that an adhering Mason in the nature of the case cannot be a Christian until he shall renounce this hidden thing of dishonesty, this causes a mental agony more terrible, because this goes to the very seat of the disease; and the sooner this is understood the better for all concerned. Out upon the idea that a man can be converted from his sins by telling him he is not after all a sinner! Such teaching makes all good men and angels weep bitter tears, and devils hold grand carnivals in the pit of woe. Another thing is very humiliating to their sensitiveness: to tell them in plain English, and by our action, that one of this class is not fit to hold office under our goverment, and this will cut them to the quick and cause them to exclaim in anguish of their spirit, as did their ancient prototype, "My punishment is greater than I can bear." J. B. NESSELL.

A Defeated Enemy still Fighting.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—At the New York State Convention which met at Lockport, in December last, a letter was read from Samuel D. Greene, the author of "The Broken Seal," which I fear was mutilated somewhat in the reading, because a subject of the British realm was present as a guest. Be that as it may, it was a noble thought, and while all the letter was good, that expression deserves a special place in the journal that leads this Anti-masonic war. Allow me to give you the substance of that sentence as it is written on my memory, for the exact words I cannot give:

"It was unworthy of a great people to form societies after the model of Masonry and secretly foster a spirit of thirst for monarchy and its peculiar institutions. When Great Britain's rule had been completely broken, and her troops either taken prisoners, or driven from these colonies; when she could not openly subjugate us by force of arms, she had recourse to Freemasonry, headed by King George IV., to subvert our government and turn away the hearts of the people from those sacred institutions which our ancestors have purchased for us with their blood."

I must say that when I heard the above, or something very like it, read, I felt overwhelmed with shame. Although I cannot say such a thing was done of design, yet undoubtedly it had this tendency. As an individual, therefore, most heartily would I desire to have this evil wiped out, both from American and British society, and eventually from the world.

The efforts of your National Christian Association to bring to light the hidden things of dishonesty are most laudable. Should the United States and Great Britain ever go to war, (which may God in his mercy forbid!) we trust the war will be honorably fought, and not through any such underhanded dealings as Masonry.

Whilst I am happy to say our beloved Queen came off with Victoria in the Geneva Conference, I am very sorry to see her son at the head of an institution which is justly so offensive to all U. S. Patriots. J. D.

London, Ont.

Skulls.

Some time after Bro. Kiggins gave us a course of lectures, we caught the Odd-fellows in this way: They had been denying stoutly that they had or used a skeleton in the lodge, and called Bro. Kiggins a liar and almost every other name but a good one. Well, along comes a traveling man selling a patent medicine, and in his speeches on the street he uses a skull to give illustrations. One of our friends, who is always on watch says to a doctor by his side: "Dock. what do you think of that?" "O that's not much of a skull, I have a much nicer one than that. You ought to see it." "I would like to," says our friend, "Where do you keep it?" "O, I let the Knights of Pythias have it when they formed the lodge, and now the Odd-fellows have it, and I can hardly get it home again."

Now we had "evidence," and on several occasions we have had fun in cornering those very ones who denied before, and they finally acknowledge that "they have a skull up there." My Bible, the word of God, says all liars shall have their part in the "lake of fire." P. WOODRING.

Uncle Jason Threatened.

WESTERN, Iowa.

In circulating Anti-masonic papers and books, such as the Christian Cynosure, Bernard's Light on Freemasonry, and other documents, I have been threatened both by Freemasons and Odd-fellows. A Freemason who carries the Bible in their great parades threatened to put a ball through my body if I did not leave his house soon. You may want to know the cause. I will tell you. I sold his son Bernard's Light on Masonry, also got his son to take the Cynosure. Now if that old gentleman had carried out his threat which was made in presence of his wife and a visiting neighbor, you as well as myself know that we have ministers among us who preach Christ to sinners, who are sworn Masonically to protect that brother under said difficulty. Now, sir, no wonder infidelity is increasing in our land, for "like people like priest." It is said to me by seceders, Odd-fellows and Freemasons, that I am doing a good work for my fellow-men, yet I may lose my property and also my life. My best wishes to all Anti-masonic workers. JASON C. BARTHOLOMEW.

Political.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

We are asked to express our opinion of what should be in our platform. You remember the case of H. W. Beecher's marrying Richardson, of New York, to the woman who had a husband in the city at the same time, she having a divorce by going into another State and staying a certain number of days; and so Beecher sanctioned adultery by law, if so be that the act was legal.

Now I would suggest that there ought to be incorporated in the Constitution of the United States the Christian law of marriage and divorce, so that it would be equal in all of the States; not have the laws clash in the different States. Is there any other law of more importance to the morals of the whole Union? I would humbly suggest to those more experienced the propriety of putting this plank in our platform. OPINION.

OUR MAIL.

Geo. McElheny, Darlington, Pa., writes:

"Those in true and earnest sympathy with the anti-secret movement always prized the Cynosure; but the variety of its matter cannot but be appreciated by all intelligent readers and will aid much in extending its circulation among the class not yet in the mood which the main theme imperatively requires."

J. N. Lloyd, Jessup, Ia., writes:

"I have watched anxiously to see if the Cynosure was still true to the right in the political troubles that have burst like a storm upon us in the new troubles in the South. But I see she rides the waves gloriously. I have taken the paper from the first number."

A. C. Daugherty, New London, Wis., writes:

"I feel it my duty to support a paper that has taken so bold a stand for the right; and I will also add that some thoughts I had entertained heretofore, which I now clearly see were not right, have been done away by the timely reading of your good paper."

Jas. W. Hussong, Sanford, Ind., writes:

"The grange is in full blast here; the Masons and they are having a series of festivals or joint suppers. The protracted meetings have been thingly attended this winter, and seemingly no good accomplished."

A. J. Loudenback, Glidden, Ia., writes:

"I find the feeling against the secret orders is strong; but many are afraid to speak their minds."

Rev. Joseph Pixley, Hudson, Mich., writes:

"As long as I live or Masonry lives and you publish the truth you may count me one of your subscribers. I love the cause for I believe it is the cause of Christ to blow the alarm trumpet and warn the people against idolatry."

Wm. G. Walters, Leslie, O, writes:

"Grangerism in this locality has become a kingdom divided against itself and according to Christ's own language we must look for a fall (and God speed it.) The grangers profess to do such a cheap wholesale business, and one of their five dollar dupes said he got a barrel of salt through the beloved institution, and it only cost him twenty-five cents more than if he had bought it from a despised middleman."

Jos. O. Risheill, Kewanee, Ill., writes:

"I war against the lodge every day I live as opportunity offers. I have read the Cynosure long before I received it in my name. First, I got it from a Congregational preacher; then from a Free Methodist preacher; then for myself. I read it and pass it around and sometimes leave it on a business man's desk where I know he will find it. I was a Son of Temperance before I was eighteen years of age. Next a member of the Temple of Honor; also a temperance order. Then Odd-fellows; then Shanghi; then North American; then South American; then these two last formed the Know-Nothings which, properly named, is the Sons of the Sires of Seventy-Six. Then the Carpenters' Association; then Good Templars; then Union League; then Rebekah Lodge; then Grand Army of the Republic; then Encampment I. O. O. F.; and last of all helped organize a lodge of the Oriental Order of Humility. Then I slid from under a live man. After twenty-two years' service I am free to-day and have been for about four years; and the rest of my days as best I can I shall prevent as many as possible from being swindled into the traps of Satan. God speed the day when the power of the beast shall be broken."

Stephen Macy, Pleasant Plain, Ia., writes:

The work of reformation goes on rather tardily in this locality. It may be owing to the vast among of tobacco consumed by old and young and a tenacity to cling with a death grip to formality. I spoke to a large audience, mostly young people, at a revival meeting that is being carried on in our vicinity. I told them the first was held in the garden of Eden and that the result was Adam and Eve sought to hide themselves in secrecy which was a marked feature in the whole catalogue of secret societies very unlike the glorious Gospel of salvation which was free to all."

D. W. Daniels, Wasioja, Minn., writes:

"We have a large Masonic hall here and it is well attended. No steps have been taken in the anti-secret society direction. There are but two or three to work. I hope the time will come that we will have help."

J. W. Shisler, Caledonia Station, Mich., writes:

"I hope the State convention for Michigan will not be unnecessarily delayed. Let it be held soon. I would suggest the city of Charlotte as a central and suitable place for said convention. The local element there can be relied upon. The pastors of three churches there will stand by us. I have fears as to Grand Rapids being a suitable place. . . Our village has been apparently free from lodge influence up to the evening of February 2d, when a few of the full fledged from Grand Rapids assisted in organizing an Odd-fellows' lodge. I have since learned that fourteen joined that order two of whom are sons of Christian parents members of United Brethren church. The church here stands up nobly to her long cherished principles."

Chas. M. Livesay, Nashville, Ill., writes:

"Secretism has such a powerful hold here that most outsiders are afraid to do or say anything against the orders. Yet we are looking for better times in the cause we have espoused not very far in the future."

Lewis Gibson, Springville, Ia., writes:

"I expect to take the Cynosure if I live till the abomination is blotted out of existence. I fight the handmaid of the devil whenever an opportunity presents."

W. W. Templeton, Huntsville, O., writes:

"Mr. Stoddard's lectures waked up the people here very considerably."

Rev. Wm. Pringle, recently of Bellville, Kan., writes:

The grasshoppers made their raid on us the 7th of August, and on the 10th, I left to attend our conference. While there on the 13th a thunderbolt struck my house and demolished the entire north end from top to bottom killing my eldest daughter instantly, news of which I received ten days after. This loss, together with the loss of all my year's salary, except about sixty-five dollars, and the loss of all my crops except a little wheat compelled me to leave my home. . . My heart is with you in the good cause you espouse, and my prayer is that God would give it success."

This brother has our sympathies, and we trust this dark cloud of sorrow has a bright side. In the midst of his losses he finds two dollars for the renewal of his Cynosure subscription. Where there's a will, there's a way.

John E. Major, Willshire, O., writes:

"I love to read your paper. I belonged to the Masons for nine years. I loved them much. Two years ago I sought the Lord, and for five nights was at the altar. I had resigned all but Masonry. The devil would tell me I could be a Christian and a Mason too. But I had no change yet. I said to myself I will let Masonry go, then God spoke peace to my soul."

Daniel Countryman, Rochelle, Ill., writes:

"I was much pleased with the Illinois Stage Agent, Bro. H. H. Hinman, with the manner he treated the subject throughout. I am always pleased to have the friends of reform call on me and feel at home. The latch string is always out by day and night. . . Masonry has a stronghold in Rochelle. They are talking of building a Masonic hall which I regard a curse to any town. . . They seem to think they are strongly fortified and they are, behind the curtain. They do not want to come out lest their deeds be reproved. . . . Church Union is the name of a paper recently started in the city of New York. Its prime object is to advocate the union of all the saints of God, taking the Bible as their only text book. . . . I cannot do without the Cynnosure. I am with it to the extent of the Anti-masonic reform. I am equally interested in the anti-sectarian reform. I would not join either—both are anti-christian. If I joined either I would join both. Am I right?"

We think you are right, partially. We approve of having churches take the Bible as their text book; but to wage a war on all sects would be to promote a new sect whose creed is there must be no sects. So long as education, habits of life and thought differ, so long will men put different interpretations on certain passages of Scripture. As you may judge from articles in the two last issues of the Cynosure, we fear the church will have little to gain from the editorials of the Church Union, who writes: "Ages before a republic was dreamed of, Masonry was writing upon its walls Liberty, Equality and Fraternity." He writes this in notwithstanding that Masonry was established in 1717. And in the face of the fact that the government of Masonry is a complete "despotism."

J. W. Campbell, Goodrich, Mich., writes:

"We were told by Masons that to agitate the subject by lectures would only add numbers to their lodge; but not believing their sophistry, we sent for Bro. Levington who came and poured the light of truth so we could all see the hydra-headed monster. Then came Bro. Stoddard and showed that Masonry is at war with our civil institutions and the Christian religion. Now for the results. Not a man to my knowledge has joined the lodge since the lectures. Previous to these, some young men had said that as soon as they could get a little money they should join; but so changed is their mind, they to-day are strong Anti-masons, and the lodge has pulled up stakes and gone seven miles further north. We can see there is no other way only to pour forth the redhot lava of divine truth until intemperance and these secret abominations are driven back to their native hell from whence they originated. Yet there are some church members now who say you must not speak against these secret dens, if you do, you will break up the church and destroy the peace of Zion. Don't the "Good Book" say that purity comes first and that we must "cry aloud and spare not?" O when will the church of the living God get rid of these Achans in the church! Then can she stand forth fair as the moon, clear as sun, and terrible as an army with banners; then can one chase a thousand and two put ten thousand to flight."

Rev. James Carter, Woodland, Mich., writes:

"The Christian's adversaries are legion and by every possible means will strive to sap the foundation of the Christian's strength and faith and hope. Liberal Christianity, Pseudo Christian Union, Sabbath amusements, opposition to the Bible in schools, opposition to a national recognition of God and Christ in our National Constitution, and rationalism all array themselves with their numerous auxiliaries against a pure and earnest Christianity. . . Open, fearless, outspoken Christian truth must triumph over Masonry and all the powers of darkness."

Alexander Henderson, Harrisville, O., writes:

"I have been fighting Masonry since before Morgan's death. I got John Quincy Adams' book and learned nearly all the Masonic oaths. Mr. Henderson is nearly eighty years old."

Mrs. Mary E. McPherson, Cimarron, N. Mexico, writes:

That their minister since being appointed to Cimarron in the fall of 1873 has received $1,200 from the M. E. board of missions. Besides this several hundred dollars have been paid by the home community; that he has not opened the door of the church; held a prayer-meeting, a class-meeting, or endeavored to build up a church organization. He has aided in organizing a lodge in Cimarron meets night after night with its members. He is continued in the place though all the Methodists have requested his removal. He is the only minister in the county. She says: "I write thus minutely because it is barely possible an Anti-masonic M. E. Minister is known to some of the Cynosure family, and this minister may desire to come to N. M. He can do so by appealing to the Misssion Board or writing to Rev. Thomas Harwood, Superintendent of Missions, La Junta, at Mexico. Again, Anti-masons, laymen, could do well here. In this vast densely populated territory the Presbyterians have one minister, Mr. Roberts at Taos. The Methodist have four and two helpers. Not a Baptist, Congregationalist or Episcopalian now in the territory! Population 135,000. Jesuits and priests without number. What a field for Protestant workers! What a field for Christian men and women as school teachers! What opportunities for good emigrants such as flocked into Kansas. This territory is full of land grant stitles from the old Spanish government. Companies could purchase a grant and send out colonies, build churches and school-houses. The Mexicans living on the grant could thus be taught the pure Gospel."

The Sabbath School.

The Altar of Witness.

JOSHUA XXXII. 21-27.

21. Then the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and the half tribe of Manasseh, answered and said unto the heads of the thousands of Israel.

22. The Lord God of gods, the Lord God of gods, he knoweth, and Israel he shall know, if it be in rebellion, or if in transgression against the Lord, (save us not this day.)

23. That we have built us an altar to turn from following the Lord, or if to offer thereon burnt offering, or meat-offering, or if to offer peace-offerings thereon, let the Lord himself require it;

24. And if we have not rather done it for fear of this thing, saying, In time to come your children might speak unto our children, saying, What have you to do with the Lord God of Israel?

25. For the Lord hath made Jordan a border between us and you, ye children of Reuben and children of Gad; ye have no part in the Lord: so shall your children make our children cease from fearing the Lord.

26. Therefore we said, Let us now prepare to build us an altar, not for burnt offering, nor for sacrifice.

27. But that it may be a witness between us and you and our generations after us, that we might do the service of the Lord before him with our burnt offerings, and with our sacrifices, and with our peace offerings, that your children may not say to our children in time to come, Ye have no part in the Lord.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Ye are all one in Christ Jesus."—Gal. iii. 28.

PARALLEL PASSAGES.—Gen. xxxi. 44-49; Acts vi. 1-4.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—One Shepherd and one flock.

QUESTION HELPS.

Why did these two and a half tribes settle on the East of Jordan? Num. xxxii. Was it a good reason? What things should we seek first? Ps. xlvi. 7; Matt. vi. 33. What reason should we have for all we do? 1 Cor. x. 31. What reasons induced the first settlers to come to this country? On what condition did the tribes obtain their wish? What did Joshua say when he sent them home? vs. 1-8. Why did they build this altar? What should they have done first? Were the rest of the people right in doing what they did? Deut. xiii. When should we reprove others for sin? How should it be done? Gal. vi. 1; 2 Thess. iii. 1. 5. Why did these tribes use the name of God in their answer? Heb. vi. 16. How should we use God's name? Was it right for Joseph to swear? Gen. xlii. 15. What expressions are a kind of half-swearing? What do you think of them? Matt. v. 37; 1 Thess. v. 22. What lesson may we learn from the language of both these parties? What good does it do to quarrel? Prov. xxv. 28; xxix. 22. What kind of a bear should be kept in every house? (search Jer. xl. 4.) What is the worst article of diet for a family? Gal. v. 15. How often was Israel expected to come before God? Ex. xxiii. 17. What temporal blessing was promised if they did so? Ex. xxxiv. 24. How often should we appear before God? Why? Ps. lxv. 4. How? Ps. c. 4; Heb. x. 22. Why were the Jews required to be so particular about God's worship? In what way only have we a right to worship God? Deut. xii. 30-32; Isa. viii. 20; Matt. xv. 9. —Evangelical Repository.

NOTES.—For the events of which the knowledge is assumed in this chapter, read Numb. xxxii. 1-25; on the erection of the altar, see Ex. xvii. 15; on the engagement of the two and a half tribes to Joshua, see Josh. i. 16-18; on the settlement of the threatened quarrel, see Matt. v. 22-26 and xviii. 15; and on the care for coming generations, Ps. lxxviii. 4-7.

How important that nothing should obscure our one mercy-seat (Acts iv. 12), altar [Heb. ix. 11], and sacrifice [Rom. iii. 25], or put away the idea of "one God and one mediator" [1 Tim. ii. 5.] The union of men for the upholding and defence of this saving truth is itself a sign of God's presence, and is pleasing to God, and to all his true people. See Eph. iv. 5, 6.—S. S. World.

Forty Years Ago.

Memorable Cases of Masonic Charity.

[From the Anti-masonic Review, Nov., 1829.]

Who can tell the interesting debates and the fearful decision of the General Grand Chapter of the United States respecting Wm. Morgan, at their session in the city of New York, Sept. 13, 1826, to which decision the G. G. High Priest was obedient, although dissenting?

But one year has put in the possession of the public things before concealed, which conclusively settle the concern of the Masonic institution of the murder of Capt. Morgan. Henry F. Yates has publicly, and in a solemn manner, this year declared, that the Grand Lodge of New York, at their session in June 1827, did vote and pay, the sum of $250 to Eli Bruce, late sheriff of Niagara county, to remunerate him, in part, for the loss of his office, owing to his concern in the abduction of William Morgan. This weighty charge Mr. Yates accompanied with a defiance "to any honest and conscientious" member of that Grand Lodge, to deny it on his corporal oath, if he dare: thus putting it to any honest member of the Grand Lodge, to silence him, if, with truth, he could. Mr. Yates went further, and pledged himself to the public to prove it, (would the Grand Lodge consent to a feigned issue,) to the satisfaction of a court and jury! Mr. Yates was 14 years clerk of Montgomery county; as a man fit to hold a seat in the Grand Lodge of New York in 1827, he is entitled to receive a reply, if one could be given, to this charge. Nine months have passed, since it was published; the Grand Lodge has, in the mean time, held a session; but neither body, nor member, has replied to their renouncing brother, whose statement it is base to neglect, if it were possible to contradict it. The institution is guilty.

Parson G. Shipman, M. D., a respectable citizen of Onondaga, and a renouncing Mason, in May last, published on the authority of three members of the Grand Lodge, the same fact stated by Mr. Yates, with a variation only in the sum.

Under this head we place a later discovery. Jarvis F. Hanks, editor of the Investigator, an Anti-masonic paper in this city, an honest man, with a wife and family of dependent children, late High Priest of Webb chapter, Cleveland, Ohio, and within the year a renouncing Mason, has solemnly declared, under his own hand, and published in the newspaper, that while visiting in Jerusalem Chapter in this city, in the autumn of A. D. 1827, a resolution was introduced to appropriate $500 for the use of the Western sufferers! to be forwarded to Rochester by a gentleman then present, who would also carry contributions from several other Masonic fraternities in this city, towards the same object. As a Mason, as a citizen of unspotted character, in the fellowship of the Presbyterian church, Mr. Hanks is fully entitled to credit. His testimony has been six weeks in public, where Jerusalem chapter at midnight sits, and no contradiction comes to meet it, no explanation to qualify it.

Once more; Avery Allen, late Junior Warden in Clinton Encampment, Ct., and now a renouncing Mason, with the deepest impression of the important consequences, has in the past year made oath, that visiting in St. John's Masonic Hall, Frankfort street, New York, in the spring of 1828, he was there informed more than once, by different individuals, that Chipperfield, (Richard Howard, of the Morgan conspiracy,) received shelter and charity in that hall, confessing himself to be the murderer of Morgan, and claiming the aid of his Masonic brethren on that account! One of his informers, whom Mr. Allyn privately names, has under oath denied, that he gave Mr. Allyn such information; but before he made that oath, he threatened a friend to his innocence, with vengeance unto death, if the affidavit of Mr. Allyn was published, and confessed the threat before witness; and he also solemnly declared, that he is a great Mason, and knows what Freemasonry is, and that there is not a word of truth in Morgan's book! The contradictory statement of such a man, to clear himself, does not impeach Mr. Allyn's veracity, never before impeached; it rather confirms it; and when we consider, that the threatener of vengeance, and the denier of Morgan's book, is, indeed, a great Mason, and is also in fellowship with the church in this city, we have renewed evidence of the corrupting and infernal spirit of Freemasonry.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 4, 1875.

The article in this number entitled "Objections to the Grange" is by a young writer new to our readers. He writes with uncommon clearness and candor. No person can read his article and not see that the grange is in its origin and stature a stupendous Masonic swindle.

A late Chicago Tribune contains a letter dated Lexington, Ill., Feb. 18th, describing a den of mock-pious confidence men in Chicago which we understand has since been broken up by the police. The facts, as he gives them, are most extraordinary; and from the frequency with which men are accosted by the incarnated devils who prey on stupid, shallow and unsuspecting people, it would seem that the confidence business pays. We have sometimes felt, when saluted by one of these harpies, that if the law permitted to answer them by a pistol-shot, and held that death by such shot would be no murder, it would but be a new application of the law which holds it no murder to kill a thief who is breaking into a house by night. And we submit to the candid reader of Mr. Stearns' article in this number on the grange, whether the secret lodges of this country are morally one whit better than those confidence dens of Chicago which the laws break up? The same goodly and good pretensions, the same blinding arts, and the same utterly selfish ends are found in both swindling-shop and lodge. And society will not be properly shielded from professional villains till both are suppressed by law.

SLOUGHING—PROF. SWING.

Religion like everything else that grows, casts its skin. There comes a time when the old garment no longer fits the new body. Even material substances are casting off particles by wear and receiving new ones by accretion.

There is one book which is an exception to this law. It is the Bible. Animated from Genesis to Revelation with the ideas of God, made for all men and for all time, its words were chosen by a spirit whose eyes rested on human history, or rather on the facts of humanity in all exigences, under all circumstances, in all nations and through all generations. Hence its phrases "Cease to do evil" and "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God" can never become absolete.

Creeds and confessions are not so. Heidelberg and Geneva, and the confessions made by order of the Long Parliament, though precious in themselves, must have their periods of sloughing when the thought outgrows the form of expression and casts it off.

These periods give occupation to two very different classes of minds. The one class, like Luther, utter and enforce the truths and moralities of God, which render old forms absolete. They assail the evils which, with changed names and forms, hide like serpents under God's altars, and borrow amid the terms of the Catechism itself. These are the martyrs of all ages, from Stephen to Elijah P. Lovejoy who fell at Alton.

The other class of minds settle on the decaying terms of creeds like crows on a dying animal, and tear away at its weak and rotten parts. And as the wicked scoff at the creed, not so much for its faults as for the truth of God in it which condemns them; a cheap popularity with religious worldlings is easily gained by showing up the holes in the coat of the creed. And as the most godly men are apt to be superstitious, these religious knights of the scapel, strong in their worldly popularity, handle without mittens and assail without mercy the humble, God-fearing idolators of the creed, and their champions, who, it must be confessed, are often animated by a similar spirit though fiercely bent in an opposite direction.

H. W. Beecher has always assailed creeds and catechisms, and to-day the world loves him for it. When abolitionists were unpopular he shunned and derided them. But with the instinct of a worldling for the top of the wave, he saw the North turning against slavery; climbed on the shoulders of the Tappans and towered above their heads. He to-day knows that Freemasonry means blasphemy and rebellion as well as he knew the nature of slavery when we ordained him in sight of it at Lawrenceburgh, Ind.

Now we fear that Prof. Swing belongs to the army of followers of H. W. Beecher, ministers who are bold against the catechism and creed, but when they meet a popular evil in the world, if they say one word about it—

"Roar you as gently as a sucking dove."

We must have a new creed. When we get into Mr. Carpenter's new Home of Reform we must summon a convention of those in the United States who are resolved to exclude the worshipers of the modern Baal from the altars of Christ, and who will exclude the willing abettors of the secret empire from holding office and sitting on juries in this Republic.

WOLVES' LOGIC.

"Please tell me and others through your paper how best to answer the following objections: We say that the name of Christ is not found in Mason's and Odd-fellow's manuals, and that this is a proof that these are Christless institutions. They reply the name of Christ is not in the "Book or Psalms" or the Lord's prayer, therefore these are Christless institutions. Again: The saints were accustomed to swear one to another Gen. xxi. 31; xxv. 33; xlvii. 31. And further, these oaths were not simply between two persons, for the two spies swore to Rahab, Josh. 2d chapter. The Israelites swore to the Gibeonites Josh. ix. 15. If it was right for these persons to bind themselves by an oath to each other, is it not right for Masons and Odd-fellows to do so. Yours truly, J. M. WALLACE."
Youngstown, O.

ANSWER.

Some shepherds had killed and were feasting together on a lamb. "What an uproar," said a passing wolf, "would be made by these men if I should do the like!"

Freemasons, swearing to conceal each other's crimes, and quoting Bible oaths as precedents, use wolves' logic. Combining to get secret advantages of our neighbors, and swearing not to reveal our proceedings, resembles legitimate oaths as sheep-stealing resembles eating mutton.

David in spirit calls Christ "LORD", and when the word Lord occurs in the Psalms it ordinarily means the Lord Jesus Christ, whom David always set before him. Is the Book of Psalms, which is full of Christ, Christless?

Christ gave the Lord's Prayer and taught us, after his departure, to pray in his name, this prayer, of course, included. To call a prayer given by Christ a Christless prayer, is as untrue and absurd as to deny a man's letter to be his own because he did not write his name in it. This great prayer, given by his lips, rests on his authority, is accepted through his merit, and prevails through his mediation. The first words "Our Father," mean Christ's Father and ours. While the "Architect" to whom Masons pray, is a fiction and a falsehood.

An Interesting Renunciation.

Rev. Henry Coggswell, of Mansfield, O., whose renunciation was a notable feature of the late convention in that city, is an Englishman by birth and took two degrees in Masonry in that country. After coming to America he took the Master's degree in Troy, N. Y., and went on to the Royal Arch. He has long been disgusted with the institution and some time since he abandoned it. But he still carried the needless burden of the obligations and did not renounce them. Within a short time his attention has been called to their false nature, he read the arguments against them became fully convinced, and willingly came forward, and asserting his Christian manhood read the following, his first renunciation:

MR. PRESIDENT and members of this convention, together with all Masons present and the entire fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons at large:

I do hereby renounce forever the institution of Free and Accepted Masons; and disavow, disclaim, and disallow all duties, obligations, penalties and imprecations heretofore taken, imposed, consented to or promised—past, present and future, known or to be known, communicated or anticipated.

And henceforth hold myself amendable only to the conventional rules of the great fraternity of human society, and to the laws of my country and of God. HENRY COGGSWELL.

NOTES.

—Bennet Medical College of this city lately sent a skeleton to a lodge in Indiana. This fact will serve as sauce for the letter from Waverly, Iowa, on another page.

—A correspondent asks if we can publish the obligations of the Red men. They have never come to our notice, as we recollect. The order resembles the Odd-fellows in its general features rather than the Freemasons. Whether the exact form of an oath is used or no, is not the essential feature, for it has been often and clearly shown that the spirit, the real nature of an oath exists as much in the Odd-fellow and Good Templar obligations as in the Masonic oath. If any one can furnish the obligations of this society they shall be published.

—Rev. A. S. Allen, president of the Cerro Gordo County Association, Iowa, is a veteran renouncing Mason of the Morgan times, was an old neighbor and friend of Elder David Bernard, whom he visited last summer and journeyed home alone, although ninety years of age. His testimony as an eye-witness of lodge proceedings made a profound impression at the formation of the above society, as he had been long and favorably known from his pastoral relation to the Congregational church of Clear Lake. No one could with any hope of success dispute his testimony in that community.

—It has been suggested that some might understand from the report of the committee on Publishing House last week, that the proposed building was not centrally located in this city. No. 221 West Madison street is one half a mile west of the river, and nearly a mile from the old court-house site, in the immediate vicinity of the best business portion of the West division of Chicago. Mr. Carpenter has drawn the necessary papers for the transfer of the property, so that no one need fear that the proposition will not be faithfully carried out in any condition. The General Agent has already met much encouragement in raising funds.

—The history of the Anti-masonic reform on page 12 will be issued in convenient form for general contribution.

OBITUARY.—The following is published by request: Died, in Northampton, Mass., Mrs. Lucy Lyman, aged 92 years, 5 months and 21 days. She was the widow of Asahel Lyman, and daughter of Joel Parsons of Conway. Married in 1804, she lived with her husband at South Farms until his death in 1864, when she moved to Northampton, making her home with her daughter, Mrs. J. P. Williston. Her funeral was attended at Mrs. Williston's residence on Wednesday last, at two and one-half o'clock. Mrs. Lyman was a remarkably well preserved gentlewomen of the old school. Gifted by nature with a vigorous mind and fine executive ability, she retained her faculties up to her last illness. To all calls of benevolence she gave a ready ear and generously contributed her entire income from year to year to the various missionary and charitable objects. Gentle, kindly, cheerful and affectionate, with her has passed away almost the last one of the older families of Northampton, who made the place famous fifty years ago. Her sickness was apparently one without pain and she gently fell asleep at 7 o'clock on Sabbath eve., Jan. 24th.

Kansas Aid.

Publishers Christian Cynosure:

. . . "We are in the midst of great destitution in this grasshopper district. Could you not send to me, to Edgerton, Johnson Co., Kan., a box of clothing or other aid with which I could help myself and my needy neighbors around me. You can form no idea of how badly we need help. Please do the best you can. I subscribe myself a minister in the U. B. church. S. KRETSINGER."

The above request is from one of the Cynosure subscribers. Any money or clothing which our friends will send to our office for this afflicted friend and his neighbors, we will report through the Cynosure and have carefully forwarded to him. Please send promptly what you are disposed to give.

Address EZRA A. COOK & Co.,
13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Religious Intelligence.

—A large and influential convention for the Religious Amendment reform was held recently in St. Louis. Another is to be held in Columbus, O., March 10th and 11th. This will be the last meeting of the kind to be held this winter and the friends of the movement are expected in considerable numbers.

—The chairman of the San Francisco School Board lately ruled that the Lord's Prayer was partizan and sectarian and its use contrary to the spirit of the school law, and a majority of the board sustained the ruling.

—Daily revival meetings have been held in Tabor, Iowa. Some fifty hopeful conversions are reported, most of them students of Tabor College.

—The revival meetings at Sacramento, Cal., under Mr. Hammond's labors were greatly blessed, as were also those at San Jose, where four hundred professed a change of heart. The churches of Stockton have asked the evangelist to visit them.

—A union effort of great promise has been conducted at Baraboo, Wis., by J. H. Cole and J. V. Farwell of this city. Over 100 have professed Christ and the work still continues.

—The Young Men's Christian Association of the United States and Canada hold their 20th international convention in Richmond, Va., May 26th.

—There is said to be an unusual interest excited in Putnam, Conn., over the conversion to Protestantism of a number of French Canadian Romanists employed in the factories there. The Congregational pastor of the town reports that some fifty or sixty have left the Catholic church. Father Chiniquy has visited the place twice with good effect.

—Rev. Joseph Nee Sima, the Japanese convert, who spent several years in this country, returned to Japan last fall, and now writes back to his friends at Amherst, where he graduated, that he is having unexpected success as a missionary to his countrymen. He speaks of preaching in Buddhist temples to eagerly listening crowds, among them being Buddhist priests, where the public literally thronged to hear him—so that he was obliged to run to the house of a neighbor to write his letter. His family have become converted, and thrown their idols into the fire, the charred remains of one of which he has sent to Alpheus Hardy, of Boston.

—Russia has just given the London Society for Promoting Christianity among the Jews permission to reopen its missions in that empire, which have been closed since the Crimean war. This concession is regarded as an indication of the change of feeling towards England and English Christian institutions which has been experienced for some time at the Russian Court.

—The Rev. William McDonald, of the New England Conference, is engaged in a protracted meeting at Hamilton, Canada, where a remarkable revival is progressing. On a single Sunday, after a sermon by the Rev. Mr. Inskip, 200 presented themselves as seekers and 50 were converted; and on the same day, after a sermon by Mr. McDonald, 150 were at the altar for prayers.

—A. B. Earle, the evangelist, was in Leavenworth lately. Thence he expected to go to Omaha, then to Iowa, then hold one meeting in Wisconsin, and one in Michigan. In April he proposes to go South again.

—The Evangelical Association is discussing, through its organ, the Messenger of Cleveland, O., the merits and demerits of its denominational name. The organization is essentially Methodist in its doctrines and church government.

Reform News.

[CONTINUED FROM 5TH PAGE.]

miles around, to hear, and giving the closest attention. But few Masons were present, and these kept their jewels and behaved like gentlemen. The lectures were given in the new Wesleyan house of worship. It is a gem in its way and reflects credit upon those who have erected it. Here Bro. Hathaway ministers to the people in holy things, and will keep them alive in our reform; or should he turn aside, he has those in his congregation who will jog his mind, if needed. I occupied his pulpit morning and evening; in the latter, paying my respects to the doctrine of the "annihilation of the wicked," which has a few adherents in this section.

When the Masons in the village of Bangor, which is five miles from Cook's Corners, heard of my coming, they took the matter up in the lodge twice, as I was informed, and finally voted to permit me to come, and to let me alone while speaking; and I was to have the Union meeting-house, which seems to be under their control. The pastor of this Union church is a Mason, and belongs to the M. E. church. The reason given for employing him this year, was: "He don't send any of us to hell. So he's the man for us." The leading men of this congregation being Masons, and thus fitted by the "common gavel" for "that house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens," he had no right to send them to hell. His Masonic theology taught him better, and being "higher" than Bible theology, he must and does of course, follow it. A pious concern is that church; and a doubly pious man is that M. E. Masonic preacher! Masonry has done for him that to which Steinbrenner alludes, when he says of her, "She can and will educate the pious man to that higher religion, that religion in which all men agree, which indeed embraces the lower religion of creeds and sects!" and so he is fitted to preach to the highly educated, gavel-fashioned saints of Bangor. "Like people like priest," as of old.

These gavel saints, hearing of my lecture in Westville, and hearing, I suppose, of a telegram, some mischievous operator had sent over the wires, that I was an "escaped lunatic, from Syracuse"—they came to the conclusion that they did not wish to hear a "lunatic" and a "fool;" and so, word came to us that if I did come, I would have to pay $1.50 per night for fire and lights. Bro. Hathaway drove into the village to see about it; saw a Royal Arch Mason, who was all courtesy; said they would be glad to hear me, and would warm and light the house themselves, and a Dr. Warner was to come to Cook's Corners, hear me preach the next morning, and carry back word as to whether I would fill the pulpit there or not.

Sunday morning came and with it the Dr. with a sad face and the intelligence that no sooner was Bro. Hathaway out of sight, the day before, than the same Royal Arch Mason, so good to promise and so anxious to hear, began to curse both Bro. H. and myself. Others of the craft joined in and at length it was determined I was an "old fool," and they would not light and warm up for me. If they heard anybody on that subject, they wanted somebody that knew something. What a pity! If I had not been a "fool" I might have formed the acquaintance of those Bangor saints. Perhaps I'll see them yet. If I had only gone there before I spoke in Westville, and they had heard me—some of them—and found out I was a "fool!" I might have told them some truths; for it is an old adage that "children and fools tell the truth." This "fool" suspects that was what they feared.

This, of course, barred me for the time, from Bangor, and it was just as well, for a furious snow storm on Monday, blocked up the roads so that the attendance would have been limited, if any at all. On Monday night, Bro. Rathbun, who had been sent for, but the order countermanded, came in after wading five or six miles through the drifts. The next day we were snowbound. The people hearing of Bro. R.'s arrival clamored for a lecture from him, and so anxious were they to hear, that they came on foot from a long ways around, some women walking, or floundering, through the drifts more than a mile; so that we had a good audience, to whom Bro. R. gave a very interesting lecture, which I supplemented, in my "foolish" way. Much good was done here, and Bro. Hathaway greatly strengthened. For all the kindness shown to me by himself and wife I am very gratified.

Wednesday morning Bro. R. and myself, feeling that we must "break out," Bro. Hathaway brought out pony and cutter, and taking us on board we started for Brush's Mills, six miles away. But we did not ride far. O those snow banks! I have not the space to tell how many Masonic degrees I postured through, with Rathbun for conductor and witness. He commended my performances highly, if I might judge from the amusement they afforded him; and I was pleased to see him pleased. Now your readers must know, that I have considerably more body than legs, which makes snow back locomotion a very awkward affair with me. So I went through the motions. Now down on my knees, as for taking the O. B.; now sawing across my throat, like an Entered Apprentice; now giving the due guard involuntarily; now playing Fellow Craft; and anon, in a big drift, posturing for a Master Mason, even to the lying down for Hiram Abiff, though wrong side up to make it really natural. How that Rathbun did laugh and I laughed too! but I honestly confess I have seen times when I felt more in the humor for it. I came through alive, with only a frozen set of toes on my right foot; and stopping at the first house, the good house-mother emptied a kerosene lamp on the stiffened members, which soon brought them around.

A few hours, without further incident worthy of much note, found us at Lisbon Center, St. Lawrence Co., where the hitherto unkillable Rathbun, has his home, and where he has planted his batteries, much to the annoyance of the "old handmaid." Here I spent the last few days of January, and the first in February. I spoke in Lisbon Center twice, and preached once. On Sabbath, preached once for Bro. Rathbun, to a fine and intelligent congregation. Monday and Tuesday evenings spoke in Flackville to large and apparently interested congregations. The pastor here and at Red Mills, on the St. Lawrence river, where I spoke Monday evening, is Rev. E. Wheeler, an M. E minister who has lately renounced Masonry. I formed a pleasant acquaintance with him. He is suffering much from the stand he has taken; and will suffer more. At Flackville I also found Rev. Wm. McFarland, a young Covenanter. He is of the stuff true men are made of, and will ere long be better known among us. To him and his wife, to Bro. John Martin, his wife and son, to a Bro. and Sister Baldwin, am I indebted for many of those "small, sweet courtesies of life," so agreeable to the toil-worn lecturer. May God reward them as I cannot.

For Thursday evening, I had an appointment at Morley, but the snow-king put a veto on my further disturbing the "Hiramites" at this time; so I bent my steps towards Syracuse, where I arrived "tired but happy," past 12 o'clock Saturday night, Feb. 6th. Thus endeth my first trip across the "top" end of our great State. I shall ever have in lively remembrance its hospitable, as well as inhospitable features. I have this consolation, that my labor is not lost. More anon, if God wills.

J. L. BARLOW.

Elder Hurless at Lanark.

LANARK, Ill., Feb. 22, 1875.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

Much to the discomfiture of Freemasons and Odd-fellows, we have been favored with three lectures by Elder P. Hurless. Although all the lodges exercised their strength to keep the people away, we had very good attendance each evening, and the largest at the last. There were but a few Masons present, just enough to carry the news to the lodge and present it in Masonic form. On the 18th we had a meeting in the Abrahamic church, and we were entertained by Mr. Minor Vanswearinger, a man who has thrown off all allegiance to the order of Odd-fellows. Before the meeting I was out on the street and hunted for an Odd-fellow to attend the meeting and not allow the speaker to impose on the people; but there was not one who would come.

After the speaker had concluded his remarks, we procured quite a number of names to organize an anti-secret association. We hope to give a fuller account of this, however, by and by. On the evening of the first lecture a member of one of the churches and the tyler of the lodge in Lanark asked me if I was not afraid that I would have my throat cut or my house burnt, or my stock poisoned, and also said that he should advise me not to contract the ill will of the lodge.

This is the condition of things here, and who can say Freemasonry is charitable?

N. R. CORNING.

God's Quiet.

There's silence in the Holy Place,
Where sits the Holiest on the throne;
And silence in the unmeasured space,
Where silver stars go pacing on
Eternally, eternally,
Around Him moves the universe,
Earth only breaks the harmony
With her discordant curse.

Sad earth! whose music breaks in moans
Against the crystal of the sky—
Poor earth! to have but bitter groans
Wherewith to make reply,
All silently, all silently,
Upon thee fall the light and dew!
God sends His blessings unto thee—
Alas! His judgments, too.

Now, wherefore is the constant strife?
And wherefore is the ceaseless moan?
Why does the dust of our low life
Rise up in clouds before the throne?
Unceasingly, unceasingly,
We vex his patience with our prayers;
For Him to rise and work, we cry,
Impatient that He spares.

For Him to work! His chariot wheels
Pause never in their onward way;
Even now before Him error reels;
And yet we charge him with delay!
All silently! all silently
He breaks the yoke, He gives the meed—
Calmly, for His eternity
Hath time for any deed.

I think it is that we are weak—
Our life so short, so faint our breath;
We find the feeble words we speak
Strike blankly on the shore of death.
And yet they live eternally!
They echo on a far-off shore;
O mortals! know your destiny!
Speak hopeless words no more.

God's great hereafter lieth bright
Beyond life's valley, death's abyss;
And triumph crowns the perfect Right
Wherewith that world doth compass this.
In silence His eternity
Flows round our little Isle of life;
There's room for calm in that great sea,
With us, for only strife.

—Selected.

Harlan Page.

AN EXAMPLE FOR CHRISTIAN YOUNG MEN.

Harlan Page was born at Coventry, Connecticut, July 28, 1791. He was the only son of pious parents; received a good common education, and was taught by his father the trade of a house joiner. In May, 1813, he was married, at which time neither himself nor wife were Christians; but both were converted soon after, and united with the church March 6, 1814. He immediately consecrated himself to the service of his Master, and ever after was a striking example of what a consecrated life and personal effort will accomplish in saving souls. On his dying bed he said, "When I first obtained a hope, I felt that I must labor for souls. I prayed, year after year, that God would make me the means of saving souls." On May 13, 1818, the following resolution was recorded on his memorandum: "Resolved, whenever possible, to address my brethren and sisters on the concerns of eternity, and endeavor to stir up both them and myself to diligence and engagedness in the great work of saving souls." He also resolved to act in life as though he was all the one to act. These resolutions were not merely highly sounding words, as we shall learn from his future history.

After a residence of five years in his native town, after his conversion, he moved to Boston, where he sojourned a short time, and then returned to Coventry, where, after spending three more years, he took up his abode in Jewett City for a season, after which he was engaged in the business of engraving at Andover. In 1825, he was appointed agent of the General Depository of the American Tract Society in New York, which was formed in that year, which position he held till his death in 1834, at the age of forty-three. It will be impossible in this brief sketch to enter into the details of his life during his residence in these places, yet, we think, that the references that will be made, will show conclusively that he always carried Christ with him. Like Paul, "he ceased not to warn every one night and day with tears." Personal conversation with the careless, the enquiring and the young convert, occupied much of his time. He embraced every opportunity of doing good to his fellow-men, and made use of many instrumentalities.

At one time he prepared cards upon the following subjects: "Mortal, consider," "To-day," etc., and had them printed in a cheap form of distribution. These cards and tracts, with many others, were not only passed direct to individuals, but were frequently enclosed in envelopes and directed to some friend, accompanied with some words of earnest exhortation from his pen. Every letter to his unconverted friends and relatives was richly freighted with invitations to come to the Saviour. Even in many of his business letters he took time to express his desires. The salvation of individuals was the purpose of his heart and the burden of his life. While engaged in his business, his thoughts were often concentrated upon some one in whom he was interested.

For several years before he died, he had by him a list of the names and residences of a few persons with whom he was to converse and pray. On these he would call as he went to and from his office and meetings. He uniformly carried with him an assortment of tracts to give as opportunity offered. Frequently he would seize a few moments from his occupation to go out and address some individual, and when the business of the day closed he often hurried off to some meeting. He was persistent in his efforts, always following up impressions made. If he conversed with a friend to-day, he endeavored to see him to-morrow also, and so on until he felt that he was safe. He realized in a great degree the danger that threatened the unsaved, and hence endeavored to snatch them as "brands from the burning." He expected success through the blessing of the Holy Spirit in answer to prayer. His prayers were short, fervent, and specific. He was uniform and unwearied in his labors. He not only addressed individuals, personally, but frequently used his pen to embody some stirring thought for insertion in some religious newspaper. The mission and temperance causes were near to his heart.

As a partial result of his self-denying labors, we are not surprised to find that thirty-two teachers were converted in one of his Sunday-schools, and nine of them aimed for the ministry; that thirty-four were gathered by him and his fellow-laborers from one ward of the city of New York; that fifty-eight in connection with the Tract and Bible-houses were brought to unite themselves with the people of God, and that at his death he could count more than one hundred that he had been directly and individually instrumental in winning to the Saviour. He died a most triumphant death, exclaiming several times during his last hours, "my work is all done—its all done."

Estimate the influences of such a life, if possible, and then suppose there was one such person in each of our churches, and how would their power be augmented! Increase their number until ten such ones should stand forth, and what a mighty influence for good would be exerted in the community! And yet there are hundreds of young men in our churches whose opportunities and abilities are equal to those that Harlan Page possessed, and, if used, would doubtless accomplish as much.

May we so improve them, that at death we can look ever the past, and triumphantly exclaim with him, "my work is all done!"—Christian Statesman.

The First Sabbath.

The sixth day of creation drew to a close. The sun had completed his orbit. The evening twilight began to overspread the new-born earth. The first-born son of creation stood upon a high hill of Eden, near him Eloah, his guardian-angel and companion. The shades of evening gathered closer and closer around the hill; the twilight vanished into night, enclosing like a dark veil the hills and dales, the songs of the birds, the glad voices of the animals, all ceased; even the sportive zephyrs had lulled themselves to rest. "What is this?" asked the man in subdued tones of his heavenly companion. "Will the young creation cease, and sink back into her nothingness?" Eloah smiling, answered, "It is the repose of the earth."

Now appeared the heavenly lights; the moon arose, leading forth the multitude of stars in brilliant splendor. The man lifted his eyes toward heaven in sweet astonishment; the angel of the Lord looked down well pleased upon the upward-gazing son of earth. The night grew calmer, the nightingale warbled more loudly and melodiously. Eloah touched the man with his staff; he laid himself on the hill and slept. The first dream descended to him; Jehovah had formed him a companion.

As now the morning began to dawn, Eloah laid his hand upon the slumberer. He awoke and felt permeated with new life and vigor. Out of the darkness arose the hills and valleys; the young light came down and danced upon the waters of Eden's golden streams; the sun came forth and brought the day. Man beheld the newly created woman; wonder and ecstasy filled his heart. "See!" said Eloah, "out of rest is the God-like born!" Therefore shalt thou sanctify this day to rest and to the divine.—From the German.

Nablous, or Shechem.

A ride of three hours from Samaria brought us to our tent pitched just outside the western wall of Nablous, (the Arabic name for Neapolis,) which occupies the site of the Bible city Shechem. I shall not commit the blunder of most travelers, by attempting a glowing description of the picturesque and luxuriant spot in which Shechem is located, knowing that the fatigue of three days' travel on horseback over a dry, parched land, with burning lips and blistered face, had much to do with our enthusiastic admiration of Shechem's forest of fruit and ornamental trees, which cluster thickly around her eighty gushing fountains and streams of cold, clear, pure water. The town is situated in the narrow gorge between Mt. Ebal on the north, and Gerazim on the south; and clings to the northern base of the latter. It is on the "shoulder," or water shed, between the Jordan and the Mediterranean, from which it probably received its name, which, in the Hebrew, means shoulder or back; while Shechem, the son of Hamor, probably took his name from the city in which he was born; as did an acquaintance of ours, who now lives in Shechem, and whom we heard addressed there as "George Damascus." On approaching Shechem from the Northwest, one is struck with a similarity of the twin mountains Ebal and Gerazim. They are so close together that, in some places, the valley proper between them is but five hundred yards wide. Gerazim rises to the height of 2,600 feet above the sea, and 800 above the valley between them, while Ebal is but a few feet lower. Both are of an irregular and conical shape—barren, rocky and treeless. Half a mile east of the town, the mountains simultaneously recede from each other; their steep cliffs falling back into two opposing inclined planes, which are molded in a vast amphitheatre by an advancing spur from each mountain, which almost met each other a short distance further east. In this amphitheatre probably stood the children of Israel, "half of them over against Mt. Gerazim, and half of them over against Mt. Ebal," with the ark of the Lord between them; while Joshua "read all the words of the law: the blessing and the cursing." One large party of travelers told us that one of their number took a Bible and climed Ebal's spur, and another climbed that from Gerazim. The latter read the blessings recorded in the 27th and 28th chapters of Deuteronomy, and the former the curses; while the remainder of the party stood some over against Ebal, and some over against Gerazim, and all heard distinctly the words of the readers. We did not try it ourselves; but what we saw of the situation, and know of the clear air here, and the powerful voices of the people, we can easily believe that the whole nation of Israel could have been comcomfortably within the sound of the voice of the readers. The people still speak of Ebal as the "Mount of Curses," and of Gerazim as the "Mount of Blessings."

For two hours after we arrived Nablous, our tent was surrounded by a crowd of noisy boys, whose brass and perseverance would make of each and every one of them "a president, an alderman and tailor," were they young Americans; but as it is, they can only hope to become Sheikhs of the most fanatical Moslem town in all Palestine—a town which, to this day, richly deserves the name Sychar, or "deceit," which I it received more than 2,000 years ago.

A little band of Samaritans, numbering nearly 100,—the last of their kind,—still live at Nablous. There is a small plateau near the top of the mountain, in the centre of which is an insignificant circular pit, three feet in diameter and six in depth, where the Samaritans roast six passover-lambs each year. Close beside it is a little stone trough in which they burn "that which remaineth of it until the morning;" and near by, we were also shown the place where the whole sect pitch their tents and abide in tabernacles eight days previous to the Passover, and seven days after. Father up and on the very heights of Gerazim are some extensive and ancient ruins. The most ancient are two foundations of large rough stones; the one surrounding the ancient village, and the other inolosing an irregular, oval-shaped, flat rock, supposed to be the site of the Samaritan temple. Of this spot spake the Samaritan woman to Christ, as he sat on Jacob's well in the valley below us, when she said, "Our fathers worshiped in this mountain."

The surface of the rock has been made smooth as glass by the bare feet of reverent worshipers since the destruction of the temple, now more than 2,000 years. We descended into the valley down the sloping sides of the amphitheatre, where I suppose the Isralites listened to the reading of the law, and passed out by the narrow gorge between the projecting spurs of the twin mountains to Jacob's well, about a mile east of the city. The well is only a few yards from the only highway from Jerusalem to Galilee, and in all probability, the road, in Christ's time on earth, passed over nearly, or exactly, the same place that it now does. In Syria, or Palestine, one never passes a well, or fountain, on the highroad without seeing one or more weary travelers resting beside it; and if the well is near a village, you will generally find that some one has gone to bring bread.

The mouth of Jacob's well is now about ten feet below the surface of the mound of debris which surrounds it. A vaulted chamber, belonging to a church built about 700 years ago, now partly ruined, covers the well itself. We climbed down over a mass of stones to where the well was said to be, and while peering down among the rocks expecting to find a deep, narrow opening just large enough at the top to receive a bucket like most wells in the East, I was not a little surprised to find myself directly over the well's mouth, and lying on a pile of stones which looked ready to fall in on the slightest provocation. The well is hewn out of the solid rock perfectly round—9 feet in diameter, and at least 75 feet deep. When we were there, there was a little water at the bottom of the well; but in the summer, I believe, it is always dry; so that it must have been, originally, much deeper than it appears to be now.

We are told the Sychar, or Shechem, is "near to the parcel of ground that Jacob gave to his son Joseph," and from Joshua xxiv. and xxxii., we learn that Joseph was buried on the same parcel of ground. We found, what is generally supposed to be, the grave of this Prime Minister of Egypt about a quarter of a mile north of Jacob's well. An ordinary looking Moslem tomb is surrounded by a little white-washed wall, and at one side of the inclosure stands an unsubstantial, "stick-and clay" kind of little room, into one o whose inner walls is built a ponderous slab of new Italian marble bearing, in startlingly plain English, the epitaph: "Erected to the memory of the patriarch Joseph, by H. B. M.'s Consul ———."—Christian Instructor.

An Argument for Marriage.

Powers, the sculptor, writing to a friend of what people called the folly of marrying without the means to support a family, expressed frankly his own fears when he found himself in this very position, but, he adds, with characteristic candor:

"To tell the truth, however, family and poverty have done more to support me than I have done to support them. They have compelled me to make exertions which I hardly thought myself capable of; and often, when on the eve of desparing, they have forced me, like a coward in a corner, to fight like a hero, not for myself, but for my wife and little ones. I have now as much work to do as I can execute, unless I can find more assistance in the marble, and I have a prospect of further commissions." The truth here expressed by the gifted sculptor is like a similar remark we heard not long since by a gentleman who tried matrimony in the same way, and found afterwards that the loose change in his pocket, which he had before squandered in "foolish notions"—young men's whims, as he called them—was enough to support a prudent wife, who, by well-regulated economy, has proved a fortune in herself, and has saved a snug sum of money for her once careless husband. "A wife to direct a man towards a proper ambition and to a general economy," he said, "was like timely succor at sea, to save him from destruction on a perilous voyage."

Christ can not but be most precious to a believer, because all his precious comforts come from Christ. The Lord Jesus is fairer than the fairest, sweeter than the sweetest, nearer than the nearest, dearer than the dearest, richer than the richest, and better than the best. The elect precious is of all the most precious.

Don't fret. The world will move on as usual after you are gone.

Children's Corner.

Two Better than One.

Two little girls are better than one,
Two little boys can double the fun,
Two little birds can build a fine nest,
Two little arms can love mother best,
Two little ponies must go to a span,
Two little pockets has my little man,
Two little eyes to open and close,
Two little ears and one little nose,
Two little elbows dimpled and sweet,
Two little shoes on two little feet,
Two little lips and one little chin,
Two little cheeks with a rose set in,
Two little shoulders chubby and strong,
Two little legs running all day long,
Two little prayers does my darling say,
Twice does he kneel by my side each day,
Two little folded hands, soft and brown,
Two little eyelids cast meekly down,
And two little angels guard him in bed,
One at the foot and one at the head.

—M. M. Dodge.

Beautiful Little Girls.

Want you to look pretty? Certainly we do, young friends, pretty as pretty can be; beautiful as the morning rose, as the lilies of the field. But what is beauty, and what will make you beautiful? Heaven in your souls, Jesus, the Lamb of God! Meanwhile adorn yourselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with broidered hair, or gold or pearls, or costly array, but (which becometh women professing godliness) "with good works"—"with the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price."

Behold the daughter of innocence! How beautiful is the mildness of her countenance; how lovely is the diffidence of her looks! Her cheek is dyed with the deep crimson of the rose; her eye is placid and serene, and the gentleness of her speech is as the melting softness of the flute.

Her smiles are as the enlivening rays of the sun; the beauty of her presence as the silver light of the moon.

Her attire is simple; her feet tread with caution, and she feareth to give offence.

"Then will I set my heart to find,
Inward adorning of the mind;
Knowledge and virtue, truth and grace,
These are the robes of richest dress."

In advocating Gospel simplicity in costume, the entire display or worldly conformity, the adorning of gold, pearls or costly array, we should be careful not to fall into an opposite extreme, and neglect our exterior deportment. The neglect of the outward appearance indicates either a little mind, or a disregard to the opinions of our neighbors. One should always be neat and clean in person and dress, because this is an evidence of respectability and the fear of God. No lady, who has any regard for herself or any respect for the society in which she moves, will be slovenly in her appearance or careless in her attire. To dress simply and without ostentation is not only a mark of modesty, but of Gospel simplicity and purity.

"Modesty, like diamonds, shines most fair,
More worth than pearls or rubies are,
More rich than gold or silver coin,
Oh, may it always on us shine."

Little friends, fix yourselves up neatly, genteelly, especially when you rise in the morning, come to the table, to family prayers, or attend the house of God. You'll feel better, hear better, pray better, do everything better. No slovenly person feels as he ought. Make this a matter of conscience. See that your bodies are fit temples for the Holy Spirit.

With what care and attention do the feathered race wash themselves and put their plumage in order, and how perfectly neat, clean, and elegant do they appear. Among the beasts of the field we find that those which are the most cleanly are generally the most gay and cheerful, or are distinguished by a certain air of tranquillity and contentment, and singing birds are always remarkable for the neatness of their plumage. So great is the effect of cleanness upon man, that it extends even to his moral character. Virtue never dwelt long with filth.

"What is beauty? Not the show
Of shapely limbs and features. No.
These are but flowers
That have their dated hours,
To breathe their momentary sweets, then go.
'Tis the stainless soul within."

—D. F. Newton, Author of "Apples of Gold," etc.

How Gas is Made.

First, they put about two bushels of bituminus coal into a long, air-tight retort, which is heated red hot, when the gas bursts out of it, as it bursts out of lumps of soft coal when in the parlor fire. The gas passes off through pipes. A ton of coal will make 10,000 cubic feet of gas.

While hot it is run off into another building and then forced through long, perpendicular pipes, surrounded with cold water. This cools the gas, when a good deal of tar condenses from it and runs down to the bottom of the perpendicular steam boiler, half full of wood laid crosswise. Then ten thousand streams of cold water are spurted through the boiler. Through mist and rain, and between the wet sticks of wood the gas passes, coming out washed and cleansed. The ammonia condenses, joins the water and falls to the bottom. The gas is purified by being passed through vats of lime and oxide of iron, which takes out the carbonic acid and ammonia. It is then passed through the big station meter, then through the mains and pipes, till it reaches the gas jets in the houses, when it is ready for use.—Ex.

Sand Heaps.

St. Petersburg in Russia must be a kind of Paradise for small people, if the stories they tell about things there are true. Besides building forts and palaces out of ice, that will remain for months, and an unlimited amount of skating, sleigh-riding and snow-balling, to say nothing of facinating adventures with hungry bears and wolves in the winter time, the city government takes pains to provide summer amusements for the children as well.

In many of the small parks of the city there are large open spaces covered with gravel, and every morning in each of these spaces may be seen a pile of sand about four feet high and six feet in diameter. After breakfast the little children living near go out, armed with their little spades and shovels and wagons, and employ themselves in digging in the sand, making pies, carting it about, and scattering it wherever they please. Next morning the heaps are all piled ready for use again. The city government provides the sand, and has it piled in heaps every night. —Advance.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE REFORM AGAINST THE SECRET ORDERS.

The excitement caused by the abduction and murder of a Mason who had revealed the secrets of Masonry began in 1826 and continued for nearly twenty years. During this time Daniel Webster, Edward Everett, John Quincy Adams, John Marshall, Wm. Wirt, Wm. H. Seward, Millard Fillmore, Richard Rush, Thaddeus Stevens, Thurlow Weed and many other leading men condemned the secret lodges called Masonic in the strongest language which men can use. A deep distrust and a settled hatred of secretism took possession of the inhabitants of the non-slaveholding States. They had seen an unoffending citizen abducted and murdered by the Freemasons of western New York. They saw the fraternity at large protect and honor the murderers. They banished the order from their midst.

As time went on those who knew of this outrage became fewer in number. The edge of popular hate was dulled by time. The enemy to humanity and religion seemed lifeless; and Christians do not abuse the dead. From these causes and others, Freemasonry found a place and a time in which to renew its work. It made its second start under favorable circumstances. Prominent Masons while the order was under ban had entered the Odd-fellows and the secret temperance orders. Mechanics unions of a secret character had sprung up, and when Masonry began to revive, it was buttressed all around by these other secret orders. Its members were fast filling the offices in the State. Its solemn ceremonies were fast drawing men away from the churches of Christ. The Jesuits on the one hand, the Masonic organization on the other, controlled by bad men and supported at least by the names of some who were good, advanced in parallel lines to overthrow that Christian church which is the bulwark of our liberties, and to capture by secrecy and skill the government under which we live.

Seeing, or thinking they saw, facts like these, certain Christian men called a convention to meet in the City Hall, Aurora, Ill., in October, 1867. The attendance was large and enthusiastic. Pres. Blanchard was made chairman, and delivered the principal address. Speeches of power were also made by Rev. I. A. Hart, and others. As a result of this Convention, a National meeting was held at Pittsburgh in May of 1868. At this time "The National Association of Christians opposed to Secret Societies," was formed. This Asso ciation has held annual meetings since at the following places: Chicago, 1869; Cincinnati, 1870; Worcester, 1871; Oberlin, 1872; Monmouth, 1873; and Syracuse, 1874. The following gentlemen have presided over it: Bishop Edwards, Prof. J. C. Webster, Hon. F. D. Parish, Gen. J. W. Phelps, Pres. J. Blanchard, Rev. J. G. Carson, and Rev. B. T. Roberts. The annual meetings have been addressed by so many gentlemen that it would be useless to name them all. Among them may be mentioned Pres. Fairchild of Oberlin, Senator Pomeroy of Kansas, Prof. J. W. R. Sloane, Rev. Milton Wright, Rev. J. L. Barlow, and Rev. J. Levington.

In the summer of 1868 the Christian Cynosure was started. It was a fortnightly paper at one dollar per year. After being published in this form three years it was made a weekly, and has thus been printed for the Association by Ezra A. Cook & Co. But this arrangement being unsatisfactory to the Executive Committee, it was at length passed to their control, and has since been printed by them most of the time at a sacrifice. Its editor-in-chief has been from the first Pres. J. Blanchard, who has performed his duties in this connection, and as an officer of the Executive Committee gratuitously. The assistant editor, Rev. I. A. Hart, also performed the duties of Corresponding Secretary to the Association, from its organization until June, 1874. He has greatly aided our work by his annual reports, which have been model papers.

The first Agent and Lecturer of the Association was Chas. A Blanchard, who held the place from June, 1870, to July, 1872. He was succeded by Rev. J. P. Stoddard, who still acts in that capacity, and has proved a most efficient worker. Under the labors of these gentlemen the following State Associations have been formed: Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and Iowa. A vigorous auxiliary has grown up in New York State which has received aid from the agents of the Association, but was organized by citizens of that State. A State auxiliary was also organized in Missouri last year, and another for Michigan is in contemplation. There are now laboring as State agents and lecturers: Rev. H. H. Hinman in Illinois, Rev. J. T. Kiggins in Indiana, Rev. D. S. Caldwell in Ohio, Rev. J. L. Barlow in New York Aside from these there are a number of lecturers endorsed by the Association, among these Rev. John Levington, under whose labors a State Association has just been formed in Connecticut.

As a result of the movement inaugurated by this Association, books have been printed, and a large number of tracts issued. Among the books may be mentioned: The Broken Seal, Finney on Masonry, Secret Societies Ancient and Modern, The Image of the Beast, Morgan's Book and a Revelation of Odd-fellowship. The tracts are most of them from the Cynosure press of E. A. Cook & Co., though Enoch Honeywell of New York has printed over a million copies for the gratuitous distribution at his own expense.

Until the year 1874, the Association had no legal existence. It was at that time incorporated, articles having been filed with the State Secretary of Illinois, and a certificate of incorporation issued. At present "The National Christian Association" is endeavoring to raise the sum of thirty thousand dollars to secure a building for its publishing work. Mr. Philo Carpenter, one of the prime movers in this opposition to the lodge, and who has given more money to aid in the work than any other man, has offered a beautiful building worth thirty thousand dollars to the society on condition that they raise a like amount. It is to be hoped that this sum can be speedily raised, and the Association, with enlarged means, go on its work of removing the obstacles to the coming kingdom of God.

MASONRY A WORK OF DARKNESS.

A SERMON BY
REV. LEBBEUS ARMSTRONG.

What the result would have been, had the Works of Darkness met with no repulse, is beyond the power of present calculation. Suppose the secret machinations of Masonry had succeeded without molestation, until, by its mystic power of elevation, all the commanding officers of the military and maritime forces of our national defense, all officers of the civil government, post-masters, and directors of the various banking establishments, had been Masons; and all the financial resources of the nation, had been brought within the compass of Masonic grasp.

After all this preparation, suppose a plot had been formed to overthrow our dear bought Republican Government; to erect a throne in this Western World, and place it on a Grand, Sublime, Royal, Ten Times Thrice Illustrious, and Absolutely Sovereign Masonic King. Suppose the "THIRTEENTH DAY OF THE MONTH ADAR" had been selected to blow the trumpet in Washington, and proclaim, "GOD SAVE THE MASONIC KING," while all the members of the Grand and Subordinate Lodges, Chapters, and Encampments, in the Union, having been notified by posts, to prepare themselves on the day appointed, were well harnessed with sword, shield and buckler, and commissioned to kill, slay, and utterly destroy all who would not respond to the sound of the national trumpet, "GOD SAVE THE MASONIC KING." To defray the expense of all necessary force of arms, in securing the triumph of a Coronation, and unconditional submission to his Sovereign Masonic Majesty, suppose the grasp had been made on the vaults of the numerous banks, and money offered in exuberance to all who would enter the field in support of the Revolution; under such circumstances, what would have prevented the total overthrow of our National Government, and the establishment of an Absolute Masonic Monarchy? If the Government of France was revolutionized in THREE days, might not the Government of these United States have been changed to Monarchy in ONE day, by the Mystic Power of Masonic Stratagem! Nothing could have prevented such a revolution, but the interposition of that Divine Providence which has broken asunder the strongly fortified enchantments of Freemasonry, and exposed its works of darkness to the world. The God of Israel has interposed. Glory be to his name; the Lord of Hosts has hitherto prevented our national ruin.

But even on the supposition that the exposures of the abominations of Freemasonry should terminate in civil war, as has been already insinuated, how many thousands of the miscreants of our land, would be found base enough, for the love of money, and rum, and war, to shoulder fire-arms, unsheath the sword, join the Masons, and swear by the strength of the Cable-tow, that they would conquer Anti-Masonry or die? This is no chimera. It is a measure that is comprised within the "COMPASS, SQUARE, AND ANGLE" of Masonic effort. And who can calculate the result of such an outrage on the American Government? The amount of the loss of blood and treasure, might be such as Vengeance itself might not be able to countervail, nor to sustain.

Our only hope is in God. Our prayer is, that under the Divine protection, Americans, who have been taught the lesson of Freedom at the expense of the blood of their fathers, and the widowhood of their mothers, will still be FREE. The titles, and honors, and mottoes of Masonry, savor hard of Royalty, Sovereignty, and Despotism. Let Masonry prevail and prosper, and the deplorable results may be looked for in a Masonic monarchy for our form of government; a Masonic established religion; a Masonic church; a Masonic way to a Masonic heaven; and blood and massacre, and destruction to all who subscribe not to support the Monarch who sways the energies, and rewards the services of the Works of Darkness.

Then might be written with tears and blood, America is fallen!—The last ray of her independence is covered with despotic darkness! Her hope is withered! Woe, woe unfurls the banner of moral desolation over the length and breadth of the once happy land; while an unholy religion, defended and nurtured by Masonic vengeance, shall lead millions of immortal beings from the Masonic conclaves of darkness on earth, to the pit of eternal darkness below. O, my countrymen! my countrymen! beware of the enchanting, delusive adversary, and awake to secure the best interests of the nation! If Freemasonry is a work of darkness, engendering destruction to the morals, and happiness, and souls of men, and inimical to the very existence of our inestimable government, then to oppose its progress by every laudable measure, trusting in God for success, and praying for the promised brightness of his coming, to destroy these works of the Adversary, must be the indispensable duty of every lover of Righteousness, of Liberty, and Independence. This is the true spirit of Anti-Masonry. Opposition to the Masonic works of darkness, is the amount of its import. Hence, if Freemasonry is bad, Anti-Masonry is good. To promote this cause, was the object of the National Convention, in Pittsburgh. May God follow their deliberations with his blessing. May the measures which have been adopted, diffuse a savor of the knowledge of the evils of Freemasonry, over the Republic of America, and to the remotest regions of earth. May the march of the Destroyer be successfully and triumphantly opposed at every rallying point of defense, until its power and influence shall be so weakened that there shall not even be strength enough to cry QUARTERS! —And being banished to the land of oblivion, may the blessings of Freedom and Peace be guaranteed to the nation, by the suffrage of an independent people, and thus be perpetuated, without contamination, to the latest posterity.

News of the Week.

The City.

The communists threatened last week to proceed to the rooms of the Chicago Relief and Aid Society and summarily help themselves to the funds of that institution. Their intentions becoming known our valiant officials equipped the police force, and had four loaded cannon and the First Illinois Regiment of citizen soldiery to reinforce them. The commune rabble marched up, made their demands, and at sight of the police slunk back to their basement saloon. This periodical outbreak of a few half-drunken foreigners will continue until we have a city government that is respected; but while the authorities connive with gamblers the poorer sort of rabble will question why they are clubbed from the relief fund.——The Y. M. C. A. Employment bureau, under the efficient management of J. M. Hitchcock, reports for December and January a total of 481 persons who were helped to situations; nearly one-half were young men from 20 to 30 years of age, the American and Irish element predominating. ——Remembering the destructive flood of 1848 which swept vessels, canal boats and bridges into the Lake and flooded the streets, and the experience of Buffalo last year, the city authorities have been looking carefully at the ice in the river. Various plans for setting it free are proposed: blasting, salt, and even sawing it up and towing it into the Lake. ——The Grand Jury have indicted the publishers of the Tribune, Times, Inter-Ocean, Journal, Post and Mail, and Staats-Zeitung for publishing lottery advertisements. The Inter-Ocean claims to have made $1,500 from these swindling advertisements, and as the fine was but $100, thinks it can afford to keep on. This paper, however, shows far more respect to morality and religion than its rivals. It has also discontinued the Sunday edition. ——Although indicted several times by the Grand Jury under the instructions of Judge Williams, the leading gamblers of Chicago have always escaped by some technicality. At last the charge of perjury has been fastened upon several and they are likely to spend a term in the penitentiary. ——Judge Thomas Drummond, of the Supreme Court in Chicago, has given an opinion in response to a request, in which he declares that the election of Bishop De Koven is entirely legal. The opinion is not from the bench, but carries with it equal weight because of the high standing of the Judge.

Congress.

The Senate passed the Civil Rights bill on Saturday as it came from the House and it now goes to the President. —— The bill for the settlement of Southern difficulties, called the Force bill, is being contested in the House. It will not probably become a law until somewhat modified. ——Committees from the Southern States are getting in their reports and action will be taken on them this week.

General.

A tornado passed over Pettis county, Mo., Feb. 23d, destroying several dwellings and three buildings in the county. The principal damage done was in Houstonia. The storm was only 150 yards wide, but was terrific in power, and did its work in Houstonia in thirty seconds. A freight train was hurled from the track, and some of the cars carried a distance of 100 yards. Several persons were injured, two mortally. ——Reports are being constantly received at Dubuque, from Northern Iowa, of deaths resulting from the severity of the storm. One of the most touching is that of two little children in Tama county, who were lost returning home from school in the storm of last week. The boy had stripped his coat and vest to wrap his little sister in, and the children had perished together. At Alewin a family of four perishep while returning from a visit. ——Horace Woods, a brother-in-law of Joseph Hall, the notorious dealer in obscene pictures and literature, has been placed on trial in the New York Sessions Court to answer a charge of being an accomplice of Hall's. Mr. Comstock, special agent of the post-office department, caused the arrest of Hall, Woods, Snellback, and Peckham, at their den, were was found a large quantity of the vilest kind of pictures and literature. Woods was found guilty, and sentenced to State prison for two years and to pay a fine of $500. Peckham and Shellback pleaded guilty a few days since, receiving a similar sentence, and their chief (Hall) will soon join his companions in crime. ——Feb. 24th shortly after 7 o'clock, the congregation of St. Andrew's Catholic church, on Duane street, corner of City-Hall place, New York, were assembled at evening vespers. The church was well filled, the congregation for the most part consisting of women and children. Adjoining the church are the bare walls of Shaw's crockery store, which was burnt a few days before. The high wind which prevailed and the heavy rainstorm battered against the unsupported walls, and, about 8 oclock, the west wall gave way and went crashing though the church-roof, falling on the east gallery principally, which was crowded with people, killing six persons and seriously injuring twenty-five others. ——The era of floods is come. The Wabash river rose 14 feet in twenty-four hours last week. Several vessels were swept down by the drifting ice, but no lives lost. The Tennessee was boiling over last Saturday surrounding and inundating Chattanooga. The Susquehanna and Juniata are high and filled with ice. Several bridges have been carried away. ——Ann Eliza, Brigham Young's nineteenth wife, has gained her suit for alimony, $12,500.

Foreign.

A London dispatch announces the death of Sir Charles Lyell, the eminent geologist, at the age of seventy-eight years. ——On the 24th ult. the French Assembly finally passed the bill for the organization of the Senate by a vote of 448 yeas to 241 nays. Having disposed of the Senate bill, the Assembly took up the bill for the organization of the public powers, which passed its second reading about a month ago, and considered it clause by clause. The cause implying recognition of the Republic, which had a majority of one only on Jan. 30, was finally adopted by a vote of 433 yeas to 262 nays. ——A fleet of British men-of-war have bombarded Fort Mombazique off the east coast of Africa and captured two slave ships with 300 slaves.

Home and Health Hints.

PRECAUTIONS IN CASE OF FIRE.—An excellent set of rules for guidance for the prevention of and in case of fire, by Dr. Hall, may be briefy summarized as follows: Keep all doors and windows of the structure closed until the firemen come; put a wet cloth over the mouth and get down on all fours in a smoky room; open the upper part of the window to get the smoke out; if in a theater, keep cool; descend ladders with a regular step to prevent vibration. If kerosene just purchased can be made to burn in a saucer by igniting with a match, throw it away. Put wire work over gaslights in show windows; sprinkle sand instead of sawdust on floors of oil stores; keep shavings and kindling wood away from steam boilers, and greasy rags from lofts, cupboards, boxes, etc.; see tha all stove-pipes enter well into the chimney, and that all lights and fires are out before retiring or leaving place of business; keep matches in metal or earthen vessels, and out of the reach of children; and provide a piece of stout rope, long enough to reach the ground, in every chamber. Neither admit any one if the house be on fire, except police, firemen, or known neighbors; nor swing lighted gas brackets against the wall; nor leave small children in a room where there are matches or an open fire; nor deposit ashes in a wooden box or on the floor; nor use a light in examining the gas meter. Never leave clothes near the fire-place to dry; nor smoke or read in bed by candle or lamp-light; nor put kindling wood to dry on the top of the stove; nor take a light into a closet; nor pour out liquor near an open light; nor keep burning or other inflammable liquids in rooms where there is a fire; nor allow smoking about barns or warehouses.—Scientific American.

Temperance.

MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, President of the Women's Temperance Union of Chicago, delivered a temperance lecture in Wheaton College Chapel on the evening of Feb. 22d. Although the evening was rainy and such as to render the warm firesides doubly inviting, the interest entertained by the citizens in anything pertaining to the subject of temperance secured her an unusually large audience. Every available seat in the spacious chapel was occupied, and throughout her address Miss Willard held the closest attention of her auditors. At the conclusion of the lecture a unanimous invitation was extended to her to address the citizens of DuPage at the court-house upon the same subject at her earliest convenience which she consented to do.

Spurgeon and his Cigar.

THE LAST WORK OF GEORGE TRASK.

DEAR SIR:—I address you as an elder, who am also an elder, respecting your late public defense of the use of tobacco. Through a London pulpit and London press, you give the world to understand that you smoke, and will smoke, and smoke to the glory of God, whoever may oppose.

Had you told us, my dear sir, that you used tobacco occasionally as an anodyne or medicine, what rational man, what man of sense would have questioned your unqualified right so to do? But when you vaultingly defend your habit as a habit, and tell us it is an indifferent act, a small affair and no sin,—when you challenge us to prove from the Bible that it is a sin, you arm us against your position and compel us to resist this outrage upon Christian civilization. Your voice, my brother, is potent for good or evil. It is somewhat like the English drum beat, heard round the globe. Thousands this side of the Atlantic read your defense of this demoralizing, destructiye habit, who never read your sermons. Thousands will copy your vice who will never copy your virtues.

For many years I was a victim of this baneful narcotic, hence I speak ab imo pectore, that which I do know, and testify that which I have seen. You assign one reason for using tobacco—your reasons amount to but one. Were it necessary we might give forty reasons to show that a preacher of the everlasting Gospel should be ashamed to use it.

1. It tends to make him a slave. The habit once formed and fondly indulged becomes imperious and despotic beyond description, proverbially a match for alcohol and opium. The genuine devotee will steal tobacco, who will steal nothing else, rather than do without it, for nothing else has he such a monstrous appetite. To appease its demands, proud ships have been hailed and stayed in mid ocean, and armies have threatened to rebel from right to left if not furnished with it. "Sir," we said to a neighbor: "Do you use tobacco?" "No, sir," was his reply. Tobacco uses me." Dear sir, we said to a brother clergyman, do, I pray you, give up tobacco. "Not I, not I," was his reply, "I will use it if it shortens my life seven years. I will live while I live." If this is not slavery what is slavery? Is it not a sin to practice a habit which makes an abject slave?

2. The habit tends to paralyze the preacher's power to battle intemperance. The alliance between rum and tobacco, I take it, is known and read of all men. They are both deceivers—both intoxicants—twin devils as often said, and both must be fought with pretty much the same weapons—must they not? . . .

Tell us how it is, that dram-shops and tobacco shops are generally one and the same? Tell us how it is, that men of science, reliable physicians, Mussey, Woodward, Alcott, Agnew, Twitchell, and Warren, Brodie and a host in Europe, hold it to be a physiological doctrine, that one artificial appetite generates another, and that tobacco, by wasting siliva, parching the throat, and inflaming the chest, creates thirst for strong drink, and paves the way for downright drunkenness?

. . . 3d. The habit is filthy, its victims as well as others denounce it as filthy, and men who bear the "vessels of the Lord" are required to be cleanly, in a special sense. The most intelligent, most refined, most godly people in our churches are wont to recoil from a snuffing, chewing, smoking pastor. Tobacco is an aromatic which penetrates blood and bone and sends its profane stench through all the avenues of social life. . . .

"Come into my study," said a brother clergyman; when there, "what do you smell?" he asked. After a pause, I exclaimed, "smoke! tobacco smoke! "Fresh smoke or stale?" "Not fresh surely. Old, old enough!" he laughed, and added, "my predecessor was a smoker, he quit this study two years ago, and I am sorry to say, that this abominable scent is the most tangible evidence we have of his ministry."

Ah, my brother, dear saints in the agonies of death, have with pale and trembling hand waved tobocco-using pastors from their bed sides, pastors they loved!

4. The habit tends to waste the Lord's money and the preacher's salary. This may be comparatively an inconsiderable item we admit, but as you ignore it utterly, it might be gratifying to know, dear sir, what proportion of that $70,000,000 which the English pay year by year for tobacco, is chargable to your account? To your own Master you stand or fall we admit, but we are impelled to ask, do you not spend a sum upon this poison, sufficient to support a needy widow?—an orphan child?—or perhaps to educate some noble boy for a missionary—some young Carey, Buchanan, or Judson? Your personal expenditure may not be worth naming, but the tendency of your example is to waste money enough to give the Gospel to every creature under heaven! Is it right to waste the Lord's money,—is it right by our example to tempt others to waste it upon a narcotic which, says Dr. Franklin, does a well man not the least imaginable good!

Yet you tell us my dear sir, that this habit is not sinful or a sin, and challenge its assailants to show any command or law of God against it. Are not rational creatures environed by law, laws within, above, beneath and around? And what are these laws, these laws of nature, but the laws of God? If constituted like other men, you sinned surely by self-abuse when you began to smoke. The normal, unabused physical nature, repudiated the nauseous, noxious abomination, and cried aloud, I will spue thee out of my mouth. You now "thank God for a good cigar"—but did you thus thank him when retching, plunging and tumbling in taking the first lesson in this accomplishment? There are exceptions, we admit. Here and there a victim inherits the appetite, but these cases are in fact anomalous, monstrosities, and we ask in such a case, who sinned, this man or his father, that he was born with such a loathsome appetite, an appetite which would even diminish our respect for a dog? Who sinned, this man or his father? Sin is here somewhere. A law is broken. You demand chapter and verse in condemnation of your habit. Know ye not, my brother, that the Bible is essentially a book of principles, and that it is left to common sense and honesty, to apply these principles. The scope, the reason, the intent, the spirit of law, is the law; the letter killeth.

Know ye not, my brother, that according to the English proverb, "The man who squares his conscience by the letter of the law is the synonym of a wretch?"

Tell us not, my brother, that the Bible has nothing against your habit. The Bible enjoins benevolence from beginning to end. The tobacco habit is selfish, intensely selfish, it is a public as well as an individual curse. The smoker has as good a right to poison his neighbor's well as to poison the air he breathes. All this obstrusion of saliva, smoke and stench upon the public is a violation, a gross violation of the law of love, love which constitutes the very web and woof of the word of God.

Smokers whilst smokers are hard to convert, and if they cling to their idol when converted, they are prone to become drones in the church or pitiable backsliders. Facts, mournful facts, would rather substantiate this statement in America. How is it with you? Devoted Christians of the Whitfield and Wesleyan type with us are not smokers. Our evangelists and missionaries of the Apostolic order are not smokers. We have good men who use tobacco, but men of devoted, self-denying piety, who have laid aside the sins that easily beset them, who stand fast in the liberty of Christ are in no such bondage.

Yes, my brother, tobacco is a soul-destructive soporific to millions. It stupefies the sensibilities, sears the conscience, paralyzes the will, and renders millions absolutely unable to obey God and embrace Christ.

The project of converting the world by the gospel of Christ, by the power of the Holy Ghost, and by man's free agency is not a humbug, but a rational, scriptural, glorious project eclipsing every other. The idea of converting the world whilst rum, opium and tobacco are its master, is a humbug.

With this unfinished sentence the life-work of the Anti-tobacco Apostle closed. He died with the proof-sheet of the first three pages in his hand, making the last correction on the sentence ending, "The letter killeth."

Facts and Figures.

A sympathetic newsboy in Lexington, Ky., seeing a convicted murderer on his way to prison for life, gave him a paper, saying, "I'm sorry for yer, boss—that's the best I kin do." It was the first kindness shown to the prisoner, and he quite broke down with emotion, while the witnesses of the scene rewarded the boy with currency.

Boston has 2,510 streets, avenues, squares, alleys, lanes, courts, places and terraces. Twelve bear the name of Washington, twelve Union, and eleven Auburn; the names of five other streets are repeated ten times, seven nine times, six eight times, nine are repeated seven times, twelve six times. In addition to these the names of thirty-five streets are used four times, some three, and as many more twice.

Only 1,923 miles of new railway have been opened in this country during the past year. This is less than half the mileage of 1873, and but little more than a quarter of 1872. The Governor of Michigan says that the $15,000,000 worth of railroad property held by the people of that State, is making hardly any returns to its owners.

The London Ironmonger says the best market in the world for curry-combs is the United States, a larger quantity of these useful articles of British manufacture being exported hither than to all other foreign countries together. Considering that we own more horses than any other country in the world, it is not surprising that we should want plenty of curry-combs; but it is certainly a national disgrace that we should depend on a foreign country for them, we who claim to be nation of inventers and artisans.

Prof. Tyndall illustrates the value of a single potato by supposing that every potato in the world but one were destroyed; that one would contain in itself the possibility of again stocking the world with an invaluable article of food. If one potato would produce, when planted, only a crop of ten potatoes, in ten years the total product of the produce of this one potato would be equal to ten millions, which would be sufficient to stock the whole world with seed. The real value of that single potato, then, would be such that it would be better that the city of London or New York should be totally destroyed than that tuber should be lost to the world.

Some of the Illinois towns insist that starch can be made in their midst just as well as at Oswego, and at a much greater profit, as the corn grows close by. It seems that the Oswego works are of a most extensive kind, covering twelve acres of ground, and making 30 tons a day. There are 20 pairs of burr stones, 25 miles of steam drying pipe, 600 immense cisterns, and 500 hands are constantly employed. The corn is soaked in water two weeks; it is ground wet, with a stream of water running through it, when it is conveyed into the cisterns and mixed with revolving reels, and when the starch settles the water is drawn off, and the starch is the result, which is kiln-dried and put up for market. Of course starch can be made in Illinois, and the profits are large, for a single bushel of corn will make enough starch to sell for $2. And yet it is made nowhere except Oswego? Why? Because there is said to be a secret. We think we know what the secret is. It is in pretending to have a secret,—Tribune.

ANTI-MASONIC BOOKS,

(Not our own Publications.)

For Sale by EZRA A. COOK & CO

13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

[FOR CATALOGUE OF PUBLICATIONS OF EZRA A. COOK & CO., See page 15.]

All books sent post paid, on receipt of retail price, but BOOKS SENT BY MAIL ARE NOT AT OUR RISK.

Books ordered by express are sold at 10 per cent. discount and SENT AT OUR RISK. Party ordering must pay express charges.

Elder Stearns' Books.

Stearns' Inquiry Into the Nature and Tendency of Masonry

With an Appendix.

SEVENTH EDITION.

338 Pages, in Cloth.....60 cents.
" " " Paper.....40 "

Stearns' Letters on Masonry.

Showing the antagonism between Freemasonry and the Christian Religion.
Price, 30 cents.

Stearns' Review of Two Masonic Addresses.

In this scathing review the lying pretentions of the order are clearly shown.
Price, 10 cents.

Levington's Key to Masonry.

This is Rev. Mr. Levington's last, and in the judgment of its author, best work on Masonry. The contents of the first chapter are as follows:

"Commencement and growth of Speculative or Symbolic Freemasonry—A table showing the thing at a glance—The use that the Atheists made of it—Identical with Illuminism—Its connection with the French Revolution, and with the Irish Rebellion—The action of the British Parliament with regard to it—Proofs of its diabolical purposes—Its Introduction, doings, progress and designs in the United States."

The contents of the Eleventh chapter are thus startling:

"Knights of the Golden Circle—Graphic account of them by a seceding Knight, and remarks thereon, showing the identity of the order with Masonry—Quotations from Sir Walter Scott."

This work is thrilling in statement, and powerful in argument. 425 pages,
Price, $1.35.

Light on Freemasonry.

BY ELDER D. BERNARD,

TO WHICH IS APPENDED A

Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship by a Member of the Craft.

The whole containing over five hundred pages lately revised and republished. Price $2,00

The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages in paper cover, will be sent post paid on receipt of $1.

MASONRY A WORK OF DARKNESS

ADVERSE TO CHRISTIANITY,

And Inimical to a Republican Government
By REV. LEBBEUS ARMSTRONG,
(Presbyterian.)

A Seceding Mason of 21 degrees.

This is a very telling work and no honest man that reads it will think of joining the lodge.
PRICE, 20 cents each; $1.75 per doz., post paid

Walsh's Review of Freemasonry

REVISED EDITION,

Is a Scholarly Review of the Institution, by Rev JNO. T. WALSH.

Price 25 cts.

Finney on Masonry.

BOUND IN CLOTH, PRICE $1.00,

CHEAP EDITION,

Twenty-five dollars per hundred, by express and not less than 25 copies at that rate,

BY MAIL, POST-PAID:

Per doz.....$3 75,
Single copy,..... 35 c.

THIRTEEN REASONS

Why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

BY

REV. ROBERT ARMSTRONG.

The author states his reason clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the Lodge.

Single copy, by mail post paid..... 05
Per doz., " " " 50
" 100, express charges extra.....3 50

Masonic Books,

FOR SALE AT THE CYNOSURE OFFICE.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and blisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

Allyn's Ritual of Masonry,

Illustrated by a large number of engravings, and ontaining a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, Orange nd Odd-fellows' societies. Price, $5.00.

Mackey's Masonic Ritualist;

OR

MONITORIAL INSTRUCTION BOOK

BY ALBERT G. MACKEY,

'Past General High Priest of the General Grand Chapter of the United States, Knight of the Eagle and Pelican, Prince of Mercy," Etc. Etc. Price, $1 75

Mackey's Lexicon of Freemasonry,

Containing a Definition of Terms, Notices of its History, Traditions and Antiquities, and an account of all the Rites and Mysteries of the Ancient World. 12 mo. 526 pages, $3 00.

MACKEY'S MANUAL OF THE LODGE,

OR

Monitorial Instructions in the Degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft, and Master Mason; with Ceremonies relating to Installations, Dedications, Consecrations, Laying of Corner-stones &c. Price, $2 00.
Paper Covers 2.00.

MACKEY'S TEXT BOOK

OF

MASONIC JURISPRUDENCE.

Illustrating the Laws of Freemasonry, both written and unwritten.
This is the Great Law Book of Freemasonry 570 pages. Price, $2.50

Webb's Monitor of Freemasonry,

LARGE EDITION, WITH NOTES

By ROB. HORRIS, Price, $1.50.
Pocket Edition, 75 cts.

SICKELS' FREEMASON'S MONITOR.

Containing the Degrees of Freemasonry embraced in the Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery, embellished with nearly 300 symbolic Illustrations. Together with Tactics and drill of Masonic Knighthood. Also, forms of Masonic Documents, Notes, Songs, Masonic dates, installations, etc. By D. Sickels, 32 mo nck. Price $1.50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry.

A Practical Guide to the Ceremonies in the Degrees conferred in Masonic Lodge Chapter, Encampments, etc. Illustrated Edition. In cloth, $1 25; paper, 75 cts.

Chase's Digest of Masonic Law.

Comprises a Complete Code of Regulations, Decisions and Opinions upon Questions of Masonic Jurisprudence. Price, $2 25.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor

Illustrated with Explanatory Engraving. Price $2.50.

Books on Odd Fellowship.

Donaldson's Odd Fellows The Book,

By Pasonal Donaldson, D. D.,

GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF NORTHERN N. Y.,

Illustrated with numerous engravings, showing the emblems of the order.. A detailed account of the Forms, Ceremonies, Funeral Services and Odes with music, and a complete manual for the guidance of Officers and Lodges. Pocket edition Tuck, $1.50.

Grosh's Manual of Odd Fellowship

BY REV. A. B. GROSH.

Paining the history, defence, principles and government of the order; the instructions of ach degree and duties of every station and office with engravings of the emblems of the orders, etc
Price in Cloth,.....$2 00
" Tuck, abridged edition, 1 50

Descriptive Catalogue of Publications of Ezra A. Cook & Co.

13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

BOOKS.

FREEMASONRY EXPOSED,

by CAP'T. WILLIAM MORGAN.

THE GENUINE OLD MORGAN BOOK:—repnblished with engravings showing the Lodge Room, Dress of candidates, Signs, Due Gnards, Grips, Etc.

This revelation is so accnrate that Freemasons murdered the anthor for writing it. Thousands have testified to the correctness of the revelation and this book therefore sells very rapidly.

Price 25 cents.

Per Doz. Post Paid..... $2.00
Per hundred by express, (express charges extra.).....$10.00

THE BROKEN SEAL.

OR PERSONAL REMINISCENCES OF THE ABDUCTION AND MURDER OF Wm. MORGAN,

By SAMUEL D. GREENE,

Price in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

In Paper Covers per Doz. Post paid.....$4 50
" per hundred by express (ex. charges extra $25.00

That the book is one of great interest and value is shown by the following

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"A MASONIC REVELATION.—Mr. Samnel D. Greene is a venerable gentleman of the highest respectability, whose statements seem to be worthy of full credence. The Broken Seal: or, Personal Reminiscences of the Morgan Abduction and Murder, is the title of a book of some three hundred pages just issued by him, pnrporting to give a full and accnrate account, from personal knowledge, of the Morgan 'abduction,' and other masonic matters which made such an excitement in this country, now almost half a century ago."—Congregationalist and Recorder, Boston.

"'FREEMASONRY DEVELOPED.'—'The Broken Seal: or, Personal Reminiscences of the Morgan Abduction and Mnrder,' is the title of a volume written and just published by Samuel D. Greene, of Boston. The author belonged to the same lodge with Morgan, and professes to know all about that event which made such a sensation throughout the conntry forty years ago. The book contains the confession of Morgan's murderer, and much more curious and interesting matter, including the ceremony of initiation, etc. The author opposes Freemasonry as inimical to good government, to society, and to the Church; and the story that he here tells will make a sensation in the order, if its statements are really what they pnrport to be. If Freemasonry is what it is supposed by many to be, in its obligations, the anthor of this book must be a bold man."—Daily Herald, Boston.

"We are acquainted with Mr. Greene, and have no doubt that his account is entirely reliable, and of great historic and moral interest. Capt. Wm. Morgan was Mr. Greene's neighbor in Batavia, N. Y., and a member of the same lodge with him at the time of the great excitement in 1826. The titles to these chapters are sufficiently exciting to give the book a large sale:—'The Storm Gathering;' "Abduction of Morgan;" "Attempted Abduction of Miller and his Rescue;" "What became of Morgan;" "What Morgan Actually Revealed;" "Confession of the Murderer;" "Allegations against Freemasonry, etc."—Boston Daily News.

History of The Abduction and Murder of Cap't. Wm. Morgan,

As prepared by Seven Committees of Citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan.

This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons, abducted and Murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offence than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife, and no candid person after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable FREEMASONS. in the Empire State, with others were concerned in this crime.

Single Copy, post Paid,... ..... 25 cents.
Per doz. " ..... $2,00.
Per 100, Express Charges Extra,..... 10.00.

Valance's Confession of The Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.

This confession of Henry L. Valance, one of the three Freemasons who drowned Morgan, in the Niagara River, was taken from the lips of the dying man by Dr. John C. Emery, of Racine Conuty, Wisconsin in 1848; The confession bears clear evidence of truthfulness.

Single copy, post paid,..... 20 cents.
Per doz. " ..... $1.50.
Per 100 Express Charges Extra,..... 8.00.

The Mystic Tie or Freemasonry a League with the Devil.

This is an account of the Church Trial of Peter Cook, and wife of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a Reverend Freemason; and their very able defence presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry, is antagonistic to the Christian Religion. Single Copy, post paid,..... 20 cents

Per dozen, post paid..... $1 50
Per hundred Express charges Extra, ... 9 00

NARRATIVES AND ARGUMENTS,

showing the Conflict of Secret Societies with the Constitution and Laws, of the Union and of the States.

by FRANCIS SEMPLE of Dover, Iowa.

The fact that Secret Societies, interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of Law is here clearly proved. price 20c.

Per dozen, post paid..... $1 75
Per hundred Express charges Extra..... 9 00

The Antimason's Scrap Book,

CONSISTING OF

21 CYNOSURE TRACTS.

In this book are the views of more than a Score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of Secret Societies.

The dangerous tendency and positive evil of organized Secrecy is here shown by the most varied and powerful arguments and illustrations that have ever been given to the public.

Lecturers and others who wish to find the best arguments against the Lodge, should send for this book.

Those who wish to circulate Antimasonic Tracts ought to have the book to select from.

Single Copy, post paid, ...20 cents.
Per Doz. " $1.75
Per 100, Express charges Extra,.....$10.00

ODD FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

A new illustrated exposition of the order. The Signs, Grips, &c. shown by engravings.

Single copy, post paid,.....$ 25
Per Doz.. " " 2 00
Per Hundred, Express charges extra,..... 10 00

PHELPS' SECRET SOCIETIES Ancient and Modern.

A NEW BOOK OF GREAT INTEREST.

This work is particularly commended to the attention of Officers of The Army and Navy, The Bench and The Clergy.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

"THE ANTIQUITY OF SECRET SOCIETIES, THE LIFE OF JULIAN, THE ELEUSINIAN MYSTERIES, THE ORIGIN OF MASONRY, WAS WASHINGTON A MASON? FILMORE'S AND WEBSTER'S DEFERENCE TO MASONRY, A BRIEF OUTLINE OF THE PROGRESS OF MASONRY IN THE UNITED STATES, THE TAMMANY RING, MASONIC BENEVOLENCE, THE USES OF MASONRY, AN ILLUSTRATION, THE CONCLUSION."

Single Copy, Post Paid..... 5c
Per Doz " " $4 75
Per Hundred, Express Charges Extra.....$33 00

MINUTES OF THE SYRACUSE CONVENTION,

Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. D. Greene, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. S. D. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. Unpublished Reminiscences of the Morgan Times, by Elder David Bernard; Recollections of the Morgan Trials, as related by Victory Birdseye, Esq., and presented by his daughter, Mrs. C. B. Miller; Secretary's report; roll of delegates; songs of Mr. G. A. Clark; paper by Enoch Honeywell; Constitution N. C. A.; reports of committees, and a report of the political meeting.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion.

A clear cutting argument against the Lodge, from a Christian stand point.

Single Copy.....$ 05
Per 100..... 3 00

SERMON ON MASONRY,

BY REV. W. P. M'NARY,

Pastor United Presbyterian Church, Bloomington, Ind.

This is a very clear, thorough, candid and remarkably consice Scriptural argument on the character of Freemasonry.

Single Copy, Post Paid,..... 5
Per Doz,..... 50
Per Hnndred, Express Charges Extra.....$3 00

COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES.

Their Customs, Character and the Efforts for their Suppression.

BY H. L. KELLOGG.

Containing the opinion of many rominent College Presidents, and others, and a FULL ACCOUNT OF THE MURDER OF MORTIMER LEGGETT

Single Copy, post paid.....$ 35
per Doz " " 2 50
per 100 Express charges extra..... 15 00

ANTIMASONIC TRACTS.

WE NOW HAVE 22 ENGLISH TRACTS, ONE GERMAN, AND ONE SWEEDISE These tracts are sold at the rate of $1.00 per 1000 pages.

A Tract Fund for the Free Distribution of Tracts.

HAS BEEN SECURED AND WE HOPE WILL NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fund a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE.

Many of our most earnest workers in this canse of God are poor men, who wonld be glad to circulate thonsands of pages of Antimasonic literatnre if they could have them free.

SHALL WE NOT HAVE AN INEXHAUSTIBLE TRACT FUND?

"THE ANTI-MASONS SCRAP BOOK."

Contains our 21 Cynosnre Tracts, bound together, price 20 cents. See advertisement.

Address EZRA A. COOK & CO.,
13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

TRACT NO. 1:

HISTORY OF MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT J. BLANCHARD, OF WHEATON COLLEGE.

This is now published in three tracts of four pages each. Price of each, 50 cents per 100; $4 per 1000.

TRACT No. 1, PART FIRST—Shows the origin of Speculative Freemasonry, and is entiled "HISTORY OF MASONRY."

TRACT No. 1, PART SECOND—Is entitled "DESPOTIC CHARACTER OF FREEMASONRY"

TRACT No. 1, PART THIRD—Is entitled "FREEMASONRY A CHRIST-EXCLUDING RELIGION."

TRACT NO. 1, IN SWEDISH;

translated by Prof. A. R. CERVIN. A 15-page tract at $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 2:

MASONIC MURDER,

By REV. J. R. BAIRD, of Pleasantville, Pa., a seceding Mason who has taken 17 degrees. A 2-page tract at 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 3:

SECRETS OF MASONRY,

BY ELI TAPLEY.

This is a 4-page Illnstrated Tract, showing the signs, grips and pass-words, of the first three degrees. 50 cents per 100, or $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 4:

GRAND! GREAT GRAND!!

BY PHILO CARPENTER.

This is a 2-page tract, calling the attention of the public to the despotic and ridicnlous titles of Freemasonry. Price 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1,000.

TRACT. NO, 5:

Extracts From Masonic Oaths and Penalties, as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.

This tract is a reprint of a tract published in 1834, and is a very weighty document. A 4-page tract at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 6:

Hon. John Quincy Adams' Letter.

Giving His and His Father's Opinion of Freemasonry (1831.);

AND

Hon. James Madison's Letter,

Giving His Opinion of Freemasonry (1832).

Both of these letters, in one 4-page tract, at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 7:

SATAN'S CABLE-TOW.

A 4-page tract. This is a careful analysis of the character of Masonic oaths, and shows them to be most blasphemous and unchristian; and the Masonic Cable Tow is clearly shown to be the Cable Tow by which Satan is leading thonsands to eternal death. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 8:

Is a 2-page double tract, "ILLUSTRATED." The first page represents a Mason proclaiming the wonderful wisdom and benevolence of the order, with an article below, entitled "Freemasonry is only 152 Years Old," and gives the time and place of its birth.

The second side is entitled, "Murder and Treason not Excepted," and shows that the Masonic order is treasonable in its constitution, and is both anti-Republican and anti-Christian. Price 25 cents per 100; $2 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 9, ILLUSTRATED:

FREEMASONRY IN THE CHURCH.

Copy of a petition for the higher degrees of Freemasonry, in which Blasphemous and Despotic Titles are enumerated and prayed for. The Copy was printed for the use of "Occidental Sovereign Consistory S. P. R. S.," 32d degree—a Chicago Lodge—and was ordered by a deacon of a Christian Church who is Grand Orator of the Grand Lodge of Ill.

TRACT NO. 10:

CHARACTER AND SYMBOLS OF FREEMASONRY.

A 2-page tract, (ILLUSTRATED) by its "Grand Secretaries, Grand Lecturers, Perfect Prince Freemasons, Grand Inspector, Inquisitor Commanders, Grand High Priests," etc. The wonderful symbolical meaning of "the Cable Tow," "the Square and Compass," "the Lamb Skin, or white Apron," and "the Common Gavel," are given in the exact words of the highest Masonic authority. 25 cents per 100 or $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 11;

Address of Niagara County Association, New York,

TO THE PUBLIC;

Concerning the Morgan Murder, and the character of Freemasonry, as shown by this and other Masonic murders. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 12:

JUDGE WHITNEY AND MASONRY.

This tract contains a condensed account of Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois, on charge of unmasonic conduct in bringing Samuel L. Keith the murderer of Ellen Slade, and a member of his Lodge, to justice, with Judge Whitney's subsequent renunciation of Masonry,

An 8-page tract, $1.00 per 100; $8.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 13:

DR. NATHANIEL COLVER ON MASONRY,

and

HOWARD CROSBY, D. D.,

Chancellor of the University of New York, on SECRET SOCIETIES. A double 2-page tract 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 14:

GRAND LODGE MASONRY.

ITS RELATION TO CIVIL GOVERNMENT AND THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION.

Opening address before the Monmouth Convention, by PRES. J. BLANCHARD of WHEATON COLLEGE. This is a 16-page tract at $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 15:

MASONIC OATHS NULL AND VOID.

A clear and conclusive argument proving the invalidity of any oath or obligation to do evil. By REV. I. A. HART, Secretary National Christian Association. Published by special order of the Association. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 16:

HON. SETH M. GATES ON FREEMASONRY.

PROOF THAT THE INSTITUTION THAT MURDERED MORGAN IS UNCHANGED IN CHARACTER

This is a letter to the Monmouth Convention by Hon. Seth M. Gates who was Deputy Sheriff of Genesee County, and also Secretary of the Leroy Lodge at the time of Morgan's Abduction. A 4-page tract, 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 17:

Origin, Obligations and Expenses of The Grange.

WITH A CONSTITUTION OF A FARMERS' CLUB.

This little tract ought to be put into the hands of every Farmer in the United States. Four-page tract, 50 cents per 100; $4 00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 18:

HON. WM. H. SEWARD ON SECRET SOCIETIES.

Extracts from a Speech on Know-Nothingism in the U. S. Senate in 1855. The testimony of JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, MILLARD FILLMORE, CHIEF JUSTIC MARSHALL and others, is added.

A 2-page tract, 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO, 19.

BRICKS FOR MASONS TO LAY.

WASHINGTON, MADISON, MARSHALL, RUSH, HANCOCK, ADAMS AND WEBSTER, give brief clear testimony against the Lodge A 2-page tract 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 20:

OBJECTIONS TO MASONRY.

By A SECEDING MASON, of Coruton, Vermont.

This tract contains many strong arguments against the Lodge drawn from personal experience, observation and study of its character. A 4-page tract at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

TRACT NO. 21:

MASONIC CHASTITY.

BY EMMA A. WALLACE,

The anthor, by wonderfully clear illustration and argument, shows the terribly corrupt nature of Freemasonry. No true woman who reads this will ever speak with approbation of this institution A 4-page tract 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

GERMAN CYNOSURE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason

By REV. A. GROLE, Pastor, German M. E. Church,

WORCESTER, MASS.

This is our first German tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. Price 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

ENOCH HONEYWELL'S TRACT

TO THE YOUNG MEN OF AMERICA. Postage, 3 cents per 100 Tracts. Tracts Free

Farm and Garden.

"If I Had Leisure."

"If I had leisure, I would repair that weak place in my fence" said a farmer. He had none, however, and while drinking cider with a neighbor, the cows broke in and injured a prime piece of corn. He had leisure then to repair his fence, but it did not bring back the corn.

"If I had leisure," said a wheelwright last winter, "I would alter my stove-pipe, for I know it is not safe." But he did not find time, and when his shop caught fire and burned down, he found leisure to build another.

"If I had leisure," said a mechanic, "I should have my work done in season." The man thinks his time has been all occupied, but he was not at work till after sunrise; he quit work at five o'clock, smoked a cigar after dinner, and spent two hours on the street talk-nonsense with an idler.

"If I had leisure," said a merchant, "I would pay more attention to my accounts, and try and collect my bills more promptly." The chance is, my friend, if you had leisure you would probably pay less attention to the matter than you do now. The thing lacking with hundreds of farmers who till the soil is, not more leisure but more resolution—the spirit to do, to do now. If the farmer who sees his fence in a poor condition would only act at once, how much might be saved! It would prevent breechy cattle creating quarrels among neighbors, that in many cases terminate in lawsuits which take nearly all they are both worth to pay the lawyers.

The fact is, farmers and mechanics have more leisure than they are aware of, for study and improvement of their minds. They have the long evenings of winter, in which they can post themselves up on all the improvements of the day, if they will take ably conducted agricultural journals and read them with care. The farmer who fails to study his business and then gets shaved, has none but himself to blame.—Cor. N. E. Farmer.

Horses in Storms.

Avoid, as far as possible, exposing horses to storms. When on a journey aim to feed at the regular hours. If nothing more can be done take along some corn-meal, and put a quart in a pail of water and stir it up while the horse is drinking. It will greatly refresh and strengthen him. Many horses suffer from dyspepsia; and one great cause of it is irregularity in feeding, and giving to much grain when the horse is fatigued. When a horse has been exposed to a storm and comes home in an exhausted condition, give him a warm bran-mash. Put in two or three quarts of boiling water and stir it up; then add cold water sufficient to cool it to the temperature of new milk, and give it to the horse. Blanket the horse. Colic will be avoided by this means. We think many farmers err in not feeding their horses more grain. It would be better to work harder, at least more constantly, and feed higher. Of one thing we are very sure—not one farmer in ten grooms his horse sufficiently. It is a shame to a man to leave his horse at night, after a hard day's work, until he has been rubbed clean, dry-bedded, and all his wants attended to.—Farmer's Union.

Publishers' Department.

Two hundred and eighty-five subscriptions expire in March. Is yours one of them? We ask you all to renew as promptly as possible so as to avoid mistakes, misunderstandings or delay. Please send a new subscription, if possible, with your renewal. Commission may be used, if desired, to pay the postage.

We hope our friends whose time expires in April will canvass as much as possible in March for new subscriptions. Can you not obtain five names for a year and be enrolled in Mr. Clark's company?

One month hence we intend to report the number of subscriptions on our list. Every month we have to remove between fifty and three hundred names of subscribers who do not renew, from our mail list. This month we have received two hundred new subscriptions and discontinue about two hundred and fifty. We ought to have had fifty more this month to keep our number good. Please turn the scales next month so that our list will be much larger than it is now. Be instant in season, out of season. Some (many) think that the self-denying labors our forefathers put forth are not needed now. But the fact is, if we would preserve a Christian, republican country as a heritage for the coming generation, we must exercise the same self-denying vigilance that our forefathers showed. The obstacles which we must overcome are as formidable, though of a different character as any they had to contend with. Will you prayerfully find out your work and enter into it HEARTILY for Christ's sake?

We take opportunity to thank faithful friends who are doing all they can to extend the circulation of the Cynosure; and also to thank our friends for their many expressions of sympathy and for their prayers in our behalf. We ask your continued prayers and co-operation.

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED DURING WEEK ENDING FEBRUARY 27, FROM—J A Adams, A Austin, C H Allen, A Baldridge, J B Blain, M R Britten, J M Bishop, N R Corning, J W Campbell, J Carter, D Countryman, O Chamberlain, D Callow, M A Clark, L Clark, Mary Dennis, R B Gardiner, I Hodder, A Henderson, H H Hinman, B Hamp, J L antz, W Lamon, D, Miller, T B McCormick, N W Mayers, J F Morton J A Morehouse, D Myer, J McLane, J J Olds, Wm Parkhill, J W Pierson, E T Preston, T Relyea, M Robinson, J S Rice, Mrs O G Risley, J P Rogers, J Shawman, P Shook, D B Sterrett, J P Stoddard, R Shields, P S Slauson, J Taylor, J Wilkison, S D Webster, B R Willits, D I Wilson, W White, C Williams, A Wisely, L A Wickley, J H Wilcox.

TERMS FOR THE CYNOSURE.

$2.00 per annum, in advance.
20c " " " " for postage.

All who canvass for the CYNOSURE are allowed a cash commission of twenty per cent. or twenty-five per cent in books at retail prices, one-half this percentage on renewals, and any one sending $100. for the CYNOSURE during three months, will be entitled to an extra five per cent.

All responsible persons who desire to promote this reform are authorized to act as agents.

CLUB RATES.

No commission is allowed on club rates. Club rates are intended for those who wish to give the commission to subscribers.

Subscriptions may all be sent at one time, or at different times, and in all cases the sender should keep an account of the names and amounts sent.

CLUB RATES, INCLUDING POSTAGE.

Two new subscriptions, one year	$3.90
One new subscription and one renewal, sent ten days before expiration of subscription,	3.90
4 new subs., 1 year., 1 copy free to sender,	8.75
5 " " 1 " 1 " "	10.50
6 " " " " "	12.25
7 " " " " "	14.00
8 " " " " "	15.75
10 " " " " "	19.50
20 " " " " "	36 00
10 Renewals " " " "	22.00
50 " " " " "	85,00

Twenty subscriptions for six months count the same as ten for a year.

Postage on the Cynosure.

THE POSTAGE ON THE CYNOSURE MUST BE PAID AT CHICAGO. It is twenty cents a year.

The cost of postage now depends entirely on the size and weight, and therefore some smaller papers charge but fifteen cents; and others about the size of the Cynosure charge twenty-five cents a year for postage.

If the subscription price of the CYNOSURE was $2.50 or $3.00 a year, the price of many religious papers containing no more reading matter, we might afford to pay the postage ourselves, but at $2.00 a year we cannot do this with our present Subscription list.

Therefore let all send the postage, 20 cents a year, 10 cents for half a year with their renewals.

The commission on one new subscription for a year will pay the postage on your own and the new subscriber's paper. We would rather have the postage paid by commissions than in any other way.

When postage is not paid we shall have to shorten the time of subscription sufficiently to pay it.

MARKET REPORTS

CHICAGO, March 1, 1875.

The following are the latest advices:

Grain Wheat—Spring, No. 1	$90	91
" No. 2	85¾	86½
" No. 3	82	82¾
" Rejected		78
Corn—No. 2	64	64⅝
Rejected		63¼
Oats—No. 2	53¾	54
Rejected		52½
Rye—No. 2	98	99
Flour—Winter	4 25	6 50
Spring	3 00	4 50
Hay—Timothy	14 50	18 50
Prairie, "	10 00	13 00
Lard		13¼
Mess pork, per bbl		18 25
Butter	23	36
Cheese	10	18
Eggs	30	37
Potatoes, per bus	85	1 10
Broom corn	08	13
Seeds—Timothy	2 25	2 65
Clover	6 50	6 60
Flax	1 90	2 50
Dressed Hogs	7 60	8 25
Chickens, dressed, per lb	09	13
Turkeys, do. per lb	19	13½
HIDES green to dry salted	07½	15
Lumber—Clear	37 00	55 00
Common	11 00	12 00
Lath		2 25
Shingles	1 50	3 25
WOOL—Washed	40	58
Unwashed	27	37
LIVE STOCK Cattle, extra	6 25	6 65
Good to choice	5 00	6 00
Medium	4 25	4 75
Common	2 75	4 10
Hogs,	6 25	7 60
Sheep	3 50	6 00

New York Market.

Flour	$4 25	8 00
Wheat	1 05	1 34
Corn	83½	84½
Oats	67	71½
Rye	94	95
Lard		14
Mess pork		18 00
Butter	15	24
Cheese	12	16
Eggs	30	40

How to Send Money.

Post office orders, checks or drafts on Chicago or towns east of Chicago, and currency by express may be sent at our risk. If it is not possible to send by either of the four ways named, money in a registered letter may be sent at our risk, but it is not as safe.

The date at which subscriptions expire is with each subscriber's name on the address label. Send renewals before this date occurs. Notice if this date is changed to correspond; if not or if the paper fails to come, write without delay.

We discontinue during the first part of each month all subscriptions which expire during the preceding one except such as are ordered continued with a promise to forward the money soon. We do not like to lose a single subscriber and will not remove names simply because the cash is not received promptly, if we understand that the paper is wanted. Address all letters with subscriptions or orders for Books, Tracts and donations to the Tract Fund to EZRA A. COOK & Co., 13 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1	square, 1 insertion,		$2.00
1	square (1 inch deep)	one month	7.00
1	"	2 "	10.00
1	"	3 "	15.00
1	"	6 "	25.00
1	"	12 "	40.00

Discount for Space.

On 2 squares 5 per cent, On 3 squares 10 per cent
On 4 " 15 " " On 5 " 20 "
On ¼ col. 25 per cent On one col. 30 per cent

Agents Wanted!

TO SELL THE PUBLICATIONS OF

EZRA A. COOK & CO.

Liberal Terms Offered.

Capable persons who are in need of pecuniary aid may clear

Handsome Profits,

While at the same time aiding the cause of Reform. Apply to EZRA A. COOK & CO., No. 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

SOMETHING NEW.

A CHART OF MASONRY

Showing the degrees from the first to the thirty-third, entitled

Degrees of Ancient Accepted Scottish Freemasonry,

According to a Manual by Wm. M. Cunningham 33d Degree.

Designed by Rev. P. Stoddard, to explain Freemasonry, as shown by Morgan's Exposition and Richardson's Monitor.

A Neat Lithograph 22x28 Inches.

Single copies finely colored, post paid	$ 75
Per dozen " " "	5 00
Per 100 " " " Express charges extra	35 00
Single copy, colored, varnished and mounted postpaid	1 00
Per dozen colored, varnished and mounted, post paid	7 50
Per 100, colored, varnished and mounted, express charges extra	50 00

25 COPIES OR MORE SENT AT THE 100 RATES.

Excelsior Marriage Certificate.

It is decidedly the most BEAUTIFUL, TASTEFUL and SENSIBLE thing of the kind I have ever seen."—Rev. F. G. Hibbard, D. D.

"The most SCRIPTURAL, BEAUTIFUL and APPROPRIATE Marriage Certificate I have ever seen."—Late Rev. H. Mattison, D. D.

"SOMETHING NEW AND BEAUTIFUL, which we pronounce the handsomest thing of the kind we ever laid eyes on."—Meth. Home Journal, Phila. Contains two Ornamental Ovals, for Photographs

A BEAUTIFUL LITHOGRAPH 14 1-4 by 18 1-4 inches. 25 cts each, $2.25 per doz. $15 per 100.

For Sale by Ezra A. Cook & Co., CHICAGO.

$5 to $20 per day. Agents wanted. All classes of working people of both sexes, young and old, make more money at work for us, in their own localities, during their spare moments, or all the time, than at anything else. We offer employment that will pay handsomely for every hours work. Full particulars, terms, &c., sent free. Send us your address at once. Don't delay. Now is the time. Don't look for work or business elsewhere, until you have learned what we offer. G. STINSON & Co., Portland, Maine.

Advertising: Cheap: Good: Systematic.—All persons who contemplate making contracts with newspapers for the insertion of advertisements, should send 25 cents to Geo. P. Rowell & Co., 41 Park Row, New York, for their PAMPHLET-BOOK (ninety-seventh edition), containing lists of over 2000 newspapers and estimates, showing the cost. Advertisements taken for leading papers in many States at a tremendous reduction from publisher's rates. GET THE BOOK.

NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

BEST ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

Daily, $10 a year. Semi-Weekly, $3. Weekly $2.

POSTAGE FREE TO THE SUBSCRIBER. Specimen Copies and Advertising Rates Free. Weekly, in clubs of 30 or more, only $1 postage paid. Address THE TRIBUNE, N. Y.

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

"In Secret Have I Said Nothing."—Jesus Christ.

EZRA A. COOK & CO., PUBLISHERS, NO 13 WABASH AVENUE.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 11, 1875.

VOL. VII., NO. 22.—WHOLE NO. 257. WEEKLY, $2 00 A YEAR.

Contents.

	Page
TOPICS OF THE TIME	1
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
God in Politics	8
The Lonisiana Lodge Alliance	8
Notes	8
CONTRIBUTED AND SELECT ARTICLES:
The Conspiracy of Silence (Poetry)	1
Masonic Oaths	1
The Friends and Secret Societies	2
Great and Good Men not always Wise Men	2
A Literary Society on Secret Orders	2
Gerrit Smith's Religious Experience	3
A Reminiscence of Sumner	3
REFORM NEWS and NOTICES: From Iowa and the General Agent; Minutes of the Delavan Convention; The Convention at Coulterville, Ill; Normal School Debate; From Genesee Co., Mich.; From Clyde, N. Y.; Rev. T. B McCormick at Somerville, Ind.	4
CORRESPONDENCE: From the Pennsylvania Agent; From Ohio Central College; A Note of Encouragement and Experience; Letter to the General Agent; How the Grange is used; Odd-fellow Funeral; Freemasonry in Court; Strange Fire; The Testimony of Years; Our Mail	5,6
Exposition of the Grange	12
History of the Reform against Secret Orders (Political)	13
Parvin and Tindel on Masonic History	7
THE HOME CIRCLE	10
CHILDREN'S CORNER	11
The Sabbath School	7
Home and Health Hints	12
Farm and Garden	16
Temperance	14
Facts and Figures	14
Religious Intelligence	9
News of the Week	13
Publishers' Department	16

Topics of the Time.

A case which would come under the Civil Rights bill when it becomes law was decided in Wilmington, North Carolina, the other day, against the colored man and in favor of the saloon-keeper who refused to sell him liquor. It will prove a wise omission if the provisions of that bill are found not to cover the dram bar. If the negro-hater is allowed a single monopoly let that be the one.

If the greatest of Italian artists and the architect of the grandest of cathedrals had any doubt that St. Peters at Rome, or the sculpture and paintings of Michel Angelo would not perpetuate his memory, the extraordinary terms of his will made sure of future honor. At his death Anglo sealed a packet of valuable letters, his own and from princes and potentates of his day, enjoining that it should not be opened until the 400th anniversary of his birth. That fell on Saturday last and the seal was opened by the Italian government. The two thousand letters thus opened are expected to throw new light on Italian history of that long past age.

Hency C. Bowen holds a peculiar position in respect to the Beecher-Tilton trial. He has known both parties since the beginning of their public life in Brooklyn, and is supposed to keep a store of wonderful secrets behind his close-shut mouth. While he has so long occupied this position that he has become a center of attraction to the scandal-loving public, both parties appear to have studiously avoided any definite allusion to him and even seemed anxious to avoid the necessity of his testimony; until directly attacked by the defense he has been retained as a witness for Tilton. What kind of an explosion may follow when the spark is touched to this magazine by permission of the court can be better guessed when those who have anything to risk irun for safety. Meantime so long as Bowen draws spiritual consolation every Lord's day from Plymouth pulpit sensation-mongers need expect little. Meantime Mr. Bowen appears like a Freemason whose stupidity is hidden with a senatorial gravity through the effort of sustaining the momentous responsibility of wonderful secrets.

Those who are inquisitive about the expenses of government will understand some of the practices of civil economists from the following illustration. In Illinois besides the school tax in each district there is a State tax for the same purpose which is distributed among the various counties in proportion to the number of school children in each. The State tax is collected by the town officials, who retain a part as commission; passes to the county collector, who takes another commission; passes to the State Treasurer, who exacts his share; from the State Treasurer to the State Superintendent of Instruction, who gets his per cent.; thence back to the county treasurer, who takes a second commission, and finally the town treasurer and school districts both taking toll. In this process at least twenty-two per cent. of the entire fund is "rubbed off" before it reaches the teachers and the schools. And yet while this waste of $240,000 out of every $1,000,000 is going on, each county is obliged to raise a school tax of its own to supplement that of the State, and to get up all the machinery for its collection and distribution It is well to know that this abusive system is in process of demolition, the State legislature having the matter of repeal under discussion.

No patriotic soldier will regret that President Grant has refused to sign the Bounty Equalization bill. As orignally presented in the House it could meet no objection but the empty treasury. It provided amply for the payment of bounty at the rate of $100 per year for actual service after deducting any bounty previously paid. This was an actual equalization and might have required twenty-five or thirty million dollars. But in the Senate the proposition was loaded with amendments until its original features were lost. First, all "home guards" were admitted for an equal share with the veteran soldiery; then teamsters, musicians and other army dependents who never enlisted or smelt powder; then freedmen attached to the army; then some Indian tribes which took part against other Indians sympathizing with the South; then seamen; finally the provision for State and local bounties was stricken out and the equalization feature of the bill destroyed. What object rational legislators could hope to accomplish by such an act can only be conjectured. Justice certainly was not one. A huge bid for popularity and the Presidency is suggested; not without reason, since John A. Logan carried it through Congress. At least the President deserves our thanks for refusing his signature, and the country may breathe freer from escaping a burden of two hundred million dollars, however widely it might have been distributed.

The Conspiracy of Silence.

Shall we join it? Shall we praise it?
Shall we hide the Master's Word?
Kiss, and yet by silence sell it,
Faithless, recreant to our Lord?
Let the spell at once be broken,
Silence now would be our sin;
Truth's a sword, and we must use it,
Smite each foe without, within.
With the feeblest and the strongest,
Where the Captain's flag we see,
We will go and fight in earnest,
But our hands they must be free.

By our Captain's love and honor,
By our country's wounds and woes,
With the strength which God hath given
We must up and smite His foes.
By the grand old charter given,
Freedom bought by toil and tears,
By the wounded and the dying
And the hope of coming years,
With the feeblest and the strongest
Where the Captain's flag we see,
We will love and fight in earnest,
Heart and hand and voice all free.

What our faith in love thus claimeth
Freely to our friends we give,
Freedom in their speech and action,
Only thus can freemen live;
Keep not silence; let each soldier
Shout his war-cry as he will;
Truth's own weapons bravely wielded,
Her own children never kill.
With the feeblest, with the strongest,
Where the Captain's flag we see,
Love we still, and fight in earnest,
But our hands they must be free.

Why should comrades then be angry?
Life's stern battle is no play;
And if fighting we should wound them,
'Tis but error we should slay;
'Tis for truth like them we struggle,
Not for victory or for name,
Seeking through our toil and conflict
To extend the Captain's fame.
With the feeblest and the strongest,
Where the Captain's flag we see,
Bide we still and fight in earnest,
But our hands they must be free.

—W. P. Balfern.

Masonic Oaths.

BY A. M. MILLIGAN.

The oath is a divine institution, and derives all its importance from that consideration. It is an appeal to God to witness whether the testimony given be true or false, and if it be false, to punish not only the lie but also the perjury—and it rests upon the assurance appended to the third commandment. "For the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain." That is, whether man can detect the falsehood or not the omniscence of God will, and whether man punish it or not the justice and omnipotence of God will see that it is adequately punished. The oath is also used as an obligation to to duty, in case where only the omniscence of God can determine whether the duty be faithfully performedor not. As Laban said to Jacob, "The God of Abraham and the God of Nahor—the God of their fathers judge betwixt us." Hence an oath is employed as an obligation to bind officers to the faithful discharge of their duties, either in church or state, and it is upon the principle that the church and the state are divine institutions, over which God presides. The duties of which he has prescribed, and the failure to perform which he will punish. Hence, when a magistrate or a minister takes an oath of office, God becomes a party to the contract, and is Judge between the officer and the people over whom he is inaugurated by the divine institution, and by the agreement of the parties, God thereby pledging himself to punish any delinquency of either party to fulfil the duties of their relation.

The same is true of marriage vows between husband and wife, as the family is also a divine institution whose relations, obligations and duties he has arranged and the penalty of the violations of which God binds himself to inflict, when beyond the detection and punishment of mortals.

Thus God becomes the bond of society in all its proper, God-ordained relations, and the right to bring him in as a party, flows from the fact that he has instituted them, and offered to become a party to their proper constitution. That the family is God's institution appears from the fact that God solemnized the first nuptials between our first parents. Paul declares, Rom. xiii. that the magistrate "is the minister of God to thee for good," and the ministry have Christ's own commission: "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature, and" "lo, I am with you alway, even to the end of the world."

Does the fact that God has instituted an oath between magistrate and citizen as a bond by which he pledges himself to bind civil society together, prove that he will sanction the use of an oath to bind the pirate captain to his crew or the crew to their captain, or conspirators to the head of the conspiracy. Does such a relation become sacred by such profanation of an oath? Does God thereby become bound to confirm a combination whose very object is to violate his law and destroy the very institutions that he has organized? Certainly not. God cannot deny himself. He can be a party to no such compact. Hence the oath which he has never authorized to be used for such a purpose, does not bind God in the case, is valueless for the purpose, and is simply a taking God's name in vain; and the sin connected with it, is in the taking, not the breaking of it.

Now let us apply these principles to the Masonic oath. The Master Mason binds himself "to conceal and never reveal the secrets of a brother Master Mason, murder and treason only excepted, and this under the form of an oath; that is, he binds himself to withhold any evidence that he may possess that would convict a brother Mason of any crime except murder and treason. He is summoned as a witness by the magistrate to testify in a case of theft, against a brother Mason, whom he knows to be guilty, and is sworn to tell the truth and the whole truth. The oath is administered in the proper manner by a properly constituted magistrate, and God by his own institution holds him bound, under God's penalty for perjury, to tell the whole truth. He testifies and "reveals the secret" of his brother. He has broken his Masonic pledge. But is he perjured? No! He has saved his soul from the guilt of perjury. He has done his duty. He has broken a promise he had no right to make, and which it was his duty to break. He has violated an oath which he had no right to take, and which it was his duty to violate, an oath to which God was no party, and whose penalty he will not inflict. Is there no sin in all this? Yes, certainly there is sin, and great sin, but the sin consists not in breaking the promise and oath, but in making them. Our promises and vows can never abrogate God's law, make right wrong, or wrong right; can never bind us to do what God forbids, or not to do what God requires. Hence such oaths are a profanation of the divine institution. Such compacts are conspiracies against society and God, the author of society.

What shall we then say of an organization whose members are bound by such oaths, an essential element of whose character is to "conceal" the very things which it is "the honor of kings to search out," and which institutes and administers oaths which are directly in conflict with the oath which every witness is bound to take? Is it not clearly a conspiracy against the execution of justice, which is the very foundation of government? And is there not an arrogant and blasphemous effrontary in an organization which is within the church, and within the commonwealth, assuming to bind the consciences of its members by oaths with the same authority which God has vested in his own institutions, and these oaths in conflict with and tending to the destruction of both church and state?—Was there ever a more manifest borrowing the livery of heaven to serve the devil in?—and then claiming that these oaths are more binding than the citizen's oath-bound obligation to his country, or the Christian's to his church? Christian patriots pause before you place yourselves in such a position, and you who have been deluded into such a conspiracy, break the delusion bond, and prove your loyalty to your country and to your God.

The Friends and Secret Societies.

The Friends have always been opposed to secret societies. It is one of the tenents of their belief; but this tenent seems to lie dormant in their creed, of late years. Their opposition is rather professed than acted on.

May we not hope that this respectable body of men will now come forward and render their creed a living, active force against the greatest source of corruption of the age? A class of men who have done so much in past years in purifying the religious doctrines of the world from the pollutions of priest-craft, and in ridding the country of slavery, will add great weight to our Christian Anti-masonic Association whenever they become aroused to an active assertion of their principles against Masonry. Our Association is engaged in precisely the same work that the Friends and Puritans undertook to reform several centuries ago. It is to sweep out of society the shams, frauds, and impositions which dishonor humanity, which were once imposed upon it by priest-craft, and which is again coming over it like a creeping palsy in the shape of Freemasonry. The corruptions of English society in the days of William Penn were not greater than those which the mystic craft will bring upon this country unless they are checked in their career.

Great and Good Men are not always Wise Men.

MR. EDITOR:—Circumstances have constantly been transpiring since my childhood to remind me of the above paradoxical sentiment. Forty-five years ago I heard a good deacon say he rejoiced that his son (a former school mate of mine), then fitting for the ministry, took no part in the temperance reform. Twenty-seven years ago I heard another good deacon say he dare not oppose the schemes of the slaveholders, because many good men were involved. Twenty-four years ago Dr. Taylor, of a New England Seminary, published to the world that, if making one prayer would abolish slavery, he would not dare utter the prayer.

Several years ago, in sending a donation to Adrian College, I enclosed a Cynosure tract. In reply came a recipt for the money with the following advice from Rev. J. S. Thropp, the general agent: "I am not a Mason and never expect to be; but the manner of attack upon it in the circular you sent me will only feed it by disgusting the minds of thinking men, there is certainly a more excellent way to oppose it." Is it not passing strange that Bro. Thropp, a preacher of the Gospel for twenty-five years, should mistake a Christian tract for a circular, and so use and apply the devil's language and arguments? Come down and let us reason together, says Sanballot to Nehemiah. "There is surely a better way." Shut your windows, Daniel, when you pray and save yourself from the lion's den. That is "the more excellent way." Bow down and worship the golden image, Shadrach, Meshack and Abednego, and save yourselves from the firery furnace. Surely that is "the more excellent way." Bow down and worship me, says the devil to Christ, and I will give you the kingdoms of the world. That is "the more excellent way."

Such language awakens most painful recollections of the past. How often, O how often, have our souls been sickened to nauseation in listening to such arguments from the devil in the mouths of the clergy. That is not the way. You will disgust the minds of thinking men. You will make the slaveholders mad. You will feed slavery and make it worse. You will rivet the fetters of the slave. Is it not passing strange that men should study theology and preach the Gospel for years without learning its most simple teachings and principles?

Bro. Thropp says we will disgust the minds of thinking men by publishing the facts concerning Masonry. Very true. And we rejoice that it is so. We envy not the heart of any man who can contemplate the wickedness of Masonry without disgust. But he says we shall feed Masonry. Very true again. But not by disgusting the minds of thinking men. We are sorry it is so, but cannot help it. There is a class of men in the world that rejoices to know that there is a church gotten up by the devil just fitted for them—to rob man of manhood, and the gallows of its dues, and when we inform them by publishing facts concerning Masonry just as Christ informed the incorrigibly wicked that there was a hell fitted for them. Preaching truth will have the same effect on such now as it did then by filling the devils church and peopling hell.

Again, Bro. Thropp says there is a better way. Very true again; none of us have attained to perfection in works of love to all mankind. None of us are as zealous in the cause of God, as we ought and hope to be. But, my good brother, as you object to our imperfect way and say there is a better, I ask you to point it out and walk therein. As a watchman on the walls of Zion, God will hold you responsible and judge you out of your own mouth as one that knew his Master's will.

Yours for God's way,
SAMUEL HALE.

A Literary Society on Secret Orders.

The Cincinnati Commercial of Feb. 14th last, publishes an interesting discussion of secrecy in the society "Friends of Inquiry." The expression of opinion is free and unusual. The essayist is believed to be a gentleman connected with the Cincinnati Times. The Commercial reports thus:

The society was called to order by the President, and Mr. E. Longley then delivered the essay of the evening, upon secret societies.

The essayist first illustrated the charge that secret societies are selfish by quoting the story relating to the Pythagoreans, recorded in Anton's Classical Dictionary. He then referred to the secret order of the Ishmaelites to show what wrongs can be perpetrated by such societies. The Knights Templar were another example. The secret tribunals of Westphalia and those of France, which, in the name of religion, committed such enormous crimes, the Knights of the Golden Circle and the Ku-Klux came in for their share. The essayist then contended that even benevolent secret societies are not beneficial, for the following reasons: First, they are too expensive; second, they are subversive of good order; third, they are founded on essentially false principles, and for other reasons. Again, they are exclusive in their nature.

Again, members of lodges really neglect to go to their church in consequence of their membership. He referred to the Masons, and showed how expensive they are. The annual expense of $12,500 is what is footed up to support the Masonic institution in the United States.

The Odd-fellows are as expensive in proportion. All these secret benevolent societies are really a detriment to the community in any view of the matter.

Mr. Wolf advocated secret societies, as on a previous occasion. He claimed, also, that churches only preach religion and charity, and secret societies practice both.

Mr. Sawyer followed with a written paper on the opposite side. He thought secret societies were a sham and a fraud. He claimed that they have committed murder. But secrecy is their worst feature.

Mr. Spence referred to the secret society of Pythagoras. Little is known as to this society. The religion of Pythagoras was that of Transmigation. Pythagoras elevated the colonies about the Mediterranean by his teachings.

Mr. Bettinger maintained that the essay was the most unreasonable he had yet heard. He contended that the question referred to the secret societies of to-day. The essayist had only painted the bad features and not the good sides of secret societies.

Mrs. Longley maintained that more charity was shown by the church than by secret societies. Then these societies instigated injustice, for often a man is screened from justice because he is a member of a secret organization.

Mr. Haller replied in order to show that secret societies were superior to churches in every respect.

Dr. Garette disputed the gentleman's explanations, that these signs were to show good feeling and rectitude life. of He maintained that these signs were established in a day when most people formed a herd of ignoramuses, and it was easy to make them appear wonderful, austere and mysterious. He did not say secret societies are a positive evil, but he was certain they were of no benefit, taken as a whole, to the community. These societies are useless, and those who enter them must humiliate themselves before entering.

Mr. Ruthenberg spoke in the affirmative, and said that because secret societies may and do often evil, is no reason why we should wholly abolish them. Fire is useful and still often does harm.

C. M. Lotze followed in the negative, and declared that among all the evils that afflicted society, secret societies were one of the worst. He read a letter from John Quincy Adams to Mr. Ingersoll of Philadelphia, advocating strongly the abolition of Masonry, because it is dangerous and subversive of justice, and quotes the well known murder of Morgan, and advancing nine main reasons why these orders should be abolished, the ninth of which was, "that a murder, taking nine days in perpetration, keeping the wretched and helpless victim throughout the whole of that time in a state of continual and cruel torture." John Quincy Adams had seen the evils of Masonry, and had not feared to hold them up to view and to endure persecution and even certain political defeat in order to destroy them at whatever cost.

Mr. Gibson followed in a few additional remarks, showing that secret societies are selfish and exclusive in their tendency. That even as benevolent societies they were not organized in the best way, and that women should be permitted to join them, because they are better nurses.

Mr. Longley concluded the discussion with a few remarks.

Gerrit Smith's Religious Experience.

Rev. David Keppel, pastor of Gerrit Smith, has sent the following sketch to the Northern Christian Advocate:

It is well known that owing to the unfaithfulness of the section of the church to which he belonged, with regard to the principles of freedom and equal rights to all, Gerrit Smith became greatly shaken in his religious beliefs. Hastily concluding that the pro-slavery leanings of the Presbyterian church were due to a fundamental defect in Christianity, he rejected the orthodox system of belief, and embraced what are generally known as liberal views.

During the last year of his life this was a matter of deep regret to him. After the death of Sumner, whom he greatly loved and admired, I called to see him, and conversation naturally turned to the fleeting nature of earthly things. Mr. Smith remarked, that with the exception of Wendell Phillips, he was the oldest of the surviving members of the band of anti-slavery leaders, who founded the Republican party. Referring to his own death as imminent, he spoke of his great fear of the physical pain of dissolution, adding, "My old skeptical views trouble me sadly, so that I cannot always control them. The thought that there is no life after death, comes to me sometimes like a terrible night-mare."

The late Chief Justice, who was a warm friend of his, once requested a copy of Mr. Smith's sermons and religious works. These Mr. Smith promised to send, adding that he would advise him not to read them. Mr. Chase took his advice, and the books were unread.

During the last months of Gerrit Smith's life, his constant desire was for a new heart, and a more Christ-like life. Calling upon him one day last summer, I found him in his library reading a volume of Romaine's works. After greeting me he said, "I have been reading Romaine a good deal lately. I greatly desire to come near to Jesus, and to partake of that lovely spirit which he so beautifully exemplified."

At another time he said, "Oh how I long to know that I have a new heart. At times I trust I have, and again I fear I have not." A visit from Gen. O. O. Howard was greatly blessed to Mr. Smith. From the time of that visit his religious views seemed to take on a more evangelical type.

His trust in Christ, as his Saviour and example, was extremely childlike and sweet. In one of his letters he speaks of him as omnipotent and omnipresent. Often when addressing the Sunday-school which he superintended, on some practical subject, he would ask the question: "Boys, do you think Jesus would have done so?" And, if the thing in question were wrong, he would add, "No, no, Jesus never would have done that, and we must not do what Jesus would not do." I shall never forget how, with tears streaming down his venerable cheeks, he said to the Sunday-school, "Jesus died for us. Yes, yes, Jesus died for us."

Mr. Smith once said to me, "The great mistake of my life has been that I have tried to be moral without faith in Jesus, but I have learned that true morality can only keep pace with trust in Jesus as my Saviour."

In his last letter to me, dated just a month before his death, he says, "I seem fated to make very slow progress in the divine life, and yet heaven knows that I desire to make rapid progress in that life of purity, and love, and sweetness."

A Reminicence of Sumner.

The memorial volume printed by the Legislature of Massachusetts in honor of the late Charles Sumner, contains a document of touching interest. One of the most enthusiastic friends of the Senator was Mr. Joshua B. Smith of Cambridge, a fugitive slave. Mr. Smith was a member of the last Massachusetts Legislature, and bore to Washington its resolutions rescinding the vote of censure upon the Senator. In the Senator's will a valuable painting, representing an angel striking the chains from a slave, was bequeathed to him. On the occasion of the eulogies upon the Senator in the Massachusetts Legislature, March 13th, 1874, Mr. Smith, who is an earnest and unusually fluent speaker, endeavored to speak, but was so overcome by emotion, that he lost control of his voice. In this memorial volume are found the following remarks which he proposed to make at that time:

Mr. Speaker: Thirty-five years have passed since Colonel Robert D. Shaw was a babe in his cradle. On an occasion that I well remember, Charles Sumner was a guest at his father's table, and I was a servant standing behind his chair. The question of slavery, then the general topic of conversation, was under discussion. One of the guests gave expression to the most bitter feeling I ever heard, saying that the 'Abolitionists, with their negro friends, ought to be hanged.' But Mr. and Mrs. Shaw, the father and mother of the infant, spoke strongly in favor of justice and freedom. The gentleman who had been speaking so bitterly, asked Mr. Sumner what he thought of the negro question. Pointing to me, he replied, "Would you have that man a slave?" And that expression, with other words then spoken, cost him his social position for years in Boston. Slavery had struck its roots wide and deep; but for me the star of justice rose in that hour, and I saw it shining for the first time, through the dark clouds of prejudice that surrounded me.

A few years after that I was with that child on Boston Common. As we were sitting there, I noticed that he looked intently at me, and presently he said, "Smith, what makes your hands black?" "Why, my boy, God made them so" I replied. "Well, said he, if God made them so, why do people find fault with it?" "Because they are bad," I answered. He gazed at me a few moments without speaking, and then said, "Smith, some day I'll fight for you."

When he was only twenty-five years of age this child was made Colonel of the Fifty-fourth Massachusetts Volunteers, the first regiment of colored soldiers recruited in this State; and then, as Colonel Shaw, led the colored troops at Fort Wagner, and there gave his life for his country, and for that justice and freedom that had been a part of his early training.

Thirty-two years after the noble expression referred to of Mr. Sumner. I was a guest at his table in Washington. While we were seated there a party of Southerners, from Georgia, called upon Mr. Sumner to secure his influence in what he considered would be unjust legislation. The great Senator turned again, pointing to me, and said: "There is my friend—my equal at home, and your equal anywhere; and when you are ready to make eternal justice law, then call on me and I will help you, and not before."

Mr. Speaker: I have lived out two generations, and have tasted the bitter fruit of the seed planted by our fathers eighty years ago. I have had the doors of the church and the State House shut in my face; but I have lived to enjoy the blessings of liberty, and to-day I stand the peer of every man in this house, and this as I believe, through the life and labor of Charles Sumner. What a change has taken place within the forty years of my remembrance! I wish I could picture it. In those days I was a servant in a family traveling through the South. They stopped in Washington, and I there saw, for the first time, men, women and children sold on the auction-block as cattle are sold. No regard was paid to age, sex or relationship. Husband and wife, mother and child, were parted to meet no more. At that time, if a black man's child or dying wife cried for water after ten o'clock at night, he dared not go into the streets to get it, for fear of arrest and the watch-house. And, if the master did not pay the fine next morning, thirty-nine lashes on the bare back was the black man's penalty. In those days I would have given a kingdom to have been a dog with a collar on my neck with the owner's name upon it, for that would have protected me.

The family to which I have referred was invited into the country to dine, and I stood to wait upon them. After dinner I heard the sound of the lash, and a voice crying, "O God, have mercy!" I stepped out into the garden, and looking about me, saw a poor girl with the blood running down her neck, with her eyes fixed on the shining clouds, towards the setting sun, and saying, "O Jesus, I will soon be with thee, and then my soul will shine as those clouds, and I will be thy child." It was the first prayer I had ever heard, and there I swore eternal hatred to slavery.

Forty years after that I went again to Washington. Slavery had disappeared. The whipping post and auction-block were gone. The star that I saw was now in the meridian. It shone full in my face. I was in a new world. I was as free as air. I went as any gentleman might go. I walked to the cars. I went to Arlington, and heard no word of insult. I had every attention paid me as a gentleman, and should not have known that I was a black man if I had not looked in the mirror.

Now, Mr. Speaker, Charles Sumner did it. Five and twenty years ago the anti-slavery sentiment of New England fixed upon Sumner as the man to go to Washington to strike the first blow. You speak of Sherman's march from Atlanta to the sea as a great victory. But that was nothing compared to the success of Sumner. Sherman had the nation at his back. Sumner had simple justice. Sherman had a hundred thousand men. Sumner fought single-handed and alone. Sherman had the wealth of the nation laid at his feet, and Sumner had only the prayers of the poor.

Mr. Speaker, I stand here amazed. One week ago this day I placed in the hands of our great Senator the rescinding resolutions of this legislature. As he read them, he turned his head and wept as I never saw a man weep before. He then said, "I knew Massachusetts would do me justice."

In the failure of the Hennepin canal bill in Congress, the Advance thinks the grange comes in for a goodly share:

"The demand for retrenchment and the suspicion or the change of intended or possible fraud, which prevail everywhere, have proved too much for it. In ordinary times, before Credit Mobilier or Pacific Mail, an enterprise proposing to connect the Mississippi river with the great western lake chain, thereby bringing the Western States into water communication with New York, for the sum of four millions, could scarcely have been defeated, and the fact of this failure is a pretty clear commentary on the weakness of the whole grange movement. The grangers require too opposites; first, that they shall have cheap transportation, and, second, that they shall get it without any outlay of construction. The House responds to the demand for no outlay, but gives them no relief in transportation.

There is one noble means of avenging ourselves for unjust criticism; it is by doing still better, and silencing it solely by increasing excellence of our works. This is the only true way of triumphing; but, if instead of this, you undertake to dispute, to defend, or to criticise by way of reprisal, you involve yourself in endless troubles and disquietudes, disturb that tranquillity which is so necessary to the successful exercise of your pursuit, and waste in the harrassing contests that precious time which you should concentrate to your art.—Canova.

A true friend eases my troubles, whereas one who is not so multiplies and increases them.

Notices.

The Seventh Anniversary of the National Christian Association will be held in the City of Pittsburgh, Pa., June 8th to 10th, 1875.

The Corresponding Secretary or his assistant may be seen at the Cynosure office from 9 to 11 A. M.

Michigan State Convention.

After much correspondence and thought it is decided to hold an Anti-masonic convention for organizing the State of Michigan at Linden, Genesee Co., on the 30th and 31st of March.

Rev. J. P. Stoddard and Prof. C. A. Blanchard will probably be there from out of the State, and we hope a number of good speakers on the subject, resident in Michigan, will attend.

An adjourned meeting for southwestern Illinois will be held in Jeparta, Randolph county, March 17th, 1875.

From Iowa and the General Agent.

ELDORA, Mar. 4, 1875, 6 P. M.

Friends of the anti-secrecy reform met pursuant to call on the 3d. But few arriving no formal organization was effected; but an appointment for a lecture from the General Agent, in the evening. At the close of the evening meeting which, all things considered, was well attended, we were made glad by the appearance of several fresh arrivals, among them Bro. Palmeter, with two others who had come seventy-five miles over the snow drifts with their team, the railroad being impassably blocked. I was also notified of the arrival of a M. E. minister who had taken seven degrees who would speak if opportunity was given. I announced him as one of the speakers for this afternoon. This morning, Hon. E. B. Kephart was chosen chairman, and Rev. C. Compton, Sec'y. A constitution was adopted; officers elected; place and time of next meeting fixed at Clear Lake, June 29th, 1875. Pres. Kephort was elected special delegate to Pittsburgh to speak in behalf of Iowa, and after the transaction of some miscellaneous business the convention adjourned. We missed the familiar face of Bro. Travis at whose advice the convention was called at Eldora. I go with the good brethren to Clear Lake and Mason City.

J. P. STODDARD.

Minutes of the Delavan Convention.

WISCONSIN STATE CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION OPPOSED TO SECRET SOCIETIES, HELD ON THE 24TH AND 25TH OF FEB, 1875.

The meeting was called to order at 10½ A. M. on Tuesday, the 23d, by J. W. Wood of Baraboo, President. O. Hand of Elkhorn, was chosen secretary pro tem. Committees on enrollment, business, resolutions and finance were appointed. After remarks by J. P. Stoddard, the Convention adjourned to meet at 2 P. M.

The Convention met pursuant to adjournment. It was opened by singing led by A. B. Parsons, followed by prayer by Rev. P. Elzea. The Convention was then addressed on Freemasonry by Rev. J. P. Stoddard. This was followed by the report of the committee on resolutions. The following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, All secret associations tend to originate and promote distrust, caste, corruption and class hostility; and

WHEREAS, The oaths and penalties by which Freemasonry binds its members to secrecy and mutual succor are far more terrible, and therefore more potent than any known to "civil law," there is no guarantee for equal justice in the courts of the life, liberty, character or property of any citizen not a Mason, where his opponent or his judge, his lawyer, a witness, or a juror is a Mason; and

WHEREAS, The Masonic system, its rites, oaths, laws, penalties and morality, all are borrowed from ancient heathenism and are contrary to Christian morality; and

WHEREAS, Its organic despotism, with its "head center" more absolute than Herod, is more attractive to bad men than to good, and the bad more naturally aspire to and control it, while the good swindled into it are snared by its foresworn oaths; and

WHEREAS, It thus becomes an anti-republican training school to our young men, with its titles of nobility, hostile to free speech, subsidizing or awing into silence most of the pulpits and the press; armed and drilled, and grasping for power, already counts its annual revenue by millions, holds most of the offices of every grade and department, usurps the prerogatives of the government and people in dedicating their public buildings, and holds its own laws superior to the civil laws, executing its own death penalties when it dares on conscientious members, who like Morgan, expose it; and

WHEREAS, Self-defense and protection against such secret combinations so potent for evil is an imperative duty to ourselves, our families, our country, and the God of nations; therefore

Resolved, That we, citizens of Wisconsin, in convention assembled, will use every Christian and lawful means to expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular; in order to save the churches of Christ from becoming depraved; to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption.

Resolved, That we recommend Rev. P. Elzea to the National Executive Committee as a proper person to labor in the Wisconsin field, and that we will endeavor to sustain him, and that we fully recognize his labors in the State since Nov. 1st, 1874.

Resolved, That we heartily endorse the Cynosure as our national organ and request our lecturers to labor earnestly to extend its circulation, and report to us through its columns.

Tuesday evening the meeting was addressed by J. W. Wood of Baraboo, on the subject of the grange. This was followed by Rev. P. Elzea, who gave an account of his labors in the State. Rev. J. P. Stoddard then spoke of the general work and the prospects of the cause.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 24.—The Convention was called to order at 10 A. M., and was opened by singing and prayer.

Rev. P. Elzea delivered an address on the relations of Freemasonry to the government. The Convention then proceeded to the election of officers for the ensuing year with the following result: J. W. Wood of Baraboo, Pres.; Rev. E. L. Harris of Delavan, Vice-president; Rev. R. Cooley of Johnstown, Secretary; M. R. Britten of Vienna, Treasurer. By the terms of the constitution, the president, secretary and treasurer are an Executive Committee, to which was added Rev. P. Elzea, State lecturer.

AFTERNOON.—J. P. Stoddard addressed the Convention on the relation of Freemasonry to Civil Society, which he illustrated by his chart. Rev. W. D. Lathrop followed by remarks and illustrations.

The following named persons were appointed delegates to the National Convention to be held in Pittsburgh: J. W. Wood, M. R. Britten, W. D. Lathrop, E. L. Harris, R. Cooley, A. B. Parsons, E. D. Underwood, O. Hand, W. W. Ames, P. Elzea.

EVENING.—J. W. Wood addressed the Convention, treating more at large the reliability of the evidence which we have, of the truth of the disclosures of Masonry.

A vote of thanks were passed for the use of the Congregational church, and to the citizens of Delavan for their kindness in entertaining members from abroad.

The meeting was a very pleasant one, and for our second State Convention has surpassed the expectations of its friends.

O. HAND, Sec'y pro tem.

The Convention at Coulterville, Ill.

COULTERVILLE, Il, Feb. 24, 1875.

At a meeting of the friends opposed to secret societies, held in the Reformed Presbyterian church pursuant to a previous announcement. Meeting was called to order by Rev. J. W. Faris. John G. Miller was elected chairman, and W. E. Alexander, secretary. Rev. Mr. Wright was called on by the chairman to open the meeting by prayer, which he very appropriately did, after which the following resolution was passed: That Rev. D. S. Faris, W. J. Smiley and W. J. Gillespie be appointed a committee to draft resolutions and report at next meeting. Addresses were delivered by Rev's. Wright, D. S. and J. M. Faris and D. G. Thompson. Motion carried to adjourn to meet at Sparta in the Ref. Presbyterian church the 17th day of March, 1875, at 2 and 7 o'clock P. M., and that Rev. P. P. Boyd of the Ref. Presbyterian church be appointed to address the meeting in the afternoon, and Rev. J. M. Henderson of the United Presbyterian church to address the meeting in the evening. Meeting was adjourned by prayer by D. G. Thompson.

JOHN G. MILLER, Chairman.
W. E. ALEXANDER, Sec'y.

Normal School Debate.

EMPORIA, Kans., Mar. 1, 1875.

ED. CYNOSURE:—Not long since your humble correspondent had the pleasure of hearing a debate in one of the Normal School Literary Societies, on the secrecy question; which, however, was decided against the reform. One of the disputants was a lady who was defeated last spring in this county for County Superintendent of Schools. She argued in favor of secret societies, and stated that the question was one of the most "undebatable questions she ever heard proposed." Noticed several pins with the compass and square worn by members of the school; and if not mistaken, one by a lady. The "Grand Worthy Chaplain" of the Good Templars resides here (a Presbyterian minister). The M. E. minister wears a jewel with H. T. W. S. S. T. K. S. on it.

Yours truly, SIGMA.

From Genesee County, Mich.

LINDEN, Mich., Feb. 19, 1875.

It is a long time since I have seen anything in the Cynosure from our vicinity, and bethought myself I would give you a brief idea as to matters and things connected with the good cause started with us a few months ago. The fact is there is so much instability and treachery among men, it is often discouraging, or at least seems so; but I have made up my mind that nothing shall discourage me while God permits me to breathe, move and talk. There is no headway made in the cause, except by the most energetic perseverance; and then we have to part with an occasional Judas. A case of this kind has transpired here within the last few weeks. A person who worked with us heart and hand at the time Brn. Stoddard and Baird were here, and seemed all right, until about four weeks ago I heard he had from some cause shied into the ranks of the lodge. It is well that the deformed foot has made its appearance in time. Let all show their colors that we may know who can be relied upon. Then we can work on in the good cause with more courage and energy. We are longing for the appearance of Bro. Stoddard among us again, and what little headway we then make, we will work to keep and add to. My motto is as ever, death to Masonry and all other institutions of its character. Hoping to have more favorable reports in the future, I remain as ever, yours,

SAMUEL SWEAT.

From Clyde, N. Y.

Rev. J. L. Barlow delivered three telling lectures in this place recently, which were considered by the friends of the anti-secret society movement the best ever delivered in Clyde. Bro. Barlow is candid argumentative, and his conclusions, to use his expression, "can't be dodged any more than you can dodge lightning." Quite a number of the fraternity were in and were well entertained. They kept their jewel. Doubtless good was accomplished and the friends of the cause are moving in the direction of a county association. You may hear from Wayne county again.

T. W.

Rev. T. B. McCormick in Debate at Somerville, Ind.

MR. EDITOR:—A few weeks since some of the noted advocates of secrecy sent a challenge to persons residing in the vicinity of Somerville, a village composed largely of Anti-masons, to enter into a discussion upon the subject of secrecy. The challenge was readily accepted, and Rev. T. B. McCormick of Princeton, Ind., was sent for. The opposing party did considerable boasting as to the fine talent they would have present on that occasion. They solicited several of the Rev. gentlemen of Gibson and adjoining counties. But, behold, when the day came no one of these Rev. gentlemen could summon sufficient audacity to meet our friend Mr. McCormick. Col. W. Cockrum, one of the challengers, and a gentleman in every respect, and a few others of minor importance met and debated the question. The debate was carried on orderly and with manifest kindness. Mr. McCormick opened his speech by an impressive prayer. He prayed, in the midst of an audience composed largely of Masons and Odd-fellows, for the downfall of their institutions. His opening speech was, indeed, a most excellent sermon. He did not speak of secret societies in an abusive manner. His theme was love. He proved clearly that we are under obligations to love all, not a select few, for all are our neighbors. God loves even the wicked with a love of commiseration. Thus should we dying mortals extend the love of pity to all. His opponents were baffled at his speech. They could not answer a single point. In reply they made nothing but bare assertions.

Mr. McCormick is a man of fine talent. He is terse in speech and logical in argument. He is doing much good for his country by using his strong influence against such an evil. Through his lectures the people of southern Indiana and Illinois are becoming educated in the matter of secrecy. As secrecy exists by keeping its members in ignorance, we surely all would do well to instruct our uninitiated neighbors in this subject. Mr. McCormick is a lecturer of the first-class, and never fails to entertain an intelligent audience. He presents the truth in such a manner that it goes right to the heart. Would that we had many more such men in our country to oppose and overturn the great evils that are fast destroying her.

M.

Correspondence.

From the Pennsylvania Agent.—Items Picked up Years Ago.

UNIONVILLE, Pa., Feb. 25, 1875.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

One of our oldest residents, and one who has for fifty years or more been a member of the Presbyterian church, has written for me the following items as illustrative of "the work of the craft." It will be seen that the "old handmaid" has for a long time maintained her ancient reputation:

WHAT I KNOW OF FREEMASONRY,

Personally and from reliable information, between the years of 1818 and 1825. 1st. I was well acquainted with a man who went by the name of the "big Yankey," a Mason, who was arrested four different times in four different places, and was cleared every time. He was arrested for passing counterfeit money. Once in Susquehanna Co. the constable and another man undertook to take him to jail, but the Masons contrived a plan so that he made his escape. Soon after this he was arrested at Owego, N. Y., for the same crime, and was put into jail. When his trial came on, they so managed as to have it in the evening, when a certain doctor from Abington appeared before the court, swore he let the prisoner have the money, and received a valuable consideration for it, which cleared the prisoner. The doctor conveyed himself away so as not to be found within the jurisdiction of that court. "Big Yankey" then skulked about and finally got to Mt. Pleasant, where he was kept by the Masons for several weeks in the garret of a tavern-house. Getting tired of that secluded place, he next appears in Delhi, N. Y., where he was arrested for following his old trade, but Masonry was true to him there, and cleared him. Next he was taken up in Orange Co., N. Y., and incarcerated in Goshen jail and a brother Mason draws the indictment so that he went scot free. Next we hear of him at Stonington, Conn., his native place, and at a time soon after, he went to cross the Connecticut river on the ice; it broke and he went under,—the last act that I ever heard of his performing. He was as deceptive and dishonest a man as I ever dealt with.

2. I know a man, who was a neighbor of mine, who had been a Mason for at least twenty-five years, but who had not attended a lodge for fifteen years, though there was one within five miles of him. When Morgan's book was published, I had it, he being at my house, I told him that if he would take that book and read it, he would know whether Morgan told the truth or not. He did so, and told me that Morgan told the truth. He also went on and told all about his being taken into a lodge at Boston, Mass.; that while he lived at Coventry, Conn., he became disgusted with it.

3. A man by the nickname of "Old Hyder," whom I knew personally, held a high office in Masonry; he was a beastly drunkard, a deist, an ugly, quarrelsome man, who whipped his wife till her friends took her away from him; who carried in his pocket Tom Paine's "Age of Reason" and in another the Bible; well might he be disgusted with such brethren.

4. I was once on a jury at court, when the plaintiff was a Mason and defendant was not, when eleven of the jury had signed a verdict in favor of defendant, the twelfth one would not sign it, he being a Mason, although he had repeatedly said he would not split the jury. Did he lie or not? Masonry would say no. D. M.

At a meeting where I lectured recently it was stated that all the Bishops of the M. E. church were Masons, and hence Masonry must be a good institution, worthy the attention and encouragement of good men. Having good reason to believe the objector's statement false, I wrote to Rev. Dr. Scurry for information; but have as yet seen no reply. I wish to ask, through the Cynosure, that some good brethren of the M. E. church, like Bro's Po t and Levington, will give a correct statement of their bishops standing in this matter, and wish they would include not only their present bishops, but those of former years. It is too bad to have misrepresentation in so vital a matter.

J. W. RAYNOR.

From Ohio Central College.

IBERIA, Ohio, March 2d, 1875.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—We clipped from the Marion (O.) Democratic Mirror the following:

"Last week a convention was held at Mansfield to protest against secret societies. It was manned and engineered by a class of persons who make themselves ridiculous in their opposition to secret societies. Bitter speeches were made by different reverends, most of them emphatic against the communion of Christians with members of secret societies. A Disciple minister named Cogswell renounced Masonry, but the proposed revelation of the secrets did not come off as had been advertised The Convention broke up in confusion, and was a fraud in every respect."

The above explains itself. It shows to what means secret societies resort when it becomes necessary to defend themselves. They do not come out boldly like honest men, and meet argument with argument, but the weapons which they use are ridicule, prevarication, abuse and falsehood.

While at the Mansfield convention we had the pleasure of forming the acquaintance of Bro. Caldwell, our State Agent, who, at our solicitation, kindly promised to favor us with an address at Iberia. We are anxiously awaiting the brother's visit.

JNO. A. RAMSAY.

A Note of Encouragement and Experience.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—If agreeable, I would in love for the cause in which you are engaged give you a word of cheer on your way. You have been a welcome visitor in my house from the beginning. I love the spirit and principles of the Cynosure, in opposing that which I have hated with a perfect hatred, for the last forty-five years. I have hated Freemasonry because of its beastly despotism, idolatry, deception, falsehood and dark designs against church and state, in which it proposes to rule or ruin; and in which its baneful influence is felt in a greater or less degree in every department. You need not wonder, when I tell you that I belong to the United Brethren church. My father and grandfather were ministers in that department of Zion, and for over forty years I have served in her itinerant ranks, on districts, circuits and missions. Though once young, I am now old, and almost on the superannuated shelf. But still, the spirit of war, the same spirit that shines forth from the Cynosure, glows in my heart, and I feel like helping in this glorious cause against the mighty; and so cheer on the uprising hosts against this green-eyed monster, secrecy. I love the Cynosure because of its intrepidity in pouring forth its missiles of fire-brands and arrows of death, into the mighty, subterraneous conclaves of murder and blasphemy. And, to the unfortunate inmates of those dark dens of iniquity, it must be terribly annoying. And no wonder that, like David's men at sea, they are almost, or quite at their wit's end, to know what to do to save their craft. And it does not require prophetic inspiration to see that fall it must. May God speed the day! I lived to see it fall in my boyhood days under the effects of the murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. For twenty years or more it dare not raise its head to public gaze.

In 1815 my father emigrated from a land of whips and chains to a free State (Ohio). And I often heard him say but for slavery, he would not have left his native State. He did not want to raise and educate his family under the influence of slavery. Speaking of its wickedness, his faith in God was, that it must come to an end. And that if the Government did not take it in hand, the Almighty would, and that, at the expense of the nation. God would have the oppressed go free. He did not expect to live to see the institution abolished, but thought his children might. And so it came to pass, about twelve years after his death. And O, what a terrible scene! Five of my sons faced the bloody conflict, the eldest of whom fell in the battle of Corinth. Notwithstanding the treasonable influence of Freemasonry against the Government, and the cause of liberty, in the North and in the South, the right and truth prevailed, to the astonishment of the world.

These twin sisters, Masonry and Slavery, have always loved each other, and harmonized in their mutual efforts against the life, liberty, prosperity and happiness of all who are opposed to them in spirit and principle, either in church or state. Hence the assassination of Abraham Lincoln. Slavery is among the things of the past. But secretism still exists in our land to an alarming extent. And now it behooves every lover of liberty, every loyal citizen of our land, every anti-secrecy man to quit himself fully for the contest, put on the whole armor of God: righteousness for a breastplate; salvation as a helmet; faith in Christ his shield; and unsheathe the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God; and then war a good warfare, at home and abroad, in public and in private, in church and state, in prayer and at the ballot-box. And trusting in the God of battles, truth and right must and will triumph. Now we'll pass to see what, according to the claim of Masonry, one of their own Great Grands says of the secret doings of these dark orders. It was not John Wesley, or George Washington, but King Solomon, in Prov. 28th chap. and 13th verse: "He that covereth his sins shall not prosper. But whoso confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy." And of all the institutions for covering up sin of all grades and names, that of Masonry undoubtedly has the lead. See their oaths and obligations to secrecy and concealment of crime, murder and treason not excepted. Under this same power John Brown was hung, and Jeff. Davis was acquitted, and promoted, though guilty of high treason. But Solomon speaks again to the brotherhood, and says, "Though hand join in hand, such shall not go unpunished." And again, in Ecclesiastes, or the Preacher, he says, "For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil." I recollect preaching from the above text in Ecclesiates some twenty-five years ago, in Athens Co., Ohio, on a Sabbath at a quarterly meeting. In treating on the judgment and the resurrection of the dead from the graves and from the sea, I referred to the murder of Morgan, and to his burial in the deep waters of Niagara, and of his coming forth at the sound of the trump of God to face his blood-stained assassins before the judgment-seat of Christ. And there was a large, red-faced Mason in the audience whose wrath was kindled at even so slight a reference to the dark deeds of the order, and was heard to say, it wouldn't be safe for the preacher to come to Nelsonville and preach as he did here, though I had preached from the words of Solomon, their "Most Excellent Master."

And so it is, Masonry claims to have its origin and principles from the Bible. But when in the light of Divine truth the extreme wickedness and base deception of the institution is held up to public criticism, Masons become frenzied and thirst for blood. "Out of thine own mouth will I condemn thee." More anon, M. AMBROSE.

A Letter to the General Agent.

COATSVILLE, Ind., Feb. 18, 1875.

BRO. STODDARD:—I embrace this opportunity of informing you something of the "situation" for this section. Circumstances have been such that I have been away from home but little during the winter. Consequently I have done but little towards the advancement of our work. I have addressed a letter to the friends of the anti-secret movement which I hope to hear from soon. In this I proposed that we raise at least $50.00 for the benefit of the State Agent. This, I think, will do to start the work. I also propose that we organize a "Reading Circle," or local social organization in the neighborhoods where there are friends of the cause. This would furnish a medium through which we could work, exchange views and lay a foundation for a more permanent county organization. The meetings of a society of this kind may be held at private houses once a month or oftener. I cannot say what encouragement there will be in this direction.

I have just received the Jan. and Feb. numbers of the St. Louis Freemason. Mr. Gouley, the editor, is in terrible distress. In a double-leaded, three column article he very gravely informs his brethren that if the subscription list is not increased by the first of April, "The only Masonic journal between the Mississippi and the Pacific Ocean" will be a thing of the past. Poor Frank! The Freemason has swallowed up five Masonic journals in the last two years, and now all must go overboard together. He says: "The apathy exhibited by the Masonic fraternity is perfectly astounding, and as incomprehensible as it is alarming to the fathers and teachers of the craft!" A correspondent of Freemason argues in favor of the Masonic Mutual Benefit Society by giving the experience of a Mason's widow, thus: "My husband had a home, but all the property was sold on twelve months' time. I had no money. I went to a merchant who was a Mason, and asked for thirteen dollars' worth of goods on time, and he refused me. I called on another and was served in the same way."

Respectfully yours,
J. F. PHILLIPS.

How the Grange is Used:

BERRIEN CENTRE, Mich., Feb. 27, 1875.

MR. EDITOR:—The copy of the Christian Cynosure you sent is before me. I am happy to see its friendly face again, and learn from its contents that there is yet a goodly number scattered here and there that have not bowed their knee to Baal. Those communications create in my breast a new desire to battle for the right by casting in my mite to the overthrowing of the powers of darkness. I am a member of a church that claims to be anti-slavery and anti-secrecy. Its rules are strongly opposed to those institutions. In battling against the former we have achieved victories that will be an everlasting honor, and will crown us as a church with diadems of glory. On the latter, I fear the enemy has outgeneraled us. First, he tried to introduce Freemasonry, Odd-fellowship, etc. At these points he has been repulsed, though the contest was severe. His next move is very ingeniously planned. He put it into the hearts of his agents to establish a thing they called a grange; a very harmless institution, they say, only embracing a few secrets by which they may know each other. And by this sly dodge, I fear he has made a breach into our ranks that will be hard to close up.

The grange is pretty well represented at this place and is composed of unbelievers and those professing to be Christians. I stand almost alone in opposition to secret societies. There are those here who profess to be anti-secrecy, but they are very secret in making the profession. They tremble if something is publicly said in opposition to secrecy, for fear some brother in the church and lodge might be offended. If Jesus, in that great sermon on the mount, meant anything when he said, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works," he undoubtedly meant that our light should shine in every honorable avenue in life, and shed an hallowed influence on all who wish to inspect our works. But how can salutary influences be exerted that will be in conformity with the word of God, so long as we have fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness.

J. B. CRALL.

Odd-fellow Funeral.

WATSON, Mich., Feb. 7, 1875.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I am a warm anti-secret man, and have been since the abduction of Wm. Morgan. Last week a neighbor died. He being an Odd-fellow, I felt more anxious to attend than usual, as I had never attended one of these heathen burials. The order took full charge. In showing their sympathy, the order was about to leave the grave unfilled, the citizens taking no part left also. Consequently the order had to return and fill the brother's grave. Great tears were shed over the man. The worst feature of all, our Baptist minister officiated and pronounced the benediction, calling Odd-fellowship a good moral institution. The man who died was an infidel.

Yours truly, DANIEL LEGGETT.

Freemasonry in Court.

KINSMAN, Ohio, Feb. 26, 1875.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Again it is my duty to lay before you a plain, brief account of the Mercer Court in Pennsylvania last week. It will be remembered that the September court found a true bill for slander against the editor of the Jamestown Sun. The December court found him guilty, at which time some of the furious blood hounds of the lodge appealed the case for a new trial, and during the interval between courts the editors of the Jamestown Sun and the Greenville Argus, have both been interested in getting a bill brought before the Pennsylvania Legislature, to have the law on libel changed so as to give printers the free unrestrained use of the press. On the 16th of February we again met to the new trial where the editor Calkins and his coadjutants had stacked up for court such an amount of hearsay, as might astonish Brigham Young and his harem. They tried by witnesses belonging to the whiskey ring and in league with the Masonic slanders to make it appear that Baird had murdered a woman in Canada, for which said murder the lodge alone is responsible. They also tried to bribe the court with hearsay that Baird had committed abortion in Ohio, and that he had also been guilty of living in adultery at his own home in Pennsylvania, besides many other things which none but a free-lover like the editor could understand or consent to be guilty of. But the attorney in behalf of the commonwealth made it plain to the jury that not one fact had been brought against Baird. But after all, like good Masons, they cleared the guilty editor and divided the costs, and now the foul slanderer is in the height of his glory at it again. J. R. BAIRD.

"Strange" Fire.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Feb., 1875.

Editors Christian Cynosure:

The following facts we obtained from a deacon of a Baptist church who had taken eight degrees in Freemasonry and was a lodge-going Mason for twenty years. In the fall of 1873 I visited the place where this deacon resides and preached one Sabbath to the church of which he is a member. My text was Gen. v. 24: "And Enoch walked with God and was not for God took him." Near the close of my sermon I endeavored to show that, to identify one's self with Freemasonry and frequent Masonic lodges is at variance with the spirit of true piety and incompatible with truly walking with God. After sermon as I was walking home with the deacon above mentioned, with whom I was stopping, he asked me, "Have you ever been a Mason?" I replied in the negative. "I thought you had by what you said," said he. He then informed me that he had taken eight degrees in Masonry, but had never attended a lodge since he became a Christian. He afterwards talked with me very freely on the subject, and I learned some things from him which I have never seen published. He gave me some particulars in regard to his feelings when he took the eighth degree, ("which," says he, "they say Moses took") which was administered to him by a drunken Masonic lecturer who was under the influence of alcohol when he administered this degree. And though an unconverted man, he was so shocked with the blasphemous performance, that he never went near them afterwards, not even to obtain his certificate of that degree. One evening, while I was with him, he gave me some details of the manner of initiation into the R. A. degree and in particular the contrivance for bringing down fire out of heaven to illuminate the Burning Bush. He said they would go to the woods and get bushes which they so arranged that an urn of alcohol could be placed in the centre of them, and from this urn extended upward to the ceiling a fine wire which they had passed through a bit of sponge so trimmed as to represent a ball. This sponge thus arranged was saturated with alcohol and slipped up the wire near the ceiling and so fixed that it could be ignited and slid down the wire into the urn of alcohol, as if by an unseen hand. The initiation room was so arranged that at a certain point as the candidates marched around, a door opens and the ball suddenly ignited slips down into urn of alcohol which is instantly in a blaze. This, said the deacon, they call the fire coming down from heaven to consume the sacrifice. This is then their miracle of bringing fire from heaven, one of the lying wonders of Masonry, designed, no doubt, to impress the mind of the initiated with the idea of the wonderful sanctity, the divine origin of Freemasonry; and yet it is only one of the many instances of the sacriligious mummery, the profanation of divine things, of which Masonry is fearfully guilty.

JAMES L. ANDRUS.

The Testimony of Years.

NORTH MIDDLEBORO, Mass., Feb. 22, 1875.

I have seen more than seventy years of life, and during that long period have witnessed many scenes which have made lasting impressions on my mind. Among the many impressive scenes, what I witnessed in my youth, of the excitement occasioned by the abduction and murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan was by no means the last. Being intimate at the time with a most devoted Baptist minister (Rev. David Pease) I had the satisfation of seeing him, a high Mason, renounce his connection with them. From him I learned many things from Masonry which were by no means favorable to the ungodly institution. I have ever since held that Masonry is a curse to mankind and dangerous in every country and community where it predominates.

But now in my old age I have the mortification of seeing the monster lifting his shameless head in my own neighborhood and decoying a large proportion of our young men into his iron grasp. My desire is to place before the uninsnared a warning which will save them if anything will.

Yours respectfully,
DARIUS DUNBAR.

OUR MAIL.

Appollos Austin, Neenah, Wis., writes: "I guess you may set me down as a life subscriber. I cannot do much to get subscribers for I am old and infirm; but I can pray for your success."

Effectual, fervent prayer is needed as much or more than work.

A. Butcher, Modena, Mo., writes:

"Since I have taken your paper (and scattered them around over the neighborhood), I have not known of but one man joining the Freemasons; and none have joined the grangers. The grange seem to be about dead in this country. I have read Levington's Key, and Morgan's Exposure, and I think it most impossible for a secret society man to be a Christian."

A lady at Northville, N. Y., writes:

"I have one son that I am pretty sure will never be a Freemason. Women as a general thing do not read enough truth. They read too many story papers or novels, which teach them nothing, and surely nothing to bring up children by. I have told a great many Mason's wives what I knew about Masonry who never heard a word before. . . I obtained one of Morgan's books fifteen years since, and also read Elder Bernard, and from that time have saved many young men from the taking of unlawful oaths, by reading the books and explaining to them. We have a great many Odd-fellows here, and I intended to send for the exposition of that the very day I received the Cynosure, and now I send you the money for it."

Ladies, if you do not attend sharply to household duties you find decay, vermin, and dirt collect promptly where you do not expect them. If you do not keep a vigorous mind at work on the Christianity and purity of your family you will suddenly be surprised by the appearance of vicious habits, profanity, Sabbath breaking, intemperance, dissipation and false views of religion among the friends whom you influence, perchance, in your own family.

O. Chamberlain, Webberville, Mich., writes:

"I was an eye-witness to the Morgan affair.

L. A. Wickey, Mt. Top, Pa., writes:

"We are still engaged in the good work of scattering light. We meet with some opposition to be sure, but that only makes the work the more interesting. We like a little and can stand a good deal of friction if necessary, for the Lord wonderfully helps us. There is now an appointment for two lectures in the lower end of this (York) county. Rev. J. M. Bishop principal lecturer. . . . We will do what we can for our State organization."

M. A. Clark, Jr., Pella, Ia., speaking of the work in Iowa, writes:

"I am glad the thing has started as well as it has, and hope it will be pushed to the utmost. It is God's cause and must eventually prevail. . . It will not be long before we have a lecture here I hope."

Mr. N. W. Myers, Vineland, N. J., writes that through Masons he lost several hundred dollars last year. He adds:

"They rule the legislatures of States and the Congress of the United States."

David Mayer, Girard, Ill., writes:

"We as a church (Dunkard as some call us) make it a test of membership to belong to secret organizations. I am glad to see the monster head of these secret societies unveiled. Your paper should be in the hands of a million of families. There is no $2.00 expended for a better purpose than taking it. I honestly believe that any person who will read the Cynosure for one year will never join any secret organization."

Mrs. B. F. Searles, Castle Grove, Ia., writes:

"We moved here last fall and united with a church (Baptist) that is opposed to secret societies. But strange to say that but very few knew anything about the Cynosure. We have circulated it and some are getting very much awakened on the subject. Say they did not know any one would dare to come out against secret societies as the Cynosure does. As soon as the weather permits we will try to get subscribers. Am quite sure of some. We do not allow one Cynosure to be wasted. As soon as we read them we give them to those we think will read them, praying for God's blessing to go with them, that the truth may spread from heart to heart and much good be done. We have taken the Cynosure almost from the first and like it better all the time."

Thos. Relyea, Watertown, N. Y., writes:

"The Cynosure comes regularly every week. I receive it as a welcome messenger when read; I hand it to my neighbors. . . They like the paper very much. They say those secret societies will ruin our country; but they do not like to be called Anti-masons. I was an Anti-mason from Morgan's time till 1840. Then anti-slavery till slavery was abolished. I am now in my seventy-fifth year, and shall oppose secret societies the remainder of my life."

F. M. Waldron, Cascade, Minn., writes:

"The grange is very strong here. Those that do not belong to it are in sympathy with it. . . . Pray for me for I am all alone."

Wm. Vineyard, Lynnville, Ia., writes:

"We need an anti secret lecturer in the field. I will do what I am able towards such work."

Rev. Wm. Tate, Dahlonega, Ga., writes:

"My wife has been sick for thirty-six years and I am sixty-five years old next August. In 1863 I was arrested and marched eight miles by the Confederate soldiers after which I was taken down sick and lost the use of one of my hands. The labor that I do has to be done with one hand for the support of my family. Your paper is the best paper politically and religiously I ever read. It has given me more information on secret societies than I have received from any other source, and I pray God that you may succeed in putting them down."

The Sabbath School.

Lesson for March 21, 1875.—Joshua's Warning.

Joshua xxiii. 11-16.

11 Take good heed therefore unto yourselves, that ye love the Lord your God.

12 Else, if ye do in any wise go back, and cleave unto the remnant of these nations, even these that remain among you, and shall make marriage with them, and go in unto them, and they to you:

13 Know for a certainty that the Lord your God will no more drive out any of these nations from before you; but they shall be snares and traps unto you, and scourges in your sides, and thorns in your eyes, until ye perish from off this good land which the Lord your God hath given you.

14 And, behold, this day I am going the way of all the earth: and ye know in all your hearts and in all your souls, that not one thing hath failed of all the good things which the Lord your God spake concerning you; all are come to pass unto you, and not one thing hath failed thereof.

15 Therefore it shall come to pass, that as all good things are come unto you, which the Lord your God promised you; so shall the Lord bring upon you all evil things, until he hath destroyed you from off this good land which the Lord your God hath given you.

16 When ye have transgressed the covenant of the Lord your God, which he commanded you, and have gone and served other gods, and bowed yourself to them; then shall the anger of the Lord be kindled against you.

COMMIT TO MEMORY, vs. 14, 15.

PARALLEL PASSAGES.—Gen. xlix. 1; Deut. i. 1-3; 2 Pet. i. 13.

With v. 11 (love of God) read Judo v. 21; with v. 12 (marriages), read Ex. xxxiv. 12-16; with v. 13 (traps), read Ex. xxiii. 33, with v. 14, compare Josh. xxi. 43-45; with v. 15, compare Deut. xxviii. 1, 2; and with v. 16, read Deut. xi. 7. (The whole of Deut. xxviii., should be read in this connection.)

GOLDEN TEXT.—If any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him.—HEB. x. 38.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—They that observe lying vanities forsake their own mercy.

This lesson affords a good opportunity for explaining and enforcing close walking with God. Care must be taken to discriminate between the manner in which God deals with the nation and the individual. The latter, as such, has no eternal future. The individual has. A wicked man may be allowed therefore to prosper here; his retribution awaits him. But a sinful people may look for retribution as a people, in this life. This anticipates and answers in part the universal question of Ps. lxxiii. 12, "of the ungodly who prosper in the world."

(v. 11) All our practical obedience is of value according to the amount of love (see 1 Cor. xii., where charity means love.) Love is the fulfilling of the law. When God ceases to be loved all evil follows.

(v. 13) The like evil consequences follow to professing Christians who conform to the world, and tolerate wrong in their habits, pursuits, or lives. The evils, having gained a little, claim more. Each concession is the basis for a new demand: "You came to ——, you may as well come to this." So the professor is gradually brought under the sway of the world. Peace is destroyed. All usefulness is lost. The poor backslider loses confidence in his own, then in other's sincerity; then in religion; till there comes a fearful awakening in this life, in God's mercy, or in the next, in God's judgment. See and study 1 John ii. 15, and the curse of Judas, Ananias, Simon the sorcerer, and Demas.

(v. 15) The career of Israel sadly bore out this apprehension. The heathen were let alone. They were made companions. Then they were liked. Then they were married. Then their gods were tolerated. Then their worship was allowed alongside that of Jehovah. Then it displaced Jehovah's, for when two things, a divine and a human, are put in competition, the human always pleases the corrupt human heart the most (see John iii. 31). The history of the judges, of Solomon, of Israel, of the worship of Baal in Ahab's time, of the captivity, and of the final destruction of the temple and scattering of the nation, may be given in illustration of this warning. And so it must needs be with professing Christians. A profession is a duty, but it does not save. It enchances the guilt of ill-doing. See the awful words of our golden text. See also Heb. vi. 4-8. Study the "many stripes," Luke xii. 47, and 2 Pet. ii. 21, 22; Prov. xxix. 1. The same remark applies to churches that grow cold, and, as churches, useless. See the seven churches of Asia. Rev. ii. iii. See 1 Cor. x. 6, 11.—S. S. World.

QUESTION HELPS.

What danger to Israel did Joshua fear at this time? Were his fears correct? Judges ii. 6-15. Are we exposed to this danger? Heb. ii. 1; iii. 12. Why were the Jews so ready to forsake God? What troubles did sin finally bring upon them? What is always the result of sin? Jer. ii. 19. What will be the result of unpardoned sin? Why is it often easier to do wrong than right? Jer. xvii. 9; Rom. vii. 23; Mark vii. 20-23. What three great temptations must we meet? 1 John ii. 16. How can we resist them? 1 John v. 4, 5. What are some of our temptations to sin at home? In the streets? At school? In play? At church? How can we become holy? John xvii. 17; 1 Cor. vi. 11; Eph. iii. 16. Why are our sins worse than those of the Jews? Heb. x. 28, 29. What warning does Paul give in this connection? Rom. xi. 21, 22.—Evangelical Repository.

Parvin and Findel on Masonic History.

The revival of the old theory by Copernicus was met by a furious opposition from the church, and his followers were imprisoned, tortured, and burned as heretics. Now, however, we know that the fathers and the church were wrong, and the so-called heretics were right. Similar efforts were made to crush every succeeding discovery, and within my own recollection a Dean of York denounced geologists from the pulpit as infidels; and here again the so-called infidels were right, and the Dean was wrong.

In Masonry a similar revolution in belief took place. Twenty years ago brethren may have whispered doubts about the Masonry of Adam, but if any one had dared to doubt the Masonry of Solomon, I believe he would have been expelled as an Anti mason. But now, Bro. Parvin of Iowa, when referring to our recent Masonic literature, after complimenting (more than it deserves) Mackey's Encyclopedia, goes on to say:

"Next to it in interest and importance is the History of Freemasonry in Scotland, by David Murray Lyon. This invaluable work, with the publication the previous year of The Old Charges, by W. J. Hughan, The Old Constitutions, by John Ed. Fox, and Findel's History of Freemasonry, have done more to remove the dust which Oliver had cast into our eyes respecting the antiquity and origin of Masonry, than all the publications of the last century. And while it is true that all the 'fools are not dead,' it may now be safely said that he who teaches that Adam, Seth or Solomon were Freemasons, sins against light and knowledge, and ought to be excluded from the platform of instruction."

A number of learned German brethren began to investigate early in this century the Masonic documents, among whom Bro. Krause may be entitled as the Masonic Copernicus. But such was the storm raised among the faithful that poor Krause literally died a martyr to truth. This, however, did not prevent others from pursuing the inquiry, which culminated in Bro. Findel's history.

"A bull in a china shop" is a poor metaphor when compared to the smashing done by that author. The bull can only trample on what lies in his path, but Bro. Findel had access to the upper shelves and to what was stored away in the corners; his smashings were therefore terrific. Truth was his motto; whatever was grand, noble and exalting in Masonry, Bro. F. reverenced and idolized, but for the humbuggeries he had no mercy. The pretensions of Masonic Templarism and all other so called high degrees, he demolished; he denuded the G. L. of York of our imagined importance; he wiped out of existence all the Grand Lodges and Grand Masters from the days of Adam down to Anthony Sayer, or to 1717; and even proved that no Masonic degrees were known before the above date. In short, he showed that Freemasonry began with the guilds of the middle ages, and all attempts to connect it with earlier organizations are without foundation and abortive. When that work appeared in an English garb in 1866, it was furiously assailed both in England and here by the Masonic Lactantiuses and St. Augustins; but the very venomous assaults of those worthies induced independent thinkers to examine for themselves. Thus a spirit of inquiry was generated, resulting in the exhumation of old MSS. and records, the publication in the Masonic press of excellent essays, and the production of Bro. Lyon's invaluable work; and every fact thus come to light showed that our old cherished English and American Masonic oracles were wrong, and our abused Bro. Finley was right.—J. Norton in the Masonic Jewel.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 11, 1875.

"GOD IN POLITICS."

Two papers, The Chicago Tribune and Interior, do injustice to the North Carolina Legislature which has expelled J. W. Thorne for atheism. The Tribune quotes and gives credit for a creed put in by Thorne while his case was before the House, which is in explicit contradiction of his (Thorne's) pamphlet before published, and on which he was arraigned; and the Interior shows its ignorance by calling Thorne a "Hicksite" instead of a "Progressive Friend," which he is. "Progressive Friends" are the body to which Oliver Johnson belongs, and who believe in God as the secessionists and traitors believed in the Constitution, 'for argument's sake,' while their guns were in battery and their troops in the field against the Constitution.

The North Carolina Legislature may have erred in expelling Thorne, who, in his pamphlet, called the God of the Bible "a Shylock," with sundry like appellations. But when the Tribune proceeds to indict those who wish the United States to recognize the God of the Bible, and that "Ours is a Christian and not a heathen government," it shows a shallowness as it does on public dram-shops, which is to be deplored.

Will the Tribune tell us what right but that of the strongest, a government recognzing no God has to hang a criminal? Or, the Bible and Christianity being unrecognized, why a Mormon Danite, who religiously believes and practices assassination, has not just as good a religion as the Tribune has before the United States laws? Or, further still, if ours is a heathen and not a Christian government, what right has Congress to pass as it has, a law against polygamy, which is a well known part of Mormon religious belief? If we say, simply, that by "religion," the Constitution means that of the Bible, that covers marriage between one man and one woman as Christ explained it, and so saves the descent of property to heirs, and protects society from the deluge of adultery which the Tribune's no-God-in-politics doctrine lets in upon us.

We know no nation which is professedly without God in its politics; and if the Tribune could get up such a nation it would be intellectually lower than 'the ox which knows his owner and the ass his master's crib.'

THE LOUISIANA LODGE ALLIANCE.

The minority report of the Congressional committee sent to Louisiana is a fearful history of the troubles of that State for several years and a complete vindication of the action of the general government against the White League butchers. Did space permit we would print the whole document. It was a minority report, for three members of the committee, two very conservative Republicans and a Democrat, had already made a sub-report giving a partial view of affairs and ignoring known facts bearing on the case. The chairman of the committee, Mr. Hoar of Massachusetts, is well known as a man of unimpeached integrity. He signs the report.

The part of the report to which we ask particular attention is from the inquiry into the Coushatta massacre. A dozen or more officers of Coushatta parish, were last summer made prisoners by the League, and while being conducted by a White League guard to Shreveport, they were murdered in cold blood. The report says of this massacre: "Thus by the murderous hands of neighbors, of men who pride themselves on their position in society, of those who had never received from the victims other than kindnesses, were these men deliberately slain, and there is practically no law in Louisiana to bring them to punishment." The testimony of the ringleader is partly given below and proves what we have before shown of the connection of the White League with Freemasonry.

INTIMIDATION.

We now come to the events of 1874. The campaign was inaugurated by the formation of a party designed to divide the people of Louisiana on the line of race. . . . Agreements were entered into in various parishes, signed by hundreds of planters to employ no laborers who did not vote their ticket. Handbills like the following were circulated:

"LOUISIANAIRS.

"Pour sauver votre patrie il faut renvoyer les negres.

"Par le faim, animal le plus feroce est dompte."

"LOUISIANIANS.

"To save your country do not employ the negro.

"Wild beasts can only be tamed by hunger."

It is impossible to state, the committee say, in the space which the report can properly cover, the details of the deeds of lawless violence which were proved before the committee. In many parishes the legal officers were driven out by force. Republicans were murdered or compelled to fly for their lives. Whatever the pretext, the real offense was their political opinions. The cases of Ruford Blunt, a State Senator, and prominent colored leader; Allen Green, a State Senator, who had established a flourishing business in Lincoln Parish, and Judge Myers, of Nachitoches Parish, where he had lived eighteen years, are described in this connection by the committee.

Respecting the Coushatta massacre the report says: We were anxious to obtain the facts in the terrible tragedy of Coushatta, and were able to do so from several witnesses, but principally from Mr. Twitchell, a brother of one of the victims, and from Mr. Aubury, a merchant of that town, whose reluctant admission under a rigid cross-examination satisfied us that he was the chief operator.

The following significant extract from the cross-examination of this man is given in the report:

Mr. Frye—Was there not one other officer at that time requested to resign? A.—Yes.

Mr. Frye—What was his name? A.—Scott.

Mr. Frye—Was he killed?—A.—No.

Mr. Frye—Did he go with your guards? A.—No.

Mr. Frye—Why not? A.—I would not let him. I compelled him to remain behind.

Mr. Frye—Was he a Master Mason? A.—Yes.

Mr. Frye—Were you a Master Mason? A.—Yes.

Mr. Frye—Were any others of the persons Masons? A.—I did not know that they were.

In dismissing this matter the report says: Thus by the murderous hands of neighbors, of men who pride themselves on their position in society, of those who had never received from the victims other than kindnesses, were these men deliberately slain, and there is practically no law in Louisiana to bring them to punishment.

THE WHITE LEAGUE.

The White League is an organization which exists in New Orleans, and contains at least from 2,500 to 3,000 members, armed, drilled, officered as a military organization. Organizations bearing the same name extend throughout many parts of the State. It was pretended that this organization in the city was simply a voluntary police force, the regular police being inefficient; that it has no connection with associations of the same name in other parts of the State, and that these latter are merely political clubs, without military organization or arms. A brief examination and cross-examination effectually expelled this pretension. . . . So far as was shown, this organization in no single instance performed police functions. . . . Aubury, the leader of the band at Coushatta, when he sent off the Republican prisoners under guard, gave a military order for supplies and a reinforcement to the guard to the highest officer of a club in another town, in obedience to which, if his story be true, the safety of the lives of the prisoners depended. The White League of New Orleans itself was, and is, a constant menace to the Republicans of the entire State. Its commander can, in a few hours, place bodies of men armed and drilled in any of the near parishes, or those on the the coast, or into Mississippi, Alabama, or Texas. It doubtless contains many persons of property and influence. It also contains many persons of very different character. It is desirous and would be able to overthrow the State Government at any time if not prevented by the power of the United States. They still retain more than one thousand stand of arms taken from the State Sept. 14 and never returned.

We cannot doubt that the effect of all these things was to prevent a full, free, and fair election, and to intimidate the colored voters and white Republicans. The very formation of a white man's party was a menace of terrible import to those who remember Colfax and Bessier and the convention. The press was filled with threats of violence. The agreement to discharge laborers—the suggestion that wild beasts are tamed by hunger—was evidence of the same spirit. The overthrow of the State Government by the White League on the 19th of September; the turning out of large numbers of parish officials in the country, compelling them to flee for their lives; the fearful lesson of Coushatta; the formation, drilling, and arming of the White League, the natural successors of the Knights of the White Camellia,—these things, in a community where there is no legal punishment for polical murders, must, in the nature of things, have filled with terror a people timid and gentle, like the colored population of Louisiana, even if we had not taken abundant evidence as to special acts of violence and crime, and their effects on particular neighborhoods.

NOTES.

—The Roman Catholic Bishop, Hendrickson, of Rhode Island, has pronounced strongly against the Ancient Order of Hibernians. The Providence Hibernians threaten to appeal to the Bishop of New York, if Bishop Hendrickson persists in his opposition.

—A correspondent speaks highly of the latest revelation describing the sinful and foolish ceremonies of which "Rev. Septimus Jones" subjects himself. Another writes of Mr. Eastman's address on Gerrit Smith: "I am very glad you have published Mr. Eastman's address on the life of Gerrit Smith. It reviews very forcibly the impressions of the old anti-slavery times. The history of the discussions, with the clasifications of abolitionists into different parties, is brief, true and clear, and helps the modern writer to understand the state of the times."

—The convention for the Constitutional reform to be held in Columbus, O., during the present month is to be addressed by Prof. J. R. W. Sloane of Allegheny, Pres. D. A. Wallace of Monmouth, Prof. O. N. Stoddard, Hon. F. K. Brunot and others. The general agent of the National Reform Association, Rev. D. McAllister, has been holding meetings in Oskaloosa, Iowa; Grasshopper Falls, and Topeka, Kans.; and Warrensburg, Mo., lately.

—Prof. Ramsay's letter on another page shows something of the feeling which finds expression from the lodge on the Mansfield meeting. The Mansfield Journal, which is editorially connected with the lodge, gives a pretty full and fair report with but an occasional sarcastic slip. But telegrams published in the Cincinnati Enquirer and Chicago Times, originated by somebody in Mansfield, do not spare to misrepresent and abuse, not only the convention, but the good people of Mansfield, for whom the Enquirer speaks thus: "It is the opinion of all that a greater farce was never perpetrated on the citizens than this Convention. They can stand all else, but they never want another crowd like them again." The poor fellow who sent this word has magnified the lodge till in his mind it includes the whole community. It is probably true for the Masons.

—Some unknown friend has sent us a report of the Mansfield, O., Convention which the very full and able report of the Secretary, Col. Cowden, has anticipated. The latter has also furnished the Telescope, we see, with an interesting sketch of the meeting. Father Finney of Mansfield also sends a note speaking of the success of the meeting. As in a prayer meeting, when two or three are on their feet at once with their testimony, we conclude that the "liberty"-giving Spirit is present, so these letters mark an increasing and hopeful zeal. So keep writing, friends. Be like the God-fearing people who "speak often one to another" of His providence and grace. All who hear the report of last week, will be pleased with the following from the last letter:

A marked feature of the Convention was the timely, appropriate and effective songs rendered by Geo. W. Clark of New York, the well-known "Liberty Singer" and temperance vocalist, who was called out several times during the sessions and roundly applauded. The Rev. J. P. Stoddard, General Agent, was indefatigable in working up, organizing and conducting the Convention to its close; and to him is due, primarily, its success. He is the right man in the right place and should be amply rewarded and heartily sustained for his most efficient services in the cause. He is thoroughly master of the whole subject, sincerely in earnest, kind, affable and untiring."

—Mrs. H. M. Secombe, a home missionary's wife in Green Island, Neb., sends a letter of the right ring to the New York Daily Witness. She has this to say of the position of that excellent journal: "We also like the position you take upon secret societies. Is it not a pity that the noble cause of temperance should be yoked with such an anti-Christian principle? There are many lodges in this State, and one formed here. We wish to say 'God speed' to the noble cause, and yet cannot indorse the principle of secrecy."

ANTI-TOBACCO AND ANTI-RUM PUBLICATIONS.—We are pleased to notice the work begun by the late Rev. Geo. Trask will be continued. The tracts and books written and published by him can be obtained on the following terms by addressing Trask Tract Depository, Fitchburg, Mass.

Illustrated four page tracts $6.00 per 1000, or 80 cents per 100. Two page tracts $3,00 per 1000; 40 cts. per 100. Notes of anti-tobacco campaign, 25 cts. Solomon Spittle, 10 cts. Uncle Toby, 15 cts. Anti-tobacco medals $1.00 per dozen. Comprehensive pledges, $1.00 per 100.

One hundred and thirty tracts have been issued.

Religious Intelligence.

—The Rev. Dr. John Hall of New York, began his series of lectures on preaching before Yale Divinity school, in Marquand Chapel, on February 4. He will lecture on Thursday and Friday of each week. This is the "Lyman Beecher" lectureship in which H. W. Beecher has been engaged for a year or two.

—Some of the leading members of the Primitive Methodist denomination in England are moving for the commencement of a Primative Methodist Mission in France.

—The leading Nonconformists of Glasgow have resolved to found a National Association to promote the disestablishment and disendowment of the Scottish church. Another association for the "Maintenance of National Religion" is to be formed, the object being to save the Established church of Scotland from disestablishment.

—In contradiction of the reported decline of churches in the Sandwich Islands since the withdrawal of missionaries in 1873, it is stated that there has been a great increase in the number of native pastors, churches and schools. During ten years $77,973 have been given for missions in the islands of the Pacific, and no difficulty is found in disciplining offending church members.

—The Old Catholics are making considerable headway in Germany. "The Grand Duchy is reported to have joined the Old Catholics, and seventeen parishes have been handed over by the government to the opponents of Papal Infallibility, with a goodly portion of the livings belonging to them." This is an advance upon those who hold to the dogma of infallibility, but many obstacles still stand in the way of evangelical Protestants fraternizing with them.

—The officers and congregation of the Protestant Episcopal church, St. Clair, Mich., have resolved to withdraw from the old organization and join the Reformed Episcopal church.

—Mrs. Phoebe Palmer, well-known throughout the country for her religious efforts, recently died. The meetings that have been held for thirty-seven years at the residence of her husband in New York city, for the promotion of holiness, will not be discontinued.

—Revivals of considerable power are reported in the Congregational churches of Roseville, Round Grove, Byron, Ludlow and Tonica, Ill., and also in the Fox River region west of Chicago. Extensive revivals have also been enjoyed in Sedgwick and Centralia, Kansas.

—The last General Conference of the Free Methodist church was incorperated under the laws of the State of New York and appointed six trustees who can hold property donated or devised for the use of the denomination.

—Mr. Henry Varley from England is preaching in the various churches of New York and Brooklyn to crowded houses.

—Moody and Sankey were in Liverpool last month and the interest that follows their wonderful meetings does not flag but rather increases. There is much speculation among the English clergy and journals on the great power manifested through these humble disciples. It is evident the Holy Ghost is with them and goes before preparing the way for the Lord's work. Nothing else could maintain these men in their victorious march from city to city. All will be glad to read Mr. Moody's sterling words against a dark sin in the old churches of Scotland and Ireland on another page.

The New York Agent in a New Role.

DEAR K:—"I rise to explain." In the Cynosure for Feb. 25th I see you have given space to a complaint against me from the "Cadyville Pastor." That is right. If in my "jottings" about men and things, any injustice is done, I shall welcome any chastisement fairly bestowed; but I cannot be still under the bitings of a rod labeled "falsehood." As the matter now stands, that is the position the "Pastor" places me in. I said, "The pastor, for prudential reasons, had declined giving out our appointments." To this he replies by saying, "I gave out the appointments as requested;" but the brethren "fearing the results would be unfavorable to the church interests," the appointments were taken up. All this, which I am bound to believe, is new to me. The facts as I had them, at the time of writing are these: Bro. Wardner and myself rode over to the home of the pastor, and not finding him left a request with his wife to have appointments given out for me at West Plattsburg and Cadyville for the week following. On Wednesday night, Bro. W. and myself reached West Plattsburg a few minuts before time for opening service. Soon after the pastor came in. Bro. W. had some conversation with him, and I learned that no appointments were out for me at Cadyville. Whether Bro. Wardner was told of the giving out and taking up of the appointments, I do not know. I do know he was extremely chagrined at the way matters stood, while I heard only that no appointments were out. Had I known that the pastor did give out the notice at Cadyville, my reference to him would not have been at all objectionable, and thus I make the amende honorable.

I think, however, the good pastor spreads the matter against me unnecessarily, when he says I represent him as "a diseased, sickly, weak, despicable being." What I did say, was: "He seems to be troubled with a disease. . . which makes him who is affected with it appear despicable," etc. This was written while smarting under a contact with a worse stage of the "weak-knee" disease, than I supposed him to be smitten with; and I regret any injustice done him by that of which he complains. While I have it in my heart to chastise the miserable weakness to which I alluded, and shall make no apology for it, it is not in me knowingly to wound any one carelessly or causelessly. This I wish the "Cadyville pastor" to believe.

In closing, allow me a suggestion, in all kindness. The "pastor" says that the brethren at Cadyville, who "feared the results to the church interests" of lectures on an important plank in the Wesleyan platform, "are all true in this respect." He also asserts his own soundness. Now I have no doubt the "pastor" believes this, honestly. Will he be angry with me, however, if I, in my blindness it may be, suggest, that in times like the present, when organized secrecy with all subtlety is sapping the foundations of good, loyalty to Christ and truth demands from pastors and churches something more than a neutral position? Pastor says, "I never felt it my duty to deliver Anti-masonic lectures." No, nor preach Anti-masonic sermons, if I am rightly informed. Let me ask how long will a church maintain a "true attitude," towards Masonry or any other great evil, however good its platform may be, if that platform is not often explained and enforced? Will not every convert added to its membership, who is not instructed in, and won to the distinctive reforms to which the church is committed, prove in the end an element of weakness, rather than of power? Look to late developments in the United Presbyterian denomination, as well as elsewhere for an answer. I submit the above in Christian kindness.

J. L. BARLOW.

Another Secret Order.

XENIA, Ind., Feb. 26, 1875.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

Below I give you a copy as published in the Xenia Gazette of Feb. 18th, (names left out).

"Below we give you a copy in full of the papers used by the "Confidence Men," with names of those who have signed said papers, so far as they have been furnished us by the officers who have been looking the matter up. They say that they will furnish the remainder as soon as they procure the papers:

"M. B. W."

"Month of January in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy five, I,———, of the State of Indiana and county of Miami, do solemnly swear in the presence of Almighty God, the searcher of all hearts, that I will keep and faithfully keep all secrets and signs of the order of M. B. W. until death.

Furthermore, I——— do agree, if I should in any instance either directly or indirectly divulge any secrets or signs of the M. B. W. for the sake of money or money gains, I shall then, after so doing, be expelled from the order of M. B. W. and treated as a spy, and subject myself to the penalty, which is death by some party of the unknown order.

Furthermore, I——— do agree that I will not barter nor sell to any party or parties any of the money of the M. B. W.

This entitles the above named party to a membership in the order of M. B. W. in the first degree, for which he has taken in the presence of———, who are members of the order in the fifth degree. The above named party is 32 years of age: color of eye, blue; color of hair, dark; occupation at this time, restaurant; habits, good; residence, Xenia. Signed———.

Attest, BOLIVAR.

MR EDITOR:—Several of the citizens of Xenia and vicinity are members of this, another secret den of iniquity, whose object is dealing in counterfeit money; and it is stated that more names will be published as soon as the "papers are procured." One of the leaders in this ring is now in the jail of this county for shooting a citizen of this place, while in a gambling, drinking hell-hole of Xenia. Yes, sir, this is another of the offspring of the "old harlot," Masonry. Now if the editor of the Gazette, who is a Mason and Odd-fellow, would only publish the Masonic obligation that he took and give his own name with other sanctified Masonic ministers attached to the obligation and ceremonies which they took, and then place it by the side or above, the "M. B. W.," we then could see from whence came those dens, such as the Ku-Klux, Golden Circle, White League and M. B. W., etc., that are cursing our country. But alas for such editors as wear the rope and chain around their necks, and a "dirty old rag" over their eyes! God save our country from the rule and corruption of these rings, and corrupt ministers! Revolvers are quite in demand at present in this den-cursed region. But there are many here who have not as yet bowed their necks to the haltar.

As William Small gave you not long since the annual report of the Masonic lodge of this place for last year, showing a decrease of about ten, I herewith send you a report of the "Beacon Lodge, No. 320," of Odd-fellows, in this place, for last year, as taken from the Grand Lodge reports of this State which I have: "Initiated, 2; admitted on card, 3; rejected, 1; suspended, 1; contributing members, 50." So you see that there is not much gain, but they are trying to keep up by making festivals, etc. The working of these dens stirs the poison within their own bowels, so that the old serpent shows its hideous form in the shape of the M. B. W.

Yours, J. M. DARBY.

The Home Circle.

He Lives Long Who Lives Well.

Wouldst thou live long? The only means are these.
'Bove Galen's diet, or Hippocrates';
Strive to live well: tread in the upright ways,
And rather count thy actions than thy days;
Then thou hast lived enough among us here;
For every day well spent I count a year.
Live well, and then, how soon soe'er thou die,
Thou art of age to claim eternity.
But he that outlives Nestor, and appears
To have passed the date of gray Methuselah's years,
If he his life to sloth and sin doth give—
I say he only was—he did not live.—Randolph.

The Mischief-Maker.

"The tongue deviseth mischiefs; like a sharp razor working deceitfully."

"First think; and if thy thoughts aprove thy will,
Then speak; and, after, that thou speakest fulfil."

"Every kind of beasts, and of birds, and of serpents, and things in the sea, is tamed, and hath been tamed for mankind; but the tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison." James vii. 8.

This same mischief-maker, or unruly member, is ever in motion—

"Oh! could there in this world be found
Some little spot of happy ground,
Where village pleasures might go round
Without the village tattling!"

Talk? No end to it! Prating folks little, and big, take the lead, engross the time, run from one subject to another as fancy dictates, without instructing or edifying. How much precious time is worse than lost!

There are some few great talkers who talk sensibly, interestingly, edifyingly; but these instances are rare. Generally, as Solomon says, "A fool's voice is known by the multitude of words." "The words of a wise man's mouth are gracious; but the lips of the fool swallow him up." "The tongue is a little member and boasteth great things."

Is it possible a man or women given to commonplace, senseless loquacity can be a meek and lowly follower of Jesus? "Death and life are in the power of the tongue." "Put away from thee a forward mouth, and perverse lips put far from thee." "In the multitude of words there wanteth not sin." "He that keepeth his mouth, keepeth his life."

The right government of the tongue is a subject of vital importance, and which we cannot disregard with impunity. "If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, that man's religion is vain." "By thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned." "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." Words are the index of the heart.

In short—when our hearts are right we shall never want for topics of conversation, which will "please our neighbor for his good to edification." "A good man, out of the good treasure of his heart, bringeth forth good things."

"'Tis not for man to trifle: life is brief;
And sin is here;
Our age is but the falling of a leaf,
A dropping tear.
We have no time to sport away the hours;
All must be earnest in a world like ours."

Nothing to say? Well, then, say nothing—hold your peace.

Never talk merely for the sake of talking. Hush! Lift up your heart silently, in prayful ejaculations, for wisdom, pure, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy; that the words of your mouth and the meditations of your hearts may be acceptable to God, edifying, administering grace to the hearers.

Again; never open your lips when unduly excited or ruffled. Keep still! look up. The art of silence is a great art, both with the old and the young.

Keep your mouth as with a bridle. Learn to be silent under oppositions, provocations, rebukes, injuries, or persecutions. How did Jesus do? Look and see. It is better to say nothing, than to say anything in an angry or excited manner, even if the occasion should seem to justify a degree of anger. By remaining silent, the mind is enabled to collect itself, and calls upon God in secret aspirations of prayer. And thus you will speak to the honor of your holy profession, as well as to the good of those who have injured you, when you speak from God.

"When'er the angry passions rise,
And tempt our thoughts and tongues to strife,
To Jesus let us lift our eyes,
Bright pattern of the Christian life.

"His fair example let us trace,
To teach us what we ought to be:
Make us, by thy transforming grace,
Dear Savior, daily more like thee."

If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, able also to bridle the whole body." "Who is a wise man, endued with knowledge among you? let him show out of a good conversation his works with meekness of wisdom." D. F. Newton.

A Story of Real Life.

I attended the other Sabbath the unnoted funeral of a woman who, lying there alone and almost kinless in death, forced upon my thoughts the keenly-contrasting light and shade of personal fortune in this capitolian city. Her grandfather was a member from Vermont of the first Congress held in Philadelphia. He was a grand gentleman of that day, who went and came followed and served by his colored body servant. Her grandmother (married at fifteen) was a fine, helpless lady, who did not dress or undress herself, and whose husband did not allow her to know what she was to have for her dinner until she was ready to eat it. She lived and died helpless, rich and honored. Her son, the father of the lovely dead woman, was also a member of Congress. He served long and brilliantly for consecutive terms in Washington. His children grew up at the capital, surrounded by servants, commanding luxury and all the pleasant honors of official position. There was no political gifts in the keeping of his native State that their father might not have commanded had he not been hopelessly overtaken at last with the curse of the love of strong drink. He died poor. When his body was laid away in the Congressional Cemetery, his family came back to find themselves on the populous plateau of "working people." From that hour began the life consecration of a sister to a brother. That brother never rose to his father's or grandfather's position. With many of their gifts, he inherited the weakness of his father. He filled a place of trust among the clerkships of the Capital; but he filled it and kept it only through the never-ceasing watchfulness and care of the sister who gave her life to him. He was respected and honored for his many personal virtues, but he only kept his official position through the love and care of his sister. Two years ago he died, leaving the ministering angel of his life—past youth, poor and alone. In time a place in the Treasury was given to her—a place so poor that it subjected her to the most discordant surroundings, the most uncongenial associates, while the stipend received for her labor was barely sufficient to pay for her food and shelter. This very winter Senator Morrill of Vermont, was able to procure her a more congenial position, with increased pay. She had scarcely entered upon it, scarcely written to her friend a note of warm thanks for it, when, alone in the night, in a boarding-house on Pennsylvania Avenue, the final summons came. She called a woman friend in the next room, and in half an hour was dead. Her coffin was covered and hung close with flower crosses and garlands brought by friends who honored her; yet in all the company who gathered in that lonely lodging-house there was not one who really needed her or one to whom she belonged. Tears were shed, but they were tears of human tenderness, that a woman so loving and unselfish should have died at last unneeded and alone. Through that gray wintry Sabbath sympathizing men and women went with her as far as they could go—to the dreary Congressional Cemetery—where they laid her beside the brother, with whose final passing the supreme object of her own life went out. Few knew of her dying. Her death and burial were barely noted. She was not a member of Congress; not a man great upon earth. She was only a woman, who had given her own life in love and sacrifice to a man, and that man was her brother. Surely we know not who our angels are. They look into our eyes; they go in and out of our doors: they serve us, they love us, they die for us; and we see them not, till we perceive them by spiritual sight, beyond the clasp of hand or the reach of our mortal arms.—Washington Letter.

Conversation.

Among home amusements the best is the good old habit of conversation, the talking over the events of the day, the bright and quick play of wit and fancy, the story which brings the laugh, and the speaking the good and kind and true things, which all have in their hearts. It is not so much by dwelling upon what members of the family have in common, as by bringing each to the other something interesting and amusing, that home life is to be made cheerful and joyous. Each one must do his part to make conversation genial and happy. We are too ready to converse with newspapers and books, to seek some companion at the store hotel, and club-room, and forget that home is anything more than a place to sleep and eat in. The revival of conversation, the entertainment of one another, as a roomful of people will entertain themselves, is one secret of a happy home. Wherever it is wanting, disease has struck into the root of the tree; there is a want which is felt with increasing force as time goes on. Conversation in many cases is just what prevents many people from relapsing into utter selfishness at their firesides. This conversation should not simply occupy husband and wife, and other older members of the family, but extend itself to the children. Parents should be careful to talk with them, to enter into their life, to share their trifles, to assist in their studies, to meet them in the thoughts and feelings of their childhood. It is a great step in education, when around the evening lamp are gathered the different members of a large family, sharing their occupations with one another, the older assisting the younger, each one contributing to the entertainment of the other, and all feeling that the evening has passed only too rapidly away. This is the truest and best amusement. It is the health education of great and noble characters. There is the freedom, the breadth, the joyousness of natural life. The time spent thus by parents, in the higher entertainment of their children, bears a harvest of eternal blessings, and these winter evenings furnish just the time.—Churchman.

Germany.

Germany extends across the map of Europe from the French frontier to that of Russia, nearly 900 miles east and west. At its narrowest part, on a line drawn north and south through Stettin, Berlin and Dresden, it does not much exceed 200 miles in width; while farther east or farther west it is nearly twice that broad.

The Germans nearly clothe themselves from their domestic wools. They sell enough fine woolen cloths and fabrics of wool to purchase all the wools and cottons they are obliged to buy. They manufacture from their own ores and coals nearly as much iron and steel as they consume, and sell enough coal and cutlery, machinery and implements, to pay for whatever hardware they purchase abroad. Their product of native wine so nearly satisfies the domestic demand that their sales of white wine pay for all the red and other brands of wine they import from France. The whiskey they drink is but little, and that little is supplied from the distillation of apples, potatoes and rye of their own growing. Beer is the commoner and almost universal beverage of the people. The quantity manufactured for home consumption is about one barrel per inhabitant, or more than 40,000,000 barrels per annum; and they export enough beer to pay for all the brandy, gin and other distilled liquors purchased.

The production of coal in Germany has vastly increased within recent years. The total quantity mined last year exceeded 40,000,000 tons, of which 85 per cent. was consumed within the empire, and 15 per cent. exported, from which latter was realized $50,000,000, including cost of transportation within Germany. There are 1,140 smelting works and foundries in Germany engaged in the manufacture of pig iron, wrought iron and steel, and 225 others in lead, zinc, copper, brass and other metals, giving employment to 160,000 operatives, and producing metals of the value of $200,000,000 per annum.

There are 15,000 miles of the most perfectly built railway lines in the world in Germany, and at a period not far removed they will all be owned by the government, and constitute a great source of revenue. The government now dictates freight and passenger rates.

Germany is the lightest taxed country in Europe. The taxes are hardly half as high as in France, Austria or Italy. The budget for the empire for 1874 is fixed at $111,180,000. Of this sum $71,500,000 will be expended for the support of the imperial army of 407,000, which seems like a very small sum compared with what it costs to maintain the 30,000 troops in the United States; but then the purchasing power of money in Germany is much greater than in America, and the army of the latter is scattered over the vast uninhabited regions of the far West. But the French army of equal numbers under arms costs one-third more than the German, showing the difference in the economy of administration in the two countries. The largest source of imperial revenue is from the tariff, which yields about $50,000,000, with duties averaging about ten per cent. and a large free list. One reason why the German imperial expenditures are so light is that the national debt is insignificant, the annual interest charge being less than two millions of dollars. But most of the States of the confederation have debts, generally incurred in the construction of State railroads.

We understand something of Bismarck's ecclesiastical policy when we know that the salaries of all the German clergy, Catholic as wall as Protestant, including the Jewish rabbis, are paid by the State governments. Thus the Prussian government expended last year about $95,000,000 for the support of the clergy. There are in all Germany 16,000 Protestant pastors, ministering to 28,000,000 of Protestant population, and 26,000 Catholic priests doing the same thing for 14,000,000 of Catholic inhabitants.

There are upward of 100,000 teachers in the public schools of Germany, and the number of scholars enrolled, between the ages of six and fourteen, exceeds 6,000,000. The number attending private primary schools is about 500,000, while those who attend the higher schools, academies, gymnasia, technical schools and universities exceeds 500,000. Thus there are seven millions of scholars attending all the schools of Germany.—Our Church Paper.

Fetish Follies.

A singular story of the doings of the colored people of Augusta, Ga., is narrated in a newspaper of that city. In one of the churches there a new ceremony, called "Marching out of Egypt," has been introduced. It is an exhibition of pedestrian piety. About 9 o'clock P. M., solemnly chanting, the worshipers pace round and round; and those who endure until daylight are regarded as the predestinate favorites of God, with their future felicity assured. Those who break down are held to be in a perilous condition, such weakness of the flesh indicating a corresponding weakness of the spirit. Housekeepers occasionally experience great inconvenience from this muscular manifestation, especially when the cook is too much exhausted by the nocturnal agitations to prepare an early breakfast. There is nothing new in this tendency of extreme religious emotion to manifest itself in protracted bodily activity. It comes from the East, and is copied from the performances of the dancing dervishes.

Every day, it is painful to admit, adds to the evidences that the black population of the South, full as it is of fervid religious tendencies, controlled by a grotesque idealism and by an ethnical tendency to material religious practices, has been left by emancipation in a condition requiring the wisest Christian guidance. Its merely emotional capacities of the religious kind are at once plentiful and potent. It seeks ceremonial with Oriental eagerness. It rushes into worship with a kind of nervous insanity, and prays not only in a voice of thunder, but likewise with its legs and arms. Its songs of praise are weird anthems of which the tom-tom's coarse, strange music is the natural accompaniment. It revels in the mysterious until it is half mad. It seeks strength in charms and an ally in the lowest forms of witchcraft. It preserves traces of the barbarous ritual of its Congo ancestors, and of tendencies which the civilized associations of more than two centuries have failed altogether to arrest. It is fascinated by its supernatural conception of death; and it is thoroughly literal in its doctrine of special providences.

That this unsatisfactory state of religious feeling is unnecessary, and that it might have been avoided by wise instruction and rational treatment, is proved by the great number of colored Christians who are as sensible and steady as need be in their ecclesiastical practices. These black enthusiasts are such, because they have been too much left to themselves, and especially to a state of ignorance authorized and enforced by law, and continued through many generations. It is infinitely to be regretted that now, when emancipation has brought the largest opportunities of a better culture, these poor, blind people have been to such an extent left to the leadership of the blind. We are not unmindful of the work which has been philanthropically accomplished by Christian men and women laboring in this new field. The task, however, of guiding and training the emancipated slaves is enormous, and progress in the right direction is necessarily slow. In many parts of the South the blacks have been under very bad guidance and have been grossly misled by political adventurers, whose best policy was to keep their followers still in a condition of moral servitude. We might well be disheartened by the many and gross mistakes, not to use a harsher word, which have already been committed. What we need is faith in the general good influence of the whole country—in the force of its best thought, of its enlightened conscience, and of persistent humanity. —N. Y. Tribune.

Children's Corner.

Two Keys.

Hearts, like doors, can ope with ease
To very, very little keys;
And don't forget that two are these—
"I thank you, sir," and "If you please."

"I Cannot Help It."

Do you ever make use of this phrase, dear young folks? You will all plead guilty, we fear; and we older folks are very apt to do the same.

There is our friend Ruthie: the dressing bell rings, and she hears it;—she is conscious that she ought to spring up at once; that everything will go wrong if she does not; but still she lies with folded hands, for "a little more sleep and a little more slumber."

Late at breakfast, hurried in preparing for school, Ruthie meets her mother's reproachful look with: "I cannot help it; I mean to get up every morning as soon as I am called, but before I know it, I'm asleep again:—I can't help it!"

Dona'd is charged with an errand which he is to attend to on his way to school, and of course Donald means to do it; but something diverts his mind, and as has often been the case before, he forgets all about it until too late. "There! it's too bad, but I cannot help it!" he says, and so comforts himself for this one more "sin of unfaithfulness."

Harry and Josie are in a hot dispute. Now they forget themselves entirely; Josie's vexing words are uttered without restraint, and Harry in a towering passion, gives her a fierce reply, and rushes out of the room. The brother and sister meet no more until night, and in the meantime they each feel self-reproached and uncomfortable.

"Well, I cannot help it," says Harry to himself; "Josie is so provoking, that off I go in a rage before I know it!" And Josie is wishing, over and over again, that she could recall her teasing words: "But there, it is just my nature, I cannot help it!"

Most likely all our young readers are conscious of some habit of wrong-doing which they feel to be just such a "band of sin," tying them down, so that they really cannot help doing just so.

And no wonder; for these habits of evil, these "sins which by our frailty we have committed" are bands, holding us back from the service and obedience which we owe to God. And every time we indulge the habit of well-doing, we strengthen the band, as it were, by another thread. And as Josie says, "it is our nature,—we cannot help it."

What shall we do then? Shall we, as St. Paul says, "yield our members to be servants to sin?" Shall we suffer ourselves to be tied down more and more securely by the bands of these sins? Ah, if we do, we cannot follow on in the footsteps of our Saviour, and we can never reach our heavenly home!

There is One who can deliver us from these bands, and to him let us pray for help, with all our hearts. We "cannot help" ourselves, it is true; but he is able to "save his people from their sins."—Churchman.

Never Waste Bread.

One day, about one hundred and thirty years ago, a young Scottish maiden was busy about her household affairs, when an aged stranger came to the door and asked permission to enter and rest, requesting at the same time something to eat. The young girl brought him a bowl of bread and milk, and tried in various ways to make him comfortable. A peace of bread happened to fall on the floor, she pushed it out of the way into a heap of ashes. "Never waste bread!" cried the stranger, with much emotion, picking up the bread and putting it into his milk. "I have known the time when I would have given gold for a handful of corn kneeded into a soldier's bonnet." A quick suspicion crossed the girl's mind and sent her to the room of her invalid mother, who hastened to the kitchen on hearing the description of of the old man with delicate hands and clean, coarse linen. In a moment she knew him to be the good Scottish lord on whose estate they were tenants. He had just returned from the battle of Culloden, where the young prince, Charles Edward, had been defeated by the royal troops. He and many others were obliged to hide for their lives. After having been driven from one hiding place to another, he at last found a safe hiding-place on a part of his estate where were large cairns, called the "cairns of Pitsligo." The lady who tells the story says that "every one in the neighborhood knew of his residence," the very children would go peep at him as he sat reading, but would never breath his name. "Nor," she adds, "shall I forget the lesson the poor fugitive taught me—never to waste bread."

Tribute to a Mother.—Children, look in those eyes, listen to that dear voice, notice the feeling of even a single touch that is bestowed upon you by that gentle hand! Make much of it while yet you have that most precious of all good gifts, a loving mother. Read the unfathomable love of those eyes; the kind anxiety of that tone and look, however slight your pain. In after life you may have friends, fond, kind, dear friends; but never will you have again the inexpressible love and gentleness lavished upon you which none but a mother bestows. Often do I sigh in my present struggles with the hard, uncaring world, for the sweet, deep security I felt when, of an evening, nestling in her bosom, I listened to some quiet tale, suitable to my age, read in her tender and untiring voice. Never can I forget her sweet glances cast upon me when I appeared asleep; never her kiss of peace at night. Years have passed away since we laid her beside my father in the old churchyard: yet still her voice whispers from the grave, and her eye watches over me, as I visit spots long since hallowed to the memory of my mother.—Lord Macauley.

DIDN'T LIKE THE WAGES.—An honest boy once went to work in a store, but left in a few days. His mother, in surprise, asked him if he was treated unkindly, or if he did not like the work.

"Mother," said he, "my employer was very kind to me, and the work suited me exactly; but I didn't like the wages. He wanted me to tell lies about his goods and thus cheat his customers. I knew this would be a sin, and the wages of sin is death."

Home and Health Hints.

ABOUT THE HOUSE.—When an iron poker becomes soft by long usage, it can be hardened by heating to a redness and plunging several times into a pail of cold water.

Ink stains may be removed from books by wetting the spot with a solu- of oxalic acid, one ounce, water one half pint.

Hyposulphite of soda is better than common washing soda for laundry purposes.

Linen can be glazed by adding a teaspoonful of salt and one of finely-scraped white soap to a pound of starch.

BOYS' SHIRTS.—Until recently I have made the shirts for my boys open in front. Of course the bosoms were easily soiled by being buttoned and unbuttoned so much, and as they were quite stiff with starch, and the buttonholes unyielding, they soon gave way at the ends and became ragged. Now I have their shirts open behind, and nd that they wear and look much better. I made a couple of buttonholes in the bosom for pearl studs, which are put in when the shirt is put on, and not removed till it goes into the soiled clothes-basket. The bosom is made whole or in one piece, and stitched on to the body of the shirt. It is lined with muslin. This makes it wear better and makes it stiffer when starched, and that is what boys and men like equally well.—Kate Hunnibee.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.—A bit of glue dissolved in skim milk and water will restore old crape. Half a cranberry bound on a corn will soon kill it. An inkstand was turned over on a white table-cloth; a servant threw over it a mixture of salt and pepper plentifully, and all traces of it disappeared. Picture frames and glasses are preserved from flies by painting them with a brush dipped in a mixture made by boiling three onions in a pint of water. Bed bugs are kept away by washing the crevices with strong salt water, put on with a brush. Soft soap should by kept in a dry place in a cellar, and not used until three months old.

EXPOSITION OF THE GRANGE.

Illustrated with Engravings, showing the Lodge Room, Signs, Signals, Grips, etc.

EDITED BY REV. A. W. GEESLIN.

Entered according to Act of Congress in the year 1875
BY EZRA A. COOK & CO.,
In the office of the Librarian of Congress at Washington, D. C.

OPENING.

Master calls to order (ONE RAP.)

Master to Patrons:—The hour of labor has arrived; the work of another day demands our attention. All being prepared let each repair to his or her alloted station.

Master to Overseer:—Worthy Overseer, are all present correct?

Overseer to Steward:—Worthy Steward you will ascertain.

Steward to Overseer:—My assistants will make examination and report.

(Assistant Steward and Lady Assistant Steward pass to Overseer and commence the examination. Lady Assistant Steward passes up left side of hall; Assistant Steward up right side from Overseer; meet at Ceres; pass to Overseer and report to him, after which, if all are correct, he replies to the Master)

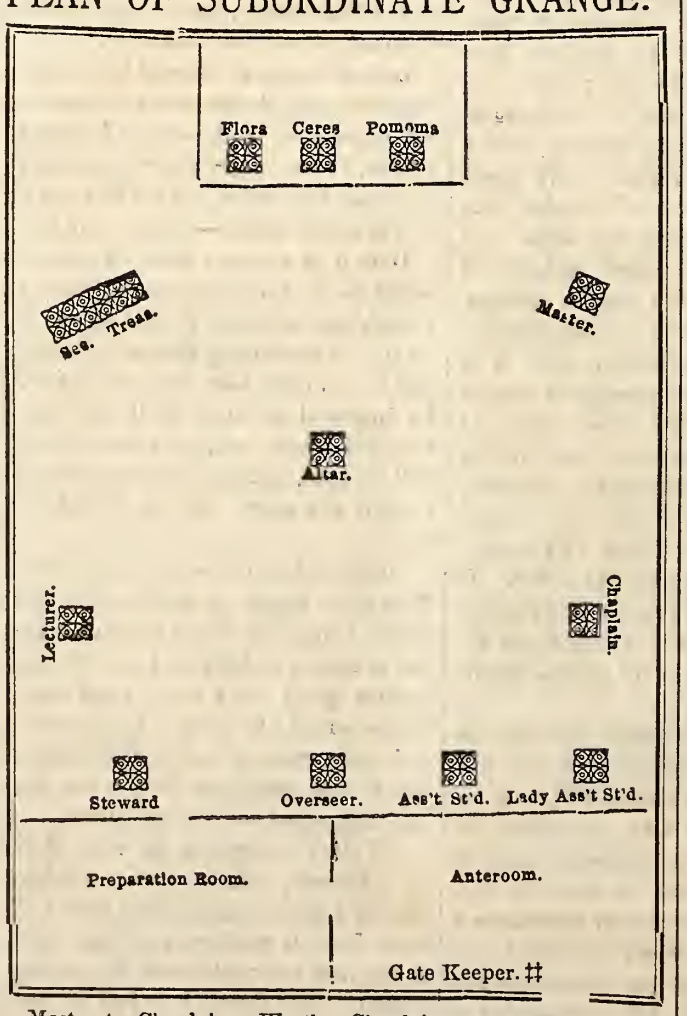
"Overseer to Master:—Worthy Master, we find all present are correct."

Those present are required to give the password Husbandman, the fourth degree password, for men, and Matron, the fourth degree pass-word for women, and the annual password (for 1874 Farming,) to the Assistant Steward and Lady Assistant Steward as they pass around the hall.



Master to Steward:—Worthy Steward, are the gates properly guarded?

[Steward examines and finds Gate Keeper at his post.]

Steward to Master:—They are, Worthy Master.

Master to Steward:—Worthy Steward, inform the gate keeper hat we are now at work.

PLAN OF SUBORDINATE GRANGE.

Master to Chaplain:—Worthy Chaplain, as Laborers under the great Master of the Universe, let us bow in prayer. [Calls up.] (Three raps call up.)

PRAYER.

Almighty Father, Maker of Heaven and Earth and Giver of all good, we return our heartfelt thanks to Thee that we are permitted again to meet each other here for work in this glorious cause. Endow us with prudence and wisdom in our counsels as a body, that our work may be good and acceptable in Thy sight, and that our labors may be blessed with a liberal harvest; and when we are called to lay down our implements on earth, may we enter the paradise not made with hands eternal in the Heavens, and receive that welcome pla udit, Well done, good and faithful servants. We beseech Thee to bless the officers of this Grange, and the laborers therein; be with all connected with the order, from the highest to the lowest degree, and grant it prosperity. We ask all in Thy Holy name. (All respond) Amen.

OPENING SONG.

"O, come, come away,
From labor now reposing,
Let busy care awhile forbear,
O, come, come away," etc.

Master to Patrons:—Patrons, you will now assist me in opening the Grange. (The Master gives the signs of the Four Degrees taken in Subordinate Granges beginning with the first and so on to the last, and is responded to by all the members present.)

Master to the Patrons:—Patrons, I now declare the Grange open in the fourth degree. [Calls down.] (Two raps call down.)

ORDER OF BUSINESS FOR REGULAR MEETINGS IN FOURTH DEGREE.

1. Opening the Grange.
2. Reading the minutes of last meeting.
3. Reports of Committee on Candidates.
4. Balloting for candidates.
5. Proposals for membership.
6. Is any member sick or in distress?
7. Reports of Standing Committees.
8. Reports of Special Committees.
9. Bills and accounts.
10. Unfinished business.
11. New business.
12. Suggestions for the good of the order.
13. Conferring of Degrees.
14. Receipts of evening announced.
15. Closing.

"At special meetings for conferring degrees, open the Grange, and then omit all from 2 to 12 inclusive and commence at thirteen." (Passing in or out of the hall while candidates are on the floor should be avoided.)

Remarks. It is not only my purpose to give an expose of the Grange, but also to show its relationship to other and higher secret orders, and to show that it is Hierarchal, or claims to be a religious order and as such is a rival, and an opponent of the Christian religion. It is seen in the beginning, to have its prayers. The prayers are offered by the chaplain who may or may not be a professor of the Christian religion. Connection with the order qualifies a man for the office of Chaplain, without any regard, whatever, to former character; hence Universalists, Deists or Infidels will stand as good a chance for election to the office of Chaplain in the Order as any other class of men; and are nearly as often put into the office as professors of the Christian religion. Prayer is offered for the officers of the Grange and laborers therein—i. e., the members, and when they, the officers and members, lay down their implements (Regalia, Plow, Spade, Harrow, &c., &c.,) on earth they are to meet in the paradise above. Or, as is generally used by the lodge, The Grand Grange above. This they expect without any atonement for that sin through Christ as will be seen further on.

INITIATION.

FIRST OR LABORER DEGREE.

The candidates are taken into preparation room, blindfolded and conducted by Assistant Steward to the gate. Assistant Steward signals to the lodge by rapping at the door or inner gate of preparation room that the candidates are ready.

If two or more candidates are initiated at the same time they walk single file placing the left hand on the left shoulder of the one in front.

Steward to Overseer:—Worthy Overseer, a signal at the gate.

Overseer to Steward:—See who approaches.

Steward to Assistant Steward:—Who comes?

Assistant Steward to Steward:—Men seeking employment.

Steward to Assistant Steward:—Are they unconstrained and willing?

Assistant Steward to Steward:—They are.

Steward to Assistant Steward:—Have they been tried and found worthy and honest?

Assistant Steward to Steward:—They have.

Steward to Assistant Steward:—What token do they present?

Assistant Steward to Steward:—The signet of nature's nobleman.

Steward to Assistant Steward:—You will tarry here while I ascertain our Worthy Overseer's pleasure.

Steward to Overseer:—Worthy Overseer the alarm comes from strangers seeking employment.

Overseer to Steward:—Know you who they are?

Steward to Overseer:—I do; men, worthy and well qualified.

Overseer to Steward:—Admit them for examination.

Steward to Candidates:—[Opens door.] It is the pleasure of our Worthy Overseer that you enter the field with this caution: use discretion, respectfully obey all orders, and should work be assigned you, labor with diligence.

Assistant Steward to Steward:—Let our future conduct prove us.

One or two verses of the following song are sung while the Assistant Steward with candidates pass once around the hall, stopping the second time around at Lecturer.

SONG.

1. Come Patrons assembled to bow at our shrine,
Who walk by the plow, or take pride in the vine,
While traveling in love on the green lawn of time,
Sweet hope shall light on to a far better clime, etc.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

A HISTORY OF THE REFORM AGAINST SECRET SOCIETIES.

Political Position.

The National Christian Association does not ignore politics, but seeks to elevate and purify it by all honorable methods. The following is a revised copy of the platform adopted by their Mass Political Convention in 1872. In that year a full ticket of National officers and in Illinois State officers was nominated. Some local tickets in different States have been elected.

PREAMBLE.

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a new party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable;

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of Jesuitism, of priestcraft, or of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors that civil government, though ordained of God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and therefore that all have equal civil rights, while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion, or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties, as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot, and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins, and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare.

We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and, while we consider government without God as mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes:

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen government, and this is fact should be recognized in its organic law.

2. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That charters of Masonic lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures must be withdrawn and their oaths suppressed.

5. That all secret lodges, orders or clans, affecting independence of our Government and practically claiming that their principles and rules are more sacred and binding than the laws of the land, are treasonable, dangerous and destructive of our liberties, legislatures and courts.

6. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

7. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

8. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make them mere adepts and experts; therefore the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

9. That land and other monopolies should be discountenanced; and that, sympathizing with the industrial masses in their effort to escape the extortion of secret rings, we regret to see them controlled and led, through the intrigues of designing men, in the lodge and grange, by the very power against which they struggle.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. That reciprocal free-trade is the true basis of commercial interchange among nations, and that a gradual approach towards free competition in all the marts of trade is the true policy on the tariff question.

12. And finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of Electoral Colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

The platform, please notice, contains the following live issues: The abolition of secret societies, the prohibition and sale of intoxicating drinks, a just recognition of the Bible and the Sabbath, and the election of President and Vice-president of the United States by direct vote of the people.

Questions for Friends of the Anti-masonic Reform to Answer.

Please obtain as accurate answers to the following questions as possible, and send them to the Corresponding Secretary, National Christian Association, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, as soon as possible.

How many officers are elected by ballot in your county?

How many of these are Masons?

How many have adhering Masons for pastors?

How many churches are there in your county?

How many openly oppose Masonry and withdraw fellowship from Masons?

How many public schools (common, graded, or high) are there in your county?

How many men connected with them as teachers or trustees are adhering Masons?

How many Masons are associated with other literary institutions, (supported by private contributions and tuition bills) in your county?

How many members have you in your anti-secret society organization?

How many meetings has it held during the year ending April 1st, 1875?

What has your society done to promote the overthrow of secret societies in the past?

How much will you raise of the $30,000 required to secure a new publishing house?

How much money have you used in carrying on the work during the past year?

How many delegates do you expect to send to the Pittsburgh Convention meeting, the 8th of next June?

Please send their names and addresses, together with an outline of the work you propose to do next year; suggestions to the National Association on any subject that you consider of importance in the promotion of our work, and also a copy of your constitution to

C. A. BLANCHARD,
Corresponding Secretary N. C. A.,
13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

News of the Week.

Congress.

The XLIII. Congress closed on Thursday last, having spent a week of hard work. The little left undone will not require an extra session, although the President hast kept the Senate to consider a new treaty with Spain, the Hawaian treaty, etc. The Civil Rights bill passed both Houses. The bill for the payment of extra bounties passed the Senate, and an opening made for the escape of from 20 to 60 millions from the Treasury. In view of the probability that the Government will not have enough money in hand to meet the claims thus created, it was necessary to make special provision for raising it by borrowing. This measure was carried by Logan to a tie vote which Wilson decided. Hope of the next Presidency probably had much to do with it. The President refused at the last to sign the bill. The House by a vote of 113 to 65, concurred in the Senate amendmentto the Postal Appropriation bill partially restoring the franking privilege, allowing free transmission through the mails of agricultural reports and seeds, and all public documents now printed; but this privilege must cease on the 1st of December, 1875. Other bills of importance were the Revenue bill increasing the tax on whisky from 70 to 90 cts. per gallon, adding to the tariff on sugar 25 cents and 10 per cent. to all manufactured goods. This is expected to increse the revenue $30,000,000. but it will cost the people several times that sum. The House agreed on the admission of Colorado in 1877; New Mexico was rejected. The River and Harbor bill appropriates $6,600,000 and $8,000,000 more conditionally. All the regular appropriation bills for army, navy, fortifications, the Departments, Civil Service, consular and diplomatic service, Post-office, etc., were passed. The House passed the recommendations of the Louisiana committee, recognizing Kellogg as governor and reinstating the five Democratic members of the Legislature who were fraudently admitted by a faction and ejected by the troops; thus giving both parties a chance. The Senate has yet to act on the proposition. The Force bill for the regulation of Southern affairs passed the House after several amendments, but was smothered in the Senate. The Democrats are reported to have wished it passed for the sake of political capital, although they bitterly opposed it in the House. A great deal of business was hurried through during the last few days; appropriations were hastily voted. How many "grabs" will result may not yet be known, but so many were voting for the last time in Congress that it is feared they were more reckless than wise for the interests of the country.

—The Senate convened in extra session on Friday the 5th, Vice-president Wilson in the chair: Twenty-two new Senators were sworn in, Andrew Johnson and Hannibal Hamlin among them.

General.

The Nebraska Aid Society have, according to an Omaha dispatch, about finished clothing and feeding the people in the districts infested by the grasshoppers, and are now preparing to furnish them with seed. Three hundred thousand acres are to be supplied, and the society have just started solicitors in Iowa, Illinois, and the surrounding country, for the purpose of collecting grains. General Bristin has been sent to California. The State appropriations will not furnish 50,000 acres, and the aid voted by the Government is only available for food. Many of the railroads furnish free transportation.

Fourteen inches of snow fell at St. Louis last week Wednesday, twelve inches in Jefferson City, and eight at Kansas City. The storm extended to the Arkansas line. Southern trains are snowbound at Mineral Point. The railroads in Missouri were completely blockaded, and trains are behind time. Business is almost entirely suspended, and there are reports of much suffering among exposed families. Absolute want continues to stare hundreds of thrifty farmers in the face in a number of the western counties of Missouri. There is appalling destitution. People are reported as actually starving and appeal for help.

Foreign.

The French National Assembly has passed a bill which seemingly assures, at a not far distant date, the institution of a Constitutional Republic. This measure is for the organization of the public powers and was passed by a vote of 436 against 262, its sections having previously been adopted by successive votes, some of which severely tested the strength of the party coalition between the right and left. The bill provides for the election of an Upper House or Senate. The Legitimists and Bonapartists threw every obstacle in the way of the majority.——On the 15th of January it snowed for two hours at Bellianeb, in Upper Egypt—something that it is supposed never happened there before.——Intelligence has been received in London that the steamship Hong-Kong, from London for Japan, foundered off the Island of Abd-El-Curia in the Indian Ocean. Nineteen persons are reported saved, six are known to have been drowned and eighteen are missing.——A correspondent at Berlin reports that the German government has received a memoral from the Protestant clergy of Spain complaining that liberty of worship is threatened. Similar memorials has been forwarded to other Protestant powers in Europe and to the United States. The memorial asks the intercession of the Protestant powers in behalf of those who, once priests, embraced reformed religion and married while the Republic was in existence, as by a recent decree such marriages have been declared null and void.——The passage of a bill in the German Parliament withdrawing State endowments from Catholic clergy is considered secure. It is believed that a test oath will be required of all Catholics in the civil service.

Temperance.

THE POWER OF REFLECTION.—The most extraordinary thing in connection with gin palaces, says a London paper, notwithstanding every known and unknown ornament, is the absence of mirrors. This may be accounted for by the fact that publicans are well aware that, if a drunkard could only see himself, he would immediately turn away in horror from the glass.

PROF. COOK of Bennett Medical College in this city is a great smoker, but he lately warned his students against the habit. The poisonous nicotine absorbed into the system from tobacco, he said, frequently causes death. He had known men who had killed themselves in five years by the habit of smoking. Every man who takes it up does so at peril of his life.

Mr. Moody on the "Infernal Stuff."

The Irish Temperance Banner gives an account of a great ministerial convention held in the Exhibition Palace, Dublin, recently, when Mr. Moody of Chicago, who was answering questions from the 'Question Drawer," said:

"More than half of the questions that have been sent in are about intemperance. With regard to this I have an idea that the people of Dublin have found out where I stand by this time. I stand upon the teetotal platform fair and square. (Hear, hear.) I find that I can do a day's work without alcoholic stimulants. A great many people say they must have wine to stimulate them. I say the best stimulus is the Word of God. During the American war a publican offered wine to a huge R publican soldier, but the latter said no, he was a teetotaler. 'But,' said the publican, 'you are in the army now, and you can't get on without it.' The soldier brought out a grand old Bible from under his bosom and said, 'That's all the stimulus I want.' It would be a glorious day for Ireland if you could just banish the stuff. A lady said, the other day, that it was too strong a word for me to have used when I called it 'infernal;' but I can't help it when I see the hellish work it is doing. I believe that the greatest curse that Ireland has is whisky, and I wish that we could sweep it away. The work must begin at the House of God. Think that it is destroying so many young men that are the flower of our land! We are told that 100,000 men in the United Kingdom are drunkards. Only think of that. Imagine that army walking tramp, tramp, along the way down to death. God's Word says that no 'drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of heaven.' A man preached against me because I called wine 'infernal' He said, 'How dare Mr. Moody stand up and call that which Christ made infernal?' I made inquiries about that man since, and found that he had three sons, all of them were drunkards—every one of them. (Sensation.) Two of them were banished to Australia; and yet that man had dared to stand up in his pulpit and defend the infernal stuff. (Hear, hear.) May God give us light on the question! (Amen.) It is impossible to describe the effect of these brave and noble words. Ten thousand persons were present and for the first time in the whole course of the proceedings a burst of applause rang from every part of the house, showing the deep chord had been touched.

Facts and Figures.

—The mayor of Philadelphia, speaking of the vicious books and papers which fill the intellects of so many youth with dangerous ideas, says he could rid the jails of two-thirds of the juvenile criminals in the next year if he could banish certain plays from the boards of the variety theatres and put certain books out of print.

—The original manuscript copy of the Declaration of Independence, which has hung in the Patent Office for many years, is fast fading away. A correspondent writes from Washington to the New York Post that unless means are taken to restore the writing, not a vestige will remain by the time of our centennial.

—An eastern statistician finds that the total shipment of breadstuffs from this country during 1872–3 amounted in value to $98 313,599, and in 1873–4 to $160,985.421, an increase of $63,-000 000. The exports of provisions show no increase, and in the value of cotton exports there was a falling off of $15 000,000. Tobacco increased in value $8,000,000, and petroleum held its own. Imports were reduced $68,000,000, and the total excess of the exports of 1874 over those of the previous year were about $45,000,000.

—The privilege which every American citizen is supposed to enjoy of depositing a secret ballot at all elections, has been nullified by a practice which has grown up in Illinois, at least, of the clerks of election placing the same number on the ballot as is recorded opposite the name of the voter on the poll list. A case came before Judge Rogers of the Circuit Court, recently, and the Judge gave it as his decision that "he had no doubt but that the ballot was intended to be secret, and that the statute which compelled the numbering the ballot was void. The history of the ballot, our traditions, and the common understanding of the people, all justified him in the conclusion that the term was used in the Constitution of Illinois to designate a secret mode of voting, and to thus secure freedom of action to the voter, and such was the understanding in other States having similar Constitutions. The same question arose in Indiana, and the Supreme Court held the numbering to be unconstitutional and void."

In a late paper in Blackwood's Magazine, which discusses "Decorations,"—that is, the stars, crosses, and ribbons bestowed by Royalty upon distinguished personages,—the writer states that there are now about 120 orders in existence. Some of these are quite modern, while others have come down from the days of Chivalry; a portion of them are exclusive, and others embrace a respectable population. Only thirteen orders are conferred upon women. In France, 8,000 natives hold foreign crosses, while the Legion of Honor is possessed by 4,000 strangers. About 55,000 gentlemen in Europe have decorations of one order or another. In the early history of our own country, there was an attempt made to establish a military order, under the title of "The Society of the Cincinnati." Gen. Knox was the founder, and Washington was a member; but Adams and Jefferson were vehemently opposed to it, fearing, with others, that it would eventuate in military aristocracy. It still has a feeble existence, but the most grateful service it has ever performed was giving a unique and euphoneous name to the great Porkopolis of Ohio.

ANTI-MASONIC BOOKS,

(Not our own Publications.)

For Sale by EZRA A. COOK & CO

18 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

[FOR CATALOGUE OF PUBLICATIONS OF EZRA A. COOK & CO., See page 15.]

All books sent post paid, on receipt of retail price, but BOOKS SENT BY MAIL ARE NOT AT OUR RISK.

Books ordered by express are sold at 10 per cent. discount and SENT AT OUR RISK. Party ordering must pay express charges.

Elder Stearns' Books.

Stearns' Inquiry Into the Nature and Tendency of Masonry

With an Appendix.

SEVENTH EDITION.

338 Pages, in Cloth.....60 cents.
" " " Paper.....40 "

Stearns' Letters on Masonry.

Showing the antagonism between Freemasonry and the Christian Religion.
Price, 30 cents.

Stearns' Review of Two Masonic Addresses.

In this scathing review the lying pretentions of the order are clearly shown.
Price, 10 cents.

Levington's Key to Masonry.

This is Rev. Mr. Levington's last, and in the judgment of its author, best work on Masonry. The contents of the first chapter are as follows: "Commencement and growth of Speculative or Symbolic Freemasonry—A table showing the thing at a glance—The use that the Atheists made of it—Identical with Illuminism—Its connection with the Freuch Revolution, and with the Irish Rebellion—The action of the British Parliament with regard to it—Proofs of its diabolical purposes—Its introduction, doings, progress and designs in the United States."

The contents of the Eleventh chapter are thus startling:

"Knights of the Golden Circle—Graphic account of them by a seceding Knight, and remarks thereon, showing the identity of the order with Masonry—Quotations from Sir Walter Scott."

This work is thrilling in statement, and powerful in argument. 425 pages,
Price, $1.35.

Light on Freemasonry,

BY ELDER D. BERNARD,

TO WHICH IS APPENDED A

Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship by a Member of the Craft.

The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. Price $2.00

The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages in paper cover, will be sent post paid on receipt of $1.

MASONRY A WORK OF DARKNESS

ADVERSE TO CHRISTIANITY,

And Inimical to a Republican Government
BY REV. LEBBEUS ARMSTRONG,
(Presbyterian.)

A Seceding Mason of 21 degrees.

This is a very telling work and no honest man that reads it will think of joining the lodge.
PRICE, 20 cents each; $1.75 per doz., post paid

Walsh's Review of Freemasonry

REVISED EDITION,

Is a Scholarly Review of the Institution, by REV JNO. T. WALSH.

Price 25 cts.

Finney on Masonry.

BOUND IN CLOTH, PRICE $1,00,

CHEAP EDITION,

Twenty-five dollars per hundred, by express and not less than 25 copies at that rate,

BY MAIL, POST-PAID:

Per doz.....$3 75.
Single copy,.....35 c.

THIRTEEN REASONS
Why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

BY
REV. ROBERT ARMSTRONG.

The author states his reason clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the Lodge.

Single copy, by mail post paid.....05
Per doz., " " 50
" 100, express charges extra,.....3 50

Masonic Books,

FOR SALE AT THE CYNOSURE OFFICE.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and blisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

Allyn's Ritual of Masonry,

Illustrated by a large number of engravings, and ontaining a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, Orange nd Odd-fellows' societies. Price, $5.00.

Mackey's Masonic Ritualist;

OR

MONITORIAL INSTRUCTION BOOK

BY ALBERT G. MACKEY,

'Past General High Priest of the General Grand Chapter of the United States, Knight of the Eagle and Pelican, Prince of Mercy," Etc. Etc.
Price, $1 75

Mackey's Lexicon of Freemasonry,

Containing a Definition of Terms, Notices of its History, Traditions and Antiquities, and an account of all the Rites and Mysteries of the Ancient World. 12 mo. 526 pages, $3 00.

MACKEY'S MANUAL OF THE LODGE,

OR

Monitorial Instructions in the Degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft, and Master Mason; with Ceremonies relating to Installations, Dedications, Consecrations, Laying of Corner-stones &c. Price, $2 00,
Paper Covers 2.00.

MACKEY'S TEXT BOOK

OF

MASONIC JURISPRUDENCE.

Illustrating the Laws of Freemasonry, both written and unwritten.

This is the Great Law Book of Freemasonry 570 pages, Price, $2.50

Webb's Monitor of Freemasonry,

LARGE EDITION, WITH NOTES

By ROB. HORRIS, Price, $1.50.
Pocket Edition, 75 cts.

SICKELS' FREEMASON'S MONITOR.

Containing the Degrees of Freemasonry embraced in the Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery, embellished with nearly 300 symbolic Illustrations. Together with Tactics and drill of Masonic Knighthood. Also, forms of Masonic Documents, Notes, Songs, Masonic dates, installations, etc. By D. Sickels, 32 mo nck. Price $1.50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry,

A Practical Guide to the Ceremones in the Degrees conferred in Masonic Lodge Chapter, Encampments, etc. Illustrated Edition. In cloth, $1 25; paper, 75 cts.

Chase's Digest of Masonic Law.

Comprises a Complete Code of Regulations, Decisions and Opinions upon Questions of Masonic Jurisprudence. Price, $2 25.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor

Illustrated with Explanatory Engraving. Price $3.50.

Books on Odd Fellowship.

Donaldson's Odd Fellows The Book,

By Pascal Donaldson, D. D.,

GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF NORTHERN N. Y.,

Illustrated with numerous engravings, showing the emblems of the order. A detailed account of the Forms, Ceremonies, Funeral Services and Odes with music, and a complete manual for the guidance of Officers and Lodges. Pocket edition Tuck, $1.50.

Grosh's Manual of Odd Fellowship

BY REV. A. B. GROSH.

Paining the history, defence, principles and government of the order; the instructions of ach degree and duties of every station and office with engravings of the emblems of the orders, etc

Price in Cloth,.....$2 00
" Tuck, abridged edition, 1 50

Descriptive Catalogue of Publications of Ezra A. Cook & Co.

13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

BOOKS.

FREEMASONRY EXPOSED,

by CAP'T. WILLIAM MORGAN.

THE GENUINE OLD MORGAN BOOK:—republished with engravings showing the Lodge Room, Dress of candidates, Signs, Due Guards, Grips, Etc.

This revelation is so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. Thousands have testified to the correctness of the revelation and this book therefore sells very rapidly.

Price 25 cents.

Per Doz. Post Paid..... $2.00
Per hundred by express, (express charges extra.).....$10.00

THE BROKEN SEAL.

OR PERSONAL REMINISCENCES OF THE ABDUCTION AND MURDER OF Wm. MORGAN,

By SAMUEL D. GREENE,

Price in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.
In Paper Covers per Doz. Post paid.....$4 50
" per hundred by express (ex. charges extra $25.00
That the book is one of great interest and value is shown by the following

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"A MASONIC REVELATION.—Mr. Samuel D. Greene is a venerable gentleman of the highest respectability, whose statements seem to be worthy of full credence. The Broken Seal: or, Personal Reminiscences of the Morgan Abduction and Murder, is the title of a book of some three hundred pages just issued by him, purporting to give a full and accurate account, from personal knowledge, of the Morgan 'abduction,' and other masonic matters which made such an excitement in this country, now almost half a century ago."—Congregationalist and Recorder, Boston.

"'FREEMASONRY DEVELOPED.'—'The Broken Seal: or, Personal Reminiscences of the Morgan Abduction and Murder,' is the title of a volume written and just published by Samuel D. Greene, of Boston. The author belonged to the same lodge with Morgan, and professes to know all about that event which made such a sensation throughout the country forty years ago. The book contains the confession of Morgan's murderer, and much more curious and interesting matter, including the ceremony of initiation, etc. The author opposes Freemasonry as inimical to good government, to society, and to the Church; and the story that he here tells will make a sensation in the order, if its statements are really what they purport to be. If Freemasonry is what it is supposed by many to be, in its obligations, the author of this book must be a bold man."—Daily Herald, Boston.

"We are acquainted with Mr. Greene, and have no doubt that his account is entirely reliable, and of great historic and moral interest. Capt. Wm. Morgan was Mr. Greene's neighbor in Batavia, N. Y., and a member of the same lodge with him at the time of the great excitement in 1826. The titles to these chapters are sufficiently exciting to give the book a large sale:—'The Storm Gathering;' "Abduction of Morgan;" "Attempted Abduction of Miller and his Rescue;" "What became of Morgan;" "What Morgan Actually Revealed;" "Confession of the Murderer;" "Allegations against Freemasonry, etc."—Boston Daily News.

History of The Abduction and Murder of Cap't. Wm. Morgan,

As prepared by Seven Committees of Citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan.

This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons, abducted and Murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offence than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife, and no candid person after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable FREEMASONS. in the Empire State, with others were concerned in this crime.

Single Copy, post Paid,... ..... 25 cents.
Per doz. " ..... $2,00.
Per 100, Express Charges Extra,..... 10.00.

Valance's Confession of The Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.

This confession of Henry L. Valance, one of the three Freemasons who drowned Morgan in the Niagara River, was taken from the lips of the dying man by Dr. John C. Emery, of Racine County, Wisconsin in 1848; The confession bears clear evidence of truthfulness.

Single copy, post paid,..... 20 cents.
Per doz. " ..... $1.50.
Per 100 Express Charges Extra,..... 8.00.

The Mystic Tie or Freemasonry a League with the Devil.

This is an account of the Church Trial of Peter Cook, and wife of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a Reverend Freemason; and their very able defence presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry, is antagonistic to the Christian Religion. Single Copy, post paid,..... 20 cents
Per dozen, post paid..... $1 50
Per hundred Express charges Extra. 9 00

NARRATIVES AND ARGUMENTS,

showing the Conflict of Secret Societies with the Constitution and Laws, of the Union and of the States.

by FRANCIS SEMPLE of Dover, Iowa.

The fact that Secret Societies, interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of Law is here clearly proved. price 20c.

Per dozen, post paid..... $1 75
Per hundred Express charges Extra..... 9 00

The Antimason's Scrap Book,

CONSISTING OF

21 CYNOSURE TRACTS.

In this book are the views of more than a Score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of Secret Societies.

The dangerous tendency and positive evil of organized Secrecy is here shown by the most varied and powerful arguments and illustrations that have ever been given to the public.

Lecturers and others who wish to find the best arguments against the Lodge, should send for this book.

Those who wish to circulate Antimasonic Tracts ought to have the book to select from.

Single Copy, post paid, ...20 cents.
Per Doz. " $1.75
Per 100, Express charges Extra,.....$10.00

ODD FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

A new illustrated exposition of the order. The Signs, Grips, &c. shown by engravings.

Single copy, post paid,.....$ 25
Per Doz., " " 2 00
Per Hundred, Express charges extra,..... 10 00

PHELPS' SECRET SOCIETIES Ancient and Modern.

A NEW BOOK OF GREAT INTEREST.

This work is particularly commended to the attention of Officers of The Army and Navy, The Bench and The Clergy.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

"THE ANTIQUITY OF SECRET SOCIETIES, THE LIFE OF JULIAN, THE ELEUSINIAN MYSTERIES, THE ORIGIN OF MASONRY, WAS WASHINGTON A MASON? FILMORE'S AND WEBSTER'S DEFERENCE TO MASONRY, A BRIEF OUTLINE OF THE PROGRESS OF MASONRY IN THE UNITED STATES, THE TAMMANY RING, MASONIC BENEVOLENCE, THE USES OF MASONRY, AN ILLUSTRATION, THE CONCLUSION."

Single Copy, Post Paid..... 5c
Per Doz " " " $4 75
Per Hundred, Express Charges Extra.....$33 00

MINUTES OF THE SYRACUSE CONVENTION,

Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. D. Greene, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. S. D. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. Unpublished Reminiscences of the Morgan Times, by Elder David Bernard; Recollections of the Morgan Trials, as related by Victory Birdseye, Esq., and presented by his daughter, Mrs. C. B. Miller; Secretary's report; roll of delegates; songs of Mr. G. A. Clark, paper by Enoch Honeywell; Constitution N. C. A.; reports of committees, and a report of the political meeting.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion.

A clear cutting argument against the Lodge, from a Christian stand point.

Single Copy.....$ 05
Per 100..... 3 00

SERMON ON MASONRY,

BY REV. W. P. M'NARY,

Pastor United Presbyterian Church, Bloomington, Ind.

This is a very clear, thorough, candid and remarkably concise Scriptural argument on the character of Freemasonry.

Single Copy, Post Paid,..... 5
Per Doz,..... 50
Per Hundred, Express Charges Extra.....$3 00

COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES.

Their Customs, Character and the Efforts for their Suppression.

BY H. L. KELLOGG.

Containing the opinion of many rominent College Presidents, and others. and a FULL ACCOUNT OF THE MURDER OF MORTIMER LEGGETT

Single Copy, post paid.....$ 25
per Doz " " 2 50
per 100 Express charges extra..... 15 00

ANTIMASONIC TRACTS.

WE NOW HAVE 22 ENGLISH TRACTS. ONE GERMAN, AND ONE SWEEDISH These tracts are sold at the rate of $1.00 per 1000 pages.

A Tract Fund for the Free Distribution of Tracts.

HAS BEEN SECURED AND WE HOPE WILL NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fund a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE.

Many of our most earnest workers in this cause of God are poor men, who would be glad to circulate thousands of pages of Antimasonic literature if they could have them free.

SHALL WE NOT HAVE AN INEXHAUSTIBLE TRACT FUND?

"THE ANTI-MASONS SCRAP BOOK."

Contains our 21 Cynosure Tracts, bound together, price 20 cents. See advertisement.

Address EZRA A. COOK & Co.,

13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

TRACT NO. 1:

HISTORY OF MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT J. BLANCHARD, OF WHEATON COLLEGE.

This is now published in three tracts of four pages each. Price of each, 50 cents per 100; $4 per 1000.

TRACT No. 1, PART FIRST—Shows the origin of Speculative Freemasonry, and is entiled "HISTORY OF MASONRY."

TRACT No. 1, PART SECOND—Is entitled "DESPOTIC CHARACTER OF FREEMASONRY"

TRACT No. 1, PART THIRD—Is entitled "FREEMASONRY A CHRIST-EXCLUDING RELIGION."

TRACT NO. 1, IN SWEDISH;

translated by Prof. A. R. CERVIN. A 15-page tract at $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 2:

MASONIC MURDER,

By REV. J. R. BAIRD, of Pleasantville, Pa., a seceding Mason who has taken 17 degrees. A 2 page tract at 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 3:

SECRETS OF MASONRY,

BY ELI TAPLEY.

This is a 4-page Illustrated Tract, showing the signs, grips and pass-words, of the first three degrees. 50 cents per 100, or $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 4:

GRAND! GREAT GRAND!!

BY PHILO CARPENTER.

This is a 2-page tract, calling the attention of the public to the despotic and ridiculous titles of Freemasonry. Price 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1,000.

TRACT. NO. 5:

Extracts From Masonic Oaths and Penalties, as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.

This tract is a reprint of a tract published in 1834, and is a very weighty document. A 4-page tract at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 6:

Hon. John Quincy Adams' Letter.

Giving His and His Father's Opinion of Freemasonry (1831.);

AND

Hon. James Madison's Letter,

Giving His Opinion of Freemasonry (1832).

Both of these letters, in one 4-page tract, at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 7:

SATAN'S CABLE-TOW.

A 4-page tract. This is a careful analysis of the character of Masonic oaths, and shows them to be most blasphemous and unchristian; and the Masonic Cable Tow is clearly shown to be the Cable Tow by which Satan is leading thousands to eternal death. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 8:

Is a 2-page double tract, "ILLUSTRATED." The first page represents a Mason proclaiming the wonderful wisdom and benevolence of the order, with an article below, entitled "Freemasonry is only 152 Years Old," and gives the time and place of its birth.

The second side is entitled, "Murder and Treason not Excepted," and shows that the Masonic order is treasonable in its constitution, and is both anti-Republican and anti-Christian. Price 25 cents per 100; $2 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 9, ILLUSTRATED:

FREEMASONRY IN THE CHURCH.

Copy of a petition for the higher degrees of Freemasonry, in which Blasphemous and Despotic Titles are enumerated and prayed for. The Copy was printed for the use of "Occidental Sovereign Consistory S. P. R. S.," 32d degree—a Chicago Lodge—and was ordered by a deacon of a Christian Church who is Grand Orator of the Grand Lodge of Ill.

TRACT NO. 10:

CHARACTER AND SYMBOLS OF FREEMASONRY.

A 2-page tract, (ILLUSTRATED) by its "Grand Secretaries, Grand Lecturers, Perfect Prince Freemasons, Grand Inspector, Inquisitor Commanders, Grand High Priests," etc. The wonderful symbolical meaning of "the Cable Tow," "the Square and Compass," "the Lamb Skin, or white Apron," and "the Common Gavel," are given in the exact words of the highest Masonic authority. 25 cents per 100 or $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 11;

Address of Niagara County Association, New York,

TO THE PUBLIC;

Concerning the Morgan Murder, and the character of Freemasonry, as shown by this and other Masonic murders. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 12:

JUDGE WHITNEY AND MASONRY.

This tract contains a condensed account of Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois, on charge of unmasonic conduct in bringing Samuel L. Keith the murderer of Ellen Slade, and a member of his Lodge, to justice, with Judge Whitney's subsequent renunciation of Masonry.

An 8-page tract, $1.00 per 100; $8.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 13:

DR. NATHANIEL COLVER ON MASONRY,

and

HOWARD CROSBY, D. D.,

Chancellor of the University of New York, on SECRET SOCIETIES. A double 2-page tract 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 14:

GRAND LODGE MASONRY.

ITS RELATION TO CIVIL GOVERNMENT AND THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION.

Opening address before the Monmouth Convention, by PRES. J. BLANCHARD of WHEATON COLLEGE. This is a 16-page tract at $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 15:

MASONIC OATHS NULL AND VOID.

A clear and conclusive argument proving the invalidity of any oath or obligation to do evil. By REV. I. A. HART, Secretary National Christian Association. Published by special order of the Association. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 16:

HON. SETH M. GATES ON FREEMASONRY.

PROOF THAT THE INSTITUTION THAT MURDERED MORGAN IS UNCHANGED IN CHARACTER

This is a letter to the Monmouth Convention by Hon. Seth M. Gates who was Deputy Sheriff of Genesee County, and also Secretary of the Leroy Lodge at the time of Morgan's Abduction. A 4-page tract, 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 17:

Origin, Obligations and Expenses of The Grange,

WITH A CONSTITUTION OF A FARMERS' CLUB.

This little tract ought to be put into the hands of every Farmer in the United States. Four-page tract, 50 cents per 100; $4 00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 18:

HON. WM. H. SEWARD ON SECRET SOCIETIES.

Extracts from a Speech on Know-Nothingism in the U. S. Senate in 1855. The testimony of JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, MILLARD FILLMORE, CHIEF JUSTIC MARSHALL and others, is added.

A 2-page tract, 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO, 19.

BRICKS FOR MASONS TO LAY.

WASHINGTON, MADISON, MARSHALL, RUSH, HANCOCK, ADAMS AND WEBSTER, give brief clear testimony against the Lodge A 2-page tract 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 20:

OBJECTIONS TO MASONRY.

By A SECEDING MASON, of Cornton, Vermont.

This tract contains many strong arguments against the Lodge drawn from personal experience, observation and study of its character. A 4-page tract at 50 cents per 100; $1.00 per 1,000.

TRACT NO. 21:

MASONIC CHASTITY.

BY EMMA A. WALLACE,

The author, by wonderfully clear illustration and argument, shows the terribly corrupt nature of Freemasonry. No true woman who reads this will ever speak with approbation of this institution A 4-page tract 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

GERMAN CYNOSURE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason

By REV. A. GROLE, Pastor, German M. E. Church,

WORCESTER, MASS.

This is our first German tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. Price 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

ENOCH HONEYWELL'S TRACT

TO THE YOUNG MEN OE AMERICA. Postage, 3 cents per 100 Tracts. Tracts Free

Farm and Garden.

DOING MUCH.—Many persons seem to be always in a hurry, and never accomplish much; others never to be hurried, and yet do a very great deal. If you have fifty letters to answer, don't waste time in looking over to find which one should be noticed first; answer the one you first lay your hands on, and then go through the whole pile. Some begin a thing and leave it partially completed, and hurry off to something else. A better plan is to complete whatever you undertake before you leave it, and be thorough in everything; it is the going back from one thing to another that wastes valuable time. Another thing: deliberate workers are those who accomplish the most work in a given time and are less tired at the end of the day than many who have not accomplished half so much; the hurried worker has often to do his work twice over, and even then it is seldom done in the best manner, either as to neatness or durability. It is the deliberate and measured expenditure of strength which invigorates the constitution and builds up the health; multitudes of firemen have found an early death, while the plough boy lives healthily and lives long, going down to his grave beyond threescore and ten.—Hall's Journal of Health.

GIRLS KEEP FARM ACCOUNTS.—In these days several farmers have adopted a new idea, that is of having their girls keep the accounts of the farm. First, they are taught to write a fair hand, then to have a knowledge of single entry book-keeping, when a proper set of books is obtained and they go to work. A map is made of the farm, having the fields numbered, and then whatever work is done on a field, or whatever capital invested, the girl is to find out and set down, and the result is that she soon takes a practical interest in affairs, which interest increases as the seasons pass and the crops are gathered, of all which she takes account, both of quantity and quality. The next step with her will be to become possessed of a realizing sense of what farm products cost; and when she sees upon the striking of balances, after a year is gone, or perhaps two years, how little is the net profit, she sees that a dollar is worth much more than she had suspected. So she will begin to reflect whether the work has done well or ill, and to consider upon better methods, and in any event she will learn that economy is an indispensable quality in whatever engages human attention.—Dr. Cross.

DON'T BORROW TOOLS.—A farmer can get in no habit worse than that of borrowing tools, and for the following reasons: First, one who owns tools does not like to lend them, and he thinks less of the man who borrows; second, one never will come to learn how to use borrowed tools nor to keep them in order; and third, he who borrows never can be a good farmer. It is true that young men just starting may be allowed to borrow some, but he should not establish the habit; or one may borrow a new implement to see how it works. A man who borrows is not likely to use a tool as carefully as if it were his own, and, as a consequence, he does not do careful nice work. What can a man be thinking about when he borrows a steel plow, keeps it several days or a week, and brings it home, as will be most likely the case, so dull as to be unfit for use? The owner can only take it to the shop, and at his own expense get it sharpened. If a man lends tools to one, there are several neighbors who also will want to borrow; and thus it is, a harrow, for instance, may be going round through the neighborhood all the season. It is every way desirable to cultivate what is called "good neighborhood," but this cannot be done where borrowing is practised.—N. Y. Tribune.

Publishers' Department.

Little three-year-old Mary, looking out of the window the other day on the snow which "assimilates all objects," remarked: "This is very white weather." A just description of the external nature thought we, and of her dear little heart. Is it "white weather" in your soul and in mine? Christ can make our spirits whiter than snow. How much will our readers do to spread that light which will purify and brighten social and moral life this month? You can do this in many ways. The publishers of the Cynosure only wish now to remind you of one. It is a way which would naturally suggest itself to persons who balance the cash account in an enterprise which they feel is approved of God. The enlarged form of the Cynosure has been issued, on the 2d of next April, for a year, and on the 1st of March $878.91 is wanting to put the paper in harmony with the Scriptural precept "Owe no man anything." Hence the one way to make "white weather" in hearts which we now suggest, is to do your best to increase the circulation of the Cynosure and swell its receipts until its debt is canceled; and further yet, until the people are informed on the subjects of which it treats. Until unholy, intriguing, dishonest, clanish, selfish organizations are disorganized by that power which is able to make "whiter than snow."

Read the paper carefully yourself, and then, if possible, obtain new subscriptions. Are there not five, four, three or two persons of your acquaintance whom you can induce to take the paper?

It is only three months before our national meeting in Pittsburgh. Let us have the Cynosure "widely circulated" before that date. Some of our friends intend to do their part towards doubling the subscription list. Do you?

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED DURING WEEK ENDING MARCH 6, FROM—S Akerly, M Ambrose, D Alcott, J L Barlow, M Bishop, J Burtner, W Bloodgood, W Blakeslee, P Bacon, G F Bert, B Barto, A Bredesen W M Beden, J B Crall, D R Crawford, P Carpenter, W C Day, J Finney, H Fry, J M French, J Geiger, S D Green, M A Gasshire, M Gage, M Hawley, T Henderson, W H Harrison, E Howard. Wm. N Hartupe, G H Holstead, J Jones, J A Knepper, J F Kuhlman, C Lamb, W Lee, A Littlefield, T Mohn, N Miner, A C Moffatt, A Muzzy, M McCloughry, Mrs. M B Nichols, J O Robinson, G M Smith, J H Spohn, Syd Shaffer, D B Sherk, A S Tripp, J Thornton, W Vineyard. T Whiffen, F M Waldron, A D Woodworth, J White, E A Wilcox.

TERMS FOR THE CYNOSURE.

$2.00 per annum, in advance.
20c " " " " for postage.

All who canvass for the CYNOSURE are allowed a cash commission of twenty per cent. or twenty-five per cent in books at retail prices, one-half this percentage on renewals, and any one sending $100. for the CYNOSURE during three months, will be entitled to an extra five per cent.

All responsible persons who desire to promote this reform are authorized to act as agents.

CLUB RATES.

No commission is allowed on club rates. Club rates are intended for those who wish to give the commission to subscribers.

Subscriptions may all be sent at one time, or at different times, and in all cases the sender should keep an account of the names and amounts sent.

CLUB RATES, INCLUDING POSTAGE.

Two new subscriptions, one year						$3.90
One new subscription and one renewal, sent ten days before expiration of subscription,						3.90
4 new subs.,	1 year.,	1 copy free to sender,				8.75
5 " "	1 "	1 "	"	"		10.50
6 " "	"	"	"	"		12.25
7 " "	"	"	"	"		14.00
8 " "	"	"	"	"		15.75
10 " "	"	"	"	"		19.50
20 " "	"	"	"	"		36 00
10 Renewals	"	"	"	"		22.00
50 "	"	"	"	"		95.00

Twenty subscriptions for six months count the same as ten for a year.

Postage on the Cynosure.

THE POSTAGE ON THE CYNOSURE MUST BE PAID AT CHICAGO. It is twenty cents a year.

The cost of postage now depends entirely on the size and weight, and therefore some smaller papers charge but fifteen cents; and others about the size of the Cynosure charge twenty-five cents a year for postage.

If the subscription price of the CYNOSURE was $2.50 or $3.00 a year, the price of many religious papers containing no more reading matter, we might afford to pay the postage ourselves, but at $2.00 a year we cannot do this with our present Subscription list.

Therefore let all send the postage, 20 cents a year, 10 cents for half a year with their renewals.

The commission on one new subscription for a year will pay the postage on your own and the new subscriber's paper. We would rather have the postage paid by commissions than in any other way.

When postage is not paid we shall have to shorten the time of subscription sufficiently to pay it.

MARKET REPORTS

CHICAGO, March 8, 1875.

The following are the latest advices:

Grain Wheat—Spring, No. 1	$ 90	91
" No. 2	85½	86½
" No. 3	82¾	83
" Rejected		78
Corn—No. 2	63½	64¼
Rejected	62½	63
Oats—No. 2	52¼	53
Rejected		50½
Rye—No. 2	97	97½
Flour—Winter	4 25	6 50
Spring	3 00	4 50
Hay—Timothy	14 50	18 50
Prairie, "	10 00	13 00
Lard		13
Mess pork, per bbl		18 12½
Butter	23	36
Cheese	10	18
Eggs	25	33
Potatoes, per bus	90	1 10
Broom corn	05½	18
Seeds—Timothy	2 10	2 60
Clover	6 20	6 35
Flax	1 90	2 50
Dressed Hogs	7 70	8 35
Chickens, dressed, per lb	10	14
Turkeys, do. per lb	12	16
HIDES green to dry salted	07½	15
Lumber—Clear	37 00	55 00
Common	11 00	12 00
Lath		2 25
Shingles	1 50	3 25
WOOL—Washed	40	58
Unwashed	27	37
LIVE STOCK Cattle, extra	6 50	7 00
Good to choice	5 25	6 25
Medium	4 75	5 00
Common	3 00	4 50
Hogs	6 25	7 60
Sheep	3 50	6 00
New York Market.
Flour	$ 4 25	8 00
Wheat	1 07	1 31
Corn	84½	85½
Oats	68	70
Rye	94	95
Lard		14
Mess pork		19 25
Butter	15	24
Cheese	12	16
Eggs	36	40

How to Send Money.

Post office orders, checks or drafts on Chicago or towns east of Chicago, and currency by express may be sent at our risk. If it is not possible to send by either of the four ways named, money in a registered letter may be sent at our risk, but it is not as safe.

The date at which subscriptions expire is with each subscriber's name on the address label. Send renewals before this date occurs. Notice if this date is changed to correspond; if not or if the paper fails to come, write without delay.

We discontinue during the first part of each month all subscriptions which expire during the preceding one except such as are ordered continued with a promise to forward the money soon. We do not like to lose a single subscriber and will not remove names simply because the cash is not received promptly, if we understand that the paper is wanted. Address all letters with subscriptions or orders for Books, Tracts and donations to the Tract Fund to EZRA A. COOK & Co., 13 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1	square,	1 insertion,		$2.00
1	square (1 inch deep)	one month		7.00
1	"	2	"	10.00
1	"	3	"	15.00
1	"	6	"	25.00
1	"	12	"	40.00

Discount for Space.

On 2 squares 5 per cent, On 3 squares 10 per cent
On 4 " 15 " " On 5 " 20 "
On ¼ col. 25 per cent On one col. 30 per cent

Agents Wanted!

TO SELL THE PUBLICATIONS OF

EZRA A. COOK & CO.

Liberal Terms Offered.

Capable persons who are in need of pecuniary aid may clear

Handsome Profits,

While at the same time aiding the cause of Reform. Apply to EZRA A. COOK & CO., No. 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

SOMETHING NEW.

A CHART OF MASONRY

Showing the degrees from the first to the thirty-third, entitled

Degrees of Ancient Accepted Scottish Freemasonry,

According to a Manual by Wm. M. Cunningham 33d Degree.

Designed by Rev. P. Stoddard, to explain Freemasonry, as shown by Morgan's Exposition and Richardson's Monitor.

A Neat Lithograph 22x28 Inches.

Single copies finely colored, post paid	$ 75
Per dozen " " " "	5 00
Per 100 " " " " Express charges extra	35 00
Single copy, colored, varnished and mounted postpaid	1 00
Per dozen colored, varnished and mounted, post paid	7 50
Per 100, colored, varnished and mounted, express charges extra	50 00

25 COPIES OR MORE SENT AT THE 100 RATES.

Excelsior Marriage Certificate.

It is decidedly the most BEAUTIFUL, TASTEFUL and SENSIBLE thing of the kind I have ever seen."—Rev. F. G. Hibbard, D. D.

"The most SCRIPTURAL, BEAUTIFUL and APPROPRIATE Marriage Certificate I have ever seen."—Late Rev. H. Mattison, D. D.

"SOMETHING NEW AND BEAUTIFUL, which we pronounce the handsomest thing of the kind we ever laid eyes on."—Meth. Home Journal, Phila.

Contains two Ornamental Ovals, for Photographs

A BEAUTIFUL LITHOGRAPH 14 1-4 by 18 1-4 inches. 25 cts each, $2.25 per doz- $15 per 100.

For Sale by Ezra A. Cook & Co., CHICAGO.

$5 to $20 per day. Agents wanted. All classes of working people of both sexes, young and old, make more money at work for us, in their own localities, during their spare moments, or all the time, than at anything else. We offer employment that will pay handsomely for every hours work. Full particulars, terms, &c., sent free. Send us your address at once. Don't delay. Now is the time. Don't look for work or business elsewhere, until you have learned what we offer. G. STINSON & Co., Portland, Maine.

Advertising: Cheap: Good: Systematic.—All persons who contemplate making contracts with newspapers for the insertion of advertisements, should send 25 cents to Geo. P. Rowell & Co., 41 Park Row, New York, for their PAMPHLET-BOOK (ninety-seventh edition), containing lists of over 2000 newspapers and estimates, showing the cost. Advertisements taken for leading papers in many States at a tremendous reduction from publisher's rates. GET THE BOOK.

NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

"THE LEADING AMERICAN NEWSPAPER."

BEST ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

Daily, $10 a year. Semi-Weekly, $3. Weekly $2.

POSTAGE FREE TO THE SUBSCRIBER. Specimen Copies and Advertising Rates Free. Weekly, in clubs of 30 or more, only $1 postage paid. Address THE TRIBUNE, N. Y.

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

"In Secret Have I Said Nothing."—Jesus Christ.

EZRA A. COOK & CO., PUBLISHERS, NO 13 WABASH AVENUE.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 18, 1875.

VOL. VII., NO. 23 —WHOLE NO. 258. WEEKLY, $2 00 A YEAR.

Contents.

	Page
TOPICS OF THE TIME	1
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
Masonic Descent on Wheaton	8
Poisoning Families	8
An American Cardinal!	8
Notes	9
CONTRIBUTED AND SELECT ARTICLES:
Edwin Booth to the Mansfield Convention	1
The U. P. Presbytery of Philadelphia	2
Masonic Conspiracy and Persecution in the U. B. Church	2
Tobacco	3
REFORM NEWS and NOTICES:
A Good Work begun in Iowa; Jottings from the New York Field; Elder Barlow in Rochester; The Iowa Convention; From the Ohio Agent; From the Wisconsin Agent	4, 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
A Call to Friends in Iowa; From Northwestern Iowa; From Father Finney; Holding to the Testimony; Our Mail; Reform in the National Currency	5,6,9
Conversation on Lotteries for Boys	7
Exposition of the Grange (Continued)	12
History of the Reform against Secret Orders (The Carpenter Donation)	13
THE HOME CIRCLE	10
CHILDREN'S CORNER	11
The Sabbath School	7
Home and Health Hints	14
Farm and Garden	16
Facts and Figures	14
Religious Intelligence	12
News of the Week	13
Publishers' Department	16

Topics of the Time.

There have been found two ways of looking at the Civil Rights bill. One party sees with apprehension the sediment arising as the pool is stirred, and cries out, We fear it is not the right thing—too coercive—these social difficulties will pass away in time—you can't legislate them out of existence. Another beholds only the angel of justice descending to heal the frailties of men. Keepers of public resorts, hotels, restaurants, are raising the loudest outcry from every city against the hungry black man. Fashionable sinners in fashionable churches are shocked at the invasion of their pews; and one legislature at least will defend the sovereign soil of Virginia from the operation of United States law by special enactment. The question is not one of private prejudice, as the fearful and unbelieving suppose, else why is it counted a shameful thing for one black man to sit at table while another, blacker and dirtier, prepares the food and bears it to the guests. But when one class of citizens has been uniformily insulted and tabooed, and the civil authority says that it shall be no longer—that there shall be no more "reserved seats", then it is a matter of simple justice. The nation has long enough been physicked and bled for this hateful negrophobia. If the waters are stirred, let it be tumbled in and be healed.

The action of Congress in the admission of Colorado looks to a change in the management of Indian affairs. When the bill came up for final action in the Senate the clause requiring the people of that territory to relinquish all claim to public and Indian lands was amended by striking out the reference to the Indians. The effect of this vote will be to throw the guardianship of the Indians upon the government of the new State, a decision that cannot be regarded with favor, for several reasons. The present Indian policy is more satisfactory in its results than any yet tried, or likely to be attempted by a new State government; and the general government being answerable to the whole country has more peaceful and humanizing influences to affect its action than Colorado will be likely to average. However, as Colorado will not be fully incorporated into the Union until a lapse of two years, there may be a change in the Indian policy which will make State legislation safest and best.

Atlanta University, an institution founded by the American Missionary Association has been so well conducted as to command the respect of the Georgia Legislature which for several years has voted eight thousand annually to its support, and last year made this grant perpetual. But Governor Smith has learned that the white teachers associate with the ex-slaves, visit them at their houses, sit at the same tables with colored students and inculcate "the mischievous doctrine of social equality" which, he says is distasteful to the majority of the people of Georgia; therefore he asks for a repeal of the grant. Whatever the Legislature may do to soothe the offended dignity of Governor Smith, the secretaries of the Association "make no apology and promise no change" in their liberal and impartial policy toward colored students, whatever may become of the appropriation.

The reports of last week leave no doubt that a majority of the various Episcopal dioceses are against the confirmation of Dr. DeKoven as bishop of Illinois. Thrice refused, in Massachusetts, Wisconsin and now in Illinois, it would appear that some grave defect existed in his theology or morals. But no word is raised save against his ritualism, which the laymen of the church seem determined to hold in check, while the clergy generally, it is said, favor his acceptance. Twice baulked, some members of the diocese threaten disruption unless the independence of the diocese shall be recognized. The refusal, first of Dr. Seymour and now of Dr. Koven, is doubtless wise and just. It moreover suggests a question in relation to the present position of the rejected candidates. Both are heads of educational institutions; the former of the Theological Seminary of the church of New York, the other of Racine College. These positions plainly have a more far-reaching influence than does the bishopric of Illinois; and if the gentlemen hold doctrinal views unfitting them for the less duty, on what grounds are they continued in offices of greater power?

Letter of Edwin Booth to the Mansfield Convention.

CRESTLINE, O., Feb. 15, 1875.

Members of the State Convention and friends of reform: Circumstances not forseen at the time of promising will prevent me from being present at the Mansfield Convention. Wishing to use all my influence in aid of this most noble and Christian reform, I send you my most sincere good wishes and prayers for success.

My own opinion is, that Freemasonry is the most wicked and vile institution, with the fairest face, ever instituted among men. All secret societies are wrong in principle and only productive of evil in republican Christian governments. They are principally evil in the support, aid and comfort they give to that gigantic fraud called Masonry. And strange to say with the acknowledged intelligence of the members of these societies, they are so stupidly ignorant of the despotism exercised over them by the higher degrees of Masonry, as are the Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft, and Master Mason of their own order.

Freemasonry in its grand counsels and higher degrees, has completely succeeded in duping and keeping in blissful ignorance, not only their own members of lower degrees, but of all other secret societies; while they use their influence, their money and their votes, to keep themselves in places of ease, affluence and power. They have been so successful that to-day their power is greater and higher than our law. Senator Pomeroy was told, during the troubles in Kansas and Missouri, that the laws would not protect him if he wished to go up the Mississippi river, but that if he was a Mason, he could travel with entire safety. What has become of the boasted laws of the United States when the cry, "I am an American citizen," affords no protection, but the grand hailing sign of distress of a secret, irresponsible society affords at all times complete protection. The result is beginning to be seen and felt now, and soon must appear in all its appalling consequences, when our free institutions are undermined, and contempt and disrespect for our laws will become universal. In Crawford county the power of Masonry is greater than the law. Should any one doubt it let him oppose the interest of Masonry if he dare, and he will soon be undeceived. Though they are a small minority of the voters, they hold all the offices. This small minority are organized, united and drilled, and they successfully overawe and deprive the majority even of the liberty of speech. Facts will warrant my statement. I was an eye witness to the mobbing of Mr. Orvis in the streets of Crestline about two years ago. Mr. Orvis was a gentleman and Christian minister of high standing. He could not obtain a church or hall in which to discuss the relation of secret societies to Christianity, and when he attempted to speak from the steps of Newman's building he was assaulted by a mob of the leading Masons with curses and threats of violence which were about to be executed. He was driven from the stand and had to seek the protection of friends till he could get away from town.

A short time since another minister who had been permitted to preach twice in the M. E. church wanted to lecture on the subject of secret societies, but no hall or church could be obtained. I being a director of the M. E. church laid the matter before the official board, and asked that he be permitted to lecture in the church. The request was refused. They all said that they would like to hear the lecture, but gave as a reason for their action, that if they did the influence against the church would be so great as to destroy its power and that they were afraid of violence. It had been threatened that if he lectured the house would be stoned and windows broken. Thus is the M. E. church in Crestline intimidated and controlled by an outside mob in the interest of Masonry. These are facts that demonstrate the power of Masonry to dictate to and control both church and state.

Now let us look at the morality of this institution that is controlling church and state. In the Master Mason's degree the candidate takes with others the following obligation: "Furthermore, do I promise and swear that I will not violate the chastity of a Master Mason's wife, mother, sister or daughter, I knowing them to be such." This is the high and sublime morality taught. If you do not know the female is a Master Mason's "wife, mother, sister or daughter," there is no obligation not to violate her chastity, though she may be. While there is no restriction, no obligation whatever, not to violate the chastity of any man's wife, mother, sister or daughter, who is not a Master Mason. This obligation is administered not only to sinners and infidels, but to members of churches and ministers of the Gospel. Is it possible that ministers of the Gospel, teaching the high and holy morality taught by Jesus Christ, whose aspirations should be high and holy, and heart as pure as the white snow that falls on the hills and vallies, must enter the lodge hoodwinked, cable-towed, half-clothed and half-naked, and take a solemn oath, perhaps from a profanely wicked infidel, that he will not violate the chastity of a brother Mason's wife, mother, sister or daughter, he knowing them to be such. Does not such a minister disgrace his high calling? Can he ever again stand up before God, angels and men and say his dignity and honor have not been sacrificed? But if this oath is not immoral and is a good thing for the minister, why would it not be a good thing for the members as well, and why not adopt it as a church rule to help the moral power of the church, and when a man seeks admittance into the church make him take an oath that he will not violate the chastity of a brother Christian's wife, mother, sister or daughter, he knowing them to be such.

But all these immoral and degrading oaths, with all the senseless, wicked, heathen, barbarous rites and ceremonies of the lodge, are to be kept a profound secret, under penalties which would shock the moral feelings of the basest savage. These penalties are so horrible, base, and immoral that John Adams has truly said, that "the English language had been disgraced by their introduction into its forms of speech." Among these penalties are the following: To have the throat cut across, the tongue torn out by the roots, and the body buried in the rough sands of the sea. To have the left breast torn open and the heart and vitals taken from thence, thrown over the left shoulder, carried into the valley of Jehosaphat, there to become a prey to the wild beasts of the field and the vultures of the air. To have the body severed in two in the midst, divided to the north and south, bowels burnt in the center, and ashes scattered to the four winds. To have the tongue split from tip to root. To have the breast torn open, heart and vitals taken out to rot on a dunghill. To have the skull smote off and brains exposed to the scorching rays of the sun. To have one's house torn down, and the timbers set up and he hang thereon. To have a spear, or other sharp instrument, thrust through the side like our Divine Master. To be struck with the dreadful poniard of vengeance, the head cut off and stuck on the highest pinnacle in the eastern part of the world. To be forever deprived of the true word, perpetually in darkness, blood continually running from the body, cruel torture without intermission, to drink gall mixed with vinegar, thorns for a pillow and death of the cross to complete my punishment.

Many good people not well informed on this subject, think it impossible that so many of our citizens, including members of churches and ministers of the Gospel, are continually under the most solemn obligation of an oath, enforced by penalties more terribly severe than any known to the law, with cool calculation and premeditation, to take the life of their fellow-citizens without judge or jury or the sympathy of Christian civilization. Yet this is fearfully true. It is certainly cause of great astonishment and alarm that so many have been induced to take these obligations. Such an institution has been permitted to exist in our midst only by the severest thumb-screw on the body and padlock on the mouth of its members. That these obligations and penalties exist and are the laws of Masonry, and that these penalties have been executed on Miller, Forgie, Morgan and many others is a matter of fact and history. . . . .

The institution that ingenders the feelings necessary to the perpetration of such deeds of murder, must be the most wicked and devilish ever instituted by man. Such is the institution of Freemasonry. The most wicked and gigantic fraud, ever imposed on humanity; a mixture of religion and morality blended with falsehood and imposture, like the most deadly poison mingled with balm.

Milton's personification of sin, would well and truly describe Masonry,—

"Seemed a woman to the waist, and fair;
But ended foul in many a scaly fold,
Voluminous and vast; a serpent armed
With mortal sting; about her middle round
A cry of hell-hounds never ceasing barked,
With wide Cerberian mouths full loud, and rung
A hideous peal; yet, when they list, would creep,
If aught disturb'd their noise into her womb,
And kennel there; yet there still bark'd and howl'd,
Within unseen."

This description is full and complete in all its parts.

Freemasonry received a severe wound that pierced it through by the revelations of Morgan, Bernard and others, that no other institution could have withstood and continued to live. It was revealed that Masons promised and swore to keep a "brother's secrets, murder and treason not accepted"; that they promised and swore, "to espouse a brother Mason's cause, so far as to extricate him from the same, whether he be right or wrong"; that it required the taking of life; and that men had been executed according to its own law, in violation of the civil law, and therefore all adhering Masons were partakers of her crimes and iniquities. But this institution was pervaded by the very spirit of the evil one and, like its father, not easily vanquished. In the war in Heaven Michael pierced and divided Satan in the great fight.

"But the ethereal substance closed; not long divisible,
Yet soon he heal'd; for spirits that live throughout
Vital in every part, not as frail man
In entrails, head or heart, liver or reins,
Cannot but by annihilating die;
Nor in their liquid texture mortal wound
Receive, no more than can the fluid air;
All heart they live, all head, all eye, all ear."
All intellect, all sense; and, as they please,
They limb themselves, and color, shape, or size,
Assume, as likes them best, condense or rare."

So Masonry has limbered itself in various shapes, and by the help of Oddfellows, Good Templars and kindred secret orders, all parts and limbs, of this monster, has piloted itself back again into influence, place and power.

And now as Christians and citizens of this free Republic, we must teach mankind the great Christian brotherhood founded on the eternal principles of right, and not the narrow selfish brotherhood of the lodge, founded on human depravity. We must teach that every man is a brother. That the only true standard of man is his intelligence and virtue, and by the power of the just and righteous public sentiment, hurl back into oblivion this institution of darkness and crime.

EDWIN BOOTH.

The U. P. Presbytery of Philadelphia.

W. S. R. gives the readers of the Cynosure some account of an appeal which came from the sessions of one of the congregations under the above-named presbytery, and which was not sustained. It appears that the session admitted an Odd fellow to communion by the casting vote of the moderator, the applicant professing to be open to conviction respecting the sinfulness of his connection with the order. It appears that after considerable discussion in presbytery, a majority sustained the action of the court below. W. S. R. blames the presbytery for not publishing a history of this case.

The impression on the minds of readers not acquainted with the usages of presbyteries, would likely be that the presbytery forbade the publication of this case. If that is true, there must have been a motion made and seconded, and an opportunity given to discuss this motion or resolution, and then a vote taken, and the result recorded by the clerk of presbytery: but W. S. R. fails to give us any information that any such motion was made and carried. In his last communication indeed, he informs us that the senior member of presbytery, (Rev. F. Church, I presume,) objected to the publication of the proceedings in reference to the appeal, but he does not tell us whether any other member objected. Your readers, not otherwise informed, might think that presbytery was in the habit of publishing its proceeding, but in this case its designedly suppressed this portion of its proceedings, the publication of which it feared would damage it in some way. Now W. S. R. surely knows well that it is not customary for presbyteries in the U. P. church—and I believe the same may be said of all Presbyterian churches—it is not customary to publish the whole, or even any part of their proceedings, unless in very rare cases. The custom stands thus: it is the official business of the clerk to record in a book provided for the purpose, all the proceedings of the presbytery; and then he is left to his own discretion to publish in the religious or other papers, such an abstract of the proceedings as he may think would interest the public. The same discretion is accorded to every other member of the court, and even to spectators, as the proceedings are always in public, unless in scandal trials, which, we are happy to know, rarely occur. And further, any person who feels an interest in the proceedings, can, on application to the clerk, obtain an authentic copy of any part of the court's proceedings.

Now in view of the foregoing statement, which all intelligent United Presbyterians know to be correct, we cannot hold the presbytery of Philadelphia responsible for the ommission referred to. In the preceding statement, it is not to be understood that the writer justifies the presbytery in its vote on the appeal; with the knowledge of the case which he possesses, he thinks that he would have voted to sustain the appeal, and that he would have united with the large minority of presbytery in appealing from the decision of presbytery to the U. P. Synod of New York.

I owe it to my brethren of that presbytery, and of all the presbyteries of the U. P. church, to state that I do not believe that a single one of them belongs to an oath-bound secret society, or justifies such a connection; and this statement will doubtless be gratifying to the readers of the Cynosure. If this charitable judgment of them is not well founded, such persons as are connected with such societies and afford them active support, are false to their professions and solemn engagements made at their ordination. Such persons I would consider perjured, as will appear by reading the formula of questions proposed to them at their ordination. See Book of Government and Discipline of the U. P. church.

Christians should beware of distorting or misrepresenting the doings of their spiritual mother, the church, lest "the daughters of the Philistines rejoice, lest the daughters of the uncircumcised triumph." Let them leave to the outside world all such ungracious treatment of their mother. The world is disposed to publish the evils that are done in the church, and it not unfrequently magnifies those evils, and "lays to her charge things that she knew not" And these charges are considered by the men of the world as a justification of their living without God in the world, and of their declining to take on Christ's yoke. Let us place not such a stumbling block in their way.

DAVID THOMPSON.

Masonic Conspiracy and Persecution in the United Brethren Church.

BY REV. W. W. KNIPPLE.

In times of persecution the cause, and the source, has much to do with either the mitigation or aggravation of the torture. The Saviour said, "Blessed are ye when men revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice and be exceeding glad." Paul says, 'All that will live godly in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution."

The enemies of truth seek opportunity to persecute the righteous under cover of defending truth. Hence they frequently succeed for a time in turning public opinion against their victim. But if the persecuted stand firm to the truth, God will eventually vindicate the cause of the oppressed, and hurl back the stroke of the oppressor upon his own pate. Let us, dear reader, see to it that if persecuted it be falsely for Christ's sake, and then the torture will be greatly alleviated. Then we will have no cause to murmur or complain, but rather to rejoice and be exceeding glad.

The source has much to do with the distress and torture of persecution. Should it emanate from a source having but little character or influence in itself, it would have but little respect abroad. Or should the assailant be an avowed enemy that knowledge would at once render the assault insignificant in the eyes of right thinking men. But, on the other hand, when persecution proceeds from sources of prominence, from men of standing and influence in society, the assault will fall heavily upon its victim, though he be as innocent as an angel. David felt keenly the force of such assaults and exclaimed in the bitterness of his soul: "It was not an enemy that reproached me; then I could have borne it; neither was it he that hated me that did magnify himself against me; then I would have hid myself from him. But it was thou, a man mine equal, my guide, mine acquaintance. We took sweet counsel together, and walked unto the house of God in company."

It is not unfrequently the case that individuals are required to endure the most rigid persecution because of their opposition to principles maintained by their adversaries; indeed, the severest persecutions recorded in history arise from this consideration; to establish a creed, to maintain a theory, or to propagate a favored principle, either in church or state. With this class, we place the case under consideration as well as all other cases of Masonic persecution.

The position of the United Brethren church with regard to secret combinations, is well known; and it is a fact just as well known, that many of her members, including a portion of the ministry, are antagonistic to our prohibitory law. And it is really astonishing to see the numerous schemes invented by the opponents, to accomplish their wicked purpose. If it is but to silence, here and there, an earnest, out-spoken defender of law, or to destroy the influence of another, it is so much. And in order to carry their points in this respect, they will inaugurate the most wicked persecutions, and lying assaults upon the character of individuals whose ruin they suppose they can most easily effect.

It may be a question with some as to the strict propriety of publishing to the world instances of individual persecution. Does it not exhibit something of the spirit of revenge, which is positively forbidden in the Scriptures? To this I would answer, that if there be no higher motive in doing so than to simply requite a personal injury, it would be wrong, as a general rule. But if we understood ourselves, we think this is the least of our purpose, yet this will be in part the result. But apart from this consideration, we have a three-fold object in view, either of which would justify an exposition of so daring a conspiracy against the character of one who has been guilty of no other crime than that of defending the laws of the church of his choice, or rather of exposing the combined powers of darkness.

My object is:—first, to expose a wicked conspiracy, influenced by the spirit of Freemasonry, and in defense of secretism, and that too by parties comprising ministers and members of a church containing a prohibitory law against all secret orders; second, to stir up thousands of unsuspecting members of the United Brethren church who are sleeping in the midst of a wily foe, which has for many years assailed the principle which has ever been cherished by all the true friends of this church; and third, for the good of the conspirators themselves. It is difficult for men of evil designs to see the wickedness of their own actions until they are exposed to the gaze of the public. Of such men, Solomon says, "Open rebuke is better than secret love." "Faithful are the wounds of a friend, but the kisses of an enemy are deceitful." I am persuaded that the best method of turning men from their sins, is to show them their sins. One prophet said, "Show my people their transgressions, and the house of Jacob their sins." And I am sure that all that is necessary to induce honest men to renounce Freemasony, is to convince them of the exceeding wickedness of the institution.

It may be well to say just here, that all the parties engaged in the inauguration, and persecution of this conspiracy, are either Masons, or Odd-fellows, or are "jacks." To say the least, they are all opposed to our church law on secret societies, and all of them, save one, had, prior so this assault, professed the warmest friendship for the writer, their intended victim.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Tobacco.

BY A CHICAGO LUMBER MERCHANT.

[Whoever begins this article will read it through.—ED. CYN.]

James the First, King of England, in 1619, on the introduction of tobacco into his kingdom by us, issued a counterblast, in which he characterized "the custom loathsome to the eye, hateful to the nose, harmful to the brain, dangerous to the lungs, and in the black, stinking fume thereof nearest resembling the horrible stygian of the pit that is bottomless."

Popes Urban VIII. and Innocent XI. fulminated against it by the thunders of the church, the priest, the sultans of Turkey declared smoking a crime; Sultan Amurat IV. decreeing its punishment by the most cruel kinds of deaths; the pipes of smokers were thrust through their noses, and in Russia the noses of smokers were actually cut off in the earlier part of the seventeenth century. (If this was the custom now we would hardly have enough left to count noses.) Yet, notwithstanding these counterblasts the custom of its use has increased to almost fabulous proportions within the short space of a little more than 250 years. Yet the greater increase has been within the last fifty years, and more so in the last twenty-five. I well recollect when such a thing was unknown as a gentleman smoking on the street, and now you cannot walk on the street, or scarcely ride in a street-car, but as innocents are obliged to have this nuisance, made doubly so coming from the horrible pit, thrust down our throats; and if it shall continue to increase in due ratio for the same length of time it will rank first in American products. The Commissioner's report of internal revenue for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1873, shows there was a tax collected on manufactured tobacco of $34,386,303.09 against a tax on fermented liquors of $7,910,823.83 (more than one-third of all the tax collected), being 122,966,315 pounds (including 1,807, 034,646 cigars); enough tobacco to load one solid train of freight cars to reach from Chicago to Elgin, a distance of forty miles, each car to contain 20,000 pounds. Even the traffic in Chicago this last year amounted to $10,000,000 (more than six times the amount of wine and liquors), as against iron and steel, $4,000,000; hardware and metals, $8,600,000; traffic in coal, $9,393,000; wines and liquors, $1,600,000.

Now let us, in the first place, see what tobacco is in its primative state. It is not, like its confederate in crime, made from wholesome and nutricious vegetables, corn, rye, barley, apples, grapes, etc. It is manufactured only from the leaves of an herbaceous plant, all covered with clammy hairs, so offensive in its nature that nothing but a large, green and most repulsive worm, called the "tobacco worm," will eat it; and when manufactured a narcotic so poisonous nothing but his counterpart will touch it, called man. In the second place, let us see who traffic in this wonderful commodity, as against the much-talked-of 3,000 saloons in this city. All of these sell tobacco, as you will see by the crowned king standing at the door with a glass of beer in one hand and a bunch of cigars in the other—as much as to say: "We kings, emperors, and presidents both drink and smoke. Walk in, gentlemen! Walk in!" It is sold in all the hotels, all the restaurants and dining rooms, all the drug stores, nearly all the grocery stores, many bakeries, theaters, most places of amusement, gambling places, church fairs and festivals, besides exclusively tobacco stores, peddled upon the street, thrust into your office many times during the day, peddled in the railroad cars, and besides there are in this city over 200 other cigar stores kept by cyprian women whose apparent object is to sell tobacco, but you enter and you are very soon invited up-stairs or invited to the back room, and if you have not the moral courage of a "Joseph" you will very soon "hang on the ragged edges of despair." In short, we have more then 24,000 places where this delectable food can be purchased in Chicago.

From whom did we acquire such an universal habit as to require so much capital invested and men engaged in the trade to supply our wants? In front of the cigar store you have the answer. Very significantly and appropriately stands the Indian, with a bunch of the seductive weed in one hand and a raised tomahawk in the other. If you enter, remember whereof, in my barbarous state 'I slew my thousand, now, in my civilized, I slay my ten thousand.' We generally boast of our ancestry, and talk of their habits, but I guess the least said in this case the better. I said acquire, but do you know that men never do acquire the habit of using tobacco? It only reproduces itself in them. It is acquired only by vain, weak, silly boys, who try to become men prematurely as in their estimation men are men. Only a short time since I met a little fellow (apparently about eight years old) on Lake street bridge drawing a little wagon and smoking a meerschaum pipe. I said to him: "My little fellow, if you keep on smoking you will soon become a man." He replied: "That is what I am trying to be, sir."

I will only undertake to enumerate some of the many consequences superinduced by this narcotic, so very poisonous in its nature that one drachm of which is equal to the same quantity of prussic acid or nightshade, and one drop of blood sucked from the vein of the habitual user will kill a leech instantly, or the excrement spit on a chintz bug would be as effectual as if a chain of lightning had struck it, and the refuse, after all the juice is sucked out, if swallowed by the devotee, would make him sicker in less than no time than the whale was that brought Jonah into port, or if placed at the root of a rose-bush would kill the liveliest, tiniest rose in a very short time. Therefore it is not fit for the dung-hill.

Dr. Carson says of the many diseases superinduced by the use of tobacco: "They consist of giddiness, sickness, vomiting, dyspepsia, vitiated taste of the mouth, loose bowels, diseased liver, congestion of the brain, apoplexy, palsy, paralysis, mania, loss of memory, amoroses, deafness, nervous irritability and cowardice, cancerous affection, heart disease and sudden death." Cases of death by paralysis are so frequent and fresh in the memory of all it is hardly worth while to numerate, yet I know many more in our churches who are on the verge of that much dreaded disease. A case of cancer in the jaw in a man who both smoked and chewed tobacco—had his entire lower jaw removed, but finally died in this city a few days since. Cancers of the lip and tongue frequently occur. Many a poor woman who believes she has consumption is only suffering from inhaling her sweet husband's breath and the poisonous tobacco respiration emitted from his cleanly body. A subject always becomes drunk when he first commences using tobacco. In the Sandwich Islands persons have been dismissed from the church for getting drunk on tobacco. Delirium tremens ensues from the long use of it, and sudden death is a common fruit. A large percentage of our sudden deaths, if rightly attributed, would be assigned to tobacco. Scarcely any women in our land die suddenly. In short, let me say, the man who uses tobacco gets drunk at the first end of the line and the man who uses liquor at the other end.

It is already exciting comment in Connecticut, the great growing district where they have raised tobacco so long, as it is very apparent that the rising generation are both dwarfed in stature as well as in intellect, and I have no doubt but in less time than it took opium to dwarf the Chinese we will have a nation of dwarfed humanity, both physically and intellectually. I can tell a smoker as far as I can see him by the hue of his countenance, and smell him not quite as far as a certain animal that whisps his tail.—Evening Lamp.

[CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.]

A Card to the Masonic Fraternity.

MANSFIELD, O, Feb. 22, 1875.

In view of my renunciation on Thursday evening at the convention held here, it has been reported by some persons with the intent of injuring my usefulness, that I was an "expelled Mason." I wish it understood that such was not the case. But that I withdrew myself by not paying my dues. If any Mason will call upon me, I will furnish him every facility to write on and make every inquiry to the lodge. Also I wish to say, "that on leaving," the lodge presented me with a $50 Bible, at which time about a hundred sat down to a supper. All this as a token of respect for my services in the lodge. This does not look like "expulsion."

HENRY COSWELL,
Pastor Christian church.

The Philadelphia Presbytery Case.

The article of David Thompson of Arkansas City, Kans., clears up some features of this trouble in the United Presbyterian church of Philadelphia. The clerk of the Presbytery sends us the following, which explains the reason for the omission of the case in the published minute of proceedings:

Editor Christian Cynosure:

DEAR SIR—In reply to your question whether Mr. Rentoul was mistaken about their being no reference in the published report to the case before our Presbytery, I would answer he was no. It was my understanding that Presbytery desired me to make no reference to the matter, that the case might go before synod unprejudiced. If I have misunderstood Presbytery I am very sorry. So far as I am personally concerned I would not care if the whole matter were published in every paper in the land and this I believe to be true of the majority, if not all, of the Presbytery. Yours, &c.,

S. S WHITE,
Clerk of Phil Pres

Notices.

The Seventh Anniversary of the National Christian Association will be held in the City of Pittsburgh, Pa., June 8th to 10th, 1875.

The National Christian Association.

PRESIDENT.—B. T. Roberts, Rochester, N. Y.

DIRECTORS.—Philo Carpenter, J. Blanchard, A. Wait, I. A. Hart, C. R. Hagerty, E. A. Cook, J. G. Terrill, O. F. Lumry. J. M. Wallace, Isaac Preston, Wm. Pinkney.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.—C. A. Blanchard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

RECORDING SECRETARY AND TREASURER.—H. L. Kellogg, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER.—J. P. Stoddard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

AUDITOR.—H. A. Fischer.

OBJECT.—"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved; to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

Life membership, $10.00; annual do, 25 cents. The names of members and general correspondence of the Association should be sent to the Corresponding Secretary. To carry on the increasing and successful lecture work by agents in different States and for promoting the general work of the Association donations of any amount are solicited from all friends of the reform. All donations or bequests should be sent to the Treasurer.

The Corresponding Secretary or his assistant may be seen at the Cynosure office from 9 to 11 A. M.

The Michigan Convention.

The convention for organizing the State of Michigan announced for March 30th and 31st at Linden, Genesee county, has, by advice of friends on the ground, been changed to Fenton at same date. Both places are in Genesee county on the Detroit and Milwaukee railroad and but six miles apart. Linden is a small town of a few hundred inhabitants; Fenton has between two and three thousand. A commodious hall has been engaged, and arrangements will be made for entertainment of friends from a distance. Remember the time and place: FENTON, GENESEE CO, MARCH 30TH AND 31ST. Speak of this to your neighbors.

Reform News.

—Prof. Blanchard, the Corresponding Secretary, visited Vienna, Wis, on the Sabbath to present the cause of the National Association. He is expecting to speak in the Baptist Seminary of this city on his return.

—Rev. P. Ezea, nominated by the Wisconsin Convention as State, Agent and Lecturer for that started on Tuesday for another campaign in that State.

—Bro. Israel Gable of Pennsylvania writes that J. M. Bishop has been stirring out from his pleasant parsonage at Chambersburg and making a way towards Stewardstown tearing off hoodwinks and snapping cable tows.

—The Illinois Agent has been detained from work by sickness in his family for a short time. He went to Chebanse on Saturday for a series of meetings.

A Good Work begun in Iowa—From the General Agent.

HAMPTON, Franklin Co., Iowa. March 5th, 1875

DEAR K:—Our convention closed last evening at Eldora with a full meeting and decided success. The "fraternities" were out in full force, apparently bent on business. A slight disturbance occurred soon after I began my lecture, but no serious outbreak, and things moved quietly on. At the close I gave opportunity to reply, of which some four or five present availed themselves. Some words were spoken which I am persuaded the more intelligent of the order deeply regretted. I might write a sensational article, or a chapter of incidents, but as I have no taste for such things I will leave that for others if they see fit. Suffice it to say, the people were thoroughly aroused and the friends well satisfied. I left this morning in company with friends for Mason City, and we have been all day bumping over the snow drifts, across the fields, reaching this village at sunset. After supper I called upon two friends of our reform, and find by report that there is here a strong element of opposition to secret societies, which needs only to be instructed in methods and organized for effective work. Our landlord and some of his guests are Masons and quite a spirited discussion of the subject is in progress while I am writing. The M. E. minister is strongly Anti-masonic and some of his members equally so.

MARCH 6TH—I left Hampton this morning with a promise if God so willed it to return at some future time and deliver a course of lectures. Pushing through the snow and winding around among the drifts we reached the farmhouse of a Baptist brother about 11:30 and stopped for dinner. We were most cordially received and kindly entertained by Bro. Hunt and his wife who are both fully in sympathy with us in our work, and refused to receive any compensation for their trouble. Eighteen miles across the prairie brought us to Mason City just before sunset, and with Bro. Palmeter I have called on two of the pastors who are by no means indifferent upon this question of secretism. I am to preach in the M. E. church of this city at 11 A. M., and at Clear Lake, ten miles west of this in the evening, where I also speak Monday and Tuesday evenings, returning to this city to speak Wednesday and Thursday evenings, when I expect to start on my return, reaching Wheaton, Ill., in time for Sabbath services as arranged for the 14th.

The friends through this region so far as I have met them seem to be in earnest and are anticipating a grand rally at Clear Lake, June 29th, for which my visit at this time is in part preparatory. J. P. STODDARD.

Jottings from the New York Field.

A VISIT TO CLYDE—NIAGARA COUNTY CONVENTION—LEWISTON—YOUNG TOWN AND FORT NIAGARA—THE OLD MAGAZINE, ETC.

DEAR K:—Monday, the 15th ult., found me on the way to Clyde, Wayn Co., in a driving snow storm. Arriving at my destination not far from 4 P. M. I began a search for some one who could tell me the programme for the evening. For some time my search was unavailing; but at length, I saw a gentleman on the street, and suspected—what subtle influence guides us thus?—that he was looking for me. He imagined I was looking for him, and so Rev. J. Whiffen and the Agent, soon succeeded in quieting a good deal of unrest. Bro. Whiffen is pastor of the Free Methodist church in Clyde and a Rose, an adjoining town. I am indebted to him, and to two families of his church, with one from the M. E. church, for acts of kindness, which I remember much better than I do their names, which at this moment I cannot recall.

Seven o'clock finds me in the Free Methodist house of worship, with a good congregation, ready to hear the lecture on the "Origin of Masonry." There was a good sprinkling of the craft in the audience, who listened quietly to the lecture.

At the close of the services, a gentleman came to the desk and gave me the following incident, which occurred, if I remember rightly, some eight or ten years ago, in a town north of Clyde:

A young physician, having fallen under the displeasure of the order, was waylaid and shot by a young Mason, who, after committing the crime, deliberately gave himself into the custody of a Masonic sheriff, who consigned him to jail, where he was visited and examined by a Masonic physician, who pronounced him insane. He was transferred from jail to the Utica Insane Asylum, and when cured was set at liberty. My informant knew that he was at large because he received a letter from the young murderer, saying that he was teaching school in Michigan, and inquiring for a young lady living in his family and with whom he was keeping company at the time of the murder. He gave me the above as facts. They are suggestive, to say the least. [James McMillen of Nunda, Ill., can corroborate them.—ED.]

Tuesday and Wednesday nights,—though the weather was bad, and the roads were almost impassible,—saw the house well filled, with audiences which seemed to be deeply interested, as I held up the "Old Hand-maid" to their gaze. To many the whole thing was new, and felt to be "horribly interesting!" During the last lecture, while I was speaking on the oaths, ceremonies, etc., a gentleman belonging to the craft, got up and left the house in such a way as to indicate that he was fearful of losing his jewel if he staid longer. Much good, it was thought by the friends, was done by these lectures. The craft were very much stirred up and felt that their institution was in danger. But alas! save Bro. Whiffen none of the clergy were in attendance. In many other places this is the case; and why is this so? Our work is not a matter of little moment. We are either right or wrong. In performing our labor, we are serving God or the devil. If the former, then Gospel ministers ought to give us countenance and support. If the latter, then they ought to come and hear so as to be able, intelligently, to warn their people against us. They are, if God's ministers, set as watch men, and they have no right to be ignorant or indifferent, while a few do all the work. Are these men cowards, or are they wholly unmindful of their true position? Ought God's ministers to be laggards in all reforms? Have they a right to choose the more agreeable parts of the work pertaining to their office and leave the more onerous and disagreeable undone, or to be wholly done by other hands? One thing is certain; there is no neutrality in this battle between right and wrong. Let these ministers look to this. 'Tis a friend and brother who suggests this.

I left here a call for a county convention, which will be published as soon as properly signed. I would say to the friends having it in hand, "Push things!"

Thursday morning, on my way to Lockport, I stopped at Rochester, and spent an hour or two with that true yoke-fellow, Rev. W. Post. The story of his wrongs, at the hands of the managers of his conference, is enough to rouse indignation in any but a Masonic heart. Such trickery among men professing godliness, is well calculated to pain every Christian heart; while skeptics shall be made more skeptical. At the conference, Bro. P. was sent to a church which it was known would not receive him, because they wanted their old pastor and would have him or none; and so Bro. P. is left without a pastorate. Well, he has God and a good conscience, of which Masonic presiding elders cannot deprive him. May he live to see the downfall of the Christless order which seeks his ruin.

Leaving him, after a delightful interview, I passed on to Lockport, where I arrived in time to give a short lecture to the few who were awaiting me. This annual meeting, though thinly attended, was not a failure, but our Niagara county friends need to become better acquainted with printers' ink and its uses. It is just as good for Anti-masons as for their foes. It costs something, but it pays to use it. The Association appointed its officers for the year on Friday, listened to two more lectures from the Agent, and then went home to "fight it out, if it takes all summer."

Saturday, I went to Lewistown, found a pleasant home with O. P. Scoville, Esq., for the Sabbath and three following days. I preached for the pastor of the Presbyterian church on Sabbath morning, and listened to a well written discourse from him on the "Good Shepherd" in the evening. The three evenings following I spoke to small, but what seemed deeply interested, congregations.

On Tuesday, C. L. Gray, with Bro. Scoville and myself, made a trip down to Youngstown, and took a view of the Fort and the old Magazine in which poor Morgan in his helplessness and agony, spent the last days and nights of his earthly existence. As we drove up to, and took a view of this prison house of a murdered patriot, husband and father, and then looked out on the river, where Vallance, Howard and that other one—God knows him—sunk the poor victim of Masonic barbarity, I, at least, had my hatred of Masonry and its murderous spirit intensified.

At Lewistown, I found Dea. Tryon, the man who met the Masons who had been down to Youngstown to silence Morgan, who had been noisy and troublesome the day before. Mr. T., knowing some of these men, asked them where they were going, or had been, at that unseasonable hour. Their reply was, they had been to a "set down" at Youngstown. This meeting alarmed the craft, and a short time after a Mason said to him: "Your name has been acted on favorably in the lodge; and you had better come up to-night and be initiated," and this, too, when Mr. T. was a cripple, and not an elligible candidate. He was not, however, so pliable as was Fox, who drove Morgan's carriage from the rear of the "Frontier House," in Lewistown, to Youngstown. He preferred to remain, what he still is, a freeman. This gentleman also gave me another reminiscence of the Morgan times. He had a brother-in-law named Mosher, with whom he started for Vermont on some business. They had went as far as Albany together. Here Mr. Tryon found it necessary to return home, which he did, leaving Mosher to go on alone. From that time to this, Mosher's wife and friends have never heard from him. They know nothing of his fate. They believe much.

To Mr. Scoville and his interesting family, I owe much for kindness to a stranger, who was quite unwell while with them. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Street, and his wife, with Col. Gray's family will long live in the heart of

J. L. Barlow.

Syracuse, March 1, 1875.

Elder Barlow in Rochester.

Rochester, N. Y., Mar. 11, '75.

Last Monday evening Elder J. L. Barlow lectured on the religion of Masonry to a large audience in the Free Methodist church of this city, and did justice to the subject. None but the most wilfully prejudiced could have failed to have received light. Every minister and every Christian in this civilized city ought to have heard it, that they might blush at the criminality of those who by affiliation and influence perpetuate the infidelity and blasphemy of oath-bound secret societies, rejecting Jesus Christ and God's holy Word. The speaker showed clearly that Freemasonry is a religion, but infidel, and "without God." That is, it carries the Bible (Rev. Dr. M carries a little gold Bible suspended by a gold chain around his neck—does just as well), yet rejects it; and quoted Chase's Digest p. 208, viz, 'Masonry has nothing whatever to do with the Bible. It is not founded on the Bible. If it was, it would not be Masonry, it would be something else." On Tuesday evening also he lectured in the new City Hall to an intelligent audience, where the truth took effect, and seed was sown that shall spring forth abundantly. In both instances the burning truth was poured forth and we were plunged beneath the flood, light sprung up, and some saw as they never had seen before. W. P.

From the Ohio Agent.

THE GRANGE WAR GROWING APACE—THE MANSFIELD CONVENTION HAD SOME "ROUSEMENT" IN IT.

Nevada, O., Mar. 8, 1875.

Bro. K:—Permit me to communicate a few items from the Ohio work, which I trust will be of some interest to the friends of our cause. Since the convention at Mansfield, a new impetus seems to have been given to our cause in the demand for lectures. I wish it were so in the increase of finances, but this I cannot say. For this reason, together with the increasing demand for lectures in the vicinity of home, I have been cultivating home territory in the main, with, I believe, good results since the State convention. One conclusive evidence to my mind that our cause is gaining, is the intense excitement everywhere manifest among the members of the craft. Some are excited favorably, while others get mad and say some hard things about us. Of course we are oftimes basely misrepresented, but on the whole these things contribute to inspire our cause with an exciting interest without which it would become monotonous and soon loose its wanted zest. I have been paying most than usual attention to the Patrons of Husbandry lately, and I find it more interesting. Many of the members of the grange had fancifully supposed that the walls environing their order were really impregnable, and they could witness the assaults made upon the parent of the various secret broods, with a degree of composure and complacency, never dreaming of the close kindred relation they themselves bear to their legitimate ancestors. But when their popular, and would be laudible institution is tested by the touchstone of truth, it is really amusing to witness their squirming and consternation. I have heard even the very religious (?) chaplain of Holmes township grange call one of our friends a liar because he sustained a proposition I made in a lecture in which reference was made to O. H. Kelley's saying that ladies are blindfolded and covered with a cloak. At a meeting held last week at Biddle's Church where I gave three lectures, two on Masonry and one on the grange, our granger friends became very much excited, and one man, a member of the U. B. church, gave notice of his purpose to withdraw from the church at the end of my lecture. He seems to think that I was a pestiferous fellow, and as the church had not taken any action in his case, he seemed to feel himself occupying the position of Satan on a certain occasion, and imagined that I had come to torment him before the time. Here is evidence conclusive of the ruinous effects of the grange upon the Christian church. It is worse in many respects than Masonry, for many are induced to go into the grange, that have successfully resisted every temptation to Masonry, and when once in, like Masons, they try to justify their course, and defend themselves against the Bible and the laws of the church, and when they fail in this, then when the last alternative comes, to part with one or the other, many leave the church in preference to the grange. There are of course some honorable exceptions, one of which in justice I will now mention.

A Mr. Robison, a member of the United Presbyterian church, joined the same grange, but soon saw the unchristian character of the same, and as an honest man who had been deceived, when he discovered the real situation, abandoned it. This same Mr. R, after hearing me, complimented me for candor and fairness, and said what I said about the institution was all substantially true so far as his experience and observation went. I purpose attending a meeting to-night at which I am to be reviewed by a Master and Secretary of Holmes and Oceola granges. If there should seem to be a necessity for saying anything farther on the grange at that place (it is where I gave three lectures on Masonry and one on the grange), I may give them some more of the same sort in the near future. By request I have agreed to lecture in the M. E. church in Holmes township commencing on Wednesday evening inst; will most likely give three lectures there. I have also just received a paper hailing from Liberty Grange, Crawford Co., containing a resolution passed by that grange, signed by the master and secretary inviting me to give a lecture to said grange on secret societies. I am not the most favorably impressed with the motives actuating that resolution, yet I have accepted, and have set Monday, the 15th, as the time, to not only give them a lecture, but to commence a series of from three to five lectures, on the subject of secret societies for their special benefit if circumstances seem to warrant. I am sorry that I am not more successful in obtaining subscribers for the Cynosure and monies for the general fund. I am hoping that money will be more plenty, at least that it will pass into more general circulation with the opening of spring, and that we may then do much more for the several interests of our cause. More anon.

D. S. Caldwell.

The Iowa Convention—Secretary's Report.

Persuant to a call issued in due form the friends of the anti-secrecy reform in Iowa met at the court-house in Eldora, March 4th, 1875. Rev. E. B. Kephart of Western, was chosen chairman, Rev. C. Compton, secretary. Session opened with prayer by Rev. James Hawkins. A constitution with preamble was discussed and adopted [similar to that adopted in Ohio.—Ed. Cyn.] The following persons were then elected officers for the ensuing year: For President, Hon. T. Wolf; for Vice-president, D. W. Lyons; for Corresponding Sec'y, Prof. L. Bookwalter; for Recording Sec'y, Rev. C. Compton; for Treasurer, John Dorcas. The place of next meeting was fixed at Clear Lake, June 29th, 1875. After which the Convention listened to an able lecture on the Religion of Masonry by Rev. J. P. Stoddard of Chicago. After a brief miscellaneous discussion the Convention adjourned.

E. B. Kephart, Pres.

C. Compton, Sec'y.

[The following resolution is enclosed with the above report which, however, does not speak of its adoption.—Ed.]

Resolved, That we endorse as lecturer for the State of Iowa, the Rev. James Hawkins, and cordially commend him to the sympathies, co-operation and support of the friends throughout the State. Post-office address, Mason City, Iowa.

From the Wisconsin State Agent—Lectures at Sharon.

Mr Editor:—Perhaps it will not be amiss for me to say through the Cynosure, that I have fought secrecy, cold, snow, and snowdrifts in Wisconsin all winter, and have had pretty good success; have found many friends of the cause who did not know how extensively the question is being agitated in the country, nor conceive the magnitude of the subject until they hear it discussed, and they immediately become fast friends of the cause. What the people want to know, are the facts in the case, and I think they will take up the line of march in the right direction.

Since the convention at Delavan, have given five lectures at Sharon to good audiences, and think with good results. Some of the roads were badly blockaded with snow, which prevented many from coming. Received a letter from home requesting me to come immediately; concluded to do so, and rest a little, after a campaign of nearly five months. For the war,

Wheaton, Ill P. Elzea.

A Call to Friends in Iowa.

Tipton, Iowa.

I want to talk a little, but as I never wrote for the papers and am an old farmer, I feel a little bashful. But then, I think and feel and am interested in this reform; and during the past year have sent quite a number of new subscribers and now want to give you some of the results. Among these subscribers were a number of ministers, to whom the paper was sent without consulting them. The first was a young Baptist whose name had already been sent into the Masonic lodge and accepted, and he was waiting for the initiation. He has since told me that he just made his escape by the skin of his teeth. He is now with us heart and soul. The second is a local M. E. preacher who is now wanting a State organization and a State lecturer. The third is an M. E. preacher in the regular work who, though anti-secret himself, had not sufficient courage to take the paper home and read it, and requested the post-master to have it stopped. Another M. E. circuit preacher, a Mason, would not take the paper out of the office; does not like the spirit of it; yet he admits that Masonry is an evil and ought to be abandoned. But he is so fearful that he will get astride a hobby, that he thinks it not best to say so in public.

I want to propound one question to the friends of our cause in Iowa, and I would have every anti-secret man and woman in Iowa hear it and ponder.

How long shall we stand here idle, while our enemy is ever active, marshaling his masked forces all over our land sowing tares and poisoning the very fountains of liberty, as we verily believe; stealthily gnawing at the very vitals of Christianity; already fastening and operating upon our institutions as an eating cancer upon the human body; and is slowly but surely drawing a thick dark veil over the moral sense of the people, thus blinding the understanding which doubtless is the reason for the alarming apathy on this great subject. Then, I ask again, shall we longer stand here idle while other States are organizing and preparing for the battle? We ought to have a thorough State organization with a strong man to take the field as a public lecturer. I believe we have the men in our own State, good, renouncing Masons, who, if properly sustained, would meet the demand.

We have just one hundred counties, containing nearly one and a half millions of people, and can we not sustain one good man in the field?

Now while I know that Cedar county is badly blighted with the dark light of secretism, yet I believe that hundreds of dollars would be cheerfully given in this county towards the salary of a good lecturer.

We hope that our Iowa friends will respond in such a manner and with such proposals as to time and place for holding a State convention as will lead to a speedy and thorough State organization with at least one able lecturer in the field. Yours truly,

AMOS WILLITS.

[The above was written before the late meeting at Eldora, but the zeal and faith of Bro. W. will help on for the next meeting at Clear Lake in June.—ED. CYN.]

From Northwestern Iowa—Grangerism Waning.

LOTTS CREEK, Iowa, Feb. 28, 1872.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Perhaps it might be interesting to some of the readers of the Cynosure to hear from northwestern Iowa. I am a young man, but anti secret "to the back-bone." I never belonged to any secret combination, and by the help of God, I hope I never will. It is my determination to put forth every effort in my power to stay the progress of secrecy. I feel it a duty as a citizen and a Christian. I I will never give another cent to support a Masonic minister. It seems as though our whole country is suffering more or less under this yoke of secrecy. When I came to this countrv I thought perhaps secreoy would not be the ruling power, but was sadly disappointed. We are now suffering from its effects. The treasurer of this county swindled us out of $23,000 last year. But he is a Freemason, and it is all right. He is protected by a law of a higher authority than of our oounry. O how long must we suffer from these diabolical clans! It appears that the grasshopper devastation for two years is not enough, we must be bowed down by Masonic imposition. There is only one Freemason in our community, and he is not very well posted on the subject. I gave him several Cynosures to read, and of course it started his ideas. He is master of the grange in this community. Grangers are not making much progress about here. The majority of the members have left the order, and say it is a swindle, a good place to get rid of money, and spend time that might be spent to a better purpose.

We are having pretty hard times during this cold weather, in this part of Iowa. The calamity that was sent upon us, has brought many to want. However we are looking forward for better times in the future. This is a productive country, I think cannot be equaled in Iowa. Nearly all of our county officers are Masons, but hope there will be a change ere long. Masons and grasshoppers are the greatest pests we have. It is my earnest prayer that ere long, all secret societies will become ashamed of their boyish ceremonies, renounce all secrecy, and become men of principle.

JAS. H. SPOHN.

From Father Finney—More Prayer Needed.

MANSFIELD, Ohio.

MR. EDITOR:—I am 74 years old; have stood in the front rank, in the temperance cause over forty years; in the anti-slavery cause for over thirty years, at first, with a small band, but we kept growing till we had the best of Ohio with us. The first year your little Cynosure made its appearance a warm friend gave me a copy. I sent $1.00 and in a very short time I was a reader of the Cynosure, and expect to be as long as I live. Am I correct in saying that the Cynosure has twice been through the fire, and through the water, and has grown to be the best, taking all the reforms squarely, of any paper in the nation? All the orthodox churches in our nation; yes, every family that has souls to be saved ought to have a copy every week. I am taking eight papers at present; the Cynosure is the No. 1. I have been trying to get some of our young men to work for names and money for this excellent paper, and I don't dispair of getting the right men soon.

The signs of the times show that God is raising up men to do his great work in the glorious reforms of the day. We want more prayer and faith in God. Let the weekly prayer meetings of each church spend part of the first Thursday of each month in prayer to Almighty God, the Father of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Each prayer meeting select the sins that prevail most in their neighborhood. Believe in God; work and pray and God will send us the victory in his time.

Respectfully yours, JOHN FINNEY.

Holding to the Testimony.

PINE RIVER, Mich., March 3, 1875.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—We are surrounded by Masons and grangers, and but a few families in the community but belong to one or the other. Our school-house has been closed to evening meetings for the purpose of driving out the United Brethren church, and we had to hold our meetings in a private house. The Methodist minister has joined the grange, and religious interest in the M. E. church seems to be sadly on the decline. We are reckoned very uncharitable because we cannot fellowship with the secretists, but are determined to "fight it out on this line" and greatly desire to have some of our lecturers come this way.

Yours for the truth, *

OUR MAIL.

Geo. Leaming, Stockwell, Ind., writes:

"Times are hard and people are quite afraid of offending their preachers and other members in the church, though many acknowledge the principles of the Cynosure to be all right."

Wm. Lee, Tipton, Ia., writes:

"I expect to attend the State convention at Eldora this week; hope to be more active in this cause in the future."

Milton Hawley, Humboldt, Kan., writes:

"I value your paper very much. I have been a member of four different secret societies, and consequently have cause to appreciate the Cynosure. . . . The orders of darkness are in the ascendancy here. Even many of the members of the United Brethren church have joined the grange. I am a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and leader of a class; but seriously contemplate withdrawing from that church because it is hopelessly under the control of the order of Masons. Particularly so in this State."

Henry Young, Walnut Grove, Ill., writes:

"I always thought from what I could learn of our Saviour's teachings that every thing of a good character should be known and should not be hid. Why did Christ come to this earth and live an example, openly, if it was not for the good of mankind? A Methodist minister living within six and a quarter miles of me, said to my brother-in-law (a Mason) that if the by-laws of Masonry were lived up to mankind would not be far out of the way. . . I am in hopes that all secret orders of every name will soon have an end."

He tells of a Masonic funeral in which the neighbors who nursed the sick man had to give place to Masons at his funeral, Masons, who had shown no interest in him by watching while he lived.

Alex. Littlefield, Remington, Ind., writes:

"I think anyone should do as much for this cause as they would do towards sending the Gospel to the heathen. I belong to the M. E. church. A good part of the official board belong to the Masonic fraternity. But there are a great many that oppose secret societies in this place."

John Jones, Phœnixville, Pa., writes:

"The Lord rules and reigns. He will bring to naught the works of darkness in his own good time. Let us, therefore, pray and labor on."

Thos. Henderson, Pleasant Home, O., who spoke at our Oberlin Convention, a seceding Mason, writes:

"You are aware that every one who leaves the lodge and exposes the wicked doings of the same, has to meet with persecutions. . . But I look forward to the day when the lodge shall be brought low. . . Pray for me that I may hold out to the end."

James J. Kiggins, Table Rock, Neb., writes:

"Table Rock is a very small railroad station. There is a grange depot here, but from what I can hear they do not have very much to do. This county is filled with the works of darkness. The grange is the principal one; it is getting old and is playing out in several parts of the county. I am not a granger, yet I am able to furnish them with the grips, signs, and passwords, and they are not able to deny them."

A subscriber in Sanford, Ind., writes:

"I am very much pleased with the pamphlet form and amount of reading in the Cynosure. It should be in every Christian family at least. The way I double the circulation of the Cynosure is, after I read them through I give them to different persons, especially to the young men. I know there are a great many afraid to subscribe for the paper, but are willing to read them if one is given to them, and therefore will be induced to subscribe. If all your subscribers would do this, I believe the subscription list in a short time will be ten fold, and our young men saved. Brethren, be liberal. Read and circulate."

Geo. H. Holstead, Vienna, N. Y., writes:

"I have taken the Cynosure from the beginning. I scarcely ever felt so joyous as I did when I read in the American Baptist of the starting of a paper in opposition to Freemasonry or secret societies. I have circulated a good many papers and tracts from the first. Our town meeting was held yesterday. The Democrats elected all except a justice of the peace and one constable. The former was a Mason, a M. E. professor of religion, and merchant, and has been elected twice for supervisor of this town by the Republicans. He got on to the democratic ticket for the purpose of being elected, but was defeated while his opponent was not a Mason. The supervisor is a Mason, and several others that are elected are Masons."

Barlow Barto, Alton, Mich., writes:

"If we could get a State lecturer here in this State then we could get one here. My prayer is that the time will soon come when secrecy will have a downfall here."

J. B. L. Smith, Wolf Lake, Ind., writes:

"May the Lord bless the efforts put forth for the destruction of the powers of darkness."

John McGinnis, Princeville, Ill., writes:

"I read your paper and think it will accomplish good work."

John W. Jones, Waukegan, Ill., asks for an exposition of the grange. He also writes:

"I have been a subscriber of your paper for the past five or six years, and consider it not only a valuable paper, but an interesting one in my family."

We have already commenced to publish an exposition of the grange.

W. D. Beggs, New Bedford, Pa., writes:

"The petitions you sent me were not received in time to circulate and forward in the space of time you specified. When they all come in I will forward them to you and you can use them at some future time."

The petitions came in so late some of them, and the last days of Congress were so hurried, that they have all been saved for the next Congress. The petition is now THREE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT FEET long. Will those who still have petitions fill them up and send them in?

The Sabbath School.

Lesson for March 28, 1875.—God's Mercies to Israel.

Joshua xxiv. 1-13.

1 And Joshua gathered all the tribes of Israel to Shechem, and called for the elders of Israel, and for their heads, and for their judges, and for their officers; and they presented themselves before God.

2 And Joshua said unto all the people, Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, Your fathers dwelt on the other side of the flood in old time, even Terah, the father of Abraham, and the father of Nachor: and they served other gods.

2 And I took your father Abraham for the other side of the flood, and led him throughout all the land of Canaan, and multiplied his seed, and gave him Isaac.

4 And I gave unto Isaac Jacob and Esau: and I gave unto Esau mount Seir, to possess it; but Jacob and his children went down into Egypt.

5 I sent Moses also and Aaron, and I plagued Egypt, according to that which I did among them: and afterward I brought you out.

6 And I brought your fathers out of Egypt: and ye came unto the sea; and the Egyptians pursued after your fathers with chariots and horsemen unto the Red Sea.

7 And when they cried unto the Lord, he put darkness between you and the Egyptians, and brought the sea unto them, and covered them; and your eyes have seen what I have done in Egypt: and ye dwelt in the wilderness a long season.

8 And I brought you into the land of the Amorites, which dwelt on the other side Jordan; and they fought with you: and I gave them into your hand, that ye might possess their land; and I destroyed them from before you.

9 Then Balak the son of Zippor, king of Moab, arose and warred against Israel, and sent and called Balaam the son of Beor to curse you:

10 But I would not hearken unto Balaam; therefore he blessed you still: so I delivered you out of his hand.

11 And ye went over Jordan, and came unto Jericho: and the men of Jericho fought against you, the Amorites, and the Perrizzites, and the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Girgashites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites: and I delivered them into your hand.

12 And I sent the hornet before you, which drave them out from before you, even to the two kings of the Amorites; but not with thy sword, nor with thy bow.

13 And I have given you a land for which ye did not labor, and cities which ye built not, and ye dwell in them; of the vineyards and oliveyards which you planted not do ye eat.

COMMIT TO MEMORY, vs. 2, 3.

PARALLEL PASSAGES.—Gen. xxxv. 1-4, and Acts vii. 1-6.

Concerning Shechem, read Gen. xi. 31, and xxxi. 19, 30, 34.

As to the leading and training up of his descendants (v. 3-6), read Heb. xi. 13-16.

As to their safety (v. 12, 13), read Deut. vi. 10, 11.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!—Ps. cvii. 8.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—We must refuse the evil and choose the good.

1. THEIR ADOPTION (v. 2). The "flood," or river is the Euphrates. Their fathers were idolators, serving images, of which traces came out in the life of Rachel (Gen. xxxi. 34).

Abraham was chosen not for his personal worth, but of God's "own will." It is so with believers to this day. See Eph. i. 4. He takes us of his grace to make us holy.

2. THEIR EDUCATION. They were separated from their idolatrous associations. "Evil communications," &c., (1 Cor. xv. 33). So children are sometimes sent from home to learn new and better ways and break off the old. "I took your father Abraham." They were prevented from settling and learning new heathenisms: "led him throughout." So they were taught the pilgrim spirit, and to look for a city. See Heb. xi. 10-14. He parted Esau from the seed of promise and gave him a possession of his own (v. 4). In Egypt (v. 4), they were kept apart by their business and by prejudice (Gen. xlvi. 34), and then by the oppression whose fires welded them into one people. They were shown the difference between Jehovah and "the gods of Egypt" by the plagues (v. 5), under Moses and Aaron. This was their national education.

So God's children are trained by joy, sorrow, toil and affliction, weaned from the world, and brought to "declare plainly" that their rest is in heaven.

3. THEIR PROTECTION. Having dwelt on these facts the past three months, it is enough here to name them (a) Deliverance at the Red Sea, (v. 6), details given in (v. 7), and (b) In the wilderness. (c) From the Amorites who attacked them (Josh. xi. 10), and lost everything, and from Balak of Moab (Numb. xxi. 5), who tried to match the supernatural with the supernatural (v. 9), but in vain, (v. 10), for God delivered you out of his hand.

So God keeps his children from Satan and all their enemies. See 1 Pet. i. 5. but not without their obedience to his will. See following verses. 13, 17, 21, 22,; and v. 9, 10. See John x. 29.

4. PROVISION FOR THEM. He gave them the land of Gilead on the other side of Jordan, and the land of the Amorites (Num. xxi. 31), and from Jericho onward he made them victors (v. 11). The phrase "send hornets," employed here and in Ex. xxiii. 28, and Deut. vii., 20, is by some taken literally for noxious insects by which, as we see in our own time, the condition of a country can be changed; by others, with more reason, as a proverbial expression for terrifying. In either case it was not their prowess that conquered (v. 12), nor their industry that built the cities and planted the vineyards (v. 13). It was God's clear gift to them—an "inheritance," which is not one's earning, or a gift from a stranger, but from one's father.

So it is with all saints (i. Pet. i. 4). How much they get! "Heirs of God" (Rom. viii. 17). How much they have! (1 Cor. iii. 21-23). How well they are served! (Rom. viii. 28). How much awaits them! (2 Cor. iv. 17; 1 John iii. 1-3 —S. S. World.

A Conversation on Lotteries for Boys.

BY MRS. EZRA. A. COOK.

[Designed for boys from 12 to 18 years of age.]

Alfred, John, James, Russell, } Opposed to them.

Preston, in favor of them.

George, doubtful.

Thomas, trifling.

Alfred.—Good-evening, boys! Take seats. I am glad we are going to talk about lotteries this evening for I have just been reading a letter about them which I want you to hear.

Thomas.—I think we have a real dull subject. I fear it will give me a headache to consider about it. We might talk of something more entertaining.

John.—We need a few grasshoppers and butterflies in the social as well as in the physical world, but (turning to the other boys) if our country is overrun with persons who cannot listen to reasoning on moral questions we will all go to ruin. If Satan can prevent our thinking about lotteries, Sabbath-breaking, intemperance, profanity, and secret societies, he will give us plenty of subjects adapted to our weak intellects and sooner or later we will see that Hosea tells the truth when he says that "People are destroyed for lack of knowledge."

Thomas.—I do not mean to be a grasshopper or a butterfly.

Preston.—I have yet to learn the harm in permitting lotteries. Every man knows that the chances are against him if he invests in them.

If he loses his shares, it is just what he might have expected. "Fools because of their transgressions" are always afflicted, and lotteries may as well be the cause of their affliction as anything else.

James.—The fact that fools transgress and are afflicted instead of being an argument, for those who are wiser, to leave temptations in their way, is a strong reason for removing them. "Man at his best estate is altogether vanity," and if we do not try to fill up the pits which the wicked dig for the simple, we are responsible for them and sooner or later will fall into them ourselves.

George.—I am inclined to think that opposition to lotteries comes only from antiquarians and the most orthodox of Christians.

James.—If the opposition comes from such a source, it should sweep away all arguments in favor of them. Antiquarians who have enough spirit to oppose modern evils, have doubtless obtained clear views of error from studying the records of the past, and hope to induce us to profit by them. If we were all antiquarians I believe ours would be a wiser and happier nation. As to the orthodox, those who believe the Holy Scriptures, who try to keep God's commandments and are "watching unto prayer with all perseverance," they, certainly, before all others are the persons whose judgment is reliable. But in fact they are not alone in opposing lotteries. English LAW declares lotteries to be public nuisances, and all grants, patents or licenses for the same contrary to law. Our own State, Illinois, has passed stringent laws against them; and the leading Chicago daily papers have lately been fined for advertising them.

George.—Can you quote the laws? I have often heard them alluded to but I would like to see them for myself.

James.—I will find——.

Russell.—I have them, excuse me for interrupting you.

James.—Go on.

Russell.—Copied from the statutes of Illinois I almost know them by heart. Here they are:

"If any person or persons shall hereafter keep an office, room or place, for the sale or other disposition of lottery tickets in this State he, she, or they, for such offense, shall be fined in a sum not less than $100, nor more than $500, with costs of prosecution.

If any person shall vend, sell or, otherwise dispose of any lottery tickets in this State he, she, or they shall be liable to indictment, and on conviction thereof, fined in a sum not less than $100, nor more than $500, and shall stand convicted until the fine and costs are paid."

Alfred—(rising.) This letter which I have been reading is from California, and shows that such laws as you have read are necessary for the promotion of industry and happiness.

The writer of this letter is in San Francisco, and speaking of the great lottery held there some time ago, he says: "It would have been better for our city had an earthquake sunk the Merchantile Library Association Building fine, artistic, and useful as it undoubtedly is, ten thousand feet deep under ground, than that this lottery should have been called into existence to save it from the clutches of the sheriff. The two earthquakes which shook us up worst, and caused the greatest damage and destruction of life and property, were absolute blessings to our community as compared with this accursed lottery. The whole population are mad with the hope of winning sudden wealth without labor."

Preston.—The Bible is the source of all truth, and does it not approve of lotteries? In the Temple service they cast lots. They casts lots to see who caused the storm when Jonah was thrown overboard, and even the disciples cast lots to see whether Joseph or Matthias should take the place among them which Judas had vacated.

Alfred.—It is true the Bible tells us of a few questions which were decided by lot, usually, after a solemn appeal had been made to God for a just decision: as King Saul prayed unto the Lord of Israel "Give a perfect lot," when an important decision hung on that test. The only use, of the lot mentioned in the Scriptures, seems to be to decide questions which could not be settled on their own merits. The high priest could not discern by any exercise of judgment, between two goats, equally perfect, which should be set apart to bear the sins of Israel into the wilderness. The nearest approach to gambling occurred when the Roman soldiers cast lots for Jesus' coat. They are characterized in the Psalms as "dogs" and the "assembly of the wicked." You can see, then, that the modern lottery in which men sometimes risk all they possess in hope of winning a fortune is not the ancient casting of lots. The use of deception can be as easily justified from Bible history as the operation of lotteries. There is no valid argument in it for either.

John.—A man would not be apt to invest much in lotteries if he read the Bible carefully. It would tell him: "In the sweat of thy face thou shall eat bread. He that hasteth to be rich hath an evil eye and considereth not that poverty shall come upon him." He would hear Paul's exhortation "that with quietness they work and eat their own bread."

James.—Nor would a man sell lottery tickets if he heard the command of God to have a "just weight" and a "just balance." The precepts of the Bible all condemn the spirit which inhabits lotteries, and wherever they are "legalized and generally patronized, the great mass of the people are always idle, dissolute, ignorant, superstitious, unenterprising and miserably poor."

George.—Well, boys, our time is up. You know we only had fifteen minutes. I am glad to learn so much about lotteries, and I hope if we ever have a voice in public matters it will be raised against betting, church fair raffles, gift enterprises and gambling in every form, lotteries included.

(If this conversation is used in other States the law of that State can be substituted for the law of Illinois).

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 8, 1875.

Now that the good Mr. Train is dead we feel increased responsibility about Christian tobacco-using. Read without fail the article in this Cynosure by a Chicago lumber merchant. It has the tough-and-tumble ring of pine logs in it and crushes like them. It is decidedly the ablest article we have seen; none the less forceful for treading on the "scavenger dresses" of our fashion-blinded women.

MASONIC DESCENT ON WHEATON.

Wheaton College was founded and sustained by Wesleyan Methodists some twelve years. Profs. Matlock and R. F. Markham, the financial agent, came into the Illinois State Congregational Association at Bloomington, Ill. (1859) and proposed to transfer the institution to the control of the Congregationalists, provided the principles of the Wesleyans, which were unreservedly Congregational principles, should be sacredly maintained. The result was that the senior editor of the Cynosure became President of the College in 1860, fifteen years ago.

From that moment the Freemasons have given their profound attention to Wheaton. And all that numbers, money and malice could do has been attempted for the overthrow of the College or the destruction of its President.

Within a few months after my arrival I received a letter from the then Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Illinois, proposing to patronize the College and requesting an interview on the subject at his office in Chicago.

The Master of the Wheaton local lodge volunteered, unasked, to subscribe one thousand dollars to our funds. He never paid it, but used information gained of our affairs to sink us sixteen hundred dollars. Masons then moved certain of our students to violate the rules by joining a lodge, and when the rules were enforced and the students suspended, the lodge master prosecuted the college in our circuit and Supreme court, but was beaten.

In a revival of religion several members of the Wheaton lodge joined the College church under the rule requiring total abstinence from Freemasonry. No means have been left untried to debauch the consciences of those members.

Letters have been written warning the Freemasons of Illinois to oppose the College; and while H. G. Reynold's paper lived at Springfield it teemed with Masonic vilification and abuse. Freemasons in the neighboring towns east and west on the railroad are making Wheaton their Masonic center. A "Chapter" has lately been organized in Wheaton, chiefly of Masons residing elsewhere. And when our citizens held a meeting in the Wesleyan church, to inquire into the nature of the secret institution thus quartered upon them, much wrath and indignation was excited by Masons, and offers of money from Chicago and elsewhere were made to erect a magnificent hall for these different orders. An attempt is made to connect the trustees of the College with the order by getting one to endorse the lodge by owning stock in a proposed Masonic hall; and one prominent trustee who promised to put his Masonry in with Paul's offensive "meat" and "eat no more while the world should stand," has gone back like the dog to his vomit and, by request left the Board of Trust.

God, who made heaven and earth, has thus far sustained the College, and will sustain it while we serve Him. Fifteen new members joined the College church last communion, and many others are hoping in Christ. We have thus far stood without denominational shelter, and by the help of those who hate darkness and love light. Hitherto we have obtruded the College very little on the readers of the Cynosure. But if you are not awake to importance of Wheaton, the lodge certainly is awake.

We have a charming set of students. We count it a privilege to have our children among them. Our graduates are already a power in American affairs. We have some splendid rooms for young ladies yet unoccupied. Let more rooms be filled. The Spring term opens April 8th. Write for information to J. BLANCHARD,

President, Wheaton, Ill.

POISONING FAMILIES.

We have often called attention to the fact that the "Religious" press, falsely so called, is rapidly corrupting the Christian families of the United States; and that unless some method can be devised by which Christians can be deterred from taking infidel papers with the name "Christian" at their head, the very name Christian will become a by-word in the next generation.

Oliver Johnson, managing editor and maker-up of Beecher's Christian Union, has just been on the witness stand in the great Brooklyn trial, where he thus gives his religious belief:

"Witness answered that he called himself a Christian, not as distinguished from a Jew, but according to the New Testament. In some respects he is a Universalist, and believes all human beings will eventually be saved—every child of Adam. Witness can't tell how long he entertained that belief. That is only one item in the Universalist belief."

Mr. Johnson further said to the examining attorney (Fullerton) that he had belonged to a branch of the "Hopedale Community" for a time and edited their paper, The Practical Christian, for them. He also informed the court that he had been excommunicated from the Congregational church in Middlebury, Vt. Being asked if he was a spiritualist, he answered: "I am a spiritualist but no damned fool" "I believe sincerely that I have received communications from dear friends in the other world." He said he had several times received the communion in Mr. Beecher's church. He said he believed in the 'divinity' but not in the "deity" of Christ, and defined his idea of the inspiration of the writers of the Bible thus: "Writing honestly their serious thoughts with earnest conviction that what they are saying is true." We have heretofore and repeatedly assured our readers that this same Mr. Oliver Johnson, while Mr. Bowen's office editor of the Independent, assured us that he did not believe in the miraculous birth of Christ, or that "he wrought the miracles attributed to him in the New Testament."

Yet we are in receipt of letters from excellent and honest Christian men who take the Christian (?) Union, edited by this vulgar and vile infidel for their children's Sabbath reading! And, what is still worse, the leading Congregational and some Presbyterian papers recognize and refer to this paper as belonging to the fraternity of evangelical papers, teaching the way to heaven! Even the Advance says in a recent circular, as a motive to subscribe: "The Advance takes rank with the Christian Union and New York Independent." True Mr. Bowen received of Johnson a written bond that he would not put his peculiar opinions into the Independent. But a woman who is an harlot is just as properly a governess and teacher of morals and religion to our daughters, under a writing not to teach free love, as such a man to furnish religious reading to Christian families! Nay, it is blasphemy to put up such a man to edit a paper to teach the orthodox ideas of God, the atonement, heaven and hell, not one of which he believes in for himself, while teaching them for others. A thousand times better were it to remove all restrictions, and let such a man utter and publish his belief or no belief! That might be at least honest; but to choose such a man to furnish our religious literature, and welcome him as a communicant in Congregational churches is to add insult to injury eternal.

We commend this topic for grave discussion and action at our National Anniversary in Pittsburgh, June 8th, next. And when our cause is a little further on, let us make the taking and sustaining such prints as contraband as obscene literature, and as disciplinable in our churches. Otherwise the precious truth of God must surely perish out of the earth.

AN AMERICAN CARDINAL!

Two late events are significant of the designs of the Pope in this country. First, is the offer of the red hat of a cardinal to Archbishop McCloskey of New York; and second, the raising of the dioceses of Boston, Philadelphia, Milwaukee and Santa Fe to the dignity of Archdioceses and their respective bishops to the rank of archbishops, besides the appointment of seven new bishops. McCloskey is ranked by Purcell of Cincinnati, but the latter has all along held out against the infallibility dogma which the Pope is determined to enforce. Hence he has also rewarded Archbishop Manning of England with a cardinal's hat for his reply to Gladstone—he first English cardinal since the days of Elizabeth. The appointment of cardinals shows also that the Pope feels constrained to recognize the power and number of his followers in these Protestant and liberally governed countries, for they are probably the first instances where the office has been given outside a Catholic monarchy.

The increase of bishops marks either progress in Romanism or an effort to stimulate the church and strengthen its weak points, which lie very close to our public schools and open Bibles. Before the late appointments there were in this country 7 Catholic archbishops, 53 bishops, 4,873 priests and 6,920 churches, chapels, and stations. It is claimed that the growth of papacy has been rapid in the past forty or fifty years and their papers point to New England in proof, where in 1825 there was one priest in Massachusetts, one in Maine and one in New Hampshire. In 1835 there were 27 priests and 22 churches. In 1844, the membership in New England was about 60,000, and there were 30 priests and 37 churches. In 1875, there are about one million of Catholics, with one archbishop, five bishops, 441 priests and 432 churches. But this increase is mostly due to immigration.

The power of Rome is showing itself in another way. The struggle in Germany and England with the hierarchy is familiar. A French journal lately published from a South German correspondent the following statement, given the writer by a Jesuit priest a few years since:

"Our order of Jesuits will soon be the conqueror of Europe and America. In Europe Liberalism is far too inactive to hinder our labor enduringly. The thing is more difficult in England, but even there success is certain. Before the lapse of fifteen years we shall have converted so many peers that the Protestant legislative machinery will be completely obstructed by our Upper House majority whenever it may desire to work against us. We shall have a Catholic Upper House even before it shall be thought of in England that the church wishes to re-establish her domination there."

Add to this a statement from the Boston Pilot, a leading Catholic organ, a short time ago:

"Just wait a few years longer, till we send half a dozen priests to the House and a couple of Catholic bishops to the Senate—and see then what is thought of 'clergymen' in Congress. Perhaps we'll pick out Jesuit priests, too!"

Such expressions have some significance with Bismarck, who lately stated that he had proofs that the French government was urged on to war by the plots of the Jesuits, who were probably as much astonished as Napoleon at the result. And they may be of moment to Americans, since the first Roman Catholic ever elected by the Senate of the United States, Kernan of New York, took the oath of that body on the fifth of March. He was elected as a Democrat, it is true, not as a papist; but the fact must flatter the ambitious papists both sides the water.

Another fact of more importance than any other is the efforts of the Romish Propaganda among the freedmen.

A few years ago a college was founded at Mill Hill, near London, England, by funds collected from Irish, English and American Catholics. The priests educated here form an association called "St. Joseph's Society of the Sacred Heart for Foreign Missions"; and the first mission given to it has been to the colored people of North America under the orders of the bishops of the United States. Funds have been all along collecting in this country for this object, and forty men are now preparing for this work. Bishop Vaughan of England came over some two months since with a number of priests to begin the work of proselyting among the freedmen. Their work is aided by the unfriendliness of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches North and South, and the caste almost universal in these and other churches of the whites at the South. The dregs of slavery fatten the papal beast. A Virginia correspondent of the Boston Globe, who has studied this movement says he has indisputable evidence upon the following statements:

First, That if the Protestant churches of the South maintain caste in the worship of God, and in the theological seminaries for the education of youth for the ministry, then the colored people will go over, finally, to the Catholic church.

Second, That if the Protestant North abandons the blacks on the issue of civil rights, then the blacks of the South will join the monarchical party, which is gaining rapidly at the South, and which has its active disciples in every community from among the colored people.

We cannot do better, in warning Protestant Americans of the dangers that threaten from the papal power, than to quote from a letter of Father Chiniquy, a converted Romish priest and faithful advocate of the true gospel of Jesus Christ amid persecutions. He says:

"It is evident that if a prompt remedy is not soon applied to that strange and incomprehensible folly of the most influential citizens of this Republic, it must fall, before long, into the hands of the Jesuits. When that day will come, the eyes of the blind will be opened and the sleeping multitudes will be awakened just as they were when they heard the echoes of their valleys and mountains repeating the thundering cannons of Fort Sumpter. But will it not be too late? The next thing after this awakening will be a bloody and civil war, such as the world has never seen, between the Protestants, who will refuse to accept the chains forged for them by the Jesuists, and the Romanists, into the hands of whom the politicians and the theologians are surrendering to-day the strength, the powers, and the resources of this young and mighty country.

Would it not be wiser to prevent these terrible conflicts, by showing to this nation the error of its theologians and the cowardice of its politicians in dealing with the slaves of the Pope as if they were Christians and true lovers of Liberty?

NOTES.

—Friends in Michigan will please notice the change of their State meeting from Linden to Fenton, March 30th.

—The lodge has not altogether succeeded in silencing pastor Koerner of Williamsburg, N. Y., who was so summarily dismissed from St. Paul's Lutheran church lately, because of his adherence to the rule of the church against secret societies. A large part of the church refused to dance to the music of the lodge and kept their pastor. The Masonic party, the real seceders, have asked several ministers to preach for them and have been refused. The independent Baptist, J. Hyatt Smith, will give them a few lectures on the loveliness of Masonry, as a gift, same as he does the lodges of Brooklyn.

—Col. J. J. Hickman of Kentucky, the head of the Good Templar order in this country and the rest of the world, told a reporter that he had initiated "with his own hands" 45,000 people and that there are 700,000 members of the order in the United States. There are in the "Cold Water Temples" a hundred thousand children getting ready for matriculation in the Templar order, and a course of secret instruction in the various lodges, graduating in the Ku-Klux. Mr. Hickman aside from his enthusiasm in secrecy, seems in earnest against intemperance in Georgia, and is arousing the people against the accursed traffic.

—We have given considerable space to friend Blanton of Kansas, in this number on a topic aside from our usual matter. We cannot discuss inflation or specie payments at length, but incline to think that the poor of Kansas or any other State, will, on the whole, be better off the sooner our national currency is brought to a more substancial basis. Nor could the government open a national pawn-shop to furnish money to its citizens.

—Springville Grange, No. 1,662, of Pottawattamie county, Iowa, in session assembled, declared themselves free and independent from all the authority of the national and State granges, and that their connection therewith is dissolved. The grievance alleged was that the grange had lost all confidence in the national and State officers; that the finances had been mismanaged, and the grange kept from the annual passwords.

Odd-fellowship.

ITS DOCTRINE AND PRACTICE EXAMINED IN THE LIGHT OF GOD'S WORD, AND JUDGED BY ITS OWN UTTERANCES. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. Bound in boards. Price 75 cents, post paid.

We have just completed the perusal of this clear, convincing book and would recommend it as an important companion for Odd-fellowship Exposed. Every Christian who contemplates joining the Odd fellows, or who is now connected with the order, should read the book carefully and prayerfully. Clergymen and lecturers will find much in this book to assist them in showing their hearers the wiles of Satan by which he leads so many captive at his will.

Notice.

Ex-members of the various secret temperance orders, K. G. C. L. L and K. of H. are requested to send their address, number of degrees taken, name and number of lodge, and date of leaving the order and what order, to the undersigned, immediately. All communications strictly confidential.

S. G. Barton,
Apalachin, N. Y.

Political and Financial—Reforms in the National Currency.

Coffeyville, Kas., March 8, 1875.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

I am of the opinion that it will be very important to embody the right kind of a financial plank in our next national platform, and would like to see something like the following:

Sec.—That we declare in favor of abolishing the national banks and the payment of the 5-20 bonds in legal tender notes (greenbacks) without delay. The currency should be issued direct from the government and loaned to the people at not more than 2 or 3 per cent. per annum secured by first mortgage.

I believe we should pay gold for gold, silver for silver, and greenbacks for greenbacks. Our Saviour said on one occasion, "For with the same measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again." The bondholder measured greenbacks to the government for the bonds, and I believe it to be right and just to return the same measure in redeeming these bonds; for it will be remembered that when the majority of the 5-20's were gold, that gold was very high, that monied men would first sell their gold for all they could get, and then buy bonds at a discount with greenbacks. So that they have not more than 35 per cent. in gold in these bonds. The government is bound only to pay the interest in specie; but to pay the principal and interest both in gold would be paying three dollars with interest for one invested, while on the other hand the soldier and producer gets only one dollar without interest for three dollar's worth of service. It is this kind of legislating in favor of the rich that has prostrated the country and is fast filling it with distress and destitution. The wise Solomon said, "He that oppresseth the poor to increase his riches, and he that giveth to the rich shall surely come to want." The currency has been contracted into interest bearing bonds till it is oppressing the poor for the benefit of the rich, and the party in power has been giving to the rich till the people have come to want. The government loans money to monopolies for nothing (National banks) and makes the people pay for it. The government should control the currency in the interests of the people and loan it for not more than 2 or 3 per cent. per annum. This policy would make the currency regulate itself; when there was too much money the borrower would pay up and redeem his mortgage, and when there was not enough he could borrow again.

Of course this policy is not in the interests of monopolies and men who make a business of loaning money at high rates of interest. They could invest their capital in railroads, canals, and manufactories, but would be in the interest of the laboring and producing classes, and would be doing the greatest good to the greatest number.

Monopolies have had so much encouragement that nearly every little town in this State has about as many banks as saloons, and the way they are conducted it is hard to tell which is the most respectable, for they loan for 3 per cent. per month to men in distress on first mortgages. This is a ruinous rate. This class of men are all in favor of returning to specie payment because it will increase the value of their capital. Our national, State and county and some private debts were created under an inflated currency and the nearer we approach a hard money basis, the harder it will be to pay these debts, and the harder times will be. Greenbacks were issued as a war measure and must last at least till the war debt is all paid; and I think longer, for it is the best paper money we ever had.

The great destitution in our State and in fact the whole country is more the result of mismanagement of the finances than to any other cause. The following facts will prove: In 1866, Kansas was worse devastated by grasshoppers than last year, and in the middle of March, 1867, corn sold at Humboldt for $2.50 to $3.00 per bushel and flour for $9 50 to $11.50 per hundred, and other provisions in like proportion. Great numbers of horses and cattle died for want of feed. Gold was but little higher than now; and the strangest thing of all there was no destitution. The only reason for this is that there was plenty of money and a great demand for labor which is always the case when there is plenty of money. The laborers and mechanics starved out two years ago when corn was worth fifteen cents per bushel, and they are still starved out. Last year the wheat crop escaped the plague and was a good crop, and the farmers and laborers are starving out when there is plenty of flour at this place, and at nearly every little town in southern Kansas it can be got for $2 50 to $2 75 per one hundred pounds, cheaper than I ever knew it before in this State; and according to the reports of relief committees, we have at this time over three thousand destitute people in this county who have no money or credit, nor the wherewith to sustain life twenty days, nor the means to procure it. They are mostly able bodied and willing to work, but no one is able or willing to hire them. It is even worse in some of the older counties. The distress in some districts beggars description. In others, deaths are reported for want of necessaries to sustain life, and that too when breadstuff is so cheap. The reason for this distress is that there is no money to be got at living rates, nor any demand for labor of any kind. Money is too valuable to invest in improvements, but kept to loan at 3 per cent. per month to men in distress who can give a first mortgage on land worth five times the amount loaned.

If we had as much money in circulation now as we had in 1867 we would have no beggars in our county. If our farmers could go to a Government Commissioner at the county seat of each county and borrow one, two or three hundred dollars at 2 or 3 per cent. per annum, we would not have any destitution. Money at this cheap rate would be used in improvement, and labor would be in great demand, all kinds of business would revive and the gloom that hangs so heavily over the country would soon pass away. To accomplish this result will be hard work, for the government in all its departments is run by rings and monied monopolies which are harder to overcome than the slave monopoly.

Would like to here from abler men on this subject. Yours truly,

N. B. Blanton.

The Home Circle.

Knowledge.

I grieve not that ripe knowledge takes away
The charm that Nature to my childhood wore,
For, with that insight, cometh, day by day,
A greater bliss than wonder was before;
The real doth not clip the poet's wings,—
To win the secret of a weed's plain heart
Reveals some clue to spiritual things,
And stumbling guess becomes firm-footed art:
Flowers are not flowers unto the poet's eyes,
Their beauty thrills him by an inward sense;
He knows that outward seemings are but lies,
Or at the most, but earthly shadows, whence
The soul that looks within the truth may guess
The presence of some wondrous heavenliness.

—J R Lowell.

Rev. Wm. Tennent's Trance.

A correspondent of the Springfield Republican, writing from Freehold, N. J., says:

"Little need be said about Rev. William Tennent; he is nearly as well known in America as Whitefield and Wayland. He was a characteristic American minister of the 18th century, and the like of him we do not see in these days. He was a noble, holy man, but he did not really live in this world. His conversation was in heaven. His was an eloquence of a powerful sort, and he was capable of making it very uncomfortable for the sinner. Born in Ireland, he came to this country when thirteen years old, and after a severe course of training, under which he became an accomplished scholar, he took charge of the First Presbyterian Church in Freehold. A tablet in the meeting-house tells us that he ministered to this parish 43 years and a half, and died in 1777 at the age of 71. The most noted event of his life was a three days' trance during which, he afterwards asserted, he visited heaven. He had been in ill health for some time and had become very despondent in regard to his prospects for eternity. He was conversing with his brother in Latin on the state of his soul, one morning, when he fell and seemed to die. He was duly laid out, and the people were invited to the funeral, but the physician, seeing signs of life, in spite of the fact that he had every external appearance of a dead man, induced the friends to postpone the obsequies to the third day. The third day came, but no life to the corpse. The guests were assembled, but the physician begged for an hour, then half an hour, then fifteen minutes, the brother of Tennent getting very angry meanwhile at the efforts to restore him. The brother had given a positive command that the ceremonies should proceed, when the candidate for burial gave a terrible groan and attempted to rise. The good people of Freehold were cheated out of that funeral. It was several weeks before Tennent fully recovered, and it was found that he had lost all he ever knew, so that the work of teaching him reading and writing had to be commenced; but, one day, he felt a sudden shock in his head, and all his Latin and Greek and theology came back to him. Tennent's description of the region into which his spirit went, while his body lay dead, is simply that of heaven. He saw the happy throngs, heard the sweet music, and was just asking permission to join the angel bands, when he was sent back to earth. He never would talk much about his celestial journey, but said he would leave a full account of it among his papers when he died. Unhappily his story has not been found to this day. He had one or two other experiences of the same sort, though none so remarkable. Tennent is buried under the very centre of the church, and everybody who passes up the broad aisle treads above his head. The old church is much as it was when he preached in it, the seats having been changed a little, to make them less like instruments of torture, and the luxury of a stove having been introduced; our severely pious forefathers didn't have any fire in church, outside their own ribs, you know. The building has been much mutilated by lovers of relics, and the walls are now protected by a layer of shingles.

Sunshiny Friends.

A friend in need, a friend indeed.

Friendship is not a plant of hasty growth,
Though planted in esteem's deep fixed soil;
The gradual culture of kind intercourse,
Must bring it to perfection—make it flower.

One of the hardest trials of those who fall from affluence and honor to poverty and obscurity, is to discover that the attachment of so many in whom they confided, was a pretense, a mask, to gain their own ends, or was a miserable shallowness. Sometimes, doubtless, it is with regret that these frivolous followers of the world desert those upon whom they have fawned; but they soon forget them. Flies leave the kitchen when the dishes are empty. The parasites that cluster about the favorites of fortune, to gather his gifts and climb by his aid, linger with the sunshine, but scatter at the approach of the storm, as the leaves cling to a tree in summer weather, but drop off at the breath of winter, and leave it naked to the stinging blast. Like ravens settling down for a banquet, and suddenly scared by a noise; how quickly, at the first sound of calamity, these superficial earthlings are mere specks on the horizon!

But a true friend sits in the center, and is for all times. Our need only reveals him more fully, and binds him more closely to us. Prosperity and adversity are both revealers, the difference being that in the former our friends know us, in the latter we know them. But notwithstanding the insincerity and greediness prevalent among men, there is a vast deal more of esteem and fellow-yearning than is ever outwardly shown. There are more examples of unadulterated affection, more deeds of silent love and magnanimity, than is usually supposed. Our misfortunes bring to our sides real friends, before unknown. Benevolent impulses, where we should not expect them, in modest privacy, enact many a scene of beautiful wonder amidst plaudits of angels.

The best and surest way to have friends, good and true, and always good and true, is, first of all, to make God our friend—then, he maketh even our enemies to be at peace with us.

"O let my Friendship, in the wreath,
Though but a bud among the flowers,
Its sweet fragrance round thee breathe,
'Twill serve to soothe thy weary hours."

D. F. N.

A Good Education.

Most American parents resolve to give their children a good education, but the popular idea of what this means is a very vague one. An education is supposed to be a superior knowledge of books, which will in some way enable the possessor of it to take a prominent position before the public. To be educated is looked upon as the prerogative of the few; the result of favorable opportunities or exceptional talent, the lack of which is in no way a fault, but a misfortune.

If parents and teachers understood better just what is included in the good education they are endeavoring to give the children under their charge, the result of our public school system would be more satisfactory than it now is. Ruskin says a man is well educated when he always tells the truth, when he keeps himself clean, when he is kind, and when he is able to take good care of himself and his family.

Edward Everett said, "To read the English language well, to write with dispatch a neat, legible hand, and be master of the first four rules of arithmetic, so to dispose of at once, with accuracy, every question of figures which comes up in practice—I call this a good education. And if you add the ability to write pure grammatical English, I regard it as an excellent education."

These definitions include qualities and attainments very desirable for all citizens to possess. To tell the truth, to keep clean, to be kind, to take care of one's self and family, to dispose of, with accuracy, all questions of figures which come up in practice, and ability to read and write well—let us not forget these things while giving attention to Hydrostatics, Acoustics, Pyronomics, etc.—Selected.

The Son Like the Father.

It has often been observed that the children of foreign missionaries, even though educated largely in the native land of their parents rather than in the heathen lands of their own birth, yet often consecrate themselves to the foreign missionary service. Thus did son after son of the late excellent Dr. Scudder, of the Reformed (Dutch) church. So has it signally been with children of Rev. Drs. Newton and Warren, Rev. J. S. Woodside, and others who having known the destitute condition of the heathen, the consecration of their parents to the work of relieving them, and the will of the Saviour to have the Gospel of his grace borne to them, have answered the question, "Whom shall we send, and who will go for us?" by saying, "Here we are, send us."

A marked example of this is just announced from India, in the case of Mr. J. C. Marshman, a son of the well-known pioneer and most devoted and useful missionary at Serampore. Deeply interested in the work to which his father was so long and thoroughly consecrated, and also impressed with the idea of a thorough Christian education having a most important part to act in the elevation and good of the heathen world, he has expended, it is stated, from his own purse alone, 30,000*l*, about $150,000 in gold, in educating natives of India. Truly, this is noble. What rich returns may yet be received from such an investment of the means or funds God has given him! Would that there were more who would use for the real and lasting good of their fellow-men the munificent gifts which God showers so largely upon them.

This Mr. Marshman is a brother-in-law of the late Sir Henry Havelock, an able soldier, and the humble but brave and faithful Christian.—Christian Instructor.

Changes in Japan.

The whole constitution of the government has been remodelled in accordance with the monarchical forms of civilized nations—with a Ministry or Council of State, Department for Foreign Affairs, War Department, Navy Department, Treasury and Finance Department, Post-office Department, Board of Public Works, Board of Education, &c.

They have also adopted the Code Napoleon as the law of Japan, organized courts, and modelled their whole judiciary system after the most approved modern forms. It is unnecessary to do more than to mention some of the principal of these changes.

The Emperor, who was a few years ago so sacred a personage that even the highest daimio of the land was unworthy to behold, or approach within a certain distance of him, now rides out openly, reviews his troops, opens railways, visits ships of-war, and even walks out with only a few attendants; his people not being compelled to kneel down when he passes.

They have thrown aside the bow-and-arrow, the spear, sword, shield, and armor, for the most improved implements of modern warfare, organizing, clothing, and drilling their army according to the European mode. They have organized a small navy, of eight or ten steamships-of-war (two of them iron-clads,) all manned by Japanese sailors, and engineered and navigated, with perhaps one or two exceptions, by native officers.

They have constructed, under the superintendence of foreigners, a dock hewn out of solid rock, for repairing ships of the largest class, and inferior to few in the world for size, perfection of finish, and equipment, with every modern appliance and invention.

They have workshops thoroughly furnished with all kinds of machinery, of the most approved kind, for building ships, steamers, and steam-engines, and making cannon and arms of all kinds, also for making clothes, shoes, knapsacks, saddles, and military accoutrements. They have constructed a railway from Yeddo to Yokohama, and are laying out others. They have a telegraph laid from Yeddo to Nagasaki, which communicates also with the rest of the world. They have erected light-houses upon most of the dangerous points of their coast.

They have printing-presses and a type foundry, several daily newspapers, and are busy in preparing and publishing dictionaries, vocabularies, phrase-books and grammars of several of the European languages, besides translating and preparing books on medicine, law, political economy, moral philosophy, natural philosophy, history, chemistry, astronomy, mathematics, and other subjects.

They have introduced the decimal system of coinage; have erected a mint furnished with the best machinery, and coin gold, silver and copper coin. They issue government paper money, and are establishing national banks; are borrowing money from England, and have a very respectable national debt.

They are changing their style of buildings, adapting them to European models, and are introducing the European costume, furniture, mode of wearing the hair, and diet, also the use of carriages and wagons in Yeddo and other places where their roads will permit.

They have introduced a regular postal system and use postage stamps.

They have conformed their calander to the European, commencing the year with the first of January.

They have suppressed two-thirds of the Buddhist temples, seized their property and revenues, severed all State connection with either Buddhism or Sintooism, and promulgated a new creed, and all that is required of their people, viz., to fear God, honor the king and love their country, obey the laws of nature and discharge the relative duties.

They have forbidden the promiscuous bathing together of the two sexes, no longer license prostitution, and have enacted laws against all indecent behavior.

They shut up their custom houses and all their public offices on the Sabbath day, and observe it as a day of rest or holiday. They have also begun to remove the edict against Christianity from many places in which it has long been placarded, have restored persecuted Christians to their homes, and abolished the office of censor. And what more, it might be asked, do they need, but to have the Gospel freely preached amongst them? This will come in due time.—J. C. Hepburn.

To BE CHRIST-LIKE.—What does the world by its hatred, and persecution, and revilings for the sake of Christ, but make me more like him, give me a greater share with him in that which he did so willingly undergo for me? "When he was sought for to be made a king," as St. Bernard remarks, "he escaped; but when he was brought to the cross, he freely yielded himself." And shall I shrink and keep back from what he calls to me to suffer for his sake? Yea, even all my troubles and sufferings I will desire to have stamped thus with this conformity to the sufferings of Christ, in the humble, obedient, cheerful endurance of them, and the giving up my will to my Father's.—Archbishop Leighton.

WORK.—Young men sometimes think it is not respectable to be at work. They imagine there is some character of disgrace or degradation belonging to toil. No greater mistake could be made. Instead of being disgraceful to engage in work, it is especially honorable. It is the useless, not the useful man who does nothing; who eats the bread he does not earn; who relies upon others to support his life. It is he who is not respectable, because he is doing nothing to command respect.

Hints to Writers.

1. Be brief. This is the age of telegraphs and stenography.
2. Be pointed. Don't write all around a subject without hitting it.
3. State facts, but don't stop to moralize—it's drowsy business. Let the reader do his own dreaming.
4. Eschew prefaces. Plunge at once into your subject, like a swimmer into cold water.
5. Condense. Make sure that you really have an idea, and then record it in the shortest possible terms. We want thoughts in their quintessence.
6. Avoid all highflown language; the plain Anglo-Saxon words are the best. Never use stilts when legs will do just as well.
7. Write legibly. Don't let your manuscript look like the tracks of a spider half drowned in ink. We shan't mistake any one for a genius though he write as crabbedly as Napoleon.

Children's Corner.

Telling Fortunes.

I'll tell you two fortunes, my fine little lad,
For you to accept or refuse:
The one of them good, the other one bad,
Now hear them, and say which you choose.

I see by my gifts, within reach of your hand,
A fortune right fair to behold;
A house and a hundred good acres of land,
With harvest fields yellow as gold.

I see a great orchard with boughs hanging down
With apples, green, russet, and red;
I see droves of cattle, some white and some brown,
But all of them sleek and well fed.

I see droves of swallows about the barn-door,
See the fanning-mill whirling so fast;
I see them threshing the wheat on the floor—
And now the bright picture has passed!

And I see rising dismally up in the place
Of the beautiful house and the land,
A man with a firey red nose on his face
And a little brown jug in his hand!

O, if you beheld him, my lad, you would wish
That he were less wretched to see;
For his boot-toes they gape like the mouth of a fish,
And his trousers are out at the knee!

In walking he staggers, now this way now that,
And his eyes they staud out like a bug's;
And he wears an old coat and a battered-in hat,
And I think that the fault is the jug's.

For the text says that the drunkard shall come to be poor,
And that drowsiness clothes men with rags,
And he doesn't look much like a man, I am sure,
Who has honest hard cash in his bags.

Now, which will you have: to be thrifty and snug,
To be right side up with your dish;
Or go with your eyes like the eyes of a bug,
And your shoes like the mouth of a fish?

—Alice Carey.

"As the Twig is Bent the Tree's Inclined.

Ali Schind, one of the Rajahs of India, was noted for the uprightness of his dealings, and for his nice sense of honor, even toward the lowest of his subjects. One day while out hunting with his courtiers he became hungry, and ordered some of the game they had taken to be dressed for an immediate repast. This requirement had been anticipated by his attendants, and they had brought with them bread, sauces, plates, and all they needed—all except salt, which had been forgotten. There was, however, a village near by, and a boy was hastily despatched to secure some. The Rajah hearing the order given, called after the lad to inquire whether he had taken money to pay for the salt. At this his attendants expressed some surprise, wondering that so great a man should trouble himself about such trifles, and adding, that those who had the happiness of living under his dominion had no right to murmer if he should claim at their hands gifts of much greater value than a handful of salt. "Justice," replied the Rajah, "is of as much importance in little as in great matters; and the fact of my conferring benefits on my subjects at one time gives me no right to oppress them in the smallest particular in another. All the wrongs and oppressions under which mankind groan began in little things, and if we would prevent great sins or great calamities, we must strive against the beginnings of evil." Let our young readers mark this, and if they desire to become good and great men, let them in childhood form habits of integrity, virtue and piety.—Children's Friend.

What Becomes of Worn-out Things?

We once saw a curious calculation which some genius had figured out, showing how much money would be saved each year if everybody in the world would wear their old shoes one day longer before throwing them away. We don't remember the figures, but they were somewhere up in the millions. And so with the old coats, hats, dresses, &c. The amount was appalling. But this mathematician evidently went upon the principle that whatever is thus thrown by has had its day, and there is no more use for it in the world. Which is all wrong. In reality there is very little of our cast-off clothing, or the refuse of our houses, that cannot be turned to some other and perhaps better account.

You all know how our paper is largely made from the cotton and linen rags which are of no use to anybody in any other shape. Old paper is used for the same purpose. If you live in the city and get up early enough in the morning you will see a whole army of rag-pickers, old men and women and little girls principally, with bags upon their shoulders, going about the streets and picking up not only the papers and rags which have been swept into the gutters that morning or the day before, but also everything else that has the least bit of value, such as bits of coal, splinters of wood, bones, old iron, etc. It is a pitiful sight to see an old woman loaded down like a beast of burden, with one of these bags upon her back, and stooping down to pick up a bit of paper that we would throw into the fire to get rid of, as if it were something very precious. When they get home and sort over the heap they sometimes have a queer collection. Yet they find a sale somewhere for almost everything. The old bones go, some of them to be made into knife handles and buttons and various other things, and some to be ground fine and used for enriching the soil; pieces of glass go to the melting-pot to be worked over; bits of fat to the soap makers; hocks and hoofs and skins of animals to the gelatine-makers to be made into glue; old boots and shoes to the cobblers; old rubbers to the India rubber works; old iron to the iron-mongers; broken crockery to the mending of roads; and bits of coal to their own fires. There is almost nothing lost.

A large trade is now carried on in old woolen rags, which used to be burned up to get them out of the way. They are taken to a mill where they are torn to pieces with long-toothed pickers, mixed with some fresh wool, and made over into felt goods, and appear again in the market as new if not quite as good as at first. It is said that we use in this country more than sixty million pounds of woolen rags for this purpose, every year. Even dish-cloths, which housekeepers usually throw into the fire when they are done with, are eagerly purchased by hop-growers in England, and used as a dressing for land, on account of the grease which they contain, and which hops like. Some very nice people would doubtless be horrified if they knew that the delicious table-gelatine which they enjoy so much was made from the thumbs of worn-out kid gloves, which thumbs are made from the skins of rats. But may be true nevertheless. Why this thumb-leather should be better for making gelatine than the original rat-skin, is said to be from the carbon which it absorbs from the curing process, and from long wear.

The gas-tar and ammoniacal liquor which, not five years ago, made gas-works intolerable nuisances, are now found to be among the most useful of substances. Mixed with other things they are made to illuminate large factories and yards: to produce naptha and lampblack; to dissolve resin, caoutchouc and gutta percha; to oil machinery; to preserve wood from decay; to make articles waterproof; to manufacture alum, sa-lammoncia and carbolic acid; as a disinfectant against cholera and other contagious diseases; and as the chief agent in producing those new shades of coloring which have been so beautiful and bewildering within the last few years.

Did you ever think how wonderful it is that of all the particles of matter which have been created, not one is ever lost? When a thing is burned we think of it as utterly destroyed. But it is not at all. It is only separated into its elements, and every atom of it is still in existence and doing some other work some other where, and so will continue to do to the end of time.—The Advance.

EXPOSITION

—:OF:—

THE GRANGE.

—‡o‡—

Illustrated with Engravings, showing the Lodge Room, Signals, Grips, etc.

EDITED BY REV. A. W. GREESLIN.

—:o:—

Entered according to Act of Congress in the year 1875
BY EZRA A. COOK & CO.,
In the office of the Librarian of Congress at Washington, D. C.

—:o:—

2. We'll seek in our labors the Spirit divine,
Our faith to renew and our heart to refine;
And thus to our members a tribute we'll bring,
While joined in true friendship our anthem we'll sing."

As Assistant Steward with candidates stops at Lecturer's desk the salute is given. SALUTE: Officers all stamp with foot and clap their hands in concert once as loud as possible.

Lecturer to Candidates:—Hold! (Seizing candidate by the shoulder as if he would arrest his further progress.)

Lecturer to Assistant Steward:—Who are these that trespass within our peaceful enclosure?

Assistant Steward to Lecturer:—Men seeking employment.

Lecturer to Assistant Steward:—By what token may we prove them?

Assistant Steward to Lecturer:—By this signet.

Lecturer to Assistant Steward:—Present it.

(Assistant Steward presents a card with these words written upon it: "An honest man is the noblest work of God.")

Lecturer to Assistant Steward:—Right, brother; conduct them to the Overseer for his examination. [They pass around the hall while Chaplain reads his lecture, and stop half-way between Lecturer and Overseer where they are met by Steward representing Ignorance.

CHAPLAIN'S LECTURE.

He that will not plow by reason of the cold shall beg in the harvest and have nothing. He that tilleth his land shall be satisfied with bread; but he that followeth vain persons is void of understanding. The hand of the diligent shall bear rule, but the slothful shall be under tribute. Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding, for the merchandise of it is better than the merchandise of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold.

Steward:—My friends, whither are you going?

Assistant Steward:—We are traveling in search of light and knowledge.

Steward:—Take advice from one whose experience is blissful. Tarry with me. The promises of progress and improvement are delusive; the road you have traveled is familiar and easy; the one you are now entering is full of obstacles, rough and uneven, environed with dangers, and leads you know not where; with me you can find ease and comfort. While others are racking mind and body in seeking something new and better, we can secure enjoyment without mental or physical exertion. Moreover come tarry with me.

Exclamation by all:—Heed him not and persevere.

Assistant Steward to Candidates:—My friends, the person who has been speaking to you is that worst of enemies to progress—Ignorance, attended by his companions, Sloth and Superstition; give them no thought if you hope to advance. (They pass on to Overseer.)

Overseer:—Who comes here?

Assistant Steward to Overseer:—Worthy and honest men seeking wisdom, who desire to become laborers in the field.

Overseer to Assistant Steward:—In what capacity can you employ them?

Assistant Steward to Overseer:—First in clearing the field, and then in breaking up the soil; and as, by diligence and application, they shall prove themselves worthy and qualified, advance them to higher and nobler duties.

Overseer to Assistant Steward:—What wages do they expect?

Assistant Steward to Overseer:—The instruction of wisdom, and not silver; knowledge rather than fine gold.

Overseer to Assistant Steward:—Are you satisfied of their integrity?

Assistant Steward to Overseer:—I am.

Overseer to Candidates:—Friends, is it of your own free will you desire to accept the position assigned you?

Candidates to Overseer:—It is.

Overseer to Assistant Steward:—It is well. Conduct them to our Worthy Master; from him you will receive further instruction.

The Assistant Steward now conducts the candidates to the Master's desk through a "field of labor." They start; (from the Overseer's desk for the Master's) come to a stile* of three steps at the entering of the "field," cross a ditch on a board, just after passing the stile, and stumble over some obstructions (round sticks of wood on the floor), and come to "plowed ground."† They pass along and soon hear the sound of axes (imitated by clapping hands). While they are passing over the stile, ditch, obstructions, etc., the Assistant Steward repeats his lecture.

Master to Assistant Steward:—Who are these men and why are they here?

Assistant Steward to Master:—they come to be enrolled as laborers.

Master to Candidates:—Are you willing to labor in clearing the field?

Candidates to Master:—I am.

Master to Candidates:—As you have no doubt discovered, it is rough and full of obstructions, but feeling confidence in your guide you came safely through. This is but an example of faith and emblematical of a higher confidence in a Supreme Being. We are constantly passing blindfold over obstacles in the field of life, confidently believing we shall ultimately arrive at the broad and pleasant fields of the paradise above. We have confidence in you that you will persevere; but before assigning you a place in our work it is necessary that you give us a solemn pledge which will not conflict with your moral, social, religious, or civil duties. With this assurance are you willing to proceed?

Candidates to Master:—I am.

Master to Assistant Steward:—Worthy Assistant Steward, you will please place the candidates in position to give the pledge. Standing at the altar, the right hand over the heart. Master (calls up,) (3 raps,) you will repeat after me the

OBLIGATION.

In the presence of the heavenly Father and these witnesses I do hereby pledge my sacred honor that I will never reveal any of the secrets of this order, or communicate them or any part of them to any person in the world, unless I am satisfied by strict test or in some legal manner, that they are lawfully entitled to receive them; that I will conform to and abide by the constitution, rules and regulations of the National Grange and of the State Grange under whose jurisdiction I may at the time be; and of the Subordinate Grange to which I may be attached; that I will never propose for membership in the order or sanction the admittance of any one whom I have any reason to believe is an improper person, nor will I oppose the admission of any one solely on the grounds of a personal matter. I will recognize and answer all lawful signs given me by a brother or sister of the Order, and will render them such assistance as they may be in need of so far as I am able and the interests of my family will permit. I will not in any manner, whatever, knowingly wrong or defraud a brother or sister of the order, nor will I permit it to be done by another if in my power to prevent it. Should I knowingly or wilfully violate this pledge or any part of it I invoke on myself total expulsion from the Order without the possibility of reinstatement, and to be forever disgraced among those who were my brothers and sisters.

Master to Candidates:—Brothers, being pledged to the rules of this Order you will now be conducted without the inner gate and prepared for further instruction.

The following song is sung as candidates retire to preparation room after obligation.

SONG.

Be faithful, O Patron, thy promise observe!
May truth to each other our union preserve!
Keep each obligation a gem of thy soul,
'Mid every temptation untarnished and whole!

This verse as candidates return and pass to Overseer:

See order and beauty rise gently to view,
Each brother and sister so perfect and true
When order shall cease and when temples decay
May each, fairer Granges immortal survey.

Assistant Steward to Overseer:—Worthy Overseer, the candidates are ready to receive the insignia of a laborer.

Overseer to Assistant Steward:—Have their names been enrolled?

Assistant Steward to Overseer:—They have.

Overseer to Candidates:—My brothers I now exhibit to you the pouch, an emblem of our Order. Its contents, as you perceive are a memorandum book, knife and pencil. The object of the book is evident. In your duties as a searcher for knowledge, there will naturally be presented to an observing mind, many new and useful ideas which might be lost if not noted down, but by putting them here you have the same for reference at any time, and new ideas are the material with which progress is made. The knife is an implement with which every laborer should be provided; in the orchard or the vineyard, fruit or flower garden it is ever at hand to prune a straggling branch, to cut off the nests of insects, or cut a plant whose nature you may wish to study; and this impress upon your mind, never ruthlessly break a twig or flower, but carefully with the knife make a smooth cut, so as not to injure the plant. So also in your intercourse with your fellow-beings correct an error kindly and with the smooth edge of affection, and do not deepen the wound you wish to heal. The plow embossed upon the pouch is also an emblem of our order. It is venerable for its antiquity. Respect it, and as a good plowman requires a steady hand and a good eye, to lay his lands straight and his furrows smooth, so in life let your aims be true and your conduct perfect, keeping the plowshare of your mind bright by deep thinking and active by use. I now decorate you with an imitation of the fawn skin pouch.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

*These steps, which are placed at the right and a little in front of Overseer's desk, are frequently made of a platform about three by five feet, and eight inches high; above that a box three by three ft., eight inches high, and above this another box one foot by three feet. When not in use they are only meaningless boxes, put away in a corner.

†The "plowed ground" consists of ten yards of strong cotton cloth made into a tick, which is stuffed with hay or shavings and sewed into ridges to resemble furrows six or eight inches across. This is placed opposite the steps.

Religious Intelligence.

—The Northwestern Branch of the Methodist Women's Foreign Missionary Society supports five missionary ladies on the foreign field, also six Bible-readers, three girls' schools, and twenty-one orphans.

—The Episcopal church in Kansas numbers twenty-nine clergymen, thirty-one congregations, 1,073 communicants, and 1,060 persons in the Sunday-schools. The contributions of the churches for the past year amounted to $15,154.

—The annual statement of the strength and condition of the Congregational churches in this country puts the membership of the denomination at 330,390—a net increase 6,712. The largest gains were in New York, Massachusetts, Ohio, Michigan, Iowa, Wisconsin, Missouri, Minnesota, and Connecticut. There was a net loss of 506 in Vermont, once a stronghold of the denomination; of 113 in Illinois, and 68 in New Hampshire. The net increase in the membership was 40 per cent larger than that of the preceding year. The number of new churches was 130; the number dropped was 52. Of the new churches, 62 were west of the Mississippi, an evidence that home missions have not been idle. The increase in the membership of Sabbath-schools has been nearly 13,000; the falling off in the contributions for benevolent purposes about $25,000.

It is stated that 48 American, British and European Protestant Missionary Societies sustain 9,418 missionaries, colporteurs, &c., having 518,000 pupils in the schools under their charge. The annual receipts of these societies are reported to be $4,500,000.

—Influential Hindoos, alarmed at the rapid decay of Brahminism, are making strenuous efforts to maintain the tottering system. Books in defense of Hindooism are printed and widely distributed. They assail Christianity with bitter hatred.

—Statistics of the Moravian church in this country for 1874 gave a total of 8,705 communicants, an increase of over 400 during the year. Including children and non-communicants, the strength of the denomination is 15,300. There are seventy-five churches in all, mainly in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota; in the Southern District the churches are all in North Carolina—thirteen in number, with an aggregate of 1,885 worshipers. The largest congregations are at Bethlehem, Pa., Hope, Ind., and Salem, N. C. The accessions to the membership in 1874 numbered 534, while 185 were excluded and dropped and 250 dismissed.

—The Sunday-school in Wales is a genuine Bible service. For not only does it include teachers and children, but also the principal part of the whole congregation. Even rough and thoughtless youth who will not attend the preaching at first, join the Sunday school which often imparts to them a new intellectual and religious life. Libraries are not common in the Welch Sunday-school, and the Bible study and discussion often embrace the most difficult doctrines, such as the fall, the flood, necessity and free will, justification, sanctification. How long Sunday-schools have existed in Wales is not known, but their general introduction and the foundation of much of their present prosperity, are due to the zealous labors of the Rev. Mr. Charles. Within ten years after he began this work, the British Bible Society sent an hundred thousand Bibles into Wales. As the Welch people were always quite noted for faithfulness in family religious instruction, such an unusual call for copies of the Scripture is a fair evidence that the Sunday-school wonderfully promotes the general study of the Bible in this country.

—The election of Dr. De Koven to the Bishopric of Illinois meets with decided opposition and disapproval. His confirmation is doubtful. Thus far a majority of the dioceses which have voted have cast their votes against him. His extreme ritualism, it will be recollected, is the cause of the opposition.

—A gracious work was experienced in the Free Methodist church of Summerfield, O., on the visit of Rev. E. P. Hart, chairman of the district. Some twenty or more professed conversion. This church was the fruit of brethren who could not fellowship the lodge from the Methodist Episcopal church.

—Something over a year ago a building with five acres of ground at Wasioja, Minn., and a library was offered to the Wesleyan Methodist connection as a gift for a seminary. It was, of course, accepted, and it is now proposed to endow it with ten thousand dollars to be raised by the sale of 100 scholarships at $100 each. Some 60 scholarships are sold. This property is situated on the bank of the beautiful Zumbro river, four miles and a half from Dodge Center, on the Winona & St. Peter railroad The surrounding country is healthful, fertile and beautiful. The building is of stone, of good proportions and of sufficient capacity to accommodate two hundred students —The United Brethren Tribune reports revivals in that church from pastors J. M. Dosh of Vanmeter, Iowa; B G. Huber, Chambersburg, Pa.; J. J. Lohr, Stanton county, Neb., and other points.

—There is no abatement in the enthusiastic welcome everywhere extended to Messrs. Moody and Sankey in Great Britain. A cable dispatch states that in the Agricultural Hall, Islington, a London suburb, 18 000 assembled to hear them. It is no mere curiosity which attracts these multitudes. The number of persons known to have been brought to a knowledge of the truth through the instrumentality of the American evangelists is a most unprecedentedly large, and that much good work has been done among those who have made no avowed and formal confession of Christ.

—Fifty or sixty have been converted and a Free Methodist class has been organized under the labors of Rev. C D. Brooks in Chautauqua Co., N. Y.

—The labors of Maj D. W. Whittle and Prof. P. P. Bliss, well-known Christian lay workers of Chicago, in Louisville, Ky., are thus described by a correspondent of the Christian Instructor (U P.), "About a month ago two laymen; Messrs. Whittle and Bliss, came to Louisville on the invitation of a number of the pastors to conduct a series of meetings. They came without any flourish of trumpets, except that the meetings had been very well advertised, and, so far as I know, there had been no very marked indications of the Spirit's presence in any of the churches; and yet almost from the first, one of the largest halls in the city has been filled to overflowing night after night. There have usually been four meetings each day. A noon prayer-meeting, presided over by one of the pastors. Then at half-past three what is termed a Bible Reading, which has been one of the significant features of the movement. From five hundred to a thousand persons have assembled daily for Bible study. Then again, in the evening, there have been two meetings, one for the unconverted, to whom Mr. Whittle preached, and the other for Christians, who met and prayed for the success of the other meeting. Mr. Whittle's sermons are very plain, practical, searching and full of the Gospel. There is no straining after the sensational; there is very little of the emotional; there is nothing remarkably striking in his address. He is very clear, very evangelical, very familiar with the Scriptures, very earnest. This is about all that I can say of the preacher. But Mr. Bliss' singing seems to me quite extraordinary. I have rarely, if ever, heard such a voice; and he sings with so much feeling and expression as often to move the strongest men to tears. In short, his singing is a power."

News of the Week.

The Country.

The ice crop of the Hudson is said to be worth more than the wheat crop of New York State.——One of the most thoroughly finished and complete school-houses in the United States is that in Washington City, named in honor of Charles Sumner. It is a colored school, and has one hundred pupils. A colored lady, who was educated in Boston, is principal.——The water, during the great flood of 1867 at Knoxville, Tenn., rose a little more than forty-five feet above common low water mark. During the recent freshet it reached a point only thirty inches below this mark. The flood has done immense damage to the railroads and country. An exchange says, "Of twenty-five mills on the French Broad, below Leadville, Tenn., only two are standing, and twenty saw and grist mills were carried away in Levier county, and over half the mills of Blount county are gone"——It appears probable that full legislative sanction will shortly be given for the construction of the Hudson River Tunnel, connecting Jersey City and New York. The work is to be executed by two companies, with an aggregate capital of $10,000,000. The tunnel is to be twenty four feet high and twenty-six feet wide, inside measurement, and it will be sufficiently depressed in the bed of the river to obviate danger from ship's anchors.——The New York Tribune has collected and forwarded $12 100 to the grasshopper sufferers on a dollar fund.—It is estimated that there are some 36.500 persons in Kansas who are destitute, and before another crop can be raised must be furnished with 750 car loads of provisions.

The City.

—A few sunny days have put to rest the fears of many business men that Chicago might be visited with a flood like that of '49. J. V. Farwell and Co., Field, Leiter and Co., and several wholesale and commission houses removed their valuables from the basement preparatory to a "break up."—It is thought Lake Michigan is nearly or quite frozen over, but the blue waters will soon be rolling.——The agent of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad at Chicago sold over $30,000 worth of tickets at his office in three days after the late reduction of fare.——Story. of the Times, has four more indictments, three for libel and one for an obscure publication, found by the grand jury.

The New Hampshire elections on Tuesday of last week gave a majority to the Republican candidates—Senator Ferry of Michigan, a Freemason, has been elected chairman of the Senate, pro tem.——The new postal law, pushed through the late Congress, just before adjournment, causes great indignation and disgust. It doubles the old rate on all packages and printed matter which have hitherto been sent at the rate of a cent an ounce. It is an infamous enactment in the interest of the express companies whose business was effected by the cheap rates.

A HISTORY OF THE REFORM AGAINST SECRET SOCIETIES.

The Carpenter Donation.

We here insert the address of the Executive Committee to the Association concerning the Carpenter Donation. (Its historical character commends it to the general reader.)

ADDRESS OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.
(Adopted Feb. 6th, 1875.)

The Executive Committee of the National Association respectfully submit to the members of said Association throughout the country, and to the Christian public generally, the following facts and considerations:

Our National Association has had a limited and precarious support since its organization in Pittsburgh in 1868. And although little has been achieved in comparison with the vast and mighty objects to be accomplished, yet something has been done.

1. We have called the attention of the nation to the secret, false worships which are displacing the worship of Christ and preying like night vampires on the vitals of the Republic.

2. We have unveiled the nature of the secret orders, and shown them to belong to the same family with Jesuitism, the commune, spirit-circle, free-love, and disorganizing clans of the South, all which place the Christian religion on a level with, or below even, the false religions of the earth.

3. We have encouraged and strengthened the hands of those Christian denominations which have seen the anti-Christian nature of the secret orders and their rites, and excluded those who adhere to them from their communion.

4. We have encouraged a goodly number who were ensnared by the lodges to come out from, renounce and expose them, while a much greater number have silently withdrawn, and less substantial men have been joining them.

5. We have called out, commissioned, and imperfectly supported a few lecturers who have been struggling to shed light on the gross darkness in which the silence of press and pulpit have enveloped the nation. Such lecturers are now wanted in every State.

6. We have started and sustained, as we have been able, a national paper, the Cynosure, which now gives weekly to nearly two thousand, or by count, nineteen hundred and ninety-four post-offices scattered through thirty-two States and five Territories from the Pacific coast to the Atlantic; and from Washington Territory, the Canadas and Nova Scotia to the States along the Gulf of Mexico. This is the fulcrum of our movement.

From this root, other papers have sprung and are springing up; and several able denominational journals are, together with these, pouring light on the one great fact that the secret orders are in their nature pagan, and destructive of Christian civilization. And, chiefest perhaps of all, we have brought, and, by God's help, are bringing many to see clearly that Jesuitism, Freemasonry and all false forms of society have one heart and one head, and must stand or fall together; that their mock-solemn forms, mysteries, and rites, are religious shams, substituted for the atonement of Christ, and so are cutting loose this globe from its God, giving back its religion to priests and its government to kings.

But, though not discouraged, but amazed rather at progress so disproportioned to its means, we are quite aware that we have only reached the twilight which precedes the day; and that to stop where we are is to falter and fall back. We must revolutionize the mind of forty millions of American people, a majority of whom will be with us when they know the truth. We must bring this country to see that every strange oath is a blasphemy, and every strange worship, idolatry. We must cast out Freemasonry from the church, the jury-box and the ballot-box; because, that while its secret empire is nascent treason, it is the most respectable and least suspected of our national evils. And it is simply obvious that no existing organizations will or can achieve this mighty work if we give up our national movement and fall back on the other forces now at work. Political parties and Christian churches, or even popular evangelical movements which have Freemasons in them, will no more uproot the lodge, than the Southern churches which had slaveholders in them, could or did destroy slavery.

It is these views, and views like these, which have led Mr. Philo Carpenter to propose to give the National Christian Association a "house and home" in Chicago, provided the friends of the cause throughout the United States will give, in good subscriptions, a sum sufficient to keep up the property which he proposes to give, and carry on the business of a national printing-house and book and tract concern in this city.

The first grand want of the cause is a secretary who shall give his whole time to the oversight and general management of the cause. Such a man is needed by this cause, as secretaries are needed by the American Missionary Association to look after and sustain teachers in the mission fields of that body.

Then we need an appropriate room fitted and kept up in such a building, for daily prayer and conference, where it will not be considered any offense against the rules to pray to God to sustain our lecturers and to overthrow "The unfruitful works of darkness" and strongholds of Satan in this country. If such a prayer-meeting can be established and kept up here, it will be frequented by the most earnest and godly men in the various The logical Seminaries of the city and its envions, and in time will leaven the whole lump of American Christianity.

Then there are multitudes of humble, faithful and godly ministers who would read and circulate the papers, books and tracts of this reform, but who cannot, and their people, until enlightened, will not buy them.

Then we need rooms for the regular meetings of a National Committee, like those occupied by the Anti-Corn-law league of England, which drove the famine wolf from their doors and gave cheap bread to the English people. If we had such rooms our meetings would be more regular and attended by increasing numbers. The bare announcement that we had such a "house and home" of reform in this city would make the night-lodges turn pale.

And not the religion only, but the politics of this country imperatively need such a national light-house of reform. Parties which have offices and patronage to distribute will be more or less corrupt until we have a "new heaven and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness." And if we may believe Bismarck, Disraeli and Gladstone, the chief danger to popular welfare and popular rights, is now coming over the nations in the shape of the sworn secrecy, priest-craft, and secrect subjugation of man to man, which this National Association has been created and brought into being to oppose.

We therefore recommend that immediate measures be taken by all friends of the cause, in the several States where the reform has spread, to raise the sum required to secure the munificent donation proposed by Mr. Carpenter to our cause; and that the subscription be reported through the Cynosure as it proceeds.

And we recommend that the most strenuous efforts be put forth in connection with our next Anniversary at Pittsburgh, June 8th, 1875, to complete the subscription and secure the building.

And we respectfully and earnestly request the Christian women of Chicago in particular, and the country at large, to aid this object by their counsels, their prayers and contributions.

Home and Health Hints.

Soap Versus Disease.— Sidney Smith said: "The degree of civilization and refinement of a family or a nation is correctly indicated by the quantity of soap it uses." Later observers and writers on health and disease fully approve this utterance of the famous wit and divine. "Cleanliness is next to godliness," and this contiguity of the two virtues is not affected in any way by the fall or rise of the mercury in the thermometer. The skin is the grand outlet of excrementitious matter from the body; it contains 28 miles of tubing. This tubing, when obstructed, cannot perform its office, and sickness follows. Cold hands and feet, the result of imperfect circulation, are often cured by keeping the skin in a perfectly healthy condition.

Want of cleanliness has more to do with the prevalence of croup and diphtheria in cold weather than many people think. Our city physicians in the consultation over the cause and cure of diphtheria give prominence to cleanliness as the best preventive. Not long since, in a fashionable house in New York, three children died of this fearful disease. Upon careful inquiry it was found that the carpets of the house, which was rented furnished, had not been taken up or dusted for many years. Curtains, carpets, and woolen garments which cannot be washed may be cleaned by thorough airing and beating, and however clean they may seem to the eye, they should undergo this process frequently. Especially is this true of blankets and other bedding.

Perfect cleanliness is a luxury, and, like other luxuries, not easily attainable by the very poor. They cannot afford the changes necessary, or the comfortable warmth and surroundings which make the bath enjoyable even in winter, and therefore it is that disease infests their dwellings. Herein is a field for the philanthropist. The bath-room is now as much a part of every first-class city and country house as is the bed-room or the sitting-room, and to this improvement is in part due the diminished rate of morality in the present and past generations. Hand in hand with personal cleanliness goes ventilation, and health follows in their train.

The Pulse.—A healthful, grown person's pulse beats seventy times in a minute, there may be good health down to sixty; but if the pulse exceeds seventy there is disease; the machine is working to fast; it is working itself out; there is a fever or inflammation somewhere, and the body is feeding on itself, as in consumption. When the pulse is quick—that is over seventy—it gradually increases with the decreased chances of cure until it reaches one hundred and twenty, when death comes before many days. When the pulse is over seventy for months, and there is a slight cough, the lungs are affected. Every intelligent person owes it to himself to learn from his family physician how to ascertain the pulse in health, then by comparing it with what it was when ailing, he may have some idea of the urgency of his case. Parents should know the healthy pulse of each child, as now and then a person is born with a peculiarly slow or fast pulse, and the case in hand may be of the peculiarity. An infant's pulse is one hundred and forty; a child of six, about eighty; and and from twenty to sixty years, it is seventy beats a minute, declining to sixty at four score. There are pulses all over the body, but where there is only skin and bone, at the temples, it is most easily felt.

Facts and Figures.

—The progress attained in the production of coal in the six leading industrial countries of the world is shown in the following table compiled in France. The figures used represent millions of tons:

	1830.	'40.	'50.	'60.	'70.	'72.
Austria				2		5
Belgium	2	4	6	10	14	16
Great Britain	30	34	56	85	118	132
France	1½	3	4½	8½	13	15
Germany	1½	2¾	4½	12½	26½	33
United States	1½	3½	5	15	59	43

These statistics show that this country ranks next to Great Britain in the production of coal, while unlike all other nations its supply is inexhaustible.

—The London Examiner says: "In sixty-six municipial elections, out of every 1,000 women who enjoy equal rights with men on the register, 516 went to the polls, which is but 48 less than the proportionate number of men. And out of 27,949 women registered, where a contest occurred, 14 416 voted. Of men there were 166,781 on the register, and 99,080 at the poll. Making allowance for the reluctance of old spinsters to change their habits and the more frequent illness of the sex, it is manifested that women do exercise the franchise as freely as men.

—A recent writer says of the extraordinary dryness of the climate of the Argentine Republic: "A bowl of water left uncovered in the morning is dry at night; ink vanishes from the inkstand as if by magic. The bodies of dead animals dry up instead of decomposing, and neither exercise nor exposure to the sun's rays produces prespiration."

—The descent of the Mississippi at Minneapolis, Minn., furnishes a larger available water power than exists elsewhere in the country, perhaps in the world. The fall, within two miles, is sixty-four feet, affording a dynamic capacity, as estimated by a capable engineer, of 124,000 horse power! Only 7,900 horse power is now employed in moving all the great wheels, saws and burr stones here; that is to say, one-seventeenth. The total is said to exceed the whole motion power—steam and power combined—that drives the 24,000,000 spindles and 4,000 mills of Great Britain. The unused hydraulic force, 116,000 horse-power, equal to the combined energies of 1,380,000 men is wasting over the falls and rushing away headlong to the gulf!

—An examination of the nine great railways which terminate in London shows that the average rate of speed at which the quickest expresses travel is forty-seven and three-quarter miles an hour. Two lines only excel this. The ten o'clock northern train from London to Petersborough runs the distance of seventy-six miles and a quarter at the rate of fifty-one miles an hour. But the broad-guage west of England trains on the Great Western make the run from Paddington to Swindon, seventy-seven and a quarter miles, without stopping, in three minutes less than an hour and a half; this is a uniform pace of fifty-three and a quarter miles an hour!

ANTI-MASONIC BOOKS,

(Not our own Publications.)

For Sale by EZRA A. COOK & CO

13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

[FOR CATALOGUE OF PUBLICATIONS OF EZRA A. COOK & CO., See page 15.]

All books sent post paid, on receipt of retail price, but BOOKS SENT BY MAIL ARE NOT AT OUR RISK.

Books ordered by express are sold at 10 per cent. discount and SENT AT OUR RISK. Party ordering must pay express charges.

Elder Stearns' Books.

Stearns' Inquiry Into the Nature and Tendency of Masonry

With an Appendix.

SEVENTH EDITION.

333 Pages, in Cloth.....60 cents.
" " " Paper.....40 "

Stearns' Letters on Masonry.

Showing the antagonism between Freemasonry and the Christian Religion,
Price, 30 cents.

Stearns' Review of Two Masonic Addresses.

In this scathing review the lying pretentions of the order are clearly shown.
Price, 10 cents.

Levington's Key to Masonry.

This is Rev. Mr. Levington's last, and in the judgment of its anthor, best work on Masonry. The contents of the first chapter are as follows: "Commencement and growth of Speculative or Symbolic Freemasonry—A table showing the thing at a glance—The nse that the Atheists made of it—Identical with Illuminism—Its connection with the French Revolntion, and with the Irish Rebellion—The action of the British Parliament with regard to it—Proofs of its diabolical pnrposes—Its Introdnction, doings, progress and designs in the United States."

The contents of the Eleventh chapter are thns startling:

"Knights of the Golden Circle—Graphic account of them by a seceding Knight, and remarks thereon, showing the identity of the order with Masonry—Qnotations from Sir Walter Scott."

This work is thrilling in statement, and powerful in argument. 425 pages,
Price, $1.35.

Light on Freemasonry.

BY ELDER D. BERNARD,

TO WHICH IS APPENDED A

Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship by a Member of the Craft.

The whole containing over five hundred pages lately revised and republished. Price $2,00

The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages in paper cover, will be sent post paid on receipt of $1.

MASONRY A WORK OF DARKNESS

ADVERSE TO CHRISTIANITY,

And Inimical to a Repnblican Government
By REV. LEBBEUS ARMSTRONG,
(Presbyterian.)

A Seceding Mason of 21 degrees.

This is a very telling work and no honest man that reads it will think of joining the lodge.
PRICE, 20 cents each; $1.75 per doz., post paid

Walsh's Review of Freemasonry

REVISED EDITION,

Is a Scholarly Review of the Institution, by Rev Jno. T. Walsh.
Price 25 cts.

Finney on Masonry.

BOUND IN CLOTH, PRICE $1.00,

CHEAP EDITION,

Twenty-five dollars per hundred, by express and not less than 25 copies at that rate,

BY MAIL, POST-PAID:

Per doz.....$3 75.
Single copy,..... 35 c.

THIRTEEN REASONS
Why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

BY
REV. ROBERT ARMSTRONG.

The anthor states his reason clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons if properly considered, will keep a Christian ont of the Lodge.

Single copy, by mail post paid..... 05
Per doz., " " 50
" 100, express charges extra.....3 50

Masonic Books,

FOR SALE AT THE CYNOSURE OFFICE.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic anthor and blisher, are the highest Masonic anthority in the United States.

Allyn's Ritual of Masonry,

Illustrated by a large number of engravings, and ontaining a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, Orange nd Odd-fellows' societies. Price, $5.00.

Mackey's Masonic Ritualist;

OR

MONITORIAL INSTRUCTION BOOK

BY ALBERT G. MACKEY,

"Past General High Priest of the General Grand Chapter of the United States, Knight of the Eagle and Pelican, Prince of Mercy," Etc. Etc.
Price, $1 75

Mackey's Lexicon of Freemasonry,

Containing a Definition of Terms, Notices of its History, Traditions and Antiquities, and an account of all the Rites and Mysteries of the Ancient World. 12 mo. 526 pages, $3 00.

MACKEY'S MANUAL OF THE LODGE,

OR

Monitorial Instructions in the Degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft, and Master Mason; with Ceremonies relating to Installations, Dedications, Consecrations, Laying of Corner-stones &c. Price, $2 00.
Paper Covers 2.00.

MACKEY'S TEXT BOOK

OF

MASONIC JURISPRUDENCE.

Illnstrating the Laws of Freemasonry, both written and unwritten.

This is the Great Law Book of Freemasonry 570 pages. Price, $2.50

Webb's Monitor of Freemasonry,

LARGE EDITION, WITH NOTES

By ROB. HORRIS, Price, $1.50.
Pocket Edition, 75 cts.

SICKELS' FREEMASON'S MONITOR.

Containing the Degrees of Freemasonry embraced in the Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery, embellished with nearly 300 symbolic Illustrations, Together with Tactics and drill of Masonic Knighthood. Also, forms of Masonic Documents, Notes, Songs, Masonic dates, installations, etc. By D. Sickels, 32 mo nack. Price $1.50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry,

A Practical Guide to the Ceremones in the Degrees conferred in Masonic Lodge Chapter, Encampments, etc. Illustrated Edition. In cloth, $1 25; paper, 75 cts.

Chase's Digest of Masonic Law.

Comprises a Complete Code of Regulations, Decisions and Opinions upon Questions of Masonic Jurisprudence. Price, $2 25.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor

Illustrated with Explanatory Engravings. Price $2.50.

Books on Odd Fellowship.

Donaldson's Odd Fellow's Text Book, By Pascual Donaldson, D. D.,

GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF NORTHERN N. Y.,

Illnstrated with numerons engravings, showing the emblems of the order. A detailed account of the Forms, Ceremonies, Funeral Services and Odes with music, and a complete manual for the guidance of Officers and Lodges. Pocket edition Tuck, $1.50.

Grosh's Manual of Odd Fellowship

BY REV. A. B. GROSH.

Containing the history, defence, principles and government of the order; the instructions of each degree and duties of every station and office with engravings of the emblems of the orders, etc
Price in Cloth,.....$2 00
" Tuck, abridged edition, 1 50

Descriptive Catalogue of Publications of Ezra A. Cook & Co.

13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

BOOKS.

FREEMASONRY EXPOSED,

by CAP'T. WILLIAM MORGAN.

THE GENUINE OLD MORGAN BOOK:—republished with engravings showing the Lodge Room, Dress of candidates, Signs, Due Guards, Grips, Etc.

This revelation is so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. Thousands have testified to the correctness of the revelation and this book therefore sells very rapidly.

Price 25 cents.

Per Doz. Post Paid..... $2.00
Per hundred by express, (express charges extra.).....$10.00

THE BROKEN SEAL.

OR PERSONAL REMINISCENCES OF THE ABDUCTION AND MURDER OF Wm. MORGAN,

By SAMUEL D. GREENE,

Price in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.
In Paper Covers per Doz. Post paid..... $4 50
" per hundred by express (ex. charges extra $25.00

That the book is one of great interest and value is shown by the following

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"A Masonic Revelation.—Mr. Samuel D. Greene is a venerable gentleman of the highest respectability, whose statements seem to be worthy of full credence. The Broken Seal: or, Personal Reminiscences of the Morgan Abduction and Murder, is the title of a book of some three hundred pages just issued by him, purporting to give a full and accurate account, from personal knowledge, of the Morgan 'abduction,' and other masonic matters which made such an excitement in this country, now almost half a century ago."—Congregationalist and Recorder, Boston.

"'Freemasonry Developed.'—'The Broken Seal: or, Personal Reminiscences of the Morgan Abdnction and Murder,' is the title of a volume written and just published by Samuel D. Greene, of Boston. The author belonged to the same lodge with Morgan, and professes to know all about that event which made such a sensation throughout the country forty years ago. The book contains the confession of Morgan's murderer, and much more curious and interesting matter, including the ceremony of initiation, etc. The author opposes Freemasonry as inimical to good government, to society, and to the Church; and the story that he here tells will make a sensation in the order, if its statements are really what they purport to be. If Freemasonry is what it is supposed by many to be, in its obligations, the author of this book must be a bold man."—Daily Herald, Boston.

"We are acquainted with Mr. Greene, and have no doubt that his account is entirely reliable, and of great historic and moral interest. Capt. Wm. Morgan was Mr. Greene's neighbor in Batavia, N. Y., and a member of the same lodge with him at the time of the great excitement in 1826. The titles to these chapters are sufficiently exciting to give the book a large sale:—'The Storm Gathering;" "Abduction of Morgan;" "Attempted Abdnction of Miller and his Rescue;" "What became of Morgan;" "What Morgan Actually Revealed;" "Confession of the Murderer;" "Allegations against Freemasonry, etc."—Boston Daily News.

History of The Abduction and Murder of Cap't. Wm. Morgan,

As prepared by Seven Committees of Citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan.

This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons, abducted and Murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offence than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife, and no candid person after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable FREEMASONS, in the Empire State, with others were concerned in this crime.

Single Copy, post Paid,... ..... 25 cents.
Per doz. " ..... $2,00.
Per 100, Express Charges Extra,..... 10.00.

Valance's Confession of The Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.

This confession of Henry L. Valance, one of the three Freemasons who drowned Morgan in the Niagara River, was taken from the lips of the dying man by Dr. John C. Emery, of Racine County, Wisconsin in 1348; The confession bears clear evidence of truthfulness.

Single copy, post paid,..... 20 cents.
Per doz. " ..... $1.50.
Per 100 Express Charges Extra,..... 8.00.

The Mystic Tie or Freemasonry a League with the Devil.

This is an account of the Church Trial of Peter Cook, and wife of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a Reverend Freemason; and their very able defence presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry, is antagonistic to the Christian Religion. Single Copy, post paid,..... 20 cents

Per dozen, post paid..... $1 50
Per hundred Express charges Extra,..... 9 00

NARRATIVES AND ARGUMENTS,

showing the Conflict of Secret Societies with the Constitution and Laws, of the Union and of the States.

by FRANCIS SEMPLE of Dover, Iowa.

The fact that Secret Societies, interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of Law is here clearly proved. price 20c.

Per dozen, post paid..... $1 75
Per hundred Express charges Extra..... 9 00

The Antimason's Scrap Book,

CONSISTING OF

21 CYNOSURE TRACTS.

In this book are the views of more than a Score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of Secret Societies.

The dangerous tendency and positive evil of organized Secrecy is here shown by the most varied and powerful arguments and illustrations that have ever been given to the public.

Lecturers and others who wish to find the best arguments against the Lodge, should send for this book.

Those who wish to circulate Antimasonic Tracts ought to have the book to select from.

Single Copy, post paid, ...20 cents.
Per Doz. " $1.75
Per 100, Express charges Extra,.....$10.00

ODD FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

A new illustrated exposition of the order. The Signs, Grips, &c. shown by engravings.

Single copy, post paid,.....$ 25
Per Doz., " " 2 00
Per Hundred, Express charges extra,..... 10 00

PHELPS' SECRET SOCIETIES Ancient and Modern.

A NEW BOOK OF GREAT INTEREST.

This work is particularly commended to the attention of Officers of The Army and Navy, The Bench and The Clergy.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

"The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Filmore's and Webster's Deference to Masonry. A brief outline of the progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion."

Single Copy, Post Paid..... 50
Per Doz " " $4 75
Per Hundred, Express Charges Extra.....$33 00

MINUTES OF THESYRACUSE CONVENTION,

Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. D. Greene, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. S. D. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. Unpublished Reminiscences of the Morgan Times, by Elder David Bernard; Recollections of the Morgan Trials, as related by Victory Birdseye, Esq., and presented by his daughter, Mrs. C. B. Miller; Secretary's report; roll of delegates; songs of Mr. G. A. Clark, paper by Enoch Honeywell; Constitution N. C. A.; reports of committees, and a report of the political meeting.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion.

A clear cutting argument against the Lodge, from a Christian stand point.

Single Copy.....$ 05
Per 100..... 3 00

SERMON ON MASONRY,

BY REV. W. P. M'NARY,

Pastor United Presbyterian Church, Bloomington, Ind.

This is a very clear, thorough, candid and remarkably concise Scriptural argument on the character of Freemasonry.

Single Copy, Post Paid,..... 5
Per Doz,..... 50
Per Hnudred, Express Charges Extra.....$3 00

COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES.

Their Customs, Character and the Efforts for their Suppression.

BY H. L. Kellogg.

Containing the opinion of many rominent College Presidents, and others, and a Full Account of the Murder of Mortimer Leggett

Single Copy, post paid.....$ 35
per Doz " " 2 50
per 100 Express charges extra..... 15 00

ANTIMASONIC TRACTS.

WE NOW HAVE 22 ENGLISH TRACTS, ONE GERMAN, AND ONE SWEEDISH These tracts are sold at the rate of $1.00 per 1000 pages.

A Tract Fund for the Free Distribution of Tracts,

HAS BEEN SECURED AND WE HOPE WILL NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fund a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE.

Many of our most earnest workers in this cause of God are poor men, who would be glad to circulate thousands of pages of Antimasonic literature if they could have them free.

SHALL WE NOT HAVE AN INEXHAUSTIBLE TRACT FUND?

"THE ANTI-MASONS SCRAP BOOK."

Contains our 21 Cynosure Tracts, bound together, price 20 cents. See advertisement.

Address Ezra A. Cook & Co.,

13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

TRACT NO. 1:

HISTORY OF MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT J. BLANCHARD, OF WHEATON COLLEGE.

This is now published in three tracts of four pages each. Price of each, 50 cents per 100; $4 per 1000.

Tract No. 1, Part First—Shows the origin of Speculative Freemasonry, and is entiled "HISTORY OF MASONRY."

Tract No. 1, Part Second—Is entitled "DESPOTIC CHARACTER OF FREEMASONRY"

Tract No. 1, Part Third—Is entitled "FREEMASONRY A CHRIST-EXCLUDING RELIGION."

TRACT NO. 1, IN SWEDISH;

translated by Prof. A. R. CERVIN. A 15-page tract at $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 2:

MASONIC MURDER,

By REV. J. R. BAIRD, of Pleasantville, Pa., a seceding Mason who has taken 17 degrees. A 2 page tract at 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 3:

SECRETS OF MASONRY,

BY ELI TAPLEY.

This is a 4-page Illustrated Tract, showing the signs, grips and pass-words, of the first three degrees. 50 cents per 100, or $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 4:

GRAND! GREAT GRAND!!

BY PHILO CARPENTER.

This is a 2-page tract, calling the attention of the public to the despotic and ridiculous titles of Freemasonry. Price 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1,000.

TRACT. NO. 5:

Extracts From Masonic Oaths and Penalties, as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.

This tract is a reprint of a tract published in 1834, and is a very weighty document. A 4-page tract at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 6:

Hon. John Quincy Adams' Letter.

Giving His and His Father's Opinion of Freemasonry (1831.);

AND

Hon. James Madison's Letter,

Giving His Opinion of Freemasonry (1832).

Both of these letters, in one 4-page tract, at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 7:

SATAN'S CABLE-TOW.

A 4-page tract. This is a careful analysis of the character of Masonic oaths, and shows them to be most blasphemous and unchristian; and the Masonic Cable Tow is clearly shown to be the Cable Tow by which Satan is leading thousands to eternal death. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 8:

Is a 2-page double tract, "Illustrated." The first page represents a Mason proclaiming the wonderful wisdom and benevolence of the order, with an article below, entitled "Freemasonry is only 152 Years Old," and gives the time and place of its birth.

The second side is entitled, "Murder and Treason not Exempted," and shows that the Masonic order is treasonable in its constitution, and is both anti-Republican and anti-Christian. Price 25 cents per 100; $2 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 9, ILLUSTRATED:

FREEMASONRY IN THE CHURCH.

Copy of a petition for the higher degrees of Freemasonry, in which Blasphemous and Despotic Titles are enumerated and prayed for. The Copy was printed for the use of "Occidental Sovereign Consistory S. P. R. S.," 32d degree—a Chicago Lodge—and was ordered by a deacon of a Christian Church who is Grand Orator of the Grand Lodge of Ill.

TRACT NO. 10:

CHARACTER AND SYMBOLS OF FREEMASONRY.

A 2-page tract, (Illustrated) by its "Grand Secretaries, Grand Lecturers, Perfect Prince Freemasons, Grand Inspector, Inquisitor Commanders, Grand High Priests," etc. The wonderful symbolical meaning of "the Cable Tow," "the Square and Compass," "the Lamb Skin, or white Apron," and "the Common Gavel," are given in the exact words of the highest Masonic authority. 25 cents per 100 or $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 11;

Address of Niagara County Association, New York,

TO THE PUBLIC;

Concerning the Morgan Murder, and the character of Freemasonry, as shown by this and other Masonic murders. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 12:

JUDGE WHITNEY AND MASONRY.

This tract contains a condensed account of Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois, on charge of unmasonic conduct in bringing Samuel L. Keith the murderer of Ellen Slade, and a member of his Lodge, to justice, with Judge Whitney's subsequent renunciation of Masonry,

An 8-page tract, $1.00 per 100; $8.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 13:

DR. NATHANIEL COLVER ON MASONRY,

and

HOWARD CROSBY, D. D.,

Chancellor of the University of New York, on SECRET SOCIETIES. A double 2-page tract 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 14:

GRAND LODGE MASONRY.

ITS RELATION TO CIVIL GOVERNMENT AND THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION.

Opening address before the Monmouth Convention, by Pres. J. Blanchard of Wheaton College. This is a 16-page tract at $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 15:

MASONIC OATHS NULL AND VOID.

A clear and concinsive argument proving the invalidity of any oath or obligation to do evil. By REV. I. A. HART, Secretary National Christian Association. Published by special order of the Association. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 16:

HON. SETH M. GATES ON FREEMASONRY.

PROOF THAT THE INSTITUTION THAT MURDERED MORGAN IS UNCHANGED IN CHARACTER

This is a letter to the Monmouth Convention by Hon. Seth M. Gates who was Deputy Sheriff of Genesee County, and also Secretary of the Leroy Lodge at the time of Morgan's Abduction. A 4-page tract, 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 17:

Origin, Obligations and Expenses of The Grange.

WITH A CONSTITUTION OF A FARMERS' CLUB.

This little tract ought to be put into the hands of every Farmer in the United States. Four-page tract, 50 cents per 100; $4 00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 18:

HON. WM. H. SEWARD ON SECRET SOCIETIES.

Extracts from a Speech on Know-Nothingism in the U. S. Senate in 1855. The testimony of JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, MILLARD FILLMORE, CHIEF JUSTIC MARSHALL and others, is added.

A 2-page tract, 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 19.

BRICKS FOR MASONS TO LAY.

WASHINGTON, MADISON, MARSHALL, RUSH, HANCOCK, ADAMS AND WEBSTER, give brief clear testimony against the Lodge A 2-page tract 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 20:

OBJECTIONS TO MASONRY.

By A SECEDING MASON, of Cornton, Vermont.

This tract contains many strong arguments against the Lodge drawn from personal experience, observation and study of its character. A 4-page tract at 50 cents per 100; $1.00 per 1,000.

TRACT NO. 21:

MASONIC CHASTITY.

BY EMMA A. WALLACE,

The author, by wonderfully clear illustration and argument, shows the terribly corrupt nature of Freemasonry. No true woman who reads this will ever speak with approbation of this institution A 4-page tract 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

GERMAN CYNOSURE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason

By REV. A. GROLE, Pastor, German M. E. Church,

WORCESTER, MASS.

This is our first German tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. Price 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

ENOCH HONEYWELL'S TRACT

TO THE YOUNG MEN OF AMERICA. Postage, 3 cents per 100. Tracts. Tracts Free.

Farm and Garden.

MARKING TOOLS.—Much bother can be saved by marking tools with their owners' name, especially in neighborhoods where communistic ideas prevail upon the ownership of implements, and where constant lending and borrowing are among the chief burdens of life. An easy way to do it is to coat over the tools with a thin layer of wax or hard tallow, by first warming the steel and rubbing on the wax, warm, until it flows, and let it cool. When hard, mark your name through the wax with a graver and apply aquafortis (nitric acid); after a few moments wash off the acid thoroughly with water, warm the metal enough to melt the wax, and wipe it off with a soft rag. The letters will be found etched into the steel.

TREE LABELS.—The Massachusetts Ploughman says that the best and cheapest labels for trees are simple strips of zinc, corroded by contact with the air, and then written on with a black lead pencil. This is said to have been an accidental discovery of Col. Wildere. When you first write on them with a black pencil, you can, if you try, rub off the name, but in a few months the name becomes permanent so that it cannot be rubbed off as long as the zinc continues to corrode. Col. Wilder has many labels that have hung on the trees thirty years, which are perfect as ever. Sometimes the name will get a little coated over with a white substance that gathers on them, but a little rubbing with a moistened finger will bring out the name with perfect distinctness.

WASH FOR FRUIT TREES.—The following is a wash used by William Saunders, of the government gardens at Washington. Put half a bushel of lime and four pounds of powdered sulphur in a tight barrel, slacking the lime in hot water, the mouth of the barrel being covered with a cloth; this is reduced to the consistency of ordinary whitewash, and, at the time of application, half an ounce of carbolic acid is added to each gallon of liquid. Mr. Saunders says: "I generally apply it in the spring, before the leaves make their appearance, but I am convinced that it would be more effective if applied later; but then it is difficult to do so when the tree is in foliage." Mr. Saunders applies to the stem of the tree, but, to some extent, to the main branches.

The Lombardy poplar, so conspicuous, but, where kept in subordinate proportion to other trees, not so inelegant a feature of European landscape, does not seem to deserve the censure cast upon it so freely in America. A grove of tall poplars is not so objectionable as a row of them in their stiff uprightness, and makes a serviceable windbreak for dwelling or orchard. But "there's money in them," and this may raise them in popular estimation. They are rapid growers and hardy, where lightness, portability, and freedom from taste and odor are required. No boards make better fruit crates and boxes than poplar.

Publishers' Department.

As all our readers have noticed, the Cynosure postage is to be paid at the Cynosure office in advance. We think about one-half of our readers have complied with these terms. WILL THE REST DO SO promptly? Some subscribers whose time is expired in one, two, three or six months from the first of January sent the postage for the whole year, but WE DO NOT CREDIT postage beyond the date of subscription. We always apply the rest of the postage in extending the subscription of the paper. We are compelled to do this, in order to keep our accounts correct.

Remember, the pleasantest way to pay postage is by the commission on new subscriptions. The commission on one new subscription of $2 00 pays the postage on two papers for a year.

We suppose a large proportion of our Michigan subscribers will be considering the best methods of promoting the Anti-masonic reform in their State during the short time remaining before their State convention in Fenton. We ask them to remember that the increased circulation of the Cynosure is one of these methods! Can they not, without much difficulty, double the circulation of the Cynosure in their State!

Some of our readers are doing all they can to enable us to give a good report of the circulation of the Cynosure on the first of April next. Are you?

Some enterprising Chicago men, fearing a flood this spring, have been removing their goods from their basements. We hope to hear that these men, with a better forethought, fearing a flood of iniquity, will remove the saloons and lodge-rooms from their city; and labor unweariedly to plant in the minds of the unenlightened the principles upon which our free government, temporal prosperity, and Christian religion rest.

Does your subscription to the Cynosure expire soon? How many new subscriptions will you send in with your renewal?

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED DURING WEEK ENDING MARCH 13, FROM—R E Adams, E S Bunce, O Bickford, J Black, J M Bryant, C L Blanchard, J H Brown, W D Beggs, J F Beauchamp, A S Badgley, S S Bradford, M W Bicknell, D W Cunningham, J W Carson, E J Chalfant, D S Caldwell, J N Crosby, R Cooley, Wm. Davis, J Dodson, A M Durfee, D Eberly, P Ezra, A C Flanders, D T Goodrich, T Griffeth, M G Ilett, J Grove, D Gass, R B Gardner, Frederick Huber, Julia A Hewitt, R B Hall, J J Hemstreet, Wm Hallowell, H J Harmon, A C Jennings, H Jenness S Jackson, E Jarvis W H Jamison, W A Kindel, L Landon, N R Luce, J Mc Ginnis, D Middagh, J B Martin, G Mc Elheny, W P Mc Nary, Keturah Miles, O Morgan, Z O-borne, W Oburn, W H Parker, J Ring W Sherman, H R Smith, S H Skinner, J B L Smith, C B Sherk, G W Satton, F R Tobias, Mary E Tynan, J F Tweedy, Mrs. M J Wheaton, S Weaver, Wm. Vineyard, S Wilder, C Williams.

TERMS FOR THE CYNOSURE.

$2.00 per annum, in advance.
20c " " " " for postage.

All who canvass for the CYNOSURE are allowed a cash commission of twenty per cent. or twenty-five per cent in books at retail prices, one-half this percentage on renewals, and any one sending $100. for the CYNOSURE during three months, will be entitled to an extra five per cent.

All responsible persons who desire to promote this reform are authorized to act as agents.

CLUB RATES.

No commission is allowed on club rates. Club rates are intended for those who wish to give the commission to subscribers.

Subscriptions may all be sent at one time, or at different times, and in all cases the sender should keep an account of the names and amounts sent.

CLUB RATES, INCLUDING POSTAGE.

Two new subscriptions, one year						$3.90
One new subscription and one renewal, sent ten days before expiration of subscription						3.90
4 new subs., 1 year.,	1	copy	free	to	sender,	8.75
5 " "	1	"	"	"	"	10.50
6 " "	"	"	"	"	"	12.25
7 " "	"	"	"	"	"	14.00
8 " "	"	"	"	"	"	15.75
10 " "	"	"	"	"	"	19.50
20 " "	"	"	"	"	"	36 00
10 Renewals	"	"	"	"	"	22.00
50 "	"	"	"	"	"	95,00

Twenty subscriptions for six months count the same as ten for a year.

Postage on the Cynosure.

THE POSTAGE ON THE CYNOSURE MUST BE PAID AT CHICAGO. It is twenty cents a year.

The cost of postage now depends entirely on the size and weight, and therefore some smaller papers charge but fifteen cents; and others about the size of the Cynosure charge twenty-five cents a year for postage.

If the subscription price of the CYNOSURE was $2.50 or $3.00 a year, the price of many religious papers containing no more reading matter, we might afford to pay the postage ourselves, but at $2.00 a year we cannot do this with our present Subscription list.

Therefore let all send the postage, 20 cents a year, 10 cents for half a year with their renewals.

The commission on one new subscription for a year will pay the postage on your own and the new subscriber's paper. We would rather have the postage paid by commissions than in any other way.

When postage is not paid we shall have to shorten the time of subscription sufficiently to pay it.

MARKET REPORTS

CHICAGO, March 13, 1875.

The following are the latest advices:

Grain Wheat—Spring, No. 1	$ 94¼	95
" No. 2	89¾	91¾
" No. 3	84¼	86¾
" Rejected		80
Corn—No. 2	64⅞	65¼
Rejected		62
Oats—No. 2	53	53¼
Rejected		50½
Rye—No. 2	96	97½
Flour—Winter	4 25	6 50
Spring	3 00	4 50
Hay—Timothy	14 50	18 50
Prairie, "	10 00	13 00
Lard		13
Mess pork, per bbl		18 12½
Butter	22	34
Cheese	10	18
Eggs	27	28
Potatoes, per bus	90	1 20
Broom corn	05½	13
Seeds—Timothy	2 10	2 60
Clover	6 20	6 50
Flax	1 90	2 50
Dressed Hogs	8 00	8 35
Chickens, dressed, per lb	11	14
Turkeys, do. per lb	12	15
HIDES green to dry salted	07	15
Lumber—Clear	37 00	55 00
Common	11 00	12 00
Lath		2 25
Shingles	1 50	3 25
WOOL—Washed	40	58
Unwashed	27	37
LIVE STOCK Cattle, extra	6 50	7 00
Good to choice	5 25	6 25
Medium	4 75	5 00
Common	3 00	4 50
Hogs	6 25	8 25
Sheep	3 50	6 50

New York Market.

Flour	$ 4 25	8 00
Wheat	1 09	1 35
Corn	85½	86½
Oats	61	70
Rye	90	95
Lard		14
Mess pork		19 37½
Butter	15	24
Cheese	12	16
Eggs	24	28

How to Send Money.

Post office orders, checks or drafts on Chicago or towns east of Chicago, and currency by express may be sent at our risk. If it is not possible to send by either of the four ways named, money in a registered letter may be sent at our risk, but it is not as safe.

The date at which subscriptions expire is with each subscriber's name on the address label. Send renewals before this date occurs. Notice if this date is changed to correspond; if not or if the paper fails to come, write without delay.

We discontinue during the first part of each month all subscriptions which expire during the preceding one except such as are ordered continued with a promise to forward the money soon. We do not like to lose a single subscriber and will not remove names simply because the cash is not received promptly, if we understand that the paper is wanted. Address all letters with subscriptions or orders for Books, Tracts and donations to the Tract Fund to EZRA A. COOK & Co., 13 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1	sqnare,	1 insertion,		$2.00
1	sqnare	(1 inch deep) one month		7.00
1	"	"	2 "	10.00
1	"	"	3 "	15.00
1	"	"	6 "	25.00
1	"	"	12 "	40.00

Discount for Space.

On 2 squares 5 per cent, On 3 squares 10 per cent
On 4 " 15 " " On 5 " 20 "
On ¼ col. 25 per cent On one col. 30 per cent

Agents Wanted!

TO SELL THE PUBLICATIONS OF

EZRA A. COOK & CO.

Liberal Terms Offered.

Capable persons who are in need of pecuniary aid may clear

Handsome Profits,

While at the same time aiding the cause of Reform. Apply to EZRA A. COOK & CO., No. 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

SOMETHING NEW.

A CHART OF MASONRY

Showing the degrees from the first to the thirty-third, entitled

Degrees of Ancient Accepted Scottish Freemasonry,

According to a Manual by Wm. M. Cunningham 33d Degree.

Designed by Rev. P. Stoddard, to explain Freemasonry, as shown by Morgan's Exposition and Richardson's Monitor.

A Neat Lithograph 22x28 Inches.

Single copies finely colored, post paid	$ 75
Per dozen " " " "	5 00
Per 100 " " " " Express charges extra	35 00
Single copy, colored, varnished and mounted postpaid	1 00
Per dozen colored, varnished and mounted, post paid	7 50
Per 100, colored, varnished and mounted, express charges extra	50 00

25 COPIES OR MORE SENT AT THE 100 RATES.

Excelsior Marriage Certificate.

It is decidedly the most BEAUTIFUL, TASTEFUL and SENSIBLE thing of the kind I have ever seen."—Rev. F. G. Hibbard, D. D.

"The most SCRIPTURAL, BEAUTIFUL and APPROPRIATE Marriage Certificate I have ever seen."—Late Rev. H. Mattison, D. D.

"SOMETHING NEW AND BEAUTIFUL, which we pronounce the handsomest thing of the kind we ever laid eyes on."—Meth. Home Journal, Phila. Contains two Ornamental Ovals, for Photographs

A BEAUTIFUL LITHOGRAPH 14 1-4 by 18 1-4 inches. 25 cts each, $2 25 per doz- $15 per 100.

For Sale by EZRA A. COOK & Co., CHICAGO.

N. C. A. Treasury Receipts for February.

GENERAL FUND:
J C. Graham, Viola, Ill	2.50
J S. Bell Longton, Kans	1.00
Philo Carpenter, Chicago	100.00
ILLINOIS FUND:
A. D. Freeman, Downer's Grove	5 00
Benj. Williams Warren	4.00
Geo. P. Bent, Chicago	5.00
J. P. Stoddard	5.00
OHIO FUND:
J. S. McClellan, Oberlin	6.00
Raised by the General Agent	50.00
INDIANA FUND:
Thos. Butler, Shoals	25
Wm. Lenty, Ligonier, by Gen'l. Agent	20 00
Publishing House Fund; by Gen'l. Ag't.	6.00
Interest	1 20
Collections by General Agent (other than above	70.31
" " Illinois Agent	20.95
Total,	$297 11

H. L. KELLOGG, Treas.

RECEIVED

For Kansas Sufferers

To be sent to Rev. S. Kretzinger: One package of clothing. Cash: James Armstrong, 50c.

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

"In Secret Have I Said Nothing."—Jesus Christ.

EZRA A. COOK & CO., PUBLISHERS, NO 13 WABASH AVENUE.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 25, 1875.

VOL. VII., NO. 24.—WHOLE NO. 259. WEEKLY, $2 00 A YEAR.

Contents.

	Page
TOPICS OF THE TIME	1
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
The Coming Political Party	8
Bismarck's Falk Laws	8
Notes	8
CONTRIBUTED AND SELECT ARTICLES:
Onward to Conquest (Poetry)	1
"Light in Masonry"	1
Not Sufficiently Informed	2
Masonic Conspiracy—II	2
Tobacco (Concluded)	2
Systematic Giving	3
The Freemason's Jewel	3
A Bold and Brave Act	4
S. D. Greene's Letter to the Lockport Convention	9
REFORM NEWS and NOTICES:
Who Holds the Keys of the Churches in Mason City, Iowa: A Faithful watchman; Notes from the Illinois Agent; Ohio—Bro. Caldwell Sick; The Cause in New Hampshire;	4, 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
A Canvasser's Experience; A Letter to Rev. W. Post; Sense and Scripture; A Methodist View; How does Odd-fellowship Compare with Freemasonry; Our Mail	5, 6
A Chronological Table of Events in Popery	7
Anti-secret Political Party	9
Gen. Phelp's Book	9
Exposition of the Grange (Continued)	12
History of the Reform against Secret Orders	13
THE HOME CIRCLE	10
CHILDREN'S CORNER	11
The Sabbath School	4
Home and Health Hints	14
Farm and Garden	14
Religious Intelligence	13
News of the Week	17
Publishers' Department	16

Topics of the Time.

In the Black Hills business the Government has been playing with the excitable American temperament very much after the style of a boy who tempted the nose of a dog with his bread and butter and rewarded the canine greediness with a blow. After sending the scalping Custer, well surrounded with bayonets, into a territory sacred by treaty from the invasion of white foot, and inflaming the cupidity of the stragglers in our Western towns with stories of gold, it is thought prudent to keep the pledge made to the nation's wards. The Cabinet advises, and the President sends orders along the line to stop all expeditions and clear the Hills of a band which wintered in the region. The Government should be praised for the latter act, if it cannot be for the former. The excitement raised by speculators to start the stream of emigration to the Hills will be checked, and the people will be saved the disappointment and ruin of another Pike's Peak furor. A branch of this business was started lately in Chicago by parties returned from the Hills. After enrolling five or six hundred names at $5 each for an expedition, they suddenly decamped. The best judges give little credit to the stories of gold, except as it would come into the pockets of transportation companies and speculators.

While Postmaster-general Jewell finds it necessary to postpone the action of that part of the new postal law relating to papers until April 1st, New York and Philadelphia publishers are earnestly protesting against the iniquitous law. We shall soon hear the people adding their just complaint to a measure which forces them to pay twice as much for carrying a paper across a county as would take it to London. It will be recollected that the express companies complained of the old law as injurious to their business because by it small packages were carried cheaply by mail. They were coolly received by Congress, but finally conquered by splendid banquets. It is said that at times during an evening session the Senate was without a quorum from the absence of members at the expressmen's tables. We do not understand the ethics of bribery if this is not a case. Hamlin and Garfield respectively worked the measure through Senate and House. The workingmen, on whom the tax falls heaviest, may request their brethren of Maine and Ohio to keep these gentlemen at home next time with a very good grace.

Temperance legislation in Illinois has gained another and a double victory over the liquor traffic and over a corrupt legislator. A strong opposition was developed against the present equitable temperance law in the fall election. This faction was absorbed, with other elements of opposition to the dominant party, into the so-called Democratic ranks forming a majority of the State Legislature. One named Haines was chosen speaker of the House, who has made a reputation in three months for demagogism and meanness that would shame a Freemason or a Jesuit. The license party brought their measure up for final settlement last Wednesday, and Haines left untried no means to baffle the majority and carry the bill. He doubled; he twisted; he ruled in order and out of order; he refused to hear motions; and filibustered from the chair with the audacity of a guerilla and the shamelessness of a strumpet. But in vain; the temperance men stood firm, thank God, and the bill was hopelessly lost. The good people of the State may realize the danger of the cause when they learn that the measure provided that on the petition of fifty property owners in any town the board of supervisors were required to grant licenses. Although five times the number might oppose, no matter. Such is liquor legislation.

—Dr. John Hall says, "A church has no vocation to provide amusements. They may be necessaries like boots, or luxuries like French clocks, but the church has not been called into existence to provide them. She has other work to do, and the amusements—for which, no doubt, there is a place—should spring out of the ordinary life of the community."

Onward to Conquest.

BY W. POST.

Hark! terrific thunders peal,
Mantled gloom enshrouds the sky;
Now the lightning's livid gleam
Heralds forth that danger's nigh.

Tramp! tramp! a battle rages;
Loud, terrific cannons roar;
Rush along th' armies shouting,—
Fields all read with human gore!

Onward, onward! fierce th' conflict,
Life and Death keen weapons wield;
Hear th' clashing of their sabers,
Death, for Life, must fly the field.

With its "secret" ally near,
Hell enraged disputes the ground,
Though the struggle's long, severe,
Truth shall triumph—hell confound.

Now arise ye sons of Right!
Don your armor! courage show!
See "the pale horse and his rider!"
Grasp the saber! Strike the blow!

Meet the Sir-Knights as they come
Feather'd, apron'd, jewel'd bright;
One shall make a thousand run,
Two, ten thousand put to flight.

Haste, "fanatics," tell the story!
Come ye, "madmen," strike the blow!
Onward, onward! march to glory;
Tho' through seas of blood you go.

Prudent savants seek to shelter,
From the conflict, and the strife,
Of the great and holy warfare
'Gainst the secret foe of life.

Mighty men of policy,
Dare not count their souls their own,
Sell for trash their birthright free,
Truth forsake and die unknown.

Onward, brave men, to the conquest!
Die if need be, never yield!
Think not from the task before you,
Truth and Right shall win the field.

Onward! Scale the "high defenses;"
Honor God, and strike the blow;
Secret Dagon falls before you;
Onward! 'Tis a conquered foe.

Falter not, nor play the traitor,
Else disgrace thy sons shall know;
Honor God the great Creator;
Onward then to conquest go.

Rochester, N. Y.

"Light in Masonry."

BY A SEVEN-DEGREE MASON.

MR. EDITOR:—In these communications which, through your kindness, I am permitted to address from time to time to the numerous readers of the Cynosure, I have purposely chosen as a subject of fair criticism the conduct of those clergymen who, regardless of their high Christian character, regardless of the evil example they set, and regardless even of their ordination vows, deliberately and voluntarily, or as the Masonic ritual expresses it, "of their own free will and accord," affiliate themselves with the infidel system of Freemasonry and assume the responsibilities of its fearful and sanguinary obligations. Whatever feeble apology might be attempted to be offered for the merchant or the mechanic, the farmer or day-laborer, the unscrupulous, unbelieving Jew, or the reckless and unprincipled gambler, for joining Freemasonry, I can conceive of no logical reason why a minister of the Gospel, the embassador of Jesus Christ, should subject himself to the degrading and humiliating ceremonies of the Masonic lodge-room, and so become not only a member, but even a sworn member of a quasi religious society which is utterly subversive of Christianity, denying the very existence of Jesus Christ and the divine sanctifying influences of the Holy Spirit.

I know from personal observation that the great majority of those men who are initiated into Freemasonry, give the matter no further thought after they have passed through the dramatic farce representing the supposed death of Hiram Abiff, simply contenting themselves with possessing a few signs, grips, and passwords, whereby they may gain admission into other lodges besides their own. But surely this cannot be the case with men of deep thought, men of a high standard of education, such as most of our clergymen really are. It is safe to presume that they at least give the subject a thorough and searching investigation; that they carefully examine into its constantly repeated claims to antiquity, to morality, to charity, to benevolence, and to the numerous so-called blessings it has conferred on the human family.

Investigating the matter then in this manner, and learning, as they inevitably must, that all the pretended claims of Freemasonry are baseless and deceptive, that it really possesses no secrets whatever, that its supposed mysteries are a farce and a lie, that its boasted charity and benevolence are represented by mere empty sound, and that its obligations and blood-letting penalties are such as no man can keep, —I say, learning all this and more about Freemasonry, I cannot, for the life of me, understand how any clergyman can support, or even defend such an institution. The ritual of the first and third degrees puts forth the claim that "the Masonic lodge, bounded only by the extreme points of the compass, the highest heavens and the lowest depth of the central abyss (whatever that means), is supported by three great pillars denominated 'Wisdom, Strength and Beauty;" but here I assert, and I am prepared to prove my assertion, that the three grand pillars which really support Freemasonry, are DECEIT, FALSEHOOD and MISREPRESENTATION. It is based upon deceit—it is its very cornerstone—and it is maintained and propagated by falsehood and misrepresentation. Such is the result of my investigation of the system continued through a period of nearly twenty years, and for many years of this an active member of a Masonic lodge. As, however, I intend at no distant day to devote one or more articles to the discussion of this particular point, I shall dismiss the subject for the present and proceed, without further preface, to investigate the remainder of the Entered Apprentice initiation and to unfold these wonderful secrets which are supposed to be mysteriously hidden in that degree.

The candidate then having taken his obligation, including that portion which provides for the cutting of his throat, the tearing out of his tongue by the roots, and the burying of his body in the rough sands of the sea, as related in my last letter, he is mildly requested to disengage his hands and "in token of his sincerity and to make his obligation more binding, to kiss the Holy Bible which lies open before him." This kiss which the Christian minister gives at this time while kneeling at the Masonic altar, reminds one very much of that kiss given by another minister of Christ some eighteen hundred and seventy-five years ago and which betrayed the Saviour into the hands of his enemies. Judas Iscariot joined a secret society whose object was to destroy Jesus Christ; the minister of to-day joins Freemasonry which utterly denies his existence and scoffs at his atonement. Judas gave token of his sincerity by a kiss in the garden of Gethsemane; the "Rev. Jones" gives token of his sincerity by a kiss in a Masonic lodge. Judas Iscariot, though, repented of his evil doings, and through sheer despair committed suicide, while our clergymen of the present day "glory in their shame" and uphold Freemasonry as if it were an important part of the divine economy.

The Master next resumes the everlasting plug hat and directs the Senior Deacon "to release the brother from the cable tow [the rope] as he is now bound to us by an obligation, a tie stronger than human hands can impose." Alas! It is but too true, he is indeed "bound by an obligation." He is no longer a free agent; he is the sworn slave of Freemasonry and instead of being at perfect liberty to serve the Divine Master and devote himself wholly to his work he must henceforth obey the behests of the lodge and be ready to come and go at the bidding of the Worshipful Master, be that W. Master a drunkard a gambler, a libertine, or a reprobate of any other kind. Only one hour ago he was a free agent secure in the consciousness of his moral rectitude and apparently satisfied with St. Paul to know nothing among his congregation "save Jesus Christ and him crucified;" but now his conscience is burdened with the weight of a fearful obligation which binds him to a society of infidels—he is bound body, soul and spirit to one of the most unscrupulous organizations in existence—he is the sworn vassal of Freemasonry.

ROYAL ARCH.

[CONTINUED NEXT WEEK.]

"Not Sufficiently Informed."

BY J. P. ANTHONY.

There are many who are seeking every opportunity to speak in laudation of secrecy and its work. There are many others who say they are "not sufficiently informed" in secrecy to know whether there is any evil in it, and in this class are ministers, teachers, college professors and presidents. Men who are at the helm of the nation's mind, intellect, welfare and eternal salvation, professing to teach others and guide the bark freighted with soul's from danger and death to the realms of restfulness with God on high. Shame! Dangerous ignorance! Hateful recklessness! If a minister did not know whether gambling or intemperance were evils sufficient to require his warning voice, he would be regarded as fearfully, wickedly deficient. (There is a U. B. minister in the East who is sorry the church excludes the whiskey trafficer and drinker from membership and thinks the church had no business to interfere with slavery). Yet some will have the hardihood to say this of secrecy, which is worse than Siberian exile and more to be dreaded than prison and chains. "Not sufficiently informed" to know whether light is preferable to darkness, liberty to bondage, and spiritual life to tomfoolery? Shocking! Daring wickedness! And are there no means of information on this subject? Must we sit in silence and sanction the buffoonery of the lodge because they say so? No. Blessed be the Lord! "Let there be light."

But, some say, how can we know anything correctly? Why it seems to me if there were not a line written against secrecy and no one had left the lodge and revealed its workings, that an honest soul being responsible for many others, ought to be able to judge from what may be observed in the conduct of lodgemen, that there is something suspicious about it. But since we have books, periodicals and the testimony of many seceding lodgemen for information, the plea of ignorance on the part of pastors and public teachers whose influence and responsibility are so great, should be regarded as criminal.

Secrecy, Fremasonry especially, is old and extensive enough to claim the attention of thought, culture and religion. "If the blind lead the blind both will fall into the ditch." A minister of the Gospel of Jesus Christ is poorly prepared to "warn every one, night and day with tears" and to "reprove and rebuke," who is thus running at random. "If the trumpet gives an uncertain sound who shall prepare himself to the battle."

This plea of ignorance is strategic with many—milk and water, "neither hot nor cold," "a cake not turned,"—so plastic as to allow itself to be pressed into any shape. They say, Let it alone. Let it alone! Let the devil alone! And what use for our weapons? He will not let us alone. Too many "cry peace, peace, when there is no peace." O for more men who will dare to do and speak right!

Mont Alto, Pa.

Masonic Conspiracy and Persecution.

BY REV. W. W. KNIPPLE.

In March, 1867, I was admitted into the Parkersburg Conference of the United Brethren church as a member of that body. I preached in the traveling connection for three successive years, on the average salary of $191,-00. During which time I never complained of an appointment, neither was I complained of, either by quarterly or annual conference. In 1870 I resigned my charge, because it was greatly over-estimated by the conference as to financial ability, as I supposed. Having with me a colleague, I left the work to him. I afterward learned that it was the intention of some of the parties interested in making the appointment, that the mission was to be burdened financially, to such an extent that I would be compelled to resign the charge. This intimation of such intention was denied by my presiding elder, who I then believed, and still believe, was honest, as regarding such intention on his part. I spoke to a prominent member of conference, of the embarrassing situation in which the appointment would place me financially. All the comfort this good brother gave me, was an advice to resign the work at once. It is due this gentleman to say that he was not on the stationing committee. But it was confidently believed that he was invariably counseled in this matter. It is also due this individual to say that he was the principal mover in the Masonic conspiracy, a few years later, as further developments will show.

At this same session of the conference, March, 1870, I both spoke and voted against a resolution which doubtless had been prepared, and was introduced to the conference by Z. Warner and W. Slaughter, the adoption of which would virtually vote a censure on the general conference of May, 1869, for refusing to submit the disposal of the secrecy question to a vote of the whole church; while the disposition that was made of the subject, was made by a vote of 71 for, to 26 against it, I make this statement merely to show the infatuation of this element against legal action in defense of the law. My opposition to this resolution may have had something to do with the appointment referred to above.

In March, 1871, the conference met again in annual session, which was the last time I ever met Parkersburg conference in session. I was then more than ever convinced of the secret workings of the hydra-headed monster in the conference, and then and there resolved to leave the conference. So I kindly asked for a transfer, which was unanimously granted; and on the 2d of September following, I started for Winter's Station, Sandusky Co., Ohio, the place of setting of the Sandusky Conference, which met on the sixth of the same month, having made previous arrangements for work in that conference.

I accordingly presented my transfer, which was received, and I seemingly met a hearty reception. But subsequent events proved conclusively to my mind, that the accession did not meet a unanimous approval, but I think was welcomed by a large majority.

About the last thing before adjournment, was the reading of the stationing committee's report, by the Bishop. My name was read in connection with Cardington Circuit, Marion District, with Rev. A. Rose my presiding elder. M. Bulger had been presiding elder of said district the previous year, and having knowledge of the condition of Cardington Circuit, he came to me immediately after adjournment and apprised me of the important fact that there was something of the secrecy element there, and charged me to handle it tenderly.

Tobacco.

BY A CHICAGO LUMBER MERCHANT.

[Concluded from last week.]

In the moral effect it is a well-established fact, duly authenticable, that in Mexico, Spain and Turkey—countries nearly given over to heathenism—that tobacco has so blighted their sensibilities that the Gospel scarcely finds a lodgement in their minds, as history records the fact; but I have further undeniable proof—a letter at hand from the Rev. Mr. J. F. Smith, a missionary to Turkey for the last ten years, who recently addressed, so acceptably, a meeting at the First Congregational Church in this city, giving an account of his labors in that country. In this letter to me he says: "We missionaries feel very decidedly that the use of tobacco stupifies the moral sensibilities and at the same time increases the mere animal appetites, and so renders men less open to the truth, in the first place, and secondly hinders the progress of the truth in those in whom it has found a lodgement. Hence we have made it a rule to furnish no aid to a young man preparing for the ministry who uses tobacco.

In our own beloved land, I say it boldly, it is a greater hindrance than any other one cause (liquor not excepted). It is so insidious in its tendency, not producing so direct an outgrowth in result, that we do not realize the fact; nevertheless it has crept stealthily into our houses and spoiled our goods ere we were aware the thief was abroad. If it were not for tobacco I would take the contract to suppress the sin of intemperance to one-tenth of its present proportion in less than twenty years, but with this ally and vast recruiting army all our endeavors in that direction are fruitless, however well directed. Smoking generates thirst and vital depression, and to remove these the use of stimulated liquors is resorted to. Hence it has become a maxim: "Smoking induces drinking; drinking, jaundice; and jaundice, death." The venerable Dr. Lyman Beecher once said, in addition to any amount of medical proof, that "one out of every four or five boys who commence with the use of tobacco die drunkards." It is also true that there is not one drunkard in ten thousand but that uses it. And it is only a very small percentage in this country who use tobacco that do not drink, and unless you can persuade the inebriate with his cup to throw away his tobacco—take heed!

I have a case in point. A few years since I found a very intelligent man keeping a low saloon in this city, for whom my sympathies were aroused. He was one of its best patrons. For two years I labored with him; I prayed with him and I slept with him. (This last act I think with him was the more efficacious.) Finally he abandoned the cup, professed a change of heart and joined a church. I then left him entirely in the Lord's hands, believing he was secure beyond peradventure. But all this time he clung to his tobacco. (He both chewed and smoked.) I am now obliged to record the melancholy fact that during this last year he has returned to the cup, to which he clings with as much tenacity as before. The irresistible law of nature in proof, again. "Wherefore, let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."

Is it not truly an anomaly to hear a professed Christian stand up and talk of the evils resulting from the use of liquor, and would persuade young men as well as old to "flee from the wrath to come," with a quid of tobacco concealed in his mouth, or a cigar in his pocket ready to light the first opportunity? He cannot see why it is not an easy thing for a man to refrain from the use of liquor or give up his cup, and yet I will undertake the job to persuade ten men who drink liquor to abandon the cup for every one he will persuade to give up his tobacco. And I would have the easiest job. I know whereof I speak. I take about as much stock in what such a Christian says, be he layman, deacon or minister, as I would in any man who had committed adultery, and in order to justify himself, would have us believe the sin of David was only a little innocent flirtation with Uriah's wife.

I do not wonder that recently an entire church at the tenth anniversary of their minister's wedding presented him with a mammoth tin pipe as an expression of sympathy and confidence they had in him as a fit leader, in his example if not in his precept. He has reason to be proud of this memento, for I have no doubt he has been a success in this direction, as hundreds of the young men in his congregation will in due time to their sorrow, have occasion to testify. Is it not marvelous in our eyes, and if history only recorded the fact would it not be beyond our credulity to believe, a habit so useless, so expensive, so unhealthy, so immoral in tendency and so very filthy in practice as is tobacco in all its departments, could ever have found a lodgement even among the aborigines, the founders of the custom? Yet ministers of the Gospel use it, and defend the custom. Hear Spurgeon. He said "a cigar was a thing to thank God for." I wish he could have seen the countenance of the boy leaning over the fence, having taken his first cigar. He cursed the devil for it, and he had the most Gospel in his sermon.

Deacons use and defend its use. Laymen of course follow in the wake, and the world is not to be blamed for imbibing the habit. Only a few days since a boy was reproved by his mother for having commenced the use of it. His answer was: "All the deacons in our church use it." I am thankful he has since thought better of it and given it up. But the deacons have not.

It now looks as if we would eventually be effectually engulfed by it as were the Egyptians who followed Pharaoh. We would already need some provision to enable us to go to and fro on our sidewalks if it were not for the kind ladies who, with their trailing scavenger clothes, continually passing to and fro, mop up the most of the saliva ejected from the mouths of intelligent beings. A few weeks since I walked from Washington street to Randolph, step by step (I had on a pair of thick soled boots) on tobacco spittle, in size from three inches to eight. On my return I met seventeen ladies, many of whom had been to the noon prayer-meeting to pray for the heathen. The original excrements had disappeared, but new ones appeared as I approached the place of starting—Washington street. Many who will not at the communion drink the wine prescribed by our Lord will be content to suck a weed so offensive. God, in his infinite wisdom, could scarcely have foreseen that 'Man, made in his own image," would ever become so vile as to contract such a habit. Therefore, nowhere in Holy Writ has he made any allusion to tobacco. But if anyone takes encouragement from the passage that "the smoke of their tormentor shall ascend forever and ever," he will have to hurry up and take all the comfort he can, for the incoming Bible will leave out even this consolation. I always, at the communion, turn the cup around after a tobacco man has drank, especially if I see him take out his quid and hold it in his hand until he had drank. "Therefore does not my meat (tobacco) make my brother to offend." I know a pre-eminently pious young lady (not quite thirty-five) in the church who has "arrived at a sanctified state of indifference on the subject of marriage," believing all men (are liars) use tobacco. She is determined to cross the river without the stain of tobacco coming on her skirts (she does not trail her dresses). In its inception it is a snare and a delusion; it soothes the excited nervous system at the time to render it more irritable and difficult to overcome the next. I know men so affected by it they cannot get their pantaloons on in the morning, until they have first got their tobacco in their mouth. Some have to get up in the night to smoke; all have to resort to it after eating, either in their pockets or on the sideboard.

Is it any wonder the great and noble missionary, Father Goodall, once said on learning this of his native country: "He saw nothing he so much feared for Americans' prosperity as the increasing use of tobacco."—Evening Lamp.

—From the "Grand Secretary of the Independent order of Odd-fellows," we have his report submitted to the Right Worthy Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania From this report we learn that the number of members in the State is 95,-197, an increase of nearly 4,000 during the year. This shows considerable strength and prosperity, which we cannot say gratifies us. The report also shows that the sum of $898,302.32 was received during the year; and that $363,590.92 was paid out for relief. We would like, of course, to know what became of the tremendous balance of receipts; but this we must be ignorant of. We can only say, that a boasted benevolent institution ought to make a better exhibit in the direction of benevolence that this.—Evangelical Repository (U. P.)

Systematic Giving.

Every one who has read the literature of the churches, or observed attentively the action of the churches, has perceived a gradual settling down of opinion and practice on the following points:

1. A recognition of the principle of stewardship, or an acknowledgment that our property is not our own, but the Lord's, and that in our disposal of it all, alike in what we keep and what we give, we are to obey his will.

2. A recognition of the obligation of the tithe as a starting-point for Christian liberality, a portion of our income which God has reserved for himself on the same principle as the Sabbath.

3. A recognition of the religious character of offerings made for religious purposes, and of the propriety of their place among the exercises of worship. The current of feeling and conviction against pew rents and other semi-secular methods of church revenue is very strong.

4. The plan of stated weekly offerings, either gathered indiscriminately in collections or deposited in envelopes, and regularly credited to the donors, is steadily growing in favor. Some recent testimonies to the efficiency of this method, we lay before our readers.

A church in Middletown, Connecticut, came slowly and carefully to the conclusion that the weekly offering is in best accord with both sound policy and Scripture teaching. The plan adopted was to place small boxes, of a size to fit easily in the book racks, in every pew. These boxes have an opening in the lid and by its side some short appropriate text of Scripture. Before the singing which immediately precedes the sermon, the minister announces the object of the collection for the day. Contributions are at once, without confusion, publicity, or loss of time, placed in the boxes, and collected by the proper officers at the close of the service. The plan has been in operation for nineteen months, and the result has been an increase of ten per cent., on the average amount contributed to five or six most prominent charitable purposes, and a large increase in the number of objects to which contributions are made.

It has been objected that this plan is only adapted to churches in cities and large towns, but not to rural districts. Dr. Campbell of Rochester, New York, a man of admirable business and executive talent, in a recent article on the subject says:

"The Presbytery of Cairo, Ill., covers a large rural district, and the churches are small. Last year nine of them made experiment on the plan of weekly offerings, and forty-eight churches continued in the old way. These nine have 630 members; these forty-eight number 1627. Well, the nine gave to the Boards above $1,500, and the forty-eight gave a little over $600. The 630 communicants gave about two and a half times as much as the 1,627 communicants. One man on this plan was as good as seven men on the old plan."

Again, he says, "our congregations that are honestly carrying out the weekly-offering plan, are tiding over these hard times without a dollar's shrinkage in their contributions."

The First Congregational Church in Chelsea, Mass., has now for nearly two years taken a collection every Sabbath, dividing the amount among different objects, according to a percentage fixed by vote of the church at its annual meeting. The contributions of this church for the last four years have been as follows: In 1871, $1,700; in 1872, 2,375; in 1873, 4,106; in 1874, 4,012.

It is believed that the increase the last two years is wholly due to the change in the system of giving.

The facts are but a few of those which are constantly passing under our notice. They indicate what we believe to be a return to the simplicity and efficiency of apostolic methods, and are signs full of hope for the future, of the church and the world.—Christian Statesman.

The Freemason's Jewel—A Silent Tongue.

Among the doctrines inculcated by the precepts and commandments of men, that of "the silent tongue" is held as one of the Masonic jewels. The Saviour caused the tongue of the dumb to sing, that of the stammerer to be ready to speak plainly; and nowere in the sacred oracles is there any value put upon the silent tongue. The watchmen complained of in Isaiah lvi. 10, are said to be dumb dogs that cannot bark. They must have been possessors of the jewel. The man who went in to the marriage feast not having on a wedding garment, was speechless; he must have had the jewel. The psalmist says, "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth." In such a case it would become a jewel. When Mordecai went out into the street and cried with a loud and bitter voice, he had no use for a silent tongue. When Daniel was brought into contact with the laws of the Medes and Persians, they could not force a silent tongue upon him, but he opened his windows and prayed. When threatened by the Jewish powers and forbidden to speak or teach in the name of Jesus, the apostles would not accept the jewel, but declared, "We cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard." That was "St. John's-day."

The blind men by the wayside, crying, "Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy upon us," would not regard the jewel. The Saviour, when saying that "there is nothing covered that shall not be revealed, neither hid that shall not be known, and what is spoken in darkness shall be heard in the light, and that which ye have spoken in the ear in closets shall be preached upon the house-tops," certainly thought somebody would not keep his jewel. The outpouring of the Spirit on the day of Pentecost abolished the jewels on that occasion. And in the great day when shall be heard the voice of a great multitude and the voice of many waters and the voice of mighty thunderings, mentioned in Revelation, the jewels will be found to have depreciated in value more than any other stock —Telescope.

"A Bold and Brave Act."

The Christian Instructor of Philadelphia thus denominates the renunciation of Rev. H. Cogswell at Mansfield, and says: "Among the incidents that strikingly marked this Convention, and will never be forgotten probably by any one who witnessed it, was a bold and brave act performed by the Rev. Henry Cogswell, of the United Brethren church. * Just before the proceedings were to close, he arosefrom his seat on the platform, and advancing to the front said with great deliberation and solemnity, in the midst of a breathless silence in the Convention, that he was a Royal Arch Mason; that he was thankful to God for this meeting as furnishing him an opportunity for taking a step of which he had long thought and upon which he had finally come to a solemn determination, and that the great and pressing reason on his conscience for taking the step that he now proposed was, that he had long been embarrassed by his position: in that Masonry conflicted directly with his teachings and his duties as a Christian and a minister. With this general statement, he proceeded in a clear and deliberate voice, his entire recantation of all the oaths and obligations he had taken in the Masonic order; and declared his absolute renunciation of all affiliation with the system forever, and his determination to adhere to this action to the end of his life, come what would. He then added, as if from his actual knowledge, and without any fear of proper contradiction, that there were thousands of others, also, that felt themselves entangled, as he had done, by this system, and that would gladly free themselves from it.

The impression of this statement, made as it was by one who was well known as a minister of the Gospel and a Christian man, was deep. In alluding to it, we have called the act a brave and bold one: bold, because it was in the face of an order that whatever may be the misgivings of some of its members, yet is itself a unit, and may go far to hold up, or throw utterly down, whom it will; and it was a brave act, for it showed courage to be true to conviction and the right at any hazzard or any cost. In it all, too, is there not that that may well lead good men to ask the question, Can that be a good system,—a system to which Christian men and ministers should attach themselves,—of which one, who has reached as far as the Royal Arch degree, was constrained thus deliberately to say was in conflict with his teachings and his duties as a Christian and a minister?

*[Mr. Cogswell is pastor of the Disciple church.—ED. CYN.]

Notices.

The Seventh Anniversary of the National Christian Association will be held in the City of Pittsburgh, Pa., June 8th to 10th, 1875.

The Michigan Convention.

The convention for organizing the State of Michigan announced for March 30th and 31st at Linden, Genesee county, has, by advice of friends on the ground, been changed to Fenton at same date. Both places are in Genesee county on the Detroit and Milwaukee railroad and but six miles apart. Linden is a small town of a few hundred inhabitants; Fenton has between two and three thousand. A commodious hall has been engaged, and arrangements will be made for entertainment of friends from a distance. Remember the time and place, FENTON, GENESEE CO., MARCH 30TH AND 31ST. Speak of this to your neighbors.

Important for our California Subscribers.

Bishop Weaver expects to visit California early next May and is willing to deliver a few Anti-masonic lectures at prominent points if they are arranged for beforehand.

Will all Cynosure readers who can obtain church or hall and arrange for one or two lectures on Masonry to be delivered in prominent places in California, by Bishop Weaver next May, ascertain what they can do in the matter, and write promptly to

C. A. BLANCHARD,
Cor. Sec'y. N. C. A.
13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

To the Anti-Secret Society Friends in Wisconsin.

Having made arrangements to lecture in your State for the year to come, I earnestly desire your co-operation in this work of reform. Wisconsin is behind some of her sister States on this subject. I am anxious to have her come into the front ranks as speedily as possible, and no effort on my part shall be wanting to produce this result by the help of the Lord. Let every one that reads this say we want lecturers in our place, and then see if there is not a church, school-house, or some other place that can be had for the purpose, and then write to me at DELAVAN, WIS., giving the name, county, and post-office plainly, and I will answer your letters, and make arrangements to be with you as soon as possible. The honor of God and suffering humanity demands action, vigorous, untiring action, until our country is redeemed from the curse of secretism.

For the war,
P. ELZEA.

Reform News.

—Friends in Ohio will be pained to learn the sickness of their agent, Bro. Caldwell. Let him be remembered at the throne of grace; and let "works" prove your faith, for Bro. C. is a laborer "worthy of his hire," of which he is much in need.

—Rev. Geo. Richey of Licking county, Ohio, has been lecturing with success in Tuscarawas, same State.

—The General Agent is expecting to commence work in Michigan this week preparatory to the State Convention.

—A debate on Masonry was held in Prospect Park near this city last week. Prof. C. A. Blanchard and two or three students from Wheaton College took part.

—James Robinson writes of an interesting address at Washburn in central Illinois, by Rev. M. Harper of the United Presbyterian church. The roads were in very bad condition and the night rainy, but under the circumstances quite an audience was out, and a good proportion Freemasons. The lecture was the first of the kind in that locality and had good effect.

—The meeting at the Baptist Theological Seminary of this city on Tuesday evening of last week is reported as of great spiritual power, and likely to produce a lasting and happy effect on the young men of the institution. The Seminary chapel was not large, and the room was well occupied by students from the adjoining rooms and from the University of Chicago near by. Our Baptist friends will rejoice to learn that discussion of topics so vital to our holy religion is not shut out of their Seminary because unpopular with the world.

Who Holds the Keys to the Churches in Mason City, Iowa?

Let facts answer.

I reached this city on the evening of March 6th, and with Mr. T. Palmeter, called upon the Congregational pastor who referred us to the trustees for the use of their house for lectures. Mr. P. obtained assurance that it could be had for that purpose on this (Thursday)evening, but on Wednesday evening the church held its regular prayer-meeting. Having made this arrangement we next called on the pastor of the M. E. church, with whom arrangements were made for me to occupy his pulpit on Sabbath morning, and speak in his church on Wednesday evening. I filled the appointment Sabbath morning, and at the close the pastor announced my lecture for Wednesday evening in a very mild, Christian manner, after which I left with Mr. P., who had come with his horses and sleigh to convy me to Clear Lake, ten miles distant, where I was warmly welcomed by our friends, and spoke three consecutive evenings to large and appreciative audiences.

There were incidents of special local interest here, and of general interest as showing the animus of our opponents. For instance, one man is reported to have said, "I have signed five dollars to aid the Baptist church and I am going to have my name taken from the subscription papers." Another, "I gave five to the Baptist church and now I will give ten to the M. E., because the minister would not let this man preach in his house." Such statements as these of course had an influence with thinking people and have greatly helped our cause, and to prepare the way for our convention at Clear Lake, June 29th, 1875. Rumors reached me at the Lake that the M. E. church at this point had been closed, and on arriving last eve. I found that such was the case. One of the craft, undoubtedly incited by others, demanded that the house should be closed, and it was promptly done. Of the reputation of the chief actor in the business, I refrain from speaking, preferring rather to observe the maxim, "If you can say nothing good of a man say nothing at all." Bro. Hankins, a local M. E. minister of seven degrees, who has within a short time left the lodge, promptly secured a hall which was well filled with appreciative listeners to whom I spoke for nearly two hours.

Learning that some doubt had been expressed about our occupying the Congregational church this evening, friends took measures to ascertain the fact and learned that such was the case and so we are to occupy the hall again this evening. So far as I can learn no one accuses me of immorality, or unchristian conduct, and the continued attendance shows that the people do not deem me an "idle babbler." The Masons do not attempt to answer my arguments, and reply to my statement of facts, only with denunciations. The only reason I can give for this change of purpose on the part of the Methodist and Congregational brethren is, the Masons and their satellites demand that the churches be closed, and they acceed to the demand. Which means that the keys of the M. E. and of the Congregational churches of Mason City are kept in the Masonic lodge, and used or not used at the pleasure of the most corrupt men of the order in the place. One thing, however, is encouraging. They do not love to have it so, and, will I have no doubt, take means to secure a change.

J. P. STODDARD.

Mason City, Iowa, March 11, 1875.

A "Faithful Watchman"—The Warning Heard.

COITSVILLE, O., March 16, 1875.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Rev. J. M. Wallace, the worthy pastor of the United Presbyterian congregation of Youngstown, Ohio, is doing noble service in preaching a series of discources in his own pulpit in opposition to secret societies. Last Sabbath, the 14th inst, he preached his fourth sermon on the subject, and so great was the interest manifested that the house was filled to overflowing with an attentive audience. The various secret societies of the city were well represented by their leading members, who gave the strictest attention to all that was said.

Youngstown is one of the strongholds of secret societies, and as Mr. Wallace is the only minister in the place who has had the moral coursge to attack and expose the corruption of secret, oath-bound societies, and having very justly merited the reputation of being a candid, able and an eloquent speaker, it is not at all surprising that his able expose of the works of darkness is causing quite a sensation in the city. For two or three days after each sermon, groups of men can be seen all over the city discussing its merits pro and con; and, judging from the language sometimes made use of, and the oratory displayed in its delivery, the conclusion is inevitable that the Rev gentleman has succeeded in stirring up a good deal of bad bile in Freemasons and Odd-fellows. On last Sabbath, during the sermon, the blood coursed so rapidly through the veins of a Mason that he perspired profusely, while others around him seemed perfectly cool.

The city papers are all favorable to secret societies; but the Mahoning Register and Tribune (Republican), is controlled by men of honor, and has hitherto confined itself to condensed reports of the sermons without criticism. The Mahoning Vindicator, however, a third-class Democratic sheet, at once grows wrathful, and the "gentleman of the 'black cloth'" in general are made the aim of its satiracal wit.

As Mr. W. is thoroughly ventilating the subject, we may expect good results to follow, notwithstanding the old and oft repeated assertion that every attempt to expose secret societies only influences men to join them. If this were true, adherents of the lodge would not have such a horror of free discussion, as they everywhere evince. The course he pursues is a safe one, and cannot help but carry conviction to honest hearts. The Scripture injunction, "Prove all things," is his motto, and whatever he undertakes is so well done that to dispute his conclusions would be sheer folly. W. D. Beggs.

Notes by the Way from the Illinois Agent.

Farm Ridge, March 16, 1875.

Dear Bro. K:—On the 13th inst. I visited Chebanse, Iroquois county, and found a few earnest friends of our cause, and some personal friends that I had not seen for several years. On Saturday evening I spoke in the Congregational church to a good audience, many of who were Masons and seemed greatly astonished that I should be able to tell how a man is made a Mason. It seemed never to have occurred to them that many who are outsiders know far more of Masonry than many of the regularly initiated. Some of them were frank enough to say that what I had said of Masonry could not be denied, and one of them, a worthy brother in the M. E. church, said it was true, and that he had long felt that the obligations of Masonry were wicked, and that he was done with it forever. On Sunday evening I preached in the same church to a good congregation, and in the evening spoke to a full house on the religion of Freemasonry. The impression produced on the entire community seems to have been excellent, and a new impetus was given to this most needful reform.

An incident illustrating the spirit of the lodge occurred a short time since. Mr. A. C. Willard, who is a veteran seceding Mason, and who was actively engaged in the rescue of Miller, and the arrest of the abductors of Morgan, called the lodge a snake's nest, and said they hatched vipers. The other day he was informed that there was a package for him at the express office. He went and received it after paying charges, and on opening it found a box of cotton containing three small eggs, with a note stating that they were snake's eggs for A. C. Willard. It is not probable that a very large brood of actual vipers will come out of this nest, but it is certain that a snakish spirit was very apparent, and that the conduct of the lodge here and elsewhere illustrates the words of the ancient prophet: "They hatch cockatrice eggs and weave the spider's webb; he that eateth of their eggs dieth, and that which is crushed breaketh out into a viper." Is. lix. 5.

H. H. Hinman.

A Volunteer Campaign in Southeastern Illinois.

Springerton, White Co., Ill., March 8, 1875.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

I have commenced work in good earnest against all secret bands. No man except myself has ever ventured to raise his voice in public in this part of the State against this deceptive scheme of Satan. So you see I am alone, and yet I am not alone for God is with me. The Saviour has said, "Lo! I am with you alway even to the end of the world." I was the first man in this vicinity to question the right of men to deal in the "bodies and souls of men." I am much encouraged to fight on. Southern Illinois is a noble field.

If other lecturers knew how many men there are here now ready for the work, surely some of them would "come over and help us." I have delivered ten lectures in White, Hamilton, and Wayne counties, occupying about two hours time each, and getting the very best attention; no one tried except the secretists who usually become restless, speak out, and try to interrupt me, and in so doing almost invariably render themselves ridiculous. I have swarms of warm friends at every gathering to cheer me on, much to the annoyance of the lip-locked, self enslaved gentry that always attend to hear me "kill myself," as they call it. I never make any charges against them only such as I can prove most conclusively by good authority. There have been two clear cases of Masonic murder in this county. I refer to them when it suits, and so this brings the reckless banterings of this God-forsaken clan immediately into our own door-yards. At one of my appointments, while speaking, I was repeatedly interrupted, and efforts were made by two ministers, one a Baptist, the other a Universalist, to reply to my lecture. The Baptist is a man of good information, quite an able speaker. Their combined forces were, however, very inconsiderable on this occasion, it only required a few moments for me to bring almost the entire house down upon them in uproarious laughter and cheers for the few words of answer to them. Both of these "ministers in holy things" are Masons. The course that I pursued that evening rendered these two "brothers" very uneasy, being acquainted with both, and knowing them to be Masons, I frequently gave them Masonic signs, and finally stated that "Boaz" was the name of the "grip" of an Entered Apprentice Mason. This seemed to be more than my Universalist opponant could bear, and at this point, in his bewilderment, he asked me if I could prove it; whereupon I asked him if he deinied it. He would not answer. I again put the question, "Sir, do you before this audience deny that 'Boaz' is the name of the 'grip' of an Entered Apprentice Mason?" No answer; "all quiet on the Potomac." I challenged him to deny, and if he did I would prove the correctness of my statement if it cost me fifty dollars. Still this great man proved himself to be one of the dumb animals of which the prophet Isaiah speaks. This was very enjoyable to a large majority present.

I do believe that there are a great many more men now ready for this glorious renovation than is generally supposed. I am much encouraged. Forward, brothers!

> The wars in which the heroes fight
> Are not the wars for me?
> The war in which my heart delights
> Shall end in victory!"

The Bible must be our measuring rod, our standard. I love the Cynosure much; it is one of my weapons of war. Humbly yours,

James Springer.

Ohio—Bro. Caldwell Sick.

Nevada, O., March 16, 1875.

Editor of the Cynosure:

Dear Sir:—At the request of Mr. Caldwell, I want to say through your columns to the friends who have been disappointed or may be disappointed in not receiving lectures as per agreement that the cause is personal affliction. He has been lecturing almost every evening since the Mansfield Convention, until last Wednesday evening, when unpleasant symptoms began to manifest themselves on the surface of the face which have since developed in erysipelas. He is now confined to his room and under medical treatment and is likely to be for some time.

With the most flattering results he will not be able to resume his work for two weeks or more. Although taken in time it has covered half of his face, which is very much swollen; one eye has been entirely shut. The doctor thinks he will succeed in confining it to the one side. He is extremely anxious to be up and doing; has appointments arranged for the rest of this week; expected to speak to-morrow, but will not be able; desires the friends to exercise patience and forbearance hoping to be with them soon. To Prof. Ramsey of Iberia College he wishes me to say that he has not forgotten his promise will be there as soon as practicable, the Lord willing.

Respectfully yours,
(Mrs.) S. J. Caldwell.

The Cause in New Hampshire.

Center Strafford, N. H., March 9, 1875.

The cause of anti-secrecy is gaining in New Hampshire, but we suffer loss in being isolated from our brethren in the West and from one another. There are many good and true men, but we need organization. We need a State lecturer. The harvest is ripe but the laborers are few. The Morning Star, of Dover, the organ of the Free Baptist denomination occasionally speaks against oath-bound secret societies, but with so many apologies as to almost nullify its testimony.

I have lectured against secret societies several times with encouraging success and rejoice to know the seed has fallen in good ground. The hardest argument I have to meet is that secret societies cannot be so bad since so many ministers of the Gospel belong to them. Many of these Masonic ministers are sick of the works of darkness, but their tongues are tied by oath-bound consciences, by self-interest and by fear. But we have one minister who has broken the bonds of wickedness and denounces the lodge as a work of darkness and an engine of Satan. I need not tell you that his course has subjected him to great abuse, for the serpent of secrecy is the same everywhere; it bears the mark of the beast, a persecuting spirit. It is my impression, however, that the state of civilization is such in New Hampshire that the lodges would not find it to their advantage to resort to such arguments as they do in Connecticut. New York and the West, viz., arsenic, blood-letting and decayed eggs. There is a strong popular feeling against secrecy and it only needs expression and guidance to become a power for good. We would like help from abroad but we shall wait for it. With the help of the truth-telling Cynosure, and your excellent publications, we propose to do all we can to hasten the glad day of deliverance from secret society nuisances that infest the land. I take this opportunity to confess myself opposed to all secret societies.

S. C. Kimball.

Correspondence.

A Canvasser's Experience.

Hutton, Coles Co., Ill., March 11, 1875.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

It may perhaps be of interest to your readers to hear again from Coles county. I purpose to give to you a few of the many cases of conversations or arguments which I have had with persons while working for your paper.

Mr. A. was a member of the (U. B.) church and I thought a sure place for a subscriber, so I conversed with him on the subject of secrecy and wanted him to subscribe for the Cynosure. He replied that he had read it some and did not believe what it said about Masonry, for the reason that they were all perjured men who claim to reveal Masonry and therefore could not believe them. But I always had good authority at hand, so we procured Webster's Unabridged Dictionary and showed him that the word perjury meant the violation of an oath lawfully administered, and that Masons who revealed the secrets of Masonry were not perjured men; to which he had to consent.

I also referred him to the law which recognized the testimony of one of two thieves, who took the benefit of the law and went free, but convicted the other. During the same conversation we got the Bible and turned to Lev. v. 4, where it reads as follows: "Or if a soul swear pronouncing with his lips to do evil or to do good," etc., and wanted him to give his opinion on that passage of Scripture, to which he said he would study on it.

I saw him in a week or two again and called for his opinion but he said he had not examined it yet, so the third time I saw him I asked again, but the same answer as before. And the fourth time, it being the night before he joined the Masonic lodge, while talking about the grange, I asked him again, to which he replied, "That is dretty hard to get over." But the next time I think he will be able to explain. He said that he could find more argument in favor of secrecy than he could against it, but did not give any, and I hope that he will be so kind as to give us a letter through the Cynosure.

The next man has been a Mason for many years, but joined the church on conditions to cease to be a practicing Mason, so I am told; but he has failed to do so. He is what I call one of the stall-fed Masons, fed by other more popular Masons on some such arguments as this: that there is no man or family but what has secrets that they would not for the world have made known, and that the secrets of Masonry are nothing but a few signs that they may know each other by. These being about the best arguments that they can produce.

But there is a mystery about Masonry that I cannot solve, and need a little light and that is: Why do Masons who profess to be Christians, say they will leave the church before they will Masonry? As in the case of this man; he says that he expects when he dies to be buried by the order of Masons, and at the same time he belongs to a church that has a burial ceremony.

Professing to live a life in the church as a Christian walking in the footsteps of his Master and at the same time be joined to an idol that he holds so sacred that in the hour of his death he will forbid to be buried in the name of Christ, but in the name of Masonry. How this is I know not, for "thou shalt have no other gods before me."

PELEG.

A Letter to Rev. W. Post.

DEAR EDITOR:—You are at liberty to publish the following if it will subserve the cause and you so elect.

Yours truly,

WOODRUFF POST.

32 MEIGS ST., ROCHESTER, N. Y., Feb. 8, 1875.

My dear friend, W. Post:

I want to see you very much. Believe me in saying I have a high regard for you personally, and a deep solicitude for your welfare. I was fearful the blood-hounds of Freemasonry might worry you into silence, [which they have tried to do by lying, slandering, defaming, proscribing and threatening] But when I read your article in the Cynosure of the 5th inst. I was rejoiced beyond measure that you are undaunted, and bidding defiance to this fearful beast, believing as I do that the Christian religion, pure and undefiled, is the "salt of the earth" however short I may come of its requirements and that it is losing its "savor," its purifying influences at this time, in a lamentable degree.

This is chargeable in a great measure to the sentinels who have volunteered to give warning and to sound the alarm of approaching danger. But when a portion of these prove traitors to their trust, and pervert their high and holy vocation, can we set too high a value on those that are true to this great trust, involving the present and the eternal welfare of the whole human family? I have looked upon you as being worthy of this high trust; ever since I saw you for the first time, on the platform of Corinthian Hall in the meekness of the blessed Savior, sounding the trumpet he had put into your hands, of the fearful and demoralizing tendencies of Freemasonry, and of the sad inroads it was making on the purity of the Christian religion.

Believe me also that I have an equal and universal solicitude and high esteem for all God-fearing sentinels, that withstand the wily temptations of this most alluring device of Freemasonry; that it would seem as though the evil one himself, could not improve one iota to deceive the unwary into his folds.

Like the slave-holders these wily craftsmen warn all men to let them alone. If their warnings were open and manly, we would know where and how to meet them "on the square;" as they are sworn to meet each other within their clan.

This brings me to the point of what I had wished to see you for, and will now communicate on paper. Probably you have not forgotten the eulogy on Masonry and the vindictive denunciation by the Rev. D. H. Muller, on the 28th of Dec., 1874. This extraordinary discourse was sanctified with the formula of taking a text from Holy Writ, without seeming to have any use for it. As I understand the genius and practical workings of the order, this is easily accounted for. That is, he dare not defend Masonry from the Scriptures if he would; but as a stragetic point, used its forms. To give you my views of his so-called sermon, in brief, it was without exception the most audacious piece of effrontery that ever came under my observation, from the pulpit. That it was virtually endorsed in silence in the Christian city of Rochester where delivered, has caused many forebodings in my mind for the future of my country, in thus debauching the sanctuary, and the consequent defilement of the Christian religion. Yours as ever in the truth as it is in Christ Jesus,

WELLS SPRINGER.

Sense and Scripture.

In the spirit of the Gospel and language of Scripture I would say, to the slaves of secretism, "Turn you to the stronghold, ye prisoners of hope." What, is there hope? that they who have taken the covenants and obligations of secretism, can ever become God's free men? Such hope is; and is founded on the sure word of prophesy; Rev. xvi. 2: "And I saw as it were a sea of glass mingled with fire; and them that had gotten the victory over the beast, and over his image, and over his mark, and over the number of his name, stand on the sea of glass, having harps of God." This sublime symbol seems to represent something deep, solid or permanent, something reliable as the foundation of man's hope of happiness, upon which he may stand or become established. The sacred Scriptures, the fountain of divine truth, is regarded as the true antetype of this passage.

Victory implies a previous struggle. This struggle has been with the beast. "Truth has made them free." We admire the description of these victors. They are not represented as bowing, crouching, crawling, but standing; nor fear nor flattery can move them from their steadfastness. They have the harps of God. In third verse, they sing the song of Moses. The Bible student understands this song to be a song of deliverance.

We understand the victors here spoken of, are those that have renounced the service of the beast. What is the difference between the victor who has renounced the beast and his service, and those who have suspended his service for present convenience? (Perhaps till they get on to another circuit or change where secretism is less offensive.) Answer.—The victor sings, while the other, so far from singing, seems not to enjoy the singing of others. Let the victors who may be in attendance at your convention take courage from these scriptures and stand boldly forth, showing that the truth has made them free.

MRS. B. HEYES.

A Methodistic View.

Though but recently the question of the possible right or wrong of secret societies, especially Freemasonry, has risen in my mind, and though I have not searched fully the tenets of the Masonic order, yet have I arrived at the conclusion that reason should and that my Bible does teach me Freemasonry is an unholy institution. And that reasoning, thinking men who stand at the head of all movements in church and state should for a moment countenance this institution which undermines the teachings and destroys the effect of the death of Christ, and renders powerless our federal government, is a wonder of wonders to me. May the Omnipotent hasten the day that shall come and must come in which a reaction shall take place.

I have been reading Webb's Monitor and I see their own words condemn them. First, let us look at "The importance of the secrets of Masonry demonstrated." Mark, "demonstrated!" He says, "if the secrets of Masonry are replete with such advantages to mankind it may be asked: "Why are they not divulged for the general good of society? To which it may be answered, were the privileges of Masonry to be indiscriminately bestowed, the design of the institution would be subverted, and being familiar like many other important matters, would soon loose their value and sink into disregard." Yes, my Masonic friend, you hit the nail on the head unawares in your own answer. If it were, as you say, "indiscriminately bestowed," or brought out into the daylight, where they would receive cold streams from the fountain of truth and where the Word of God would have access to them, they would very soon "sink into disregard." If I wish to enter your order I must first take an oath that even against honor and at the sacrifice of virtue and my loyalty as a citizen, I must ever keep secret something of which as yet I have no knowledge, whether it be good or evil, in concord with Christ or Belial. "The design of the institution" would very soon lose all hold upon mankind if you would but let your "Masonic light" shine.

But let us investigate farther. "It is a weakness," says Webb, "in human nature that men are generally more charmed with novelty than the real worth or intrinsic value of things." So then, you own that Masonry depends not upon its sterling merit, but in the "novelty of the thing." My friends, let us look at this "novelty." Fancy the taking of an oath to ignore the distinction between right and wrong; to assist a fellow Mason in all difficulties "murder and treason not excepted" under the moral and agreeable penalty of such "novelties" as having your throat cut, bowels torn out, body burnt, etc. This is indeed "real worth and intrinsic value," How truly exalting, how noble, wise and consistent it seems for a minister of the Gospel, or even a layman, to take an oath to keep secret this hellish formula, the very wording of which denies all Christian spirit! This is a fair specimen purporting to be a prayer, "May the blessing of Heaven rest upon us and all regular Masons. May brotherly love prevail, and every moral and social virtue cement us. Amen." Compare that with the prayer which our heavenly Master taught us, and tell me if that is true Christian spirit. And again, "Your virtue, honor and reputation are concerned in supporting with dignity the character you now bear. Let no motive therefore make you swerve from your duty, violate your vows, or betray your trust."

Christians, let us arise in all the strength of God, and cast this hydra-headed monster from our church. It is a deplorable fact that the M. E. church still is regardless of the command, "Come out from among them and be ye separate saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you." Shall this, must this still continue. N. A. PRICE.

Lott's Creek, Iowa.

How does Odd-fellowship Compare with Freemasonry?

At the beautiful village of H——r, N. Y., many years since, there was a discussion in the lyceum of the merits and demerits of Freemasonry and Odd-fellowship; the writer was one of the debators. There being no one present disposed to favor Masonry, the support of the affirmative devolved upon Odd-fellows with respect to their institution. In the progress of the debate, an eminent lawyer, who was a Freemason, supported the negative on general principles in opposition to secret societies. In regard to Masonry he said he was a Mason and had not renounced it; but it had had its day of usefulness; we have better institutions now, and peace to its ashes. He knew nothing of the secrets of Odd-fellowship; but he once asked a brother Mason, who was an Odd-fellow, how it compared with Masonry? In reply he said as the kine-pox does to the small-pox. Perhaps the answer is expressive of their comparative characteristics; the one being less revolting in its oaths and requirements than the other.

S. S. B.

OUR MAIL.

Job Willets, Huntingdon, Ind., writes:

"I helped put down Freemasonry once and saw his head wounded to death; but it lived again healed by the black salve of abomination. . . 'Wo unto them! for they have gone in the way of Cain, and ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and perished in the gainsaying of Korah.'"

John Milner, Greenfield, O., writes:

"A great many ministers of the Gospel, who set themselves up for guides, belong to the Freemasons. I talked with one the other day who said Freemasonry was all right, and no harm could possibly come of it. I have been scattering Honeywell's tracts pretty freely, and am not at all backward in telling all Freemasons where they stand in my estimation. Some say but little. Others attempt to argue; but some say the subject is not to be argued."

R. E. Adams, College Springs, Ia., writes:

"I praise God for the prosperity of the anti-secret society cause. I have more faith in the power of prayer than I ever had before. I am determined to labor on while God gives me strength to work."

Wm. Davis, East Trumbull, O., writes:

"If a good lecturer could get in here, it would wake up the people so they would dare to read, and yet I do not know as a subscription could be raised to defray expenses, but I know there is a better time coming when people will get their eyes open."

Geo. McElheny, Darlington, Pa., writes:

"Anti-secrecy principles are permeating this region. The Cynosure is moreover, to some extent, circulating in this community. Convincing by its ever growing facts and arguments of the necessity of incessant opposition against the powers of darkness. . . The increase of anti-secret literature since the first National Christian Convention May 7th, 1868, is a cause of gratitude to God."

Frederick Huber, Newcorner, Ind., writes:

"I am opposed to works of darkness. I am nearly the only man here who names them to oppose them, and I will be a thorn in their flesh here by the help of the Lord."

Rev. N. R. Luce, Lockport, N. Y., writes:

"Count me a life subscriber. I have girded on the armor and do not propose to put it off until we gain the victory."

J. A. Brown, Columbus, O, writes:

"The friends of the cause here donate a copy of the Cynosure to the public reading room, and I am quite sure it is a good way to introduce the paper. I loan my paper to the Freemasons and Odd-fellows, and some of them like to read it from the fact that it is intelligently edited. We are gaining ground here for which we thank the Lord."

J. M. Bryant, Bethany, Mo., writes:

"Secret organizations are making a great effort in this county, but I think if we could have a few good lectures delivered in this county that they would be crowned with good success. . . I feel that the time has fully come to draw the lines at the ballot box."

A. S. Badgley, Bellville, Ill., writes:

"I think with the help of your paper I can keep my sons at least from taking the first step in Masonry. One step in bondage, with a lock on their mouths."

W. H. Parker, Palmyra, N. Y., writes:

"In Barnum's book on humbugs he speaks of some travelers in Asia who came across a people who had something that they kept with great care, and which they refused permission to see, or even to impart any information as to its character or properties. Some of the travelers, breaking through every obstacle, obtained access to the sacred object which was carefully rolled up in cloths; and after unrolling about one hundred and fifty coverings, they found—O wonderful! simply an old broken bottle. So strip Masonry of all its disguises, and I think one would find something just about as sacred as that old broken bottle."

G. W. Statten, Hagerstown, Md., writes:

"I am heart and soul in sympathy with its (the Cynosure's) sentiments."

L. Landon, Kennebec, Kan., writes:

"The first grange has been formed in our county. Half or more of the people are living on charity, and yet they can find money to spend in so doing, but have none to buy bread; and they talk as if they expected to make a small fortune in so doing; because they can buy so cheap, and many of them have not a dollar to pay with in advance. Strange inconsistency it seems to an outsider."

E. J. Chalfant, York, Pa., writes:

"Our cause is steadily gaining ground. Reason and conscience are more than a match for the knaves and fools of the secret empire. What a grand high school a Masonic lodge is for the cultivation of fools and conspirators!"

Rev. Wm. H. Jamieson, Butler, Pa., writes:

"I am heartily inlisted in the cause you so warmly advocate, and may God speed the day when these abominations shall have no place in our land."

Alfred Sergant, Watcrport, N. Y., writes:

"I think secretism is doing more evil than all other causes combined, so I am in for the war as long as I live."

J. B. Crosby, Apple Creek, O., writes:

"Having read your paper for several years, I heartily endorse your views of secret societies and wish your paper was a visitor to every family in our land."

S. S. Bradford, Hammond, Wis., writes:

"No one here manifests any interest in the cause of Anti-masonry."

H. J. Harman, York Springs, Pa., writes:

"As long as you hold up the doctrine you now do, you will have my name on your list. The Cynosure is the right paper in the right place."

S. H. Skinner, Avalon, Mo., writes:

"I wish to continue a subscriber to the Cynosure . . until its mission shall be accomplished in the downfall of the accursed systems of iniquity that are now darkening our land."

M. W. Bicknell, Stanwix, N. Y., writes:

"I did not commence taking the paper to learn what Masonry is. I thought I knew all I wanted to know about it at the time Morgan was put to death. But I find I am not too old to learn. I am getting much good from your paper. My main object in taking it is to help you along in the good cause."

The Sabbath School.

Lesson for April 4th, 1875.—Israel's Promise.

Joshua xxiv. 14-18.

14 Now therefore fear the Lord, and serve him in sincerity and truth: and put away the gods which your fathers served on the other side of the flood, and in Egypt; and serve ye the Lord.

15 And if it seem evil unto you to serve the Lord, choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether the gods which your fathers served, that were on the other side of the flood, or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord.

16 And the people answered and said God forbid that we should forsake the Lord, to serve other gods.

17 For the Lord our God, he it is that brought us out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage, and which did those great signs in our sight, and preserved us in all the way wherein we went, and among all the people through whom we passed.

18 And the Lord drave out from before us all the people, even the Amorites which dwelt in the land; therefore, will we also serve the Lord, for he is our God.

GOLDEN TEXT.—And the people said unto Joshua, The Lord our God will we serve, and his voice will we obey.—Joshua xxiv. 24.

SCRIPTURE HELPS.—For "gods on the other side of the flood" (Jordan), see Gen. xxxi. 17-35 and Ex. xxxii. 1-24. For verse 15, see Ex. xxxii. 25-35, and Elijah's proposition, I. Kings xviii. 17-40; also Josh. xxiii. and xxiv. All must choose between Christ and Satan: Matt. vi. 24; Rev. iii. 14-22. The best time: v. 15; Ps. xcv. 7; Prov. viii. 17; Heb. iii. 1. 7-15 and iv. 7 2 Cor. vi. 2; Is. lv. 6; Acts iii. 19; Matt. vi. 33. Not safe to delay: Acts xxiv. 25 and xxvi. 27-28. Israel recounted the mercies of the Lord and replied, v. 16; to us are given "exceeding great and precious promises" and the Spirit often invites, see Prov. i. 20-23; Is. lv. 1-7; Matt. viii. 7; Rev. xxii. 17. To refuse God is fearful: Prov. i. 24-33; Ps. ii. 12. Let us choose as did Israel, see Golden text; and Mary, Luke x. 42; and as Christ also, Is. viii. 14-16.

A Chronological Table.

OF SOME OF THE MOST IMPORTANT EVENTS IN POPERY.

	A. D.
Holy water introduced.	120
The surplice introduced.	122
Telesphorus introduced the lent of seven weeks before Easter.	133
Hygenius introduced godfathers and godmothers at the baptism of infants.	139
The term pope first applied exclusively to the bishop of Rome.	154
Penance introduced.	159
It was ordered that wine should be consecrated in a glass vessel only.	210
Calixtus I. broached the celebacy of the clergy, but could not establish it.	220
Calixtus ordained a three-fold fast in the year	224
Urban I. decreed that houses and lands should be attached to create revenue for the clergy.	228
Gorgeous robes, mitres, tiaras, wax-tapers, etc., introduced.	286
The sacrament administered to infants.	300
The council of Elva condemned the use of images in religious worship,	305
The celebacy of the clergy warmly discussed first general council at Nice.	325
Exorcism, or an act of conjuration, to expel demons from people, introduced.	258
The sign of the cross first used in infant baptism.	263
The order of monks first instituted.	335
Martin I. introduced the singing of the Nicene creed.	336
The monks went about selling the bones and other fragments of imaginary saints.	345
Pope Cyracuss insisted in vain on the celebacy of the clergy and excommunicated those who were twice married.	385
Anastasius I. introduced the practice of standing up at the reading of the Gospel.	399
Bells first used in churches.	400
It was decided that lying and deception to promote the welfare of the church were acts of virtue.	406
It was decreed that noncompliance with the requirements of human creeds after repeated admonitions should be punished with death.	408
The oil of chrism as used in Extreme Unction was administered by the laity as well as by the clergy for the healing of the body.	416
Zozemes introduced the use of tapers in the church.	417
Celestin I. caused the Psalms be to sung in Antiphony.	426
Hilary I. broached the use of Litany in the church.	464
The Virgin Mary was first called the mother of God.	485
Felix III. decided that no church should be consecrated but by a bishop.	488
Pope Galasius decided that those who would not receive the sacrament in both kinds of bread and wine should be deprived of it altogether.	492
Felix IV. decided that Extreme Unction ought to be applied to dying men.	528
Pelagius I. decided that heretics and schismatics should be punished with temporal death.	558
The use of indulgences broached.	580
Purgatory introduced.	593
Gregory I. declared that it was heretical, unchristian and diabolical for John Patriarch of Constantinople, to seek the title of Universal bishop.	594
St. Augustine, commissioned by Gregory I, came to England with forty monks to establish popery among the Saxons. He first obtained the approbation of King Ethelbert, then got the army to go against those who opposed his religion and in the skirmish slew 1,200 of the English clergy.	595
Gregory I. called himself "Servus Servorum Dei," Servant of the servants of God,"	596
The canon of the Mass introduced.	598
Boniface III. obtained the title of "Universal Bishop." of Phocas, who first murdered his master Mauritus, the Emperor, and then usurped his throne.	606
Boniface IV. instituted "All Hallow day," and dedicated the temple of Pantheon to the Virgin Mary.	610
Boniface V. decreed that all murderers and thieves who would take sanctuary in a church should evade the hand of justice.	629
Honorius I. instituted the feast of the exaltation of the cross.	635
Vitalian I. broached the use of organs in the church service.	662
Vitalian I. commanded the Liturgy to be read in the Latin language everywhere and thereby mocked the subjection of the church to the Pope of Rome.	666
Agathe I. ordained that the Pope's sanctions should be as firmly kept as those of the Apostles.	680
Leo II. ratified the sixth synod to confirm the canon of the Mass.	684
Leo II. introduced the practice of kissing the Pope's slipper.	684
Benedict II. was the first Pope that was styled, "Vicar of Christ."	685
Invocation of saints made an article of faith.	700
Invocation of the Virgin Mary introduced.	715
Masses for the dead introduced.	752
Stephen II. received Lombardy as a gift from Pepin the usurper, for freeing him from the oath of allegiance to his rightful sovereign. From this time the pope was a temporal prince and wore two swords.	756
Stephen III. brought in the worship of images; and subjugated Milan to his see.	770
The worship of images publicly established by Irene the Empress.	784
The worship of images permanently established by a decree of the second Council of Nice.	787
The doctrine of transubstantiation broached in the Greek church.	789
Kissing the pope's toe introduced.	809
Pascal I. created the first cardinals. They are to be seventy in number.	820
The doctrine of transubstatiation was introduced into the Latin church by Pascasius Radbert, a monk.	831
Sergius II. was the first who changed his name on receiving the popedom who was followed by the popes ever since.	845
Leo IV. collected "Peter Pence" in England.	848
Pope Joan, a disguised woman, was elected to fill St. Peter's chair. She died in childbirth on her way to the Vatican.	854
Nicholas I. was the first that prohibited by law marriage to Roman clergy.	860
Adrian I. decreed that the pope should be elected exclusively by the Roman clergy.	885
Stephen VI. abrogated all the acts of Formoses, his predecessor, took his body out of the sepulcher, set it in the ponifical seat, excommunicated it and cut off two fingers and then buried it.	899
John IX summoned a council of seventy-one bishops and rescinded the acts of Stephen VI. and restored those of Formoses.	902
Sergius III. ordained the burning of candles at the feast of the purfiation of the Virgin Mary, hence called candlemas day, and rescinded the acts of Formoses.	906
Saints first cannonized.	993
Indulgences were first sold, which afterwards became a scource of great wealth to the popes.	1000

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 25, 1875.

"THE COMING POLITICAL PARTY."

An article will appear in the next week's Cynosure with the above title, which our readers will welcome. It is from the Christian Statesman, and is exceedingly able. Its doctrine is that when no moral principle divides political parties they are at once essentially demoralized. The most important consideration remaining being money, salary-grabbing becomes the order of the day. "Righteousness exalteth a nation," not "currency." And the Statesman writer shows that the Republican and Democratic parties are divided by no moral consideration since slavery fell; and the Republicans bailed the worst criminal and traitor of the rebellion, and entered the scramble with the Democrats for Southern votes.

There are issues still depending in which the very life of the nation is still bound up. The Anti-masonic party of 1828–31 was neither a fanaticism or a mistake. A secret government within a government, with courts behind its courts, and oaths behind its oaths is the certain destruction of that government. But political Anti-masonry went down because the lodge was not seen to be a false religion and a political remedy could not cure a religious evil; because the lodges 'played possum,' i. e., feigned dead, worshiped in secret, and their members joined and demoralized the movement. This alone would not have killed political Anti-masonry had not the slavery question arose, and

"Like Aaron's serpent swallowed all the rest."

But the game is now unearthed, and can never again get to cover. The world sees now the terrible vitality of the lodge; and as when the religious sentiment of the country began in earnest to cast out slavery, politics began to drop it, so will it be with the lodge. And it must now fight till it dies. If it should sham dead again, somebody will hold a candle to its nose.

Then Mormons and Chinamen will force us to say what our Constitution means by the word "RELIGION;" whether our government is Christian or heathen; whether the United States is within Christendom or outside. Our nation like Pilate has a Saviour on their hands whom we must or shall recognize or crucify.

Then the priest and atheist will force us as a people to say whether there is any Lord's day, and whether, by the laws of God and human nature, the laborer has a right to rest and worship on that day.

Then the traffic in intoxicants, and its relation to law. These are actually existing issues, and, in this country, such issues have already found their way to the polls, and they cannot, will not be driven back. And parties leaving these issues out must stuff their platforms with straw, and then only men of straw will vote for them.

—The United Presbyterian notices the aspersions of the lodge against that church and its teachings:

"We hear now and then that so many United Presbyterians are in the lodges of Freemasons and Odd-fellows. It is told by some astute disciple of the apron and hatchet that in a particular congregation there is such a number, and that they will cling to the order no matter what the church may say. It appears to be the policy of the lodge to propogate such an opinion. And it is natural, too; for as such institutions are founded on secrecy and deception, it is to be expected they will make a boast of having a membership that is doubly dishonest. But when asked to point out the members of this character they always fail. It is not possible that any rule in the church or any place else can have infallible application; but we venture the belief that the law in regard to seeret societies of the United Presbyterian church is as nearly lived up to as any one in any point of doctrine or practice in any of the churches."

BISMARCK'S FALK-LAWS.

Hume, skeptic, tory and royalist though he was, has these sensible words in his History of England, II., 555:

"It is certain that the restless enterprising spirit of the Catholic church, particularly of the Jesuits, merits attention, and is, in some degree, dangerous to every other communion. Such zeal of proselytism actuates that sect, that its missionaries have penetrated into every nation of the globe; and, in one sense, there is a popish plot perpetually carrying on against all states, Protestant, pagan and Mahometan."

At the time Hume wrote the above, Jesuitism was the most unpopular, as it is now the controlling order of the Romish church; and Bismarck is the only statesman on earth who dares undertake to protect his government against that terrible power. We understand the meaning and intent of the laws which he has enacted, to be that priests, paid by German taxes, shall be educated in German schools, and recognize the German Empire. He does not propose to enforce conscience, but to prevent crime. And while he is willing, as he says, to respect the Pope as a bishop and his creed as religion, he will not own him as his master and the civil ruler of German, Protestants, nor, for that matter, of German Catholics either.

True, as the Advance suggests, there are provisions in the Falk-laws which would not be borne here. That is true because priests and ministers of religion are not paid here out of the public treasury. If the treasury at Washington paid the preachers, it would then be right for Congress to say, if it choose, that no man should be a priest who had not read and approved the United States Constitution.

Suppose General Robert Lee's College in Virginia still openly taught that treason to the Union was duty to God; that secession was a right and enforced Union a crime; would our Government, after suppressing secession by its arms, be in duty bound to pay and support secessionists, and schools and teachers of secession? Surely not.

If priests do not like the German schools, they ought not to claim German money. The laws, as we understand them, do not forbid young priests studying popish theology, but requires them to go to German schools where there are even now more than a fair numerical proportion of Catholic teachers; but teachers who recognize the Emperor, not the Pope, as the civil head of the realm. After they have been taught in the gymnasia, they can study at Romish seminaries if they desire.

NOTES.

—J. A. Davidson, late State Lecturer for the Grand Lodge of Good Templars of Pennsylvania, and who has probably organized more lodges of that order than any other man in that State has gone back on his pledge to that order. He was lately arrested for the second time on charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct in Erie. This is but one of a thousand instances of the kind, only more prominent. The secret ensnaring order should bear this fall and not the good cause by which it seeks to gain respectability.

—A clergyman writes to the Advance of the unprofitable character of "outside" funerals, that is, of non-church-goers. On one instance, he says, he traveled over eight miles on a tedious day to take charge of such a service for a deceased Mason, which was attended by a large procession of the "aproned brotherhood." But no sign of remuneration or acknowledgment of obligation ever came from that rich and "independent fraternity." He was evidently not a reader of the Cynosure or he would never have expected any.

—In Iowa secret orders among the farmers prove to be about as useful and as long-lived as the chinch-bugs in their grain. A Chicago Journal correspondent says of the grange: "Over 1,100 of the 2,000 granges of Patrons are in arrears for dues. The import is that working farmers have got tired of paying their money to sidewalk farmers who don't work. They are beginning to learn that the National Sponge is more for the benefit of office-holders than the granges; and that a vast amount of the machinery of the higher granges is both useless and expensive. So they are striking out for themselves and organizing independent granges in various counties. The collapse of the order as a State organization in Iowa is a foregone conclusion. And so the reformers will die of their own defermities."

—The Christian Expositor (United Brethren) has the following illustration of the expediency of the following two or three kinds of religion. No doubt there might be found hundreds of like cases: "In the spring of 1873, two ministers were sent to take charge of congregations in an eastern town. The M. E. minister, and educated man, such as give 'dignity to a conference, presents visiting members with grace,' is a Mason, Odd-fellow, and a member of other orders. During the year he had some conversions, and eight accessions. His church-door was open for men and women of all orders. The U. B. minister is not an educated man, did not possess the concomitant advantages, is Anti-mason. During the year he had about 90 conversions, and 76 accessions. His church-door was opened only to those for whom the Bible and discipline opened it. Only those of the secret order were admitted who first left the order, (and there were such, who are still faithful and true,) and became willing to be governed by church discipline."

—In a work published many years since by Samuel Greenleaf, "An Inquiry into the Objects and Principles of Freemasonry," the following is quoted from a letter written Oct. 21, 1818, by David Poor, a missionary of the American Board, and a Freemason: "But it is worthy of inquiry whether we have not been guilty of the practical error of substituting our fraternity for the whole human family." A matter of very serious inquiry to an individual with his connections.

—A correspondent signing himself "S. R. H. B." labors through a three-column article to tell the benevolent public of the bad management, or worse, of the Filmore County Aid Society, Nebraska. The society, he says, was organized by men of low repute, and $1.00 demanded of every one who joined—an unusual and suspicious proceeding certainly. Some of the members while receiving aid from the East spent their money at dances and for whiskey and tobacco, and those who opposed begging for such characters found themselves much out-voted. The letter concludes with advising that donations be sent to responsible individuals through the State Aid Society.

—The widow of the late Gerrit Smith, died at Peterboro, N. Y., March 6th, aged 71 years. She was receiving medical aid in New York city when her husband died, and went home greatly benefited. The severe winter which has proved fatal to so many elderly persons, tried her beyond her strength and she died of some inflammatory disease.

—The Attorney-general of Kansas has ordered the $7,000, used by the infamous York to defeat Pomeroy's election to the Senate, to be returned to the latter. This puts an end to the case in law for the bribery suits were long since dismissed. The facts, so far as the lodge has permitted them to become public, are these: Mr. Pomeroy, at the time of his election, (Jan., 1873) had promised to help start a bank at Independence, in southern Kansas, furnishing $8,000. He stated to the Congressional committee of investigation, three or four weeks after the occurrence, that on the evening before the election, York came to his room in the hotel and on a pretense of friendship and with great indignation at the lack of confidence at first shown by Pomeroy, obtained $7,000, not for himself or as a bribe, but merely to convey to Page, the banker. This, we believe, York never denied, nor has it been disproved in any court. On the other hand, York boasted and the Congressional inquiry proved that he only carried out a plot carefully prepared by himself, Ingalls, and other Freemasons in the Kansas Legislature. Why the case never came to trial it is safe to say that the lodge was managing here as well as in the election. Senator Pomeroy and York were the only parties personally knowing of the interview, and while a stout lie backed by a handful of stolen greenbacks could create a sudden fury and carry a vote, it might not hold so well in court. The lodge controlled the press and always made it appear that Pomeroy was anxious to put off the trial which its own adherents at last gave up. Of the sum mentioned, $2,000 has been retained by the State to cover the cost of investigations and court fees, but with what color of justice does not appear; it has the likeness of all the rest of this cut-throat business, an infamous swindle. But the ex-Senator may be thankful to be clear of this Masonic gang.

Anti-secret Society Political Party.

ARKANSAS CITY, Kans., Mar. 2, 1875.

It is not my design to discuss the formation and support of such a party; should it be formed, I expect to support it, and vote for its nominees for office, unless very strong reasons should forbid. In the Cynosure for Feb. 25th, G. W. Needles suggests for President, Vice-President Wilson, and for Vice-president of the United States, Gen. Sheridan. Whether it is time yet to discuss the fitness of different persons for the high positions referred to, I am not prepared to pass judgment; but as the subject has been introduced by the writer above named, should the party named obtain from Henry Wilson of Massachusetts, permission to use his name for the office of President of the United States, it is likely they could not bring into the field an abler statesman, or one of a more unsullied moral character. As to the fitness of General Sheridan for the office of Vice-president, I am not well informed. His military education and life would not qualify him to preside over the Senate, and to preside over the destinies of this great Republic, in the event of the death of the President during his term of office, as has three times occurred in the history of our government. What the sentiments of the General may be in regard to secret societies in general I do not know; but it appears he entertains no good opinion of the White Leagues of Louisiana, whom he proposed to treat as bandits. The most powerful secret society in the world, I believe, to be the order of the Jesuits, and from his connection with the Romish church, which is completely ruled by the Jesuits, it is presumed that he would deal very gently with that secret society, were he in civil office. Before pressing the claims of any Romanist for office, we would recommend friend Needles to study Gladstone on the Vatican Decrees. Romanism is hostile to Freemasonry, which swears its members to "always conceal, and never reveal any" of its secrets. Now, if that oath were kept, no Roman Catholic could make a clean breast of everything which he knew to his priest. The ground of opposition to secret societies is not because they are anti-Christian or anti-republican, but because they hold secrets which they cannot, consistently with their oaths, disclose to the Father Confessor, who claims the right to be made acquainted with all the thoughts and intents of the hearts of all persons in every station from the most humble to the most elevated in society. Popery is making gigantic efforts to gain this country and England to its interests, and wo to them that aid it in such efforts. See Rev. xiv. 9–11.

In a free government like ours, a great responsibility devolves on Christians to employ all their constitutional rights to elevate to office, "able men, men of truth, fearing God, and hating covetousness." "As a roaring lion and ranging bear; so is a wicked ruler over the poor people." "When the righteous bear rule, the people rejoice, but when the wicked bear rule, the people mourn." "The wicked walk on every side when the vilest men are exalted." That the Ruler of nations who puts down one, and sets another up, who rules in the armies of heaven and among the inhabitants of the earth, may long preserve our liberties, and not in wrath set up over us the basest of men, but such as will be a terror to evil-doers, and a praise to them that do well, is the prayer of

DAVID THOMPSON.

Gen. Phelp's Book.

A St. Albans (Vt.) daily has the following review of this work which we commend to every reader of the Cynosure who has not read the book:

SECRET SOCIETIES, ANCIENT AND MODERN, an outline of their rise, progress and character with respect to the Christian Religion and Republican Government. By Gen. J. W. Phelps of Brattleboro. Chicago: EZRA A. COOK & Co.

This is a 12 mo. of 240 pages, price 50 cents, bound in paper and designed for popular distribution. It is wholly different from any former work on secret societies that has come under our notice, in that it does not pretend to make any exposition of their secrets, gives no illustrations and recites no formalisms. It is, on the contrary a historical, philosophical and statesmanlike treatise, written on a high key, in a pure tone and with profound learning. Whatever may be a man's predilections, this book will impress him with the sincerity, honesty and intense earnestness of the writer, and from a religious and patriotic standpoint it cannot fail to convince many that the whole category of secret societies, from Masonry down to grangerism, is essentially dangerous in tendency in spite of the many good things contained therein.

The book is divided into thirteen chapters, on the following subjects: the antiquity of secret societies; the life of Julian; the Eleusinian mysteries; the origin of Masonry; was Washington a Mason; Fillmore's and Webster's defense to Masonry; a brief outline of the progress of Masonry in the United States; the Tammany ring; the Credit Mobilier ring; Masonic benevolence; the uses of Masonry; an illustration, and the conclusion.

The general theory of the writer is that secret societies originated in heathen nations, where mysteries, polytheism and superstition held sway, and the symbolism that is kept up to-day is but an offshoot of the pagan worship, divination and idealism of the past. It is unchristian, unrepublican and unmanly. It sets up a code of morals that many accept in lieu of religion and often regard them as superior thereto. It governs society, not by laws that bear equally upon all, but by favoritism, partiality and combination. It destroys a man's individuality, self-reliance and moral convictions, by teaching him to be subservient, by often helping him to success without merit, by shielding him by deserved punishment and thus confusing his notions of right and wrong, compensation and atonement, by giving him, if crafty and ambitious, a tremendous power of communication and organization for the advancement of his purposes and gaining advantage over his fellow-men.

That Gen. Phelps profoundly believes all this no one will doubt, and that he has marshalled many convincing reasons for it no one who reads his book can deny. It these times when there are more secret societies than any one can name, and when they are rapidly forming—one to offset another or one necessitated by another—so that social, charitable and even commercial affairs are more in their control than they are in that of the church, the state, or the natural laws of trade, such a book cannot fail to be of great interest, to provoke antagonism and to find followers throughout the land. We differ from the writer in many of his conclusions, but it is refreshing, always, to read the theories of an honest, patriotic and independent mind, especially when he sails far above all the grovelling prejudices of time and place, and looks down upon human affairs with the eye of a philosopher, an historian and a seer.

S. D. Greene's Letter to the Lockport Convention.

Noticing a piece in the Cynosure of March 4th in reference to an expression of mine in the addressed to the N. Y. State Convention held at Lockport, signed "J. D," I thought I would give you the communication and let you publish it.

CHELSEA, Mass., Dec. 19, 1874.

To the Presiding Officer,

DEAR SIR:—You preside over a body of fellow citizens, though perhaps but a moiety of your great State; yet by no means meagre, or wanting in strength or diction. But possessing the mind and power under God, which inspired the minds of men of my native State, to resist the power of oppression and taxation, and to throw the imported tea overboard. So also you must importune Jehovah to elighten the minds of the people of this nation to remove another imported scourge and curse. Freemasonry; which is stealthily usurping the reins of government, creeping into the church of Christ, barring its portals, paralizing its functionaries with its false and brazen pretentions as slavery did; which must, like it, be met separately. So says one of our greatest statesmen, the late Hon. Charles Sumner in a letter to me: "Both are tending to centralization and anarchy and they must both be destroyed in our country, if it is to be the home of the free as our ancestors designed it." Under the march of enlightened civilization and freedom of thought, the nations of the earth are called upon by our nation to respect the individual right of one citizen, because the rights of one citizen are the rights of the whole. It seems strange that a transaction dating back no farther than 1826 should so soon be forgotten; and that Freemasonry, on account of its unlawful oaths, and anti-Christian principles, was renounced and denounced by thousands of true Christians. It is strange that, when thousands of upright men withheld their attendance upon the lodge, and lodge charters were returned, and Freemasonry was supposed to be dead, the fools, as Cadwalder D Colden, their great high priest in 1826, called them, that is, those that are pleased with its show, its parades, its gewgaws, as well as those who love and cherish unholy principles for filthy lucres' sake, should, like the possum in danger, pretend to be asleep so many years, then again arise and by their show and pomposity and by the unlawful and irreligious principles of the order, invite further investigations into their secrets and their oaths, which are their laws, and in obedience to which the Morgan outrages were perpetrated. The doors of justice were closed; the churches of Christ assailed by persecuting its members who left the lodge, having been beguiled by its false pretenses, or the salvo that the oaths should not militate against their religion or politics, or civil or religious duties, which ex-President John Q. Adams after careful examination says "is falehood and hypocrisy superadded to the breach of law and profanation of the name of God." But such is the depravity of the human heart without grace, it grasps the object of its love; and Freemasonry, like its prototype, the enemy of all virtue, clothes itself in light, to draw the unwary and innocent into the darkness of its purposes, to sustain its wicked designs. While, if the dupe of its power should act conscientiously and revolt, he is made to feel all the maledictions of its wrath. The Christian can look back nearly 1,900 years, with mingled horror and sympathy at the buffetings, scourging and crucifixion of their Lord and Master, while the Jews and ungodly mock and disregard the whole affair. So also, while the arms of our country so recently engaged to overthrow an oligarchy in the slave States, founded upon slavery; yes, this oligarchy and Freemasonry consorted the rebellion and fanned its flames and often checked the progress of the war for its overthrow, is apparent to one who knows its unlawful oaths and practices. To show this fact, Gen. Albert Pike, a noted rebel and Freemason, got up a Masonic lodge of sorrow before he was pardoned, in honor of Masons who drew the sword to prevent their fellow-creatures becoming free. Is this like Freemasonry? Fraternally yours,

SAMUEL D. GREENE.

The Home Circle.

Mother's Fingers.

Mother's useful fingers, sewing dainty seams;
While her faith is brooding over hopeful dreams;
While her heart is happy in a dawning love,
Deftly move her fingers for the coming dove.

Mother's feeble fingers, fluttering, slow, and mild,
O'er the tiny features of her welcome child:
Stroking cherub dimples, smoothing ruffled hair,
Tending baby treasures with unrivaled care.

Mother's busy fingers, working late and long,
Small and soft and slender, only through love strong.
Swiftly working wonders, never idly still,
Children's bread and raiment rousing parent-skill.

Mother's loving fingers, raising up the weak,
Passing, cool and gentle, o'er the fevered cheek;
Soothing sick and weary, like a touch of dew,
Lifting sinking spirits to their life anew.

Mother's pious fingers, turning o'er and o'er
All the glowing pages of our sacred lore;
Falling on the young brows, with a blessing fraught,
Mute and earnest pleading, when her God was sought.

Mother's faithful fingers stretching thro' the cloud,
Beckoning back the wanderer and the sinful bowed;
Clasping hands that Virtue scarce will touch again,
Clinging to the fallen, heedless of each stain.

Mother's tender fingers, guiding failing eyes,
Holding all the closer as the darling dies,
Lingering o'er each duty to the passive form,
Shrouding silent features from the sun and storm.

Mother's lifeless fingers, folded on her breast,
All their duty ended, laid at last to rest:
Noble work accomplished, quiet fingers cold,
Laid in peaceful silence 'mid the coffin mould.

Mother's angel fingers, waking golden strings,
Where, a holy harper, sweet her spirit sings;
Pointing out the sky-way, leading those who come;
Dear immortal fingers, in the Father's Home.

—Jessie M. Saxby.

Sabbath Evening Entertainment.

I was paying a visit to a friend who seemed to me in many respects a model in the training of children. But she complained of her want of success in interesting them in suitable Sunday occupation.

It chanced that one Sunday during my stay was so stormy that few could venture out, and by the middle of the afternoon her little flock became very restless, and in despair she applied to me to suggest something that would preserve a reverence for the day.

"Children," said I, "suppose you take your Bibles and letter-paper and pencils into the dining-room, and I will try to entertain you."

As Sunday-school lessons had been duly conned, Peter cried out, "We don't want it unless it's tip-top."

"What must we do first?" asked Murray.

"First of all take seats around the table. Then each of you in turn give the name of your favorite fruit, then we will search in the concordance for some text of Scripture relating to it, and after that we will turn to the commentary for an explanation of the subject, and talk about it.

"As Bob is the oldest we will begin with him. What fruit do you like best, Bob?" "I know," said Bessie. "Yes, but Bessie, you must answer in turn." "Guess you'd think it was grapes, if you had seen the way he went into them out at Uncle Charley's," said Tom. "Well, Bob, then turn to the fifth chapter of Isaiah, fourth verse, and read it aloud." "What could I have done more to my vineyard, that I have not done in it? Wherefore when I looked for it to bring forth grapes, brought it forth wild grapes," repeated Bob.

"Read what Scott says about that." "Good purposes are not enough; there must be fruit, that is a good heart and a good life—the vineyard produced wild grapes, that is things that seemed like fruit but were not."

"The prophet Isaiah," said I, "was speaking of the Jews, but what he said applies just as well to us. It is not enough to say, Oh, I mean to be good and obey my mother and keep Sunday holy, and learn my lessons and not do these things after all. We must really do them.

"Clara, you are next older, what is your favorite fruit?" "Apples," she replied. "Well, Solomon says, in Proverbs xxv: 11, 'A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures (or a net-work) of silver.' Here Solomon shows how important it is to speak properly, to say just the right thing at the right time.

"Now, Murray." "Pears," he answered quickly. "I cannot find any text about pears: but never mind, we will take up flowers next, and you shall lead."

We went on in this manner until the maid came to set the tea-table, and then I had to promise to renew the exercise in the evening. It worked so well we concluded to go on with it every Sunday evening.

After fruits and flowers were exhausted, we selected animals, birds, precious stones, etc., and I myself became acquainted with portions of Scripture I never knew before.—Am. Messenger.

Casting Down Imaginations.

Oh! if human nature were only willing to let God speak for himself, and to give him the credence which it demands for itself! But that is just what it is most reluctant to do. There was a time when, for God to speak, was for man to hear, believe and obey. And only when that time comes again to each one does the capacity to know God come with it. This poor human nature, unconscious that it is not itself, and like every other madman fancying itself perfectly sane, may thrust into a dungeon of darkness the faith which should sit on the throne within. And having thus deprived itself of the only faculty by which spiritual truth can be apprehended, it may compel its other and lower potencies to attempt the work that can be done only by faith. Will it succeed? The intellect may toil for a lifetime in fitting in a mosaic of beauty the shreds of its conjecture, or the dreams of its conceptions of things divine. But what are they after all but imaginations—images of a created image-maker. Behold the fragments of them that lie broken to dust along the highway of ages behind the advance of the Gospel of eternal truth. Every age has furnished theorists and theories, wildly contradictory to them that have preceded them. Their vast multitude is their fatal feature. How can they all be what they claim to be? If they are to be trusted, each one disproves some other. Each new cloud-ladder is set up because all before it have failed to reach the top. Aye, and so must it be forever; for they are reason undertaking the task of faith: human nature dictating to God what he shall say, instead of listening to what he does say—imaginations! Not the revelation, the manifestation of what he is, received by reverent, meek, obedient faith; but the ambitious conception of what he ought to be. What signify ten thousand such conjectures? Is he? and what is he? are questions that cover all. If he will answer these questions what can be done but listen, and believe, and thus come to know him? And when one revelation of himself in human speeches comes to men, when the one transcendent manifestation of himself appears among men, if it be really the revelation of himself, the manifestation of himself which moves with the calm but terrible steadfastness of conscious fact against hollow, fragile images, who can doubt what the result will be? or how certain the advance of the invincible gospel will be, to "cast down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God."—Dr. R. Thompson.

In the Cleft of the Rock.

A Highland mother, at the close of spring, was suddenly overtaken, in a wild glen among the mountains, by what was long recalled by her fellow villagers as 'the great May storm.' After attempting in vain for some time, with her infant in her arms, to buffet the whirling eddies, she laid the child down among heather and ferns, in the deep cleft of a rock, with the brave resolve, if possible, to make her way home through the driving sleet, and obtain succor for her little one. She was found by the anxious neighbors next morning stretched cold and stiff on a snowy shroud. But the cries of the babe directed them to the rock-crevice, where it lay, all unconscious of its danger, and from which it was rescued in safety. Many long years afterwards the child returned from distant lands a disabled soldier, covered with honorable wounds. The first Sabbath of his home-coming, on repairing to a city church (where he had the opportunity of worshipping God 'after the manner,' and in the cherished language of his forefathers), he listened to an aged clergyman unfolding, in Celtic accents, the story of redeeming love. Strange to say, that clergyman happened to be from the same Highland glen where he himself had spent his youth. Stranger still, he was illustrating the Divine tale with the anecdote, to him so familiar, of the widow and her saved child! A few days afterwards, the pastor was summoned to visit the death-bed of the old soldier. "I am the son of the widow," were the words which greeted the former, as he stood by the couch of the dying man. "Lay my bones beside hers in the churchyard among the hills. The prayers she used to offer for me have been answered. I have found deliverance in old age where I found it in my childhood—in the cleft of the Rock; but it is—the Rock of Ages!"—Macduff.

Admiral Foote.

Admiral Foote, if not a great man when judged by the highest intellectual standards, surpassed common men in some things. He surpassed them in moral force. The central element of his character was this—an immutable resolution, under a religious sense of duty, to pursue the right. The principles he had deliberately chosen he carried to sea with him and into public life, and into his intercourse with men everywhere and under all circumstances. He was an ardent believer in the Christian faith and a believer in prayer—these had been wrought into his spirit in his youth, and he sailed under that flag to the day of his death. He wrote to his wife after the capture of Fort Henry that "he had agonized in prayer for victory." Another man might have won the battle, and not have prayed for it; but he did, and he recognized the hand of God in the victory that was gained.

He may be thought to have been too radical in his ideas of reform. Some of his naval friends held this opinion, and did not scruple to tell him so. Indeed, in his early professional career he often endured contempt and persecution on this account. He was one of the instances in history of the "saints who are in Caesar's household;" or men true to their convictions of duty in circumstances of peculiar difficulty and temptation. He believed in total abstinence as the sheet-anchor of sailor character; therefore, at the East and West he fought out his temperance principles till at last—by his speeches, letters, and above all, personal example—he carried through the temperance reform in the navy and abolished spirit rations. His own crew ware noted for their sobriety and good conduct, not only on shipboard, but when they were ashore, at home, or in foreign ports. So it was with the observance of Sunday, the prohibition of profanity, and many other things that he had made up his mind about as being right; and because he believed them to be right, without much consultation with others, as far as his authority extended, he put them in practice. If reasoning would not do, he did it by command. He held to a principle to the last breath.

He was not a dry-hearted egotist, either as a Christian or an officer. He was open, cordial, confiding. He was extraordinally social in temperament whenever he was in good health and spirits; wherever he was there was hearty life and hilariousness. He was not, perhaps, a man of real humor, but he was noted for telling a "good story, appreciating a good jest, and enjoying a good laugh," and, until borne down by the burden of care, he was the best company in the world, and to the day of his death his boyish and fun-loving spirit flashed out. A genial temper, thoroughly kind, though not without a sprinkle of the salt of the rough ocean, made this hero of iron clads a delightful man in society. The little that he was permitted to have of this kind of life on shore he was thoroughly happy in; and when with his own family and in the circle of his friends, both young and old, then he was seen at the best, and his frank, loving, cheerful nature came out to great advantage. His intercourse with the world, and with those of the highest position in all parts of the globe, had given his manners great ease and polish.—Hoppin.

Value of Time.

He who every morning plans the transactions of the day, and follows out that plan, carries a thread which will guide him through the most busy life; the orderly arrangement of his time is like a ray of light, which darts itself through all his affairs. But where no plan is laid—where the disposal of time is surrendered merely to the chance of incidents—all things lie huddled in one chaos, which admits neither distribution nor review.

The first requisite for introducing order in the management of time, is to be impressed with a just sense of its value. Let us consider well how much depends upon it, and how fast it flies away. The bulk of men are in nothing more capricious and when they think of it as the measure of their continuance on earth; they highly prize it, and with the greatest anxiety seek to lengthen it out, but when they review it in separate parcels, they appear to hold it in contempt, and squander it with inconsiderate profusion, at the same time complaining that "life is short."

Among those who are so careless of time, we cannot expect to find order much observed in its distribution; and, by such fatal neglect, how many materials for severe and lasting regret are they laying up in store for themselves! The time which is suffered to pass away in the midst of confusion, bitter repentance seeks in vain to recall. What was ommitted to be done at the proper moment, arises to be the torment of some future season. Manhood is disgraced by a neglect of youth. Old age oppressed by cares that belong to a former period, labors under a burden not its own. At the close of life the dying man beholds with anguish that his days are finished, when his preparation for eternity has hardly commenced. Such are the effects of a disorderly waste of time.—Phrenological Journal.

Give Your Child a Paper.—A child beginning to read becomes delighted with a newspaper, because he reads of names and things which are familiar, and he will progress accordingly. A newspaper in one year is worth a quarter's schooling to a child. Every father must consider that information is connected with advancement. The mother of a family, being one of its heads and having a more immediate charge of children, should herself be instructed. A mind occupied becomes fortified against the ills of life and is braced for emergency. Children amused by reading or study, are, of course, more considerate and easily governed. How many thoughtless young men have spent their earnings in a tavern or grogshop who ought to have been reading! How many parents who have spent twenty dollars for books for their families, would have given a thousand to reclaim a son or daughter who had ignorantly, thoughtlessly, fallen into temptation.

A Century Ago.

Events were crowding one another a century ago, and we passed on the 26th of February the hundredth anniversary of the first actual resistance to British arms. This took place at Salem, Mass., the 26th of February falling for that year on Sunday. Information had reached General Gage at Boston that some munitions of war were stored at Salem, and he sent a detachment of the 74th Foot, under Col. Leslie, to capture them if possible. Almost every soul in town was at church, but the movement of troops was discovered, and the parson probably cut short the services. At all events, the congregation, with the parson at its head, was promptly on hand at a certain draw-bridge which afforded the only approach to the town. The draw was raised, and when the soldiers attempted to appropriate two scows that lay near by, the owners and bystanders scuttled them, at the cost of a scuffle during which some slight bayonet wounds were received. Both parties were anxious not to transgress the law, and as the bridge was private property, not a public highway, Col. Leslie was at a loss how to proceed without actual violence. He compromised, however, by pledging his word to march only thirty yards beyond the bridge, thus obeying the letter of his instructions as to entering the town of Salem. Meanwhile the stores had been removed to a place of safety, so that the Salemites did not care whether the British Colonel broke his word or no. He kept his promise, marched over the bridge and back, and departed for Boston with the honors of war. Meanwhile the country was aroused, and by Monday morning some thousands of men were under arms, in the belief that hostilities were about to begin.—Ex.

Four, Five, Six, Seven, Eight,—yes, eight prayers of sufficient length might have been offered while there were only two! One of the greatest temptations of prayer-meetings, is long prayers and exhortations. Says the Religious Telescope: "Who has not been severely tired by them? Who has not groaned under them? Who has not become nervous, and fidgety, and lost the spirit of prayer, on account of them?"

When will professing Christians learn charity or even good common sense? When these long-winded praying ones have prayed all over the world and back again two or three times, generalized and generalized, some ten or fifteen minutes, till the bones and sinews of every one fairly ache, and perspiration flows freely from every pore, the good brother on his knees winds up by saying (as a plea for his brevity): "We are not heard for our much speaking." D. F. N.

Children's Corner.

How a Beggar Boy Grew.

A New York merchant who is a Sunday-school teacher, was called upon for a speech, at a great Sunday-school meeting out in the West. He said:

"I'll tell you a little story of a beggar boy. I started out one fine Sunday morning, to get up some recruits for my class. At the corner of the street I met a barefooted boy, without hat or coat. His hair was fiery red, and looked as if it had never been combed. I asked the boy if he would come to school.

"'No, sir,' was his sharp reply.

"'You ought to go to Sunday-school,' I said kindly.

"'What for?' he asked.

"'We teach boys to be good,' I said.

"'But I don't want to be good,' he said.

"'Why not want to be good?' I asked earnestly.

"'Because I am hungry,' was his quick reply.

"'It is now nine o'clock,' I said, looking at my watch. 'Haven't you had any breakfast yet?'

"'No, sir.'

"'Where do you live?"

"'Up the alley there with aunty. She's sick.'

"'Will you eat some gingerbread and crackers if I go to the bakery and buy some?'

"'Yes, sir, that I will and be glad to get 'em.'

"I bought a lot and set them before him. He ate them in a way which showed how keenly hungry he was. I asked him if he would like some more.

"'A little more, if you please sir,' said the boy.

"I got a fresh supply and set them before him. I waited till he had done eating. Then I said, 'My boy, will you go with me to school now?'

"'You have been so kind to me sir,' said he, 'I'll go anywhere with you. Please wait till I take what's left of the gingerbread round to aunty, and then I'll go with you.'

"He returned directly to the sidewalk where I was waiting for him, and went with me to school. He had never been to school before. He thought of school as a place where boys had to hold out their hands to be slapped with a ruler, and have their hair pulled, and their ears pinched. But when he found himself in the hands of a pleasant-looking young lady, who treated him kindly, and said nothing about his shabby clothes, he was greatly surprised.

"He became a regular attendant. He told all the boys of his acquaintance about the school, and persuaded many of them to attend. About two years after this, a lot of boys from New York were sent out West, and distributed among the farmers. My red-haired boy was sent among them. I used to hear of him for a while that he was getting on and doing well. I have lost sight of him for years now, but I have no doubt he is doing good wherever he is." The gentleman then said a few words about the importance of getting the poor and neglected children of our large cities into Sunday school, and then sat down.

In a moment, a tall, good-looking gentleman, with red hair, stood up in the meeting, and said:

"Ladies and Gentlemen: I am the red-haired beggar boy, of New York, who ate that gentleman's gingerbread. I have lived in the West for years, and been prospered. I am now a rich man. I own five hundred acres of as good land as the sun shines on. My horses and carriage are at the door, and when the meeting is over, I shall be happy to take my old friend to my home where he will be welcome to stay as long as he pleases. I am a member of church, and the superintendent of a Sabbath-school, and I owe all that I have in this world, and all that I hope for in the next, to what was taught me about Jesus in the Sabbath-school."

Now the growth of a great oak tree from a little acorn is not at all more wonderful than the change which took place when that little, hungry, ignorant beggar boy, was turned into that intelligent, Christian gentleman. And yet it was all brought about by the light which Jesus gives.—S. S. World.

Anything for that Squirrel.

Before I left Illinois I was crossing the prairie between Richmond timber and Virginia, the county seat then of Cass county, Illinois. I saw and caught a beautiful prairie ground squirrel, and placed it in my coat pocket.

When I arrived at the public well in the town, from which I wished a drink, there were three well-dressed boys, about twelve years old, each of a separate family, who saluted me very respectfully. I told them that I had a beautiful pet, which I would give to the one who should give me the best answer to such questions as I should ask him. Said I to one of them:

"What are you, Whig or Democrat?"

His reply was, "I—I am—a Whig;" loth was he to speak, as he did not know my politics. To the next one I propounded the same question. Said he:

"Sir, I am a Democrat, and so are all my folks; and I intend to be one always, whether I get the squirrel or not."

Of the third boy I asked the same question.

Said he: "Sir, I am just anything you want me to be, or that you are, if you will give me that squirrel."

To the first boy I said: "Let me advise you to be firm in whatever course of life you pursue, if right and proper. Never swerve from the right for squirrel, or office, or fame. Your answer to me was hesitating, and therefore, I cannot award you the squirrel.

To the second I said: "I am well pleased with your answer. You are firm in what you are, believing it to be right."

To the third boy I said: "I fear that all through your life you will be anything for the squirrel. Alas! there are so many men now who act upon the same principle. In politics, religion, law, and in all pursuits, with them the squirrel is the grand object. Now be advised by me, 'Be sure you are right, then go ahead,' as Davy Crockett advised."

I then brought forth the squirrel, and handed it to the Democrat boy, telling him that I was a Whig.—Christian Weekly.

EXPOSITION

—:OF:—

THE GRANGE.

—‡o‡—

Illustrated with Engravings, showing the Lodge Room,

Signals, Grips, etc.

EDITED BY REV. A. W. GEESLIN.

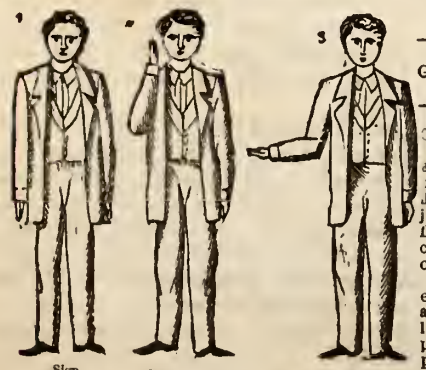
—:o:—

Entered according to Act of Congress in the year 1875
BY EZRA A. COOK & CO.,
In the office of the Librarian of Congress at Washington, D. C.

—:o:—

LABORERS DEGREE CONTINUED.

Steward to Candidates:—I must call your attention to the animals that, as a laborer, will come under your charge. The domestic animals are committed to our keeping by the Great Author of our being. We are ever dependent upon the brute creation; without them man could never have risen from barbarism to civilization. Practice mercy and compassion toward them. Never overwork or overload them; guard against haste in reprimanding. Treat them with kindness and affection, and they will learn to love you. It is one of the principles of our order to protect the dumb animals from abuse and any member who countenances their ill-treatment is liable to censure and expulsion.



Assistant Steward to Candidates:—I will now introduce you to our worthy Chaplain.

Chaplain to Candidates:—Worthy brothers, agriculture is the first and most noble of all occupations. It is the only one of divine origin. God planted the Garden of Eden, and placed man therein to keep it. He caused to spring forth out of the ground every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and bearing fruit good for food. It was a command of the Almighty that man should till the ground. History proves that where agriculture has been fostered by a people, that nation has prospered and reached a high degree of perfection; but where it has been neglected, degeneracy began. Let us heed the warning and escape the doom.

Assistant Steward to Candidates:—Brothers, that you may receive the implements of labor I will now conduct you to our Master.

Worthy Master, our brothers are prepared to receive the tools of laborers.

Master to Candidates:—I will now call your attention to the implements of this degree, the Axe, Plow, Harrow, and Spade. The Axe is used by us to cut away obstructions in the fields and prepare timber for use. Its use is emblematical of perseverance in overcoming obstacles, for, as by repeated blows it cleaves its way through the strongest wood, so should we by repeated trials be able to surmount every difficulty. The plow is used by us to break up the ground and prepare it for planting; and this should teach us to diligently drive the plowshare of thought through the heavy clods of ignorance, and thus prepare the mind for the seeds of knowledge and wisdom. The harrow is also an implement used by us to pulverize the soil as well as to cover the seed. Let this be emblematical of that course of study and observation necessary to enable you to fully understand your business, and also that thorough training which all must undergo who would become prepared to have the lessons of experience and wisdom firmly implanted in their minds. The spade we use when we wish to go deeper in the soil than can easily be penetrated by the plow, and as by its use we drain our land of surplus water, admitting the air and warmth to permeate and quicken the hitherto cold and unproductive soil; so may the knowledge you acquire through your connection with this order be the means of divesting your mind of ignorance, and imbue it with the spirit of philosophical investigation and research; ever remembering that in the members of this fraternity you have cordial co-workers and ardent sympathizers. I will now give you the sign of a laborer. Master instructs the candidates in the signals at the outer and inner gates

Sign Laborers Degree. Second Position. Sign of Caution.

SIGNAL AT OUTER GATE:—Three Raps.

PASSWORD AT OUTER GATE:—Adam.

SIGNAL AT INNER GATE:—Two Raps.

PASSWORD AT INNER GATE: Laborer.

SIGN OF FIRST OR LABORER DEGREE: Pass thumb of right hand forward of fingers till it touches at junction of third and fourth fingers with hand, thus concealing it in the palm of the hand.

SECOND POSITION: Bend elbow, bringing the forearm up till hand is on a line with the face, fingers pointing straight upward, palm of hand toward the shoulder, thumb still concealed in hand; then let hand fall quickly to side again. This is also the SALUTATION of this degree. The sign of caution is now given.

SIGN OF CAUTION: Standing erect, as in giving sign of degree, conceal thumb in palm of right hand, throw palm outward from the body.

Sign of Caution, Second Position.

Patrons' General Sign.

SECOND POSITION: Bring arm over shoulder till the ends of the fingers nearly touch shoulder under right ear; let hand fall quickly to the side.

PATRONS' GENERAL SIGN: *Bring left forearm horizontally across the body, closing the hand on the left lapel of coat or other garment you may have on, with the thumb pointing straight upward The sign of this deg. signifies that "a good laborer places faith in God."

*To illustrate: Suppose that A. and B. meet. A. throws out the sign to B., B. answers it [by giving the same sign] and then approaches A, and says. "Are you looking for a Patron?" A. answers, "For a Patron." They then shake hands.

Master to Candidates:—You are now laborers in the first degree of our honorable order. Our Worthy Patronesses, Ceres, Pomona and Flora, will furnish you with advice essential to aid you in your duties.

Assistant Steward to Candidates:—I now present you to our worthy Patroness Ceres.

Ceres to Candidates:—As laborers you will require food for sustenance; take of this corn, but save a portion of the fairest for seed. Let it also be your duty, as far as it is in your power, to assist your companions in securing an abundance of seed for their lands and at the proper season. Let me counsel you also to be active laborers. The enlivening influence of Spring extends to all creation; the Spring grows brighter in color as it feels the genial warmth of the morning sun. The winged songsters joyfully resound their artless notes, and all nature is alive. The husbandman, at this season, must be earnest in his labors, knowing full well that if he fails to sow he cannot reap; and while he is occupied in the hopeful work of seeding his lands, may he never lose sight of preparation for that great harvest-field in which he will sooner or later be garnered.

Assistant Steward to Candidates:—I now present you to Flora.

Flora to Candidates:—To me belongs the forest, its fruits, and its garlands of flowers. Remember that trees are needed for shelter, shade, and ornament; spare the trees and shrubs that are needed to lend fragrance to the breeze and beauty to the landscape, while they interfere not with man's wants and pleasures. Save enough of those to shelter house, orchard, and field from blasting winds, and give comfort to the overheated and weary; by so doing even the quadrupeds who aid, and the feathered tribes which cheer your labors will call for blessings on your head.

Assistant Steward to Candidates:—I next present you to Pomona.

Pomona to Candidates:—That you may have refreshment while laborers take of this fruit. Fine fruits are the flowers of commodities; they are blessings designed to please the eye and gratify the taste, multiply our comforts and elevate our social and moral condition. The culture of fruits indicates refinement. Their use as food tends to a healthy and refined temperament both of body and mind, and should be esteemed as necessaries rather than luxuries. It is therefore our duty to develop and increase these bounties to their utmost extent.

Assistant Steward to Master:—Worthy Master, our brothers are now ready for labor in the field.

Master to Candidates:—I now greet you as Worthy Laborers, and charge you always to keep in remembrance the pledge you have given, and let your future conduct be regulated by the precepts of wisdom and virtue.

Master to Assistant Steward:—Worthy Assistant Steward, you will please introduce our brothers to their fellow laborers.

MAID, OR FIRST DEGREE FOR LADIES.

(The Ladies receive the same signs in all their ceremonies as are given to men.)

Candidates sign the roll-book, properly robed and blindfolded in preparation room. The Lady Assistant Steward now signals at the door.

Steward:—Who comes?

Lady Assistant Steward to Steward:—Those who desire to assist us in our work.

Steward to Lady Assistant Steward:—Please tarry while I inform our worthy Overseer.

Steward to Overseer:—Worthy Overseer, there are strangers at the gate seeking admittance.

Overseer to Steward:—Satisfy yourself that they are worthy and if so admit them.

The Steward opens the door and says, "None but those worthy and well qualified can enter here; do you vouch for your companions.

Lady Assistant Steward to Steward:—I do.

Steward:—Enter, then, and pass to our worthy Overseer.

Lady Assistant Steward enters with caudidates. They pass once around, stopping at Overseer.

As candidates enter the following song is sung.

SONG.

"Welcome, sisters to our Order;
We shall need your help and care,
In the harvest and the vintage
You shall have a rightful share.
Welcome, welcome, welcome, welcome,
Heaven bless you, is our prayer
Welcome, welcome, welcome, welcome,
Heaven bless you is our prayer."

Lady Assistant Steward to Overseer:—Worthy Overseer, I present friends who desire to be initiated into the mysteries of our order.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Miscellaneous.

—George DeBaptiste, colored, famous in the ante-bellum days as conductor on the underground railroad, died in Detroit, Feb. 22d., aged 64 years. He was steward of the White House in 1841, and President Harrison died in his arms.

—In Italy seventeen millions out of a population of twenty-four millions, are unable to read or write.

—The Japanese have paper which is water-proof, and of which garments, handkerchiefs, hats, umbrellas and purses are made, and also paper warranted to wash, and of sufficient strength and pliability for any use.

—The Department of Agriculture has made a statement of the extent of the injuries inflicted by the grasshoppers in the West. The area of the section visited is from 200 to 225 miles wide, extending from southern Dakota, through Nebraska and Kansas, 500 miles in length. The extent of territory visited exceeds 100,000 square miles. The approximate population of the districts desolated is about 750,000, The cases of total and partial destruction to crops in thirty counties in Kansas are over 40,000, and in the entire State 50,000. The number of people more or less severely affected by the pest in all the devastated region is from 75,000 to 100,000.

—The discovery of frozen ground at a considerable depth in a Colorado silver mine affords a new problem for geologists. The mine is located high up on McClellan mountain at an altitude of over 12,000 feet. The miners were tunnelling into the side of the mountain, and had attained a distance of about ninety feet without encountering any unusual obstacles, when they were astonished to find the ground before them solidly frozen. Through this frozen area they have already tunnelled to the distance of more than two hundred feet, and it is probable the frost extends much farther. There appears to be no crevice or channel through which the frost could enter from above, and it is altogether impossible that the cold of our present winters could have penetrated to such a depth. How, then, did the frost get there? is the puzzle. One solution that has been suggested is that it was frozen during the intense cold of the glacial period. The fact that numerous evidences of glacial action are found on the mountain and in the vicininty, give some plausibility to this theory.

Religious Intelligence.

—From fifteen to twenty of the middle class in Yale Seminary are expecting to spend the summer vacation, four months, in preaching on the frontier, probably in Kansas.

—It is said that every student in the Baptist Female College in Lexington, Mo. has professed conversion.

—Bishop Janes has dedicated more than one hundred Methodist Episcopal churches in the State of New Jersey.

—The New York Advocate says: "There are in the United States about fifty missionary associations, whose annual receipts and expenditures amount to $6,000,000. Of this, the Episcopal and Congregational churches each contribute about $300,000; the Presbyterian, $500,000; and the Methodist Episcopal about $700,000.

—From reports of the Methodist Episcopal Book Concern it appears that the New York Christian Advocate has a circulation of 50,000; the Western of Cincinnati over 20,000; the Northwestern of Chicago over 17,000; while the Methodist Advocate of Atlanta, Ga., one of the best and most loyal of the whole family and the only member in the South, has less than 4,000. The Sabbath-school paper issues 276,000, and 956,000 copies of the Berean lesson leaves are called for. The missionary Journal has some 104,000 circulation.

—This is how the Washington Street Baptist Church of Lynn, Mass., settled the pew rent question, according to a correspondent of the Watchman and Reflector: "When we came together to consider the best interests of the church, we determined that it should never be shut to any of God's people who might desire to worship here. The plan of free seats was discussed. Many objections to this appeared. We then thought of making each alternate pew free. This, too, was rejected. The thought of placing a mere nominal price on the pews, and raising the balance needed for the support of worship by subscriptions, did not meet approval. Finally, we united on this plan. We place no price on the seats. To any one desiring to worship with us, we say, select any unoccupied pew in the house which pleases you, then decide how much you feel able and think it your duty to pay for the support of worship, and that shall be your rent. Thus the one to whom God has given ability to pay $100, and he whose restricted means allow him to pay but $1, sit together as neighbors, and none save the collecter knows the poor from the rich. As God's treasures, we propose to accept 'according to that a man hath and not according to that he hath not.' Every man's self-respect is regarded, and all meet together as equals, in God's house. We claim that this is a true Gospel plan for the support of public worship, and we believe that this our Master's house none too good or too elegant in which to illustrate it."

—A writer in the Occident makes some curious calculations about the giving power of the Presbyterian church. He comes to the conclusion that $500 a year is within the average income of each church member, which upon a membership of say 500,000 makes the total annual income $250,000,000. One-tenth of this would be $25,000,000 annually; the contributions actually given average about $9,000,000 or a little over four per cent. He adds: "Comparing ourselves with other denominations, we doubtless have done well. But comparing our work with God's bestowment of this world's good upon us, have we not reason to be humbled before him? And may we not hear the voice of his providence, and his grace, saying, 'Speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward?'"

—The Indiana Conference Ministerial Association of the Wesleyan church holds its first session at Fairview, June 1st. Bro. A. J. Hiatt, a seceding Mason, is secretary, and a number of active men in the anti-lodge reform take part in the meeting, among them are the following: J. T. Horne, discusses the nature and tendency of secrecy; J. T. Kiggins, duty of the church with relation to secrecy.

—The Wesleyan church, A. F. Dempsey, pastor, in Seneca Falls, New York, where the State Association was held a year ago, is enjoying a revival season.

—A powerful revival is reported in Delhi, New York, in which 150 persons have been converted, many of them prominent business and professional men.

—The membership of the Presbyterian church at Georgetown, Ill., has increased during the last two months from ten members to sixty-three.

—One of the churches of Farmington, Maine, has adopted what is called the Bible service in place of Sabbath forenoon preaching service. Its nucleus is the Sunday-school. It embraces: 1. Devotional exercises conducted mainly by the pastor. 2. Study of a uniform portion of the Word of God in classes under eighteen teachers including the pastor. 3. A short unwritten sermon or address by the pastor, summing up the lesson and applying its main spiritual truths. So successfully has this plan worked that in four years the church membership has increased from 199 to 408, and ninety per cent. of those present at the Bible exercises regularly attend the preaching service in the afternoon. This new system has had the effect of encouraging the Sunday school teachers and making the young people feel nearer their pastor; and it brings the congregation into closer fellowship with each other. The pastor thinks so much of the value of the change in the services that he says: "If I could have but one service each Sunday for building up a people into Christian manhood, I am not certain but I should prefer fifteen minutes preaching upon a theme which all had been studying, to twenty-five or thirty minutes preaching without that advantage."

News of the Week.

General.

Brigham Young, having refused to pay the $3,025 required by the late suit of Ann Eliza, was sentenced to prison for twenty-four hours for contempt of court. That the law is thus able to assert itself in Salt Lake City over the "Prophet" once so powerful, shows the low ebb to which Mormonism has been brought.——Vasquez, one of the most noted desperadoes of modern times was hung at San Francisco on Friday last. His deeds of violence commenced in 1854 and most of the time since he has led a robber band and spread terror through several counties in California.——The Austin Powder mills, located near Cleveland blew up last Tuesday. The works, ten or twelve buildings were completely demolished. There were eight or ten men at work in and about the mills at the time of the explosion, three of whom were killed, the others escaping with a few slight bruises. The two magazines, in which is stored a large quantity of powder, did not explode. In Cleveland the effect was very destructive to plate glass Scarcely a window is left upon Broadway and the adjacent streets south of the market. The sensation at a distance of five miles was similar to that of a severe shock of earthquake.

Flood and Storm.

The Susquehanna river, from Port Deposit at its mouth to Pittston and Scranton in north-east Pennsylvania, was filled with ice gorges last week, and poured its floods over railroads, cities and bridges. At Port Deposit the water on the 19th was from 5 to 15 feet deep in the streets. The whole town was flooded as never before known. At Marietta, Pa., ice was piled in the streets and on the railroad track from 10 to 40 feet high. There has been great destruction of property at these places, and at Wilkesbarre, Bainbridge, Middletown and Columbia. No lives were reported lost.

Foreign.

—A Berlin dispatch says that the German government, in order to check the emigration to the United States, proposes to set apart certain portions of the Crown lands, to be broken up in small lots, in order that the poorer classes (from which the emigrants are chiefly drawn) may have the privilege of purchasing and holding homesteads within their means, in their own country.

—In the Lower House of the Prussian Diet last week, debate was opened on the first reading of the new Ecclesiastical bill which receives greater importance from the late encyclical of the Pope granting special privileges to Catholics under Austrian law, but requiring disobedience on the part of Prussian Catholics to the laws of that State. Dr. Falk, Minister of Public Worship, in a speech explaining the necessity for fresh legislation on the relations of the State with the church, dwelt especially on the fact that the Pope had authorized the Austrian Bishops to obey laws similar to those which he denounced in Prussia. Prince Bismarck made a powerful speech for the bill. He said the maxim that more obedience was due to God than to man certainly did not mean that more obedience was due to a Pope, misguided by Jesuits, than to the King. The Government was doing its duty in protecting German freedom of mind against Rome. On the 18th the main clauses of this bill withdrawing State grants from Roman Catholic bishops were passed by an overwhelming majority.

—The attendance and enthusiasm of the revival meetings of Moody and Sankey continues. A London dispatch says under date of March 19—5:30 a. m.—"There was much confusion at the revival meeting in Agricultural Hall last night. The crowd was so great that order could not be preserved. The pressure was tremenduous. People were badly crushed, and there was some fighting. The Times this morning favorably reviews the mission of Moody and Sankey."

A HISTORY OF THE REFORM AGAINST SECRET SOCIETIES.

Reasons for Sustaining the Christian "Cynosure."

[Published in the Religious Telescope, Feb., 1875.]

Messrs. Editors:—I see, in a recent number of the Telescope, some objections to our encouraging the circulation of the Christian Cynosure. It seems to me those objections are very objectionable, 1st, because it is one of the best weeklies in this country; 2d, it is strictly in accordance with our book of discipline; 3d, it is a great assistant in the great and terrible war with secret, oath-bound societies. It goes before, clearing the way, and does much hard work for us that we may the more easily and successfully extend our lines and build up Christian societies at home and abroad. There are many of our ministers and members who read the Cynosure, and who say they could not get along without it. In many places, under various circumstances, it works side by side with the Telescope in all the reforms of the day in church and state. Furthermore, what the Cynosure is doing for us as a church it is doing for sister churches which exclude members of secret societies, and, under God, assists in renovating churches corrupted by the dark orders.

Again: we cannot fail to give the Chistian Cynosure a high recommendation if we contemplate the class of persons who patronize it and work in the cause it represents. They are found among the humble, devoted, self-sacrificing, earnest Christian workers of all evangelical denominations, many of whom are learned, refined and intellectual, possessing warm hearts and clear minds, occupying, as they do in many instances, high positions in church and state. With modest pride we might refer to the class of men now in the lecture-field. Suffice it to say that the national agent and lecturer, in the person of Rev. J. P. Stoddard, is a worthy and able minister in the Congregational church. When called into this wide fie'd the society, which he served as minister and pastor eleven executive years, refused to allow him to relinquish the pastorate. Seeing that he must go, they employed another minister to serve them as such for the time being.

Mr. Stoddard as national agent and lecturer, has discharged the functions of his high office to the acceptance of the Executive Committee and with good success. He is very careful in his selections of men to be employed as State agents and lecturers. In this critical and important duty he has acted wisely and without blunder. His corps of chosen men now in the lecture-field were men of position, and, so far as I known, in the enjoyment of pleasant home circles. They have allowed themselves to be called to the front to be sent out as sheep among wolves, to brook the terrible element of Masonic vengeance. These men have proved themselves trustworthy, have rendered good service, and have been successful. The good cause in their hands, under God, has prospered beyond our most sanguine expectations.

This band of noble men are staunch friends of the Cynosure. We can refer, also, to our bishops. At least three of them are good Cynosure men and successful laborers in its cause. Bishop Edwards, a day or two after he reached Baltimore with his family to set up housekeeping in his new home, informed me that as soon as he got his household affairs set to rights he had to start to meet his appointments. He had six conferences to attend in as many weeks, and one lecture on secrecy to deliver after each conference appointment. Since that time he has been across the continent, and of course he has not forgotten the Cynosure and its good cause. Bishop Weaver has engaged to lecture in California, on secretism, when he gets here. We may rest assured that he will weave a web for the Californians that will never wear out. I am glad to see Bishop Dickson, in the Cynosure, recommending and urging the immediate prosecution of a great enterprise which the Executive Committee have in contemplation in Chicago. I have referred to these great and good men as specimens of scores and hundreds of others who are in sympathy with the Cynosure and the good cause it represents.

I beg leave to give one more reference. President Blanchard of Wheaton College bought the United Brethren Church History, read it through, gave it a high recommendation, and advised others to do the same. He holds our church, its discipline, and the Telescope in high esteem. He is editor of the Christian Cynosure, and is one of our best friends. I know we need the sympathy of such men in this our day of trial.

Now, I ask shall we turn the cold shoulder to such friends? In our present course we have a host of such friends. If we discountenance the Cynosure we will wound them all and do ourselves the greatest possible injury and our enemies a great pleasure but a great injury also.

Now suppose we should never speak a good word for the Christian Cynosure, or any other paper, or take any other paper published outside of our own publishing house. We would follow the example of the Masons and all other selfish sinners. I remember of reading: "He that watereth shall be also watered himself;" "Let not every man look on his own things, but also on the things of others." It is patent to every Christian that to bless others is to bless ourselves. We must do good to our enemies; and why not to our best friends, such as the Christian Cynosure and others of the same kind? There is a goodly number of our brethren who take the Cynosure, but there are thousands who do not. It is mainly for their sakes that the above is written. I have tried to represent it correctly to them. For that purpose I have referred to the class and character of men who patronize and work for it and the cause it represents. It is conducted by men of extensive experience and information, learned, intelligent, pious, devoted, self-sacrificing Christians. The Christian Cynosure has passed through flood and flames,—once drowned, twice burnt. Still it lives, and may it live on to proclaim those truths and principles that shall live when sin is all destroyed.

Now, among the one hundred and forty thousand members of the United Brethren church, can there not be at least one thousand new subscribers raised for the Christian Cynosure? But be sure to take your church paper, the Religious Telescope, first; then, if you have $2 20 left, send to Ezra A. Cook & Co., publishers, No. 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill., for the Christian Cynosure. John Miller.

Wauseon, Ohio.

Home and Health Hints.

The Dangers of Foul Cellars.—Nearly all farmers and villages keep through the winter a stock of fruit and vegetables in the cellar. As spring comes on they decay rapidly, and they are unusually thrifty housekeepers who extend their house-cleaning below the kitchen floor. Very seldom, indeed, is the cellar sufficiently ventilated, and the results need no description. The apartment which should be sweet and clean smells offensively, and loads the atmosphere of the whole house with poisonous effluvia. In selecting a summer home, therefore, take your eyes and nose at once into the cellar. The worst evils here are generally easily remedied, and the most ignorant householder will appreciate the change which a single day's labor will accomplish.

Lack of Good Gutters.—See that the eaves of the house are provided with gutters. Many farm-houses are not, and the frequent dripping from them so close to the walls keeps the latter soaked in moisture. If there be gutters they are not unfrequently choked with debris. Then they overflow and drench the walls from above. One cannot have been a frequent visitor in the country without having become disagreeably conscious of the chill which especially prevades that portion of the house not in ordinary use, but is felt as well in any part which is carefully shut in from the sun and wind. The heated air which will escape in is, of course, overladen with moisture, and as it cools deposits the excess on every object.

Bad Wells.—Repulsive as are rotten cellars and damp walls, impure water is one of the worst, as it is one of the most irremediable sources of disease in rural districts. Too often "the old oaken bucket" overflows with poisonous germs. We do not exaggerate when we say that not one country well in five hundred is located at a sufficient distance from filthy surroundings. They derive their supply of water from a variable distance, depending on the character of the soil, but never should they be less than fifty feet from any possible source of impurity. Generally, however, they are placed, for convenience sake, beside the kitchen door. Here are thrown slops from the kitchen, if nothing worse. Too near are the barn-yard, and other sources of pollution which need not be named, and through all these are leached the contents of the "old oaken bucket that hangs in the well." Careful filtration through charcoal will remove some of these impurities, and, with greater care regarding the refuse do as much as can be done from the kitchen to remedy possible and probable evils from this source.

To Clean Paint.

Save the tea leaves for a few days, then steep them in a tin pail or pan for half an hour, strain through a sieve and use the tea to wash all varnished paint. It requires very little "elbow polish," as the tea acts as a strong detergent, cleaning the paint from all its impurities, and making the varnish equal to new. It cleans window sashes and oilcloths; indeed, any varnished surface is improved by application. It washes window panes and mirrors much better than water, and is excellent for cleaning black walnut picture and looking-glass frames. It will not do to wash unvarnished paint with it. Whiting is unequaled for cleaning white paint. Take a small quantity on a damp flannel, rub lightly over the surface and you will be surprised at its effects.

Farm and Garden.

Get Ready for Spring.

The time for preparing for the spring campaign is at hand. Next to having good teams is having good harness for them to work in. Good snug-fitting collars are wanted for the horses. Don't buy cheap collars. Those rightly made of the best material, are far the cheapest in the long run. Indeed cheap things are nearly always dear. Strong harness, made of the best leather, so they will not break, and an extra harness or two, in case of a break, is a good thing to have on hand.

The plows and harrows of the best pattern should now be provided. If the share or coulters or teeth need sharpening, now is the time to have the work done. If old trees or brush or trash need removing from the fields that are to be plowed, now is the time to do the work. If an abundant supply of fire-wood is provided, for all the spring and summer, and cut up to the proper length for the stove, and piled snugly under shelter, now is the time to do the work. Tired men from the plow and harvest field are in no humor to cut wood. This is the season to do that work, so that it shall not interfere with the work of the summer, or sour the temper of the good wife, who has to fret and scold to get firewood to cook their victuals.

The garden seeds and field seeds should be obtained so as to be on hand when needed. Everything should be in repair. An extra coat of paint on the wagons, plows, &c., will do them good, and make them last the longer. A plan must be laid for the coming campaign. The farmer should determine how many acres to be put into grain and grasses. He should determine to what purpose each field should be devoted. If he has not the best breeding stock, now is the time to make inquiries or visits for the purpose of securing it. It is the best stock that pays best, as it is the best fields, the best culture, the best machinery, that gives the most profit in the long run.

Whitewash for Out-door Work—Slack half a bushel of lime in boiling water, keeping it covered during the process. Then strain it and add a peck of salt previously dissolved in warm water. Then add three pounds ground rice that has been put into boiling water and boiled to a thin paste, half a pound Spanish whiting, and a pound of clear glue dissolved in warm water. Mix all well together, and let the mixture stand for several days. Keep this wash ready in a kettle, and when used put it on hot as possible with paint or whitewash brushes.

ANTI-MASONIC BOOKS,

(Not our own Publications.)

For Sale by EZRA A. COOK & CO

13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

[FOR CATALOGUE OF PUBLICATIONS OF EZRA A. COOK & CO., See page 15.]

All books sent post paid, on receipt of retail price, but BOOKS SENT BY MAIL ARE NOT AT OUR RISK.

Books ordered by express are sold at 10 per cent. discount and SENT AT OUR RISK. Party ordering must pay express charges.

Elder Stearns' Books.

Stearns' Inquiry Into the Nature and Tendency of Masonry

With an Appendix.

SEVENTH EDITION.

388 Pages, in Cloth.....60 cents.
" " " Paper.....40 "

Stearns' Letters on Masonry.

Showing the antagonism between Freemasonry and the Christian Religion,
Price, 30 cents.

Stearns' Review of Two Masonic Addresses.

In this scathing review the lying pretentions of the order are clearly shown.
Price, 10 cents.

Levington's Key to Masonry.

This is Rev. Mr. Levington's last, and in the judgment of its author, best work on Masonry. The contents of the first chapter are as follows:

"Commencement and growth of Speculative or Symbolic Freemasonry—A table showing the thing at a glance—The use that the Atheists made of it—Identical with Illuminism—Its connection with the French Revolution, and with the Irish Rebellion—The action of the British Parliament with regard to it—Proofs of its diabolical purposes—Its Introduction, doings, progress and designs in the United States."

The contents of the Eleventh chapter are thus startling:

"Knights of the Golden Circle—Graphic account of them by a seceding Knight, and remarks thereon, showing the identity of the order with Masonry—Quotations from Sir Walter Scott."

This work is thrilling in statement, and powerful in argument. 425 pages,
Price, $1.35.

Light on Freemasonry.

BY ELDER D. BERNARD,

TO WHICH IS APPENDED A

Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship by a Member of the Craft.

The whole containing over five hundred pages lately revised and republished. Price $2,00

The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages in paper cover, will be sent post paid on receipt of $1.

MASONRY A WORK OF DARKNESS

ADVERSE TO CHRISTIANITY,

And Inimical to a Republican Government
By REV. LEBBEUS ARMSTRONG,
(Presbyterian.)

A Seceding Mason of 21 degrees.

This is a very telling work and no honest man that reads it will think of joining the lodge.
PRICE, 20 cents each; $1.75 per doz., post paid

Walsh's Review of Freemasonry

REVISED EDITION,

Is a Scholarly Review of the Institution, by Rev Jno. T. Walsh.

Price 25 cts.

Finney on Masonry.

BOUND IN CLOTH, PRICE $1.00.

CHEAP EDITION,

Twenty-five dollars per hundred, by express and not less than 25 copies at that rate.

BY MAIL, POST-PAID:

Per doz.....$3 75.
Single copy,.....35 c.

THIRTEEN REASONS
Why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

BY

REV. ROBERT ARMSTRONG.

The author states his reason clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the Lodge.

Single copy, by mail post paid.....05
Per doz., " " " 50
" 100, express charges extra,.....3 50

Masonic Books,

FOR SALE AT THE CYNOSURE OFFICE.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and bilsher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

Allyn's Ritual of Masonry,

Illustrated by a large number of engravings, and containing a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, Orange and Odd-fellows' societies. Price, $5.00.

Mackey's Masonic Ritualist;

OR

MONITORIAL INSTRUCTION BOOK

BY ALBERT G. MACKEY,

"Past General High Priest of the General Grand Chapter of the United States, Knight of the Eagle and Pelican, Prince of Mercy," Etc. Etc. Price, $1 75

Mackey's Lexicon of Freemasonry,

Containing a Definition of Terms, Notices of its History, Traditions and Antiquities, and an account of all the Rites and Mysteries of the Ancient World. 12 mo. 526 pages, $3 00.

MACKEY'S MANUAL OF THE LODGE,

OR

Monitorial Instructions in the Degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft, and Master Mason; with Ceremonies relating to Installations, Dedications, Consecrations, Laying of Corner-stones &c. Price, $2 00,
Paper Covers 2.00.

MACKEY'S TEXT BOOK

OF

MASONIC JURISPRUDENCE.

Illustrating the Laws of Freemasonry, both written and unwritten.

This is the Great Law Book of Freemasonry 570 pages. Price, $2.50

Webb's Monitor of Freemasonry,

LARGE EDITION, WITH NOTES

By ROB. HORRIS, Price, $1.50.
Pocket Edition, 75 cts.

SICKELS' FREEMASON'S MONITOR.

Containing the Degrees of Freemasonry embraced in the Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery, embellished with nearly 300 symbolic Illustrations, Together with Tactics and drill of Masonic Knighthood. Also, forms of Masonic Documents, Notes, Songs, Masonic dates, installations, etc. By D. Sickels, 32 mo uck. Price $1.50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry,

A Practical Guide to the Ceremonies in the Degrees conferred in Masonic Lodge Chapter, Encampments, etc. Illustrated Edition. In cloth, $1 25; paper, 75 cts.

Chase's Digest of Masonic Law.

Comprises a Complete Code of Regulations, Decisions and Opinions upon Questions of Masonic Jurisprudence. Price, $2 25.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor

Illustrated with Explanatory Engravings Price $2.50.

Books on Odd Fellowship.

Donaldson's Odd Fellow's Text Book,
By Pascal Donaldson, D. D.,

GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF NORTHERN N. Y.,

Illustrated with numerous engravings, showing the emblems of the order. A detailed account of the Forms, Ceremonies, Funeral Services and Odes with music, and a complete manual for the guidance of Officers and Lodges. Pocket edition Tuck, $1.50.

Grosh's Manual of Odd Fellowship

BY REV. A. B. GROSH.

Containing the history, defence, principles and government of the order; the instructions of arch degree and duties of every station and office with engravings of the emblems of the orders, etc
Price in Cloth,.....$2 00
" Tuck, abridged edition, 1 50

Descriptive Catalogue of Publications of Ezra A. Cook & Co.

13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

BOOKS.

FREEMASONRY EXPOSED,

by CAP'T. WILLIAM MORGAN.

THE GENUINE OLD MORGAN BOOK:—republished with engravings showing the Lodge Room, Dress of candidates, Signs, One Guards, Grips, Etc.

This revelation is so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. Thousands have testified to the correctness of the revelation and this book therefore sells very rapidly.

Price 25 cents.

Per Doz. Post Paid..... $2.00
Per hundred by express, (express charges extra.).....$10.00

ODD FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

A complete exposition of the Lodge Encampment and Rebecca (Ladies') Degree. The Signs, Grips, &c., shown by engravings.

Single copy, post paid,.....$ 25
Per Doz., " " 2 00
Per Hundred, Express charges extra,..... 10 00

EXPOSITION OF THE GRANGE.

EDITED BY REV. A. W. GEESLIN.

Illustrated with Engravings showing Lodge Room, Signs, Signals, etc. NOW IN PRESS; will be completed about June 1st.

All orders for 10 or more copies, with Cash, received before June 1st, will be filled at 100 rates.

Single Copy, post paid..... $ 25
Per Doz., " " 2 00
Per 100 Express charges extra..... 10 00

Judge Whitney's Defense Before the Grand Lodge of Ill.

Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the Lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the Lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry.

Single Copy, post paid..... $ 20
Per Doz. " " 1 50
Per 100, Express charges extra..... 8 00

THE BROKEN SEAL.

OR PERSONAL REMINISCENCES OF THE ABDUCTION AND MURDER OF Wm. MORGAN,

By SAMUEL D. GREENE,

Price in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

In Paper Covers per Doz. Post paid.....$4 50
" per hundred by express (ex. charges extra $25.00

That the book is one of great interest and value is shown by the following

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"A MASONIC REVELATION.—Mr. Samuel D. Greene is a venerable gentleman of the highest respectability, whose statements seem to be worthy of full credence. The Broken Seal: or, Personal Reminiscences of the Morgan Abduction and Murder, is the title of a book of some three hundred pages just issued by him, purporting to give a full and accurate account, from personal knowledge, of the Morgan 'abduction,' and other masonic matters which made such an excitement in this country, now almost half a century ago."—Congregationalist and Recorder, Boston.

"We are acquainted with Mr. Greene, and have no doubt that his account is entirely reliable, and of great historic and moral interest. Capt. Wm. Morgan was Mr. Greene's neighbor in Batavia, N. Y., and a member of the same lodge with him at the time of the great excitement in 1826. The titles to these chapters are sufficiently exciting to give the book a large sale:—'The Storm Gathering;' "Abduction of Morgan;" "Attempted Abduction of Miller and his Rescue;" "What became of Morgan;" "What Morgan Actually Revealed;" "Confession of the Murderer;" "Allegations against Freemasonry, etc."—Boston Daily News.

History of The Abduction and Murder of Cap't. Wm. Morgan,

As prepared by Seven Committees of Citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan.

This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons, abducted and Murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offence than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife, and no candid person after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable FREEMASONS. in the Empire State, with others were concerned in this crime.

Single Copy, post Paid,... 25 cents.
Per doz. " ..... $2,00.
Per 100, Express Charges Extra,..... 10.00.

Valance's Confession of The Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.

This confession of Henry L. Valance, one of the three Freemasons who drowned Morgan in the Niagara River, was taken from the lips of the dying man by Dr. John C. Emery, of Racine County, Wisconsin in 1849; The confession bears clear evidence of truthfulness.

Single copy, post paid,..... 20 cents.
Per doz. " ..... $1.50.
Per 100 Express Charges Extra,..... 8.00.

The Mystic Tie or Freemasonry a League with the Devil.

This is an account of the Church Trial of Peter Cook, and wife of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a Reverend Freemason; and their very able defence presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry, is antagonistic to the Christian Religion. Single Copy, post paid,..... 20 cents

Per dozen, post paid..... $1 50
Per hundred Express charges Extra,..... 9 00

NARRATIVES AND ARGUMENTS,

showing the Conflict of Secret Societies with the Constitution and Laws, of the Union and of the States.

by FRANCIS SEMPLE of Dover, Iowa.

The fact that Secret Societies, interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of Law is here clearly proved. price 20c.

Per dozen, post paid..... $1 75
Per hundred Express charges Extra..... 9 00

The Antimason's Scrap Book,

CONSISTING OF

21 CYNOSURE TRACTS.

In this book are the views of more than a Score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of Secret Societies.

The dangerous tendency and positive evil of organized Secrecy is here shown by the most varied and powerful arguments and illustrations that have ever been given to the public.

Lecturers and others who wish to find the best arguments against the Lodge, should send for this book.

Those who wish to circulate Antimasonic Tracts ought to have the book to select from.

Single Copy, post paid, ...20 cents.
Per Doz. " $1.75
Per 100, Express charges Extra,.....$10.00

PHELPS' SECRET SOCIETIES Ancient and Modern.

A NEW BOOK OF GREAT INTEREST.

This work is particularly commended to the attention of Officers of The Army and Navy, The Bench and The Clergy.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

"THE ANTIQUITY OF SECRET SOCIETIES, THE LIFE OF JULIAN, THE ELEUSINIAN MYSTERIES, THE ORIGIN OF MASONRY, WAS WASHINGTON A MASON? FILMORE'S AND WEBSTER'S DEFERENCE TO MASONRY, A BRIEF OUTLINE OF THE PROGRESS OF MASONRY IN THE UNITED STATES, THE TAMMANY RING, MASONIC BENEVOLENCE, THE USES OF MASONRY, AN ILLUSTRATION, THE CONCLUSION."

Single Copy, Post Paid..... 5c
Per Doz " " " $4 75
Per Hundred, Express Charges Extra.....$33 00

MINUTES OF THE SYRACUSE CONVENTION,

Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. D. Greene, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. S. D. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. Unpublished Reminiscences of the Morgan Times, by Elder David Bernard; Recollections of the Morgan Trials, as related by Victory Birdseye, Esq., and presented by his daughter, Mrs. C. B. Miller; Secretary's report; roll of delegates; songs of Mr. G. A. Clark, paper by Enoch Honeywell; Constitution N. C. A.; reports of committees, and a report of the political meeting.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion.

A clear cutting argument against the Lodge, from a Christian stand point.

Single Copy.....$ 05
Per 100..... 3 00

SERMON ON MASONRY,

BY REV. W. P. M'NARY,

Pastor United Presbyterian Church, Bloomington, Ind.

This is a very clear, thorough, candid and remarkably consice Scriptural argument on the character of Freemasonry.

Single Copy, Post Paid,..... 5
Per Doz,..... 50
Per Hundred, Express Charges Extra.....$3 00

COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES.

Their Customs, Character and the Efforts for their Suppression.

BY H. L. KELLOGG.

Containing the opinion of many eminent College Presidents, and others. and a FULL ACCOUNT OF THE MURDER OF MORTIMER LEGGETT

Single Copy, post paid.....$ 35
per Doz " " 2 50
per 100 Express charges extra..... 15 00

ANTIMASONIC TRACTS.

WE NOW HAVE 22 ENGLISH TRACTS. ONE GERMAN, AND ONE SWEEDISH These tracts are sold at the rate of $1.00 per 1000 pages.

A Tract Fund for the Free Distribution of Tracts.

HAS BEEN SECURED AND WE HOPE WILL NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fund a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE.

Many of our most earnest workers in this cause of God are poor men, who would be glad to circulate thousands of pages of Antimasonic literature if they could have them free.

SHALL WE NOT HAVE AN INEXHAUSTIBLE TRACT FUND?

"THE ANTI-MASONS SCRAP BOOK."

Contains our 21 Cynosure Tracts, bound together, price 20 cents. See advertisement.

Address EZRA A. COOK & Co.,

13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

TRACT NO. 1:

HISTORY OF MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT J. BLANCHARD, OF WHEATON COLLEGE.

This is now published in three tracts of four pages each. Price of each, 50 cents per 100; $4 per 1000.

TRACT No. 1, PART FIRST—Shows the origin of Speculative Freemasonry, and is entiled "HISTORY OF MASONRY."

TRACT No. 1, PART SECOND—Is entitled "DESPOTIC CHARACTER OF FREEMASONRY"

TRACT No. 1, PART THIRD—Is entitled "FREEMASONRY A CHRIST-EXCLUDING RELIGION."

TRACT NO. 1, IN SWEDISH;

translated by Prof. A. R. CERVIN. A 15-page tract at $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 2:

MASONIC MURDER,

By REV. J. R. BAIRD, of Pleasantville, Pa., a seceding Mason who has taken 17 degrees. A 2 page tract at 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 3:

SECRETS OF MASONRY,

BY ELI TAPLEY.

This is a 4-page Illustrated Tract, showing the signs, grips and pass-words, of the first three degrees. 50 cents per 100, or $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 4:

GRAND! GREAT GRAND!!

BY PHILO CARPENTER.

This is a 2-page tract, calling the attention of the public to the despotic and ridiculous titles of Freemasonry. Price 25 cents per 100; $2 00 per 1,000.

TRACT. NO, 5:

Extracts From Masonic Oaths and Penalties, as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.

This tract is a reprint of a tract published in 1834, and is a very weighty document. A 4-page tract at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 6:

Hon. John Quincy Adams' Letter.

Giving His and His Father's Opinion of Freemasonry (1831.);

AND

Hon. James Madison's Letter,

Giving His Opinion of Freemasonry (1832).

Both of these letters, in one 4-page tract, at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 7:

SATAN'S CABLE-TOW.

A 4-page tract. This is a careful analysis of the character of Masonic oaths, and shows them to be most blasphemous and unchristian; and the Masonic Cable Tow is clearly shown to be the Cable Tow by which Satan is loading thousands to eternal death. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 8:

Is a 2-page double tract, "ILLUSTRATED." The first page represents a Mason proclaiming the wonderful wisdom and benevolence of the order, with an article below, entitled "Freemasonry is only 152 Years Old," and gives the time and place of its birth.

The second side is entitled, "Murder and Treason not Exempted," and shows that the Masonic order is treasonable in its constitution, and is both anti-Republican and anti-Christian. Price 25 cents per 100; $2 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 9, ILLUSTRATED:

FREEMASONRY IN THE CHURCH.

Copy of a petition for the higher degrees of Freemasonry, in which Blasphemous and Despotic Titles are enumerated and prayed for. The Copy was printed for the use of "Occidental Sovereign Consistory S. P. R. S." 32d degree—a Chicago Lodge—and was ordered by a deacon of a Christian Church who is Grand Orator of the Grand Lodge of Ill.

TRACT NO. 10:

CHARACTER AND SYMBOLS OF FREEMASONRY.

A 2-page tract, (ILLUSTRATED) by its "Grand Secretaries, Grand Lecturers, Perfect Prince Freemasons, Grand Inspector, Inquisitor Commanders, Grand High Priests," etc. The wonderful symbolical meaning of "the Cable Tow," "the Square and Compass," "the Lamb Skin, or white Apron," and "the Common Gavel," are given in the exact words of the highest Masonic authority. 25 cents per 100 or $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 11;

Address of Niagara County Association, New York,

TO THE PUBLIC;

Concerning the Morgan Murder, and the character of Freemasonry, as shown by this and other Masonic murders. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 12:

JUDGE WHITNEY AND MASONRY.

This tract contains a condensed account of Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois, on charge of unmasonic conduct in bringing Samuel L. Keith the murderer of Ellen Slade, and a member of his Lodge, to justice, with Judge Whitney's subsequent renunciation of Masonry,

An 8-page tract, $1.00 per 100; $8.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 13:

DR. NATHANIEL COLVER ON MASONRY,

and

HOWARD CROSBY, D. D.,

Chancellor of the University of New York, on SECRET SOCIETIES. A double 2-page tract 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 14:

GRAND LODGE MASONRY.

ITS RELATION TO CIVIL GOVERNMENT AND THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION.

Opening address before the Monmouth Convention, by PRES. J. BLANCHARD of WHEATON COLLEGE. This is a 16-page tract at $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 15:

MASONIC OATHS NULL AND VOID.

A clear and conclusive argument proving the invalidity of any oath or obligation to do evil. By REV. I. A. HART, Secretary National Christian Association. Published by special order of the Association. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 16:

HON. SETH M. GATES ON FREEMASONRY.

PROOF THAT THE INSTITUTION THAT MURDERED MORGAN IS UNCHANGED IN CHARACTER

This is a letter to the Monmouth Convention by Hon. Seth M. Gates who was Depnty Sheriff of Genesee County, and also Secretary of the Leroy Lodge at the time of Morgan's Abduction. A 4-page tract, 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 17:

Origin, Obligations and Expenses of The Grange,

WITH A CONSTITUTION OF A FARMERS' CLUB.

This little tract ought to be put into the hands of every Farmer in the United States. Four-page tract, 50 cents per 100; $4 00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 18:

HON. WM. H. SEWARD ON SECRET SOCIETIES.

Extracts from a Speech on Know-nothingism in the U. S. Senate in 1855. The testimony of JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, MILLARD FILLMORE, CHIEF JUSTIC MARSHALL and others, is added.

A 2-page tract, 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 19.

BRICKS FOR MASONS TO LAY.

WASHINGTON, MADISON, MARSHALL, RUSH, HANCOCK, ADAMS AND WEBSTER, give brief clear testimony against the Lodge A 2-page tract 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 20:

OBJECTIONS TO MASONRY.

By A SECEDING MASON, of Coruton, Vermont.

This tract contains many strong arguments against the Lodge drawn from personal experience, observation and study of its character. A 4-page tract at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

TRACT NO. 21:

MASONIC CHASTITY.

BY EMMA A. WALLACE,

The author, by wonderfully clear illustration and argument, shows the terribly corrupt nature of Freemasonry. No true woman who reads this will ever speak with approbation of this institution. A 4-page tract 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

GERMAN CYNOSURE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason

By REV. A. GROLE, Pastor, German M. E. Church,

WORCESTER, MASS.

This is our first German tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. Price 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

ENOCH HONEYWELL'S TRACT

TO THE YOUNG MEN OF AMERICA. Postage, 3 cents per 100, Tracts. Tracts Free.

Publishers' Department.

This is the last copy of the Cynosure those whose subscriptions expire in March will receive unless they notify us that they wish the paper continued. Please notice the label on your paper and if your time is out, renew your subscription promptly.

Is your time out in April? We hope, if it is, that you will send in your renewal as early in the month as possible. We will be glad to send extra copies of the Cynosure and tracts to those who wish them for canvassing purposes.

Is your postage on the Cynosure paid?

Next week we report the size of the Cynosure subscription list; which will be interesting to all who desire the enlarged circulation of the paper. We are glad to receive word from several subscribers that they are doing all they can to increase the subscription list.

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED DURING WEEK ENDING MARCH 20, FROM:—J S Amidon. T C Appleton, P Bacon, G Burnett, D D Beal, I Burroughs, J L Barlow, Mrs M E Cravath, C D Coppock, W McCullough, B F Cole, Rev A D Carter, C Clingman, J A Conant, Mrs E Cowell, W Gassett, S A Gilley, M Gallup, H H Hinman, G Hayes, T C Hahn, C W Hauptman, W Henderson, ; W Jones, H S Jackman, E Jenks, J A Knepper, M J Lauffer, P M D Longenecker, C S Lowrie, D Louther, J Maxwell, W Mosher, R A McAyeal, L Monteith, H McLaughlin, J E McArthur, A W May, G Marcy, Mrs M Neubauer, A Pontius, A E Parsons, J H Paul, Mrs L W Rowley, C H Reed, Wm Ripley, W Stewart, W H Sawyer. J H Spohn, A B Sherk, J M Snyder, J P Stoddard, J Seely, S Sweat, A Spencer, J Seamahorn, C W Sterry J M Stevenson. D Thomas, B Ulsh, B Vincent, C F Wirt, C Winter, S Waldron.

Address of Anti-masonic Lecturers.

General Agent and Lecturer, J. P. STODDARD, Christian Cynosure Office, Chicago.
State Lecturer for Indiana, J. T. Kiggins, Waterloo City, DeKalb county, Ind.
State Lecturer for Illinois, H. H. Hinman, Farm Ridge, LaSalle Co., Ill.
State Lecturer for Ohio, D. S. Caldwell, Nevada, Wyandot, Co., Ohio.
State Lecturers for New York, Z. Weaver, Esq., and J. L. Barlow, 89 Mulberry St., both Syracuse, N. Y.
State Lecturer for Pennsylvania, J. W. Raynor, Uniondale, Susquehanna Co., Pa.
I. A. Hart, Wheaton, Ill.
C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
P. Elzea, Wheaton, Ill.
W. A. Wallace, Bentonville, Ind.
J. B. Nessell, Ellington, N. Y.
John Levington, Detroit, Mich.
D. P. Rathbun, Lisbon Center, N. Y.
S. Smith, Ionia, Iowa.
R. B. Taylor, Summerfield, O.
L. N. Stratton, Syracuse, N. Y.
N. Callender, Green Grove, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
Linus Chittenden, Crystal Lake,
P. Hurless, Polo, Ill.
J. R. Baird, Royalton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
C. Wiggins, Angola, Ind.
E. Johnson, Bourbon, Ind.
Josiah McCaskey, Fancy Creek, Wis.
C. F. Hawley, Millbrook Pa.
W. M. Givens, Center Point, Ind.
J. L. Andrus, Mt. Vision, N. Y.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
Wm. Dillon, Dayton, O.
Samuel Hale, Mallet Creek, O.
A. Mayn, Promise City, Wayne Co, Ia.
A. H. Springstein, Ypsilanti, Mich.
R. Faurot, DuPlain. Mich.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, Ashland Co., O.

TERMS FOR THE CYNOSURE.

$2.00 per annum, in advance.
20c " " " for postage.

All who canvass for the CYNOSURE are allowed a cash commission of twenty per cent. or twenty-five per cent in books at retail prices, one-half this percentage on renewals, and any one sending $100. for the CYNOSURE during three months, will be entitled to an extra five per cent.

All responsible persons who desire to promote this reform are authorized to act as agents.

CLUB RATES.

No commission is allowed on club rates. Club rates are intended for those who wish to give the commission to subscribers.

Subscriptions may all be sent at one time, or at different times, and in all cases the sender should keep an account of the names and amounts sent.

CLUB RATES, INCLUDING POSTAGE.

Two new subscriptions, one year	$3.90
One new subscription and one renewal, sent ten days before expiration of subscription,	3.90
4 new subs., 1 year., 1 copy free to sender,	8.75
5 " " 1 " 1 " "	10.50
6 " " " " "	12.25
7 " " " " "	14.00
8 " " " " "	15.75
10 " " " " "	19.50
20 " " " " "	36 00
10 Renewals " " " "	22.00
50 " " " " "	95,00

Twenty subscriptions for six months count the same as ten for a year.

Postage on the Cynosure.

THE POSTAGE ON THE CYNOSURE MUST BE PAID AT CHICAGO. It is twenty cents a year.

The cost of postage now depends entirely on the size and weight, and therefore some smaller papers charge but fifteen cents; and others about the size of the Cynosure charge twenty-five cents a year for postage.

If the subscription price of the CYNOSURE was $2.50 or $3.00 a year, the price of many religious papers containing no more reading matter, we might afford to pay the postage ourselves, but at $2.00 a year we cannot do this with our present Subscription list.

Therefore let all send the postage, 20 cents a year, 10 cents for half a year with their renewals.

The commission on one new subscription for a year will pay the postage on your own and the new subscriber's paper. We would rather have the postage paid by commissions than in any other way.

When postage is not paid we shall have to shorten the time of subscription sufficiently to pay it.

How to Send Money.

Post office orders, checks or drafts on Chicago or towns east of Chicago, and currency by express may be sent at our risk. If it is not possible to send by either of the four ways named, money in a registered letter may be sent at our risk, but it is not as safe.

The date at which subscriptions expire is with each subscriber's name on the address label. Send renewals before this date occurs. Notice if this date is changed to correspond; if not or if the paper fails to come, write without delay.

We discontinue during the first part of each month all subscriptions which expire during the preceding one except such as are ordered continued with a promise to forward the money soon. We do not like to lose a single subscriber and will not remove names simply because the cash is not received promptly, if we understand that the paper is wanted. Address all letters with subscriptions or orders for Books, Tracts and donations to the Tract Fund to EZRA A. COOK & Co., 13 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1	square, 1 insertion,		$3.00
1	square (1 inch deep) one month		7.00
1	" "	2 "	10.00
1	" "	3 "	15.00
1	" "	6 "	25.00
1	" "	12 "	40.00

Discount for Space.

On 2 squares 5 per cent, On 3 squares 10 per cent
On 4 " 15 " " On 5 " 20 "
On ¼ col. 25 per cent On one col. 30 per cent

Agents Wanted!

TO SELL THE PUBLICATIONS OF

EZRA A. COOK & CO.

Liberal Terms Offered.

Capable persons who are in need of pecuniary aid may clear

Handsome Profits,

While at the same time aiding the cause of Reform. Apply to EZRA A. COOK & CO., No. 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

SOMETHING NEW.

A CHART OF MASONRY

Showing the degrees from the first to the thirty-third, entitled

Degrees of Ancient Accepted Scottish Freemasonry,

According to a Manual by Wm. M. Cunningham 33d Degree.

Designed by Rev. P. Stoddard, to explain Freemasonry, as shown by Morgan's Exposition and Richardson's Monitor.

A Neat Lithograph 22x28 Inches.

Single copies finely colored, post paid	$ 75
Per dozen " " " "	5 00
Per 100 " " " " Express charges extra	35 00
Single copy, colored, varnished and mounted postpaid	1 00
Per dozen colored, varnished and mounted, post paid	7 50
Per 100, colored, varnished and mounted, express charges extra	50 00

25 COPIES OR MORE SENT AT THE 100 RATES.

Excelsior Marriage Certificate.

It is decidedly the most BEAUTIFUL, TASTEFUL and SENSIBLE thing of the kind I have ever seen."—Rev. F. G. Hibbard, D. D.

"The most SCRIPTURAL, BEAUTIFUL and APPROPRIATE Marriage Certificate I have ever seen."—Late Rev. H. Mattison, D. D.

"SOMETHING NEW AND BEAUTIFUL, which we pronounce the handsomest thing of the kind we ever laid eyes on."—Meth. Home Journal, Phila. Contains two Ornamental Ovals, for Photographs

A BEAUTIFUL LITHOGRAPH 14 1-4 by 18 1-4 Inches. 25 cts each, $2.25 per doz- $15 per 100.

For Sale by Ezra A. Cook & Co.. CHICAGO.

Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill.

The Spring term opens April 8th. It is the term for the study of Botany. There are some beautiful rooms for young ladies yet unoccupied. The Winter term has been very pleasant, and very successful. Write for Catalogue to J. BLANCHARD, Wheaton. Ill.

—The Secretary of the Interior has made a report, showing that during 1873 405 Indians were killed and 227 captured by United States troops, and that 44 citizens and 48 soldiers were killed by Indians. During the first six months of 1874, 158 Indians were killed and 73 captured by troops, while 36 citizens and 3 soldiers were killed by Indians.

MARKET REPORTS

CHICAGO, March 22, 1875.

The following are the latest advices:

Grain Wheat—Spring, No. 1	$97½	98
" No. 2	94½	95½
" No. 3	87	89
" Rejected		82
Corn—No. 2	66	66½
Rejected	63½	64½
Oats—No. 2	53	54
Rejected		50½
Rye—No. 2	97	98
Flour—Winter	4 25	6 75
Spring	3 50	4 75
Hay—Timothy	16 00	18 50
Prairie, "	13 50	16 00
Lard		13¾
Mess pork, per bbl		19 85
Butter	18	32
Cheese	10	18½
Eggs	25	26
Potatoes, per bus	1 00	1 20
Broom corn	05½	13
Seeds—Timothy	2 35	2 50
Clover	6 40	6 50
Flax	2 07	2 25
Chickens, dressed, per lb	14	16
Turkeys, do. per lb	15	18
HIDES green to dry salted	07	15
Lumber—Clear	37 00	55 00
Common	11 00	12 00
Lath		2 25
Shingles	1 50	3 25
WOOL—Washed	40	58
Unwashed	27	37
LIVE STOCK Cattle, extra	6 50	7 00
Good to choice	5 40	6 25
Medium	5 00	5 25
Common	3 50	4 75
Hogs,	7 00	8 25
Sheep	4 00	6 75

New York Market.

Flour	$ 4 25	8 00
Wheat	1 12	1 38
Corn	84	85
Oats	67	70½
Rye	90	95
Lard		14
Mess pork		20 75
Butter	15	22
Cheese	12	16
Eggs	32	33

ESTABLISHED 1868.

EZRA A. COOK & CO.,

STEAM PRINTERS,

Lithographers,

STATIONERS

—AND—

Book Binders.

NOS. 7, 9, 11 & 13

Wabash Avenue, Chicago.

We were in the Stationery, Printing and Lithographing business before the Cynosure was started.

WE LITHOGRAPH

Business Cards, Letter Heads, Note Heads, Bill Heads, Circulars, Checks, Drafts, Certificates of Stock, Certificates of Deposit, Plats and Charts; also elegant Diplomas for Colleges. Literary Societies, and Agricultural Societies, in one, two or three Colors. Samples and Prices sent on Application.

WE PRINT

Books, Pamphlets, Catalogues, Business Cards, Show Cards, Letter Heads, Bill Heads, Note Heads, Circulars, Hand Bills, Posters, Checks, Drafts, Notes, Certificates of Deposit, Certificates of Stock, Diplomas, etc.,

IN THE BEST STYLE,

at the

LOWEST MARKET RATES.

WE FILL ORDERS PROMPTLY, and

GUARANTEE GOOD WORK.

SPECIAL ATTENTION GIVEN TO ORDERS

BY MAIL.

Samples and prices sent promptly when desired.

Address:

EZRA A. COOK & CO.,

7, 9, 11 & 13 Wabash Avenue,

CHICAGO.

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

"In Secret Have I Said Nothing."—Jesus Christ.

EZRA A. COOK & CO., PUBLISHERS, NO 13 WABASH AVENUE.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 25, 1875.

VOL. VII., NO. 24.—WHOLE NO. 259. WEEKLY, $2 00 A YEAR.

Contents.

	Page
TOPICS OF THE TIME	1
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
The Coming Political Party	8
Bismarck's Falk Laws	8
Notes	8
CONTRIBUTED AND SELECT ARTICLES:
Onward to Conquest (Poetry)	1
"Light in Masonry"	1
Not Sufficiently Informed	2
Masonic Conspiracy—II	2
Tobacco (Concluded)	2
Systematic Giving	3
The Freemason's Jewel	3
A Bold and Brave Act	4
S. D. Greene's Letter to the Lockport Convention	9
REFORM NEWS and NOTICES:
Who Holds the Keys of the Churches in Mason City, Iowa: A Faithful watchman; Notes from the Illinois Agent; Ohio—Bro. Caldwell Sick; The Cause in New Hampshire;	4, 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
A Canvasser's Experience; A Letter to Rev. W. Post; Sense and Scripture; A Methodist View; How does Odd-fellowship Compare with Freemasonry; Our Mail	5, 6
A Chronological Table of Events in Popery	7
Anti-secret Political Party	9
Gen. Phelp's Book	9
Exposition of the Grange (Continued)	12
History of the Reform against Secret Orders	13
THE HOME CIRCLE	10
CHILDREN'S CORNER	11
The Sabbath School	4
Home and Health Hints	14
Farm and Garden	14
Religious Intelligence	13
News of the Week	17
Publishers' Department	16

Topics of the Time.

In the Black Hills business the Government has been playing with the excitable American temperament very much after the style of a boy who tempted the nose of a dog with his bread and butter and rewarded the canine greediness with a blow. After sending the scalping Custer, well surrounded with bayonets, into a territory sacred by treaty from the invasion of white foot, and inflaming the cupidity of the stragglers in our Western towns with stories of gold, it is thought prudent to keep the pledge made to the nation's wards. The Cabinet advises, and the President sends orders along the line to stop all expeditions and clear the Hills of a band which wintered in the region. The Government should be praised for the latter act, if it cannot be for the former. The excitement raised by speculators to start the stream of emigration to the Hills will be checked, and the people will be saved the disappointment and ruin of another Pike's Peak furor. A branch of this business was started lately in Chicago by parties returned from the Hills. After enrolling five or six hundred names at $5 each for an expedition, they suddenly decamped. The best judges give little credit to the stories of gold, except as it would come into the pockets of transportation companies and speculators.

While Postmaster-general Jewell finds it necessary to postpone the action of that part of the new postal law relating to papers until April 1st, New York and Philadelphia publishers are earnestly protesting against the iniquitous law. We shall soon hear the people adding their just complaint to a measure which forces them to pay twice as much for carrying a paper across a county as would take it to London. It will be recollected that the express companies complained of the old law as injurious to their business because by it small packages were carried cheaply by mail. They were coolly received by Congress, but finally conquered by splendid banquets. It is said that at times during an evening session the Senate was without a quorum from the absence of members at the expressmen's tables. We do not understand the ethics of bribery if this is not a case. Hamlin and Garfield respectively worked the measure through Senate and House. The workingmen, on whom the tax falls heaviest, may request their brethren of Maine and Ohio to keep these gentlemen at home next time with a very good grace.

Temperance legislation in Illinois has gained another and a double victory over the liquor traffic and over a corrupt legislator. A strong opposition was developed against the present equitable temperance law in the fall election. This faction was absorbed, with other elements of opposition to the dominant party, into the so-called Democratic ranks forming a majority of the State Legislature. One named Haines was chosen speaker of the House, who has made a reputation in three months for demagogism and meanness that would shame a Freemason or a Jesuit. The license party brought their measure up for final settlement last Wednesday, and Haines left untried no means to baffle the majority and carry the bill. He doubled; he twisted; he ruled in order and out of order; he refused to hear motions; and filibustered from the chair with the audacity of a guerilla and the shamelessness of a strumpet. But in vain; the temperance men stood firm, thank God, and the bill was hopelessly lost. The good people of the State may realize the danger of the cause when they learn that the measure provided that on the petition of fifty property owners in any town the board of supervisors were required to grant licenses. Although five times the number might oppose, no matter. Such is liquor legislation.

—Dr. John Hall says, "A church has no vocation to provide amusements. They may be necessaries like boots, or luxuries like French clocks, but the church has not been called into existence to provide them. She has other work to do, and the amusements—for which, no doubt, there is a place—should spring out of the ordinary life of the community."

Onward to Conquest.

BY W. POST.

Hark! terrific thunders peal,
Mantled gloom enshrouds the sky;
Now the lightning's livid gleam
Heralds forth that danger's nigh.

Tramp! tramp! a battle rages;
Loud, terrific cannons roar;
Rush along th' armies shouting,—
Fields all read with human gore!

Onward, onward! fierce th' conflict,
Life and Death keen weapons wield;
Hear th' clashing of their sabers,
Death, for Life, must fly the field.

With its "secret" ally near,
Hell enraged disputes the ground,
Though the struggle's long, severe,
Truth shall triumph—hell confonnd.

Now arise ye sons of Right!
Don your armor! courage show!
See "the pale horse and his rider!"
Grasp the saber! Strike the blow!

Meet the Sir-Knights as they come
Feather'd, apron'd, jewel'd bright;
One shall make a thousand run,
Two, ten thousand put to flight.

Haste, "fanatics," tell the story!
Come ye, "madmen," strike the blow!
Onward, onward! march to glory;
Tho' through seas of blood yon go.

Prudent savants seek to shelter,
From the conflict, and the strife,
Of the great and holy warfare
'Gainst the secret foe of life.

Mighty men of policy,
Dare not count their souls their own,
Sell for trash their birthright free,
Truth forsake and die unknown.

Onward, brave men, to the conquest!
Die if need be, never yield!
Think not from the task before you,
Truth and Right shall win the field.

Onward! Scale the "high defenses;"
Honor God, and strike the blow;
Secret Dagon falls before you;
Onward! 'Tis a conquered foe.

Falter not, nor play the traitor,
Else disgrace thy sons shall know;
Honor God the great Creator;
Onward then to conquest go.

Rochester, N. Y.

"Light in Masonry."

BY A SEVEN-DEGREE MASON.

MR. EDITOR:—In these communications which, through your kindness, I am permitted to address from time to time to the numerous readers of the Cynosure, I have purposely chosen as a subject of fair criticism the conduct of those clergymen who, regardless of their high Christian character, regardless of the evil example they set, and regardless even of their ordination vows, deliberately and voluntarily, or as the Masonic ritual expresses it, "of their own free will and accord," affiliate themselves with the infidel system of Freemasonry and assume the responsibilities of its fearful and sanguinary obligations. Whatever feeble apology might be attempted to be offered for the merchant or the mechanic, the farmer or day-laborer, the unscrupulous, unbelieving Jew, or the reckless and unprincipled gambler, for joining Freemasonry, I can conceive of no logical reason why a minister of the Gospel, the embassador of Jesus Christ, should subject himself to the degrading and humiliating ceremonies of the Masonic lodge-room, and so become not only a member, but even a sworn member of a quasi religious society which is utterly subversive of Christianity, denying the very existence of Jesus Christ and the divine sanctifying influences of the Holy Spirit.

I know from personal observation that the great majority of those men who are initiated into Freemasonry, give the matter no further thought after they have passed through the dramatic farce representing the supposed death of Hiram Abiff, simply contenting themselves with possessing a few signs, grips, and passwords, whereby they may gain admission into other lodges besides their own. But surely this cannot be the case with men of deep thought, men of a high standard of education, such as most of our clergymen really are. It is safe to presume that they at least give the subject a thorough and searching investigation; that they carefully examine into its constantly repeated claims to antiquity, to morality, to charity, to benevolence, and to the numerous so-called blessings it has conferred on the human family.

Investigating the matter then in this manner, and learning, as they inevitably must, that all the pretended claims of Freemasonry are baseless and deceptive, that it really possesses no secrets whatever, that its supposed mysteries are a farce and a lie, that its boasted charity and benevolence are represented by mere empty sound, and that its obligations and blood-letting penalties are such as no man can keep, —I say, learning all this and more about Freemasonry, I cannot, for the life of me, understand how any clergyman can support, or even defend such an institution. The ritual of the first and third degrees puts forth the claim that "the Masonic lodge, bounded only by the extreme points of the compass, the highest heavens and the lowest depth of the central abyss (whatever that means), is supported by three great pillars denominated 'Wisdom, Strength and Beauty;" but here I assert, and I am prepared to prove my assertion, that the three grand pillars which really support Freemasonry, are DECEIT, FALSEHOOD and MISREPRESENTATION. It is based upon deceit—it is its very cornerstone—and it is maintained and propagated by falsehood and misrepresentation. Such is the result of my investigation of the system continued through a period of nearly twenty years, and for many years of this an active member of a Masonic lodge. As, however, I intend at no distant day to devote one or more articles to the discussion of this particular point, I shall dismiss the subject for the present and proceed, without further preface, to investigate the remainder of the Entered Apprentice initiation and to unfold these wonderful secrets which are supposed to be mysteriously hidden in that degree.

The candidate then having taken his obligation, including that portion which provides for the cutting of his throat, the tearing out of his tongue by the roots, and the burying of his body in the rough sands of the sea, as related in my last letter, he is mildly requested to disengage his hands and "in token of his sincerity and to make his obligation more binding, to kiss the Holy Bible which lies open before him." This kiss which the Christian minister gives at this time while kneeling at the Masonic altar, reminds one very much of that kiss given by another minister of Christ some eighteen hundred and seventy-five years ago and which betrayed the Saviour into the hands of his enemies. Judas Iscariot joined a secret society whose object was to destroy Jesus Christ; the minister of to-day joins Freemasonry which utterly denies his existence and scoffs at his atonement. Judas gave token of his sincerity by a kiss in the garden of Gethsemane; the "Rev. Jones" gives token of his sincerity by a kiss in a Masonic lodge. Judas Iscariot, though, repented of his evil doings, and through sheer despair committed suicide, while our clergymen of the present day "glory in their shame" and uphold Freemasonry as if it were an important part of the divine economy.

The Master next resumes the everlasting plug hat and directs the Senior Deacon "to release the brother from the cable tow [the rope] as he is now bound to us by an obligation, a tie stronger than human hands can impose." Alas! It is but too true, he is indeed "bound by an obligation." He is no longer a free agent; he is the sworn slave of Freemasonry and instead of being at perfect liberty to serve the Divine Master and devote himself wholly to his work he must henceforth obey the behests of the lodge and be ready to come and go at the bidding of the Worshipful Master, be that W. Master a drunkard a gambler, a libertine, or a reprobate of any other kind. Only one hour ago he was a free agent secure in the consciousness of his moral rectitude and apparently satisfied with St. Paul to know nothing among his congregation "save Jesus Christ and him crucified;" but now his conscience is burdened with the weight of a fearful obligation which binds him to a society of infidels—he is bound body, soul and spirit to one of the most unscrupulous organizations in existence—he is the sworn vassal of Freemasonry.

ROYAL ARCH.

[CONTINUED NEXT WEEK.]

"Not Sufficiently Informed."

BY J. P. ANTHONY.

There are many who are seeking every opportunity to speak in laudation of secrecy and its work. There are many others who say they are "not sufficiently informed" in secrecy to know whether there is any evil in it, and in this class are ministers, teachers, college professors and presidents. Men who are at the helm of the nation's mind, intellect, welfare and eternal salvation, professing to teach others and guide the bark freighted with sou's from danger and death to the realms of restfulness with God on high. Shame! Dangerous ignorance! Hateful recklessness! If a minister did not know whether gambling or intemperance were evils sufficient to require his warning voice, he would be regarded as fearfully, wickedly deficient. (There is a U. B. minister in the East who is sorry the church excludes the whiskey trafficer and drinker from membership and thinks the church had no business to interfere with slavery). Yet some will have the hardihood to say this of secrecy, which is worse than Siberian exile and more to be dreaded than prison and chains. "Not sufficiently informed" to know whether light is preferable to darkness, liberty to bondage, and spiritual life to tomfoolery? Shocking! Daring wickedness! And are there no means of information on this subject? Must we sit in silence and sanction the buffoonery of the lodge because they say so? No. Blessed be the Lord! "Let there be light."

But, some say, how can we know anything correctly? Why it seems to me if there were not a line written against secrecy and no one had left the lodge and revealed its workings, that an honest soul being responsible for many others, ought to be able to judge from what may be observed in the conduct of lodgemen, that there is something suspicious about it. But since we have books, periodicals and the testimony of many seceding lodgemen for information, the plea of ignorance on the part of pastors and public teachers whose influence and responsibility are so great, should be regarded as criminal.

Secrecy, Fremasonry especially, is old and extensive enough to claim the attention of thought, culture and religion. "If the blind lead the blind both will fall into the ditch." A minister of the Gospel of Jesus Christ is poorly prepared to "warn every one, night and day with tears" and to "reprove and rebuke," who is thus running at random. "If the trumpet gives an uncertain sound who shall prepare himself to the battle."

This plea of ignorance is strategic with many—milk and water, "neither hot nor cold," "a cake not turned,"—so plastic as to allow itself to be pressed into any shape. They say, Let it alone. Let it alone! Let the devil alone! And what use for our weapons? He will not let us alone. Too many "cry peace, peace, when there is no peace." O for more men who will dare to do and speak right!

Mont Alto, Pa.

Masonic Conspiracy and Persecution.

BY REV. W. W. KNIPPLE.

In March, 1867, I was admitted into the Parkersburg Conference of the United Brethren church as a member of that body. I preached in the traveling connection for three successive years, on the average salary of $191.-00. During which time I never complained of an appointment, neither was I complained of, either by quarterly or annual conference. In 1870 I resigned my charge, because it was greatly over-estimated by the conference as to financial ability, as I supposed. Having with me a colleague, I left the work to him. I afterward learned that it was the intention of some of the parties interested in making the appointment, that the mission was to be burdened financially, to such an extent that I would be compelled to resign the charge. This intimation of such intention was denied by my presiding elder, who I then believed, and still believe, was honest, as regarding such intention on his part. I spoke to a prominent member of conference, of the embarrassing situation in which the appointment would place me financially. All the comfort this good brother gave me, was an advice to resign the work at once. It is due this gentleman to say that he was not on the stationing committee. But it was confidently believed that he was invariably counseled in this matter. It is also due this individual to say that he was the principal mover in the Masonic conspiracy, a few years later, as further developments will show.

At this same session of the conference, March, 1870, I both spoke and voted against a resolution which doubtless had been prepared, and was introduced to the conference by Z. Warner and W. Slaughter, the adoption of which would virtually vote a censure on the general conference of May, 1869, for refusing to submit the disposal of the secrecy question to a vote of the whole church; while the disposition that was made of the subject, was made by a vote of 71 for, to 26 against it, I make this statement merely to show the infatuation of this element against legal action in defense of the law. My opposition to this resolution may have had something to do with the appointment referred to above.

In March, 1871, the conference met again in annual session, which was the last time I ever met Parkersburg conference in session. I was then more than ever convinced of the secret workings of the hydra-headed monster in the conference, and then and there resolved to leave the conference. So I kindly asked for a transfer, which was unanimously granted; and on the 2d of September following, I started for Winter's Station, Sandusky Co., Ohio, the place of setting of the Sandusky Conference, which met on the sixth of the same month, having made previous arrangements for work in that conference.

I accordingly presented my transfer, which was received, and I seemingly met a hearty reception. But subsequent events proved conclusively to my mind, that the accession did not meet a unanimous approval, but I think was welcomed by a large majority.

About the last thing before adjournment, was the reading of the stationing committee's report, by the Bishop. My name was read in connection with Cardington Circuit, Marion District, with Rev. A. Rose my presiding elder. M. Bulger had been presiding elder of said district the previous year, and having knowledge of the condition of Cardington Circuit, he came to me immediately after adjournment and apprised me of the important fact that there was something of the secrecy element there, and charged me to handle it tenderly.

Tobacco.

BY A CHICAGO LUMBER MERCHANT.

[Concluded from last week.]

In the moral effect it is a well-established fact, duly authenticable, that in Mexico, Spain and Turkey—countries nearly given over to heathenism—that tobacco has so blighted their sensibilities that the Gospel scarcely finds a lodgement in their minds, as history records the fact; but I have further undeniable proof—a letter at hand from the Rev. Mr. J. F. Smith, a missionary to Turkey for the last ten years, who recently addressed, so acceptably, a meeting at the First Congregational Church in this city, giving an account of his labors in that country. In this letter to me he says: "We missionaries feel very decidedly that the use of tobacco stupifies the moral sensibilities and at the same time increases the mere animal appetites, and so renders men less open to the truth, in the first place, and secondly hinders the progress of the truth in those in whom it has found a lodgement. Hence we have made it a rule to furnish no aid to a young man preparing for the ministry who uses tobacco.

In our own beloved land, I say it boldly, it is a greater hindrance than any other one cause (liquor not excepted). It is so insidious in its tendency, not producing so direct an outgrowth in result, that we do not realize the fact; nevertheless it has crept stealthily into our houses and spoiled our goods ere we were aware the thief was abroad. If it were not for tobacco I would take the contract to suppress the sin of intemperance to one-tenth of its present proportion in less than twenty years, but with this ally and vast recruiting army all our endeavors in that direction are fruitless, however well directed. Smoking generates thirst and vital depression, and to remove these the use of stimulated liquors is resorted to. Hence it has become a maxim: "Smoking induces drinking; drinking, jaundice; and jaundice, death." The venerable Dr. Lyman Beecher once said, in addition to any amount of medical proof, that "one out of every four or five boys who commence with the use of tobacco die drunkards." It is also true that there is not one drunkard in ten thousand but that uses it. And it is only a very small percentage in this country who use tobacco that do not drink, and unless you can persuade the inebriate with his cup to throw away his tobacco—take heed!

I have a case in point. A few years since I found a very intelligent man keeping a low saloon in this city, for whom my sympathies were aroused. He was one of its best patrons. For two years I labored with him; I prayed with him and I slept with him. (This last act I think with him was the more efficacious.) Finally he abandoned the cup, professed a change of heart and joined a church. I then left him entirely in the Lord's hands, believing he was secure beyond peradventure. But all this time he clung to his tobacco. (He both chewed and smoked.) I am now obliged to record the melancholy fact that during this last year he has returned to the cup, to which he clings with as much tenacity as before. The irresistible law of nature in proof, again. "Wherefore, let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."

Is it not truly an anomaly to hear a professed Christian stand up and talk of the evils resulting from the use of liquor, and would persuade young men as well as old to "flee from the wrath to come," with a quid of tobacco concealed in his mouth, or a cigar in his pocket ready to light the first opportunity? He cannot see why it is not an easy thing for a man to refrain from the use of liquor or give up his cup, and yet I will undertake the job to persuade ten men who drink liquor to abandon the cup for every one he will persuade to give up his tobacco. And I would have the easiest job. I know whereof I speak. I take about as much stock in what such a Christian says, be he layman, deacon or minister, as I would in any man who had committed adultery, and in order to justify himself, would have us believe the sin of David was only a little innocent flirtation with Uriah's wife.

I do not wonder that recently an entire church at the tenth anniversary of their minister's wedding presented him with a mammoth tin pipe as an expression of sympathy and confidence they had in him as a fit leader, in his example if not in his precept. He has reason to be proud of this memento, for I have no doubt he has been a success in this direction, as hundreds of the young men in his congregation will in due time to their sorrow, have occasion to testify. Is it not marvelous in our eyes, and if history only recorded the fact would it not be beyond our credulity to believe, a habit so useless, so expensive, so unhealthy, so immoral in tendency and so very filthy in practice as is tobacco in all its departments, could ever have found a lodgement even among the aborigines, the founders of the custom? Yet ministers of the Gospel use it, and defend the custom. Hear Spurgeon. He said "a cigar was a thing to thank God for." I wish he could have seen the countenance of the boy leaning over the fence, having taken his first cigar. He cursed the devil for it, and he had the most Gospel in his sermon.

Deacons use and defend its use. Laymen of course follow in the wake, and the world is not to be blamed for imbibing the habit. Only a few days since a boy was reproved by his mother for having commenced the use of it. His answer was: "All the deacons in our church use it." I am thankful he has since thought better of it and given it up. But the deacons have not.

It now looks as if we would eventually be effectually engulfed by it as were the Egyptians who followed Pharaoh. We would already need some provision to enable us to go to and fro on our sidewalks if it were not for the kind ladies who, with their trailing scavenger clothes, continually passing to and fro, mop up the most of the saliva ejected from the mouths of intelligent beings. A few weeks since I walked from Washington street to Randolph, step by step (I had on a pair of thick soled boots) on tobacco spittle, in size from three inches to eight. On my return I met seventeen ladies, many of whom had been to the noon prayer-meeting to pray for the heathen. The original excrements had disappeared, but new ones appeared as I approached the place of starting—Washington street. Many who will not at the communion drink the wine prescribed by our Lord will be content to suck a weed so offensive. God, in his infinite wisdom, could scarcely have foreseen that 'Man, made in his own image," would ever become so vile as to contract such a habit. Therefore, nowhere in Holy Writ has he made any allusion to tobacco. But if anyone takes encouragement from the passage that "the smoke of their tormentor shall ascend forever and ever," he will have to hurry up and take all the comfort he can, for the incoming Bible will leave out even this consolation. I always, at the communion, turn the cup around after a tobacco man has drank, especially if I see him take out his quid and hold it in his hand until he had drank. "Therefore does not my meat (tobacco) make my brother to offend." I know a pre-eminently pious young lady (not quite thirty-five) in the church who has "arrived at a sanctified state of indifference on the subject of marriage," believing all men (are liars) use tobacco. She is determined to cross the river without the stain of tobacco coming on her skirts (she does not trail her dresses). In its inception it is a snare and a delusion; it soothes the excited nervous system at the time to render it more irritable and difficult to overcome the next. I know men so affected by it they cannot get their pantaloons on in the morning, until they have first got their tobacco in their mouth. Some have to get up in the night to smoke; all have to resort to it after eating, either in their pockets or on the sideboard.

Is it any wonder the great and noble missionary, Father Goodall, once said on learning this of his native country: "He saw nothing he so much feared for Americans' prosperity as the increasing use of tobacco."—Evening Lamp.

—From the "Grand Secretary of the Independent order of Odd-fellows," we have his report submitted to the Right Worthy Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania. From this report we learn that the number of members in the State is 95,197, an increase of nearly 4,000 during the year. This shows considerable strength and prosperity, which we cannot say gratifies us. The report also shows that the sum of $898,302:32 was received during the year; and that $363,590.92 was paid out for relief. We would like, of course, to know what became of the tremendous balance of receipts; but this we must be ignorant of. We can only say, that a boasted benevolent institution ought to make a better exhibit in the direction of benevolence that this.—Evangelical Repository (U. P.)

Systematic Giving.

Every one who has read the literature of the churches, or observed attentively the action of the churches, has perceived a gradual settling down of opinion and practice on the following points:

1. A recognition of the principle of stewardship, or an acknowledgment that our property is not our own, but the Lord's, and that in our disposal of it all, alike in what we keep and what we give, we are to obey his will.

2. A recognition of the obligation of the tithe as a starting-point for Christian liberality, a portion of our income which God has reserved for himself on the same principle as the Sabbath.

3. A recognition of the religious character of offerings made for religious purposes, and of the propriety of their place among the exercises of worship. The current of feeling and conviction against pew rents and other semi-secular methods of church revenue is very strong.

4. The plan of stated weekly offerings, either gathered indiscriminately in collections or deposited in envelopes, and regularly credited to the donors, is steadily growing in favor. Some recent testimonies to the efficiency of this method, we lay before our readers.

A church in Middletown, Connecticut, came slowly and carefully to the conclusion that the weekly offering is in best accord with both sound policy and Scripture teaching. The plan adopted was to place small boxes, of a size to fit easily in the book racks, in every pew. These boxes have an opening in the lid and by its side some short appropriate text of Scripture. Before the singing which immediately precedes the sermon, the minister announces the object of the collection for the day. Contributions are at once, without confusion, publicity, or loss of time, placed in the boxes, and collected by the proper officers at the close of the service. The plan has been in operation for nineteen months, and the result has been an increase of ten per cent., on the average amount contributed to five or six most prominent charitable purposes, and a large increase in the number of objects to which contributions are made.

It has been objected that this plan is only adapted to churches in cities and large towns, but not to rural districts. Dr. Campbell of Rochester, New York, a man of admirable business and executive talent, in a recent article on the subject says:

"The Presbytery of Cairo, Ill., covers a large rural district, and the churches are small. Last year nine of them made experiment on the plan of weekly offerings, and forty-eight churches continued in the old way. These nine have 630 members; these forty-eight number 1627. Well, the nine gave to the Boards above $1,500, and the forty-eight gave a little over $600. The 630 communicants gave about two and a half times as much as the 1,627 communicants. One man on this plan was as good as seven men on the old plan."

Again, he says, "our congregations that are honestly carrying out the weekly-offering plan, are tiding over these hard times without a dollar's shrinkage in their contributions."

The First Congregational Church in Chelsea, Mass., has now for nearly two years taken a collection every Sabbath, dividing the amount among different objects, according to a percentage fixed by vote of the church at its annual meeting. The contributions of this church for the last four years have been as follows: In 1871, $1,700; in 1872, 2,375; in 1873, 4,106; in 1874, 4,012.

It is believed that the increase the last two years is wholly due to the change in the system of giving.

The facts are but a few of those which are constantly passing under our notice. They indicate what we believe to be a return to the simplicity and efficiency of apostolic methods, and are signs full of hope for the future, of the church and the world.—Christian Statesman.

The Freemason's Jewel—A Silent Tongue.

Among the doctrines inculcated by the precepts and commandments of men, that of "the silent tongue" is held as one of the Masonic jewels. The Saviour caused the tongue of the dumb to sing, that of the stammerer to be ready to speak plainly; and nowere in the sacred oracles is there any value put upon the silent tongue. The watchmen complained of in Isaiah lvi. 10, are said to be dumb dogs that cannot bark. They must have been possessors of the jewel. The man who went in to the marriage feast not having on a wedding garment, was speechless; he must have had the jewel. The psalmist says, "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth." In such a case it would become a jewel. When Mordecai went out into the street and cried with a loud and bitter voice, he had no use for a silent tongue. When Daniel was brought into contact with the laws of the Medes and Persians, they could not force a silent tongue upon him, but he opened his windows and prayed. When threatened by the Jewish powers and forbidden to speak or teach in the name of Jesus, the apostles would not accept the jewel, but declared, "We cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard." That was "St. John's-day."

The blind men by the wayside, crying, "Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy upon us," would not regard the jewel. The Saviour, when saying that "there is nothing covered that shall not be revealed, neither hid that shall not be known, and what is spoken in darkness shall be heard in the light, and that which ye have spoken in the ear in closets shall be preached upon the house-tops," certainly thought somebody would not keep his jewel. The outpouring of the Spirit on the day of Pentecost abolished the jewels on that occasion. And in the great day when shall be heard the voice of a great multitude and the voice of many waters and the voice of mighty thunderings, mentioned in Revelation, the jewels will be found to have depreciated in value more than any other stock —Telescope.

"A Bold and Brave Act."

The Christian Instructor of Philadelphia thus denominates the renunciation of Rev. H. Cogswell at Mansfield, and says: "Among the incidents that strikingly marked this Convention, and will never be forgotten probably by any one who witnessed it, was a bold and brave act performed by the Rev. Henry Cogswell, of the United Brethren church. * Just before the proceedings were to close, he arosefrom his seat on the platform, and advancing to the front said with great deliberation and solemnity, in the midst of a breathless silence in the Convention, that he was a Royal Arch Mason; that he was thankful to God for this meeting as furnishing him an opportunity for taking a step of which he had long thought and upon which he had finally come to a solemn determination, and that the great and pressing reason on his conscience for taking the step that he now proposed was, that he had long been embarrassed by his position: in that Masonry conflicted directly with his teachings and his duties as a Christian and a minister. With this general statement, he proceeded in a clear and deliberate voice, his entire recantation of all the oaths and obligations he had taken in the Masonic order; and declared his absolute renunciation of all affiliation with the system forever, and his determination to adhere to this action to the end of his life, come what would. He then added, as if from his actual knowledge, and without any fear of proper contradiction, that there were thousands of others, also, that felt themselves entangled, as he had done, by this system, and that would gladly free themselves from it.

The impression of this statement, made as it was by one who was well known as a minister of the Gospel and a Christian man, was deep. In alluding to it, we have called the act a brave and bold one: bold, because it was in the face of an order that whatever may be the misgivings of some of its members, yet is itself a unit, and may go far to hold up, or throw utterly down, whom it will; and it was a brave act, for it showed courage to be true to conviction and the right at any hazzard or any cost. In it all, too, is there not that that may well lead good men to ask the question, Can that be a good system,—a system to which Christian men and ministers should attach themselves,—of which one, who has reached as far as the Royal Arch degree, was constrained thus deliberately to say was in conflict with his teachings and his duties as a Christian and a minister?

*[Mr. Cogswell is pastor of the Disciple church.—Ed. Cyn.]

Notices.

The Seventh Anniversary of the National Christian Association will be held in the City of Pittsburgh, Pa., June 8th to 10th, 1875.

The Michigan Convention.

The convention for organizing the State of Michigan announced for March 30th and 31st at Linden, Genesee county, has, by advice of friends on the ground, been changed to Fenton at same date. Both places are in Genesee county on the Detroit and Milwaukee railroad and but six miles apart. Linden is a small town of a few hundred inhabitants; Fenton has between two and three thousand. A commodious hall has been engaged, and arrangements will be made for entertainment of friends from a distance. Remember the time and place, Fenton, Genesee Co., March 30th and 31st. Speak of this to your neighbors.

Important for our California Subscribers.

Bishop Weaver expects to visit California early next May and is willing to deliver a few Anti-masonic lectures at prominent points if they are arranged for beforehand.

Will all Cynosure readers who can obtain church or hall and arrange for one or two lectures on Masonry to be delivered in prominent places in California, by Bishop Weaver next May, ascertain what they can do in the matter, and write promptly to

C. A. Blanchard,
Cor. Sec'y. N. C. A.
13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

To the Anti-Secret Society Friends in Wisconsin.

Having made arrangements to lecture in your State for the year to come, I earnestly desire your co-operation in this work of reform. Wisconsin is behind some of her sister States on this subject. I am anxious to have her come into the front ranks as speedily as possible, and no effort on my part shall be wanting to produce this result by the help of the Lord. Let every one that reads this say we want lecturers in our place, and then see if there is not a church, school-house, or some other place that can be had for the purpose, and then write to me at Delavan, Wis., giving the name, county, and post-office plainly, and I will answer your letters, and make arrangements to be with you as soon as possible. The honor of God and suffering humanity demands action, vigorous, untiring action, until our country is redeemed from the curse of secretism.

For the war,
P. Elzea.

Reform News.

—Friends in Ohio will be pained to learn the sickness of their agent, Bro. Caldwell. Let him be remembered at the throne of grace; and let "works" prove your faith, for Bro. C. is a laborer "worthy of his hire," of which he is much in need.

—Rev. Geo. Richey of Licking county, Ohio, has been lecturing with success in Tuscarawas, same State.

—The General Agent is expecting to commence work in Michigan this week preparatory to the State Convention.

—A debate on Masonry was held in Prospect Park near this city last week. Prof. C. A. Blanchard and two or three students from Wheaton College took part.

—James Robinson writes of an interesting address at Washburn in central Illinois, by Rev. M. Harper of the United Presbyterian church. The roads were in very bad condition and the night rainy, but under the circumstances quite an audience was out, and a good proportion Freemasons. The lecture was the first of the kind in that locality and had good effect.

—The meeting at the Baptist Theological Seminary of this city on Tuesday evening of last week is reported as of great spiritual power, and likely to produce a lasting and happy effect on the young men of the institution. The Seminary chapel was not large, and the room was well occupied by students from the adjoining rooms and from the University of Chicago near by. Our Baptist friends will rejoice to learn that discussion of topics so vital to our holy religion is not shut out of their Seminary because unpopular with the world.

Who Holds the Keys to the Churches in Mason City, Iowa?

Let facts answer.

I reached this city on the evening of March 6th, and with Mr. T. Palmeter, called upon the Congregational pastor who referred us to the trustees for the use of their house for lectures. Mr. P. obtained assurance that it could be had for that purpose on this (Thursday)evening, but on Wednesday evening the church held its regular prayer-meeting. Having made this arrangement we next called on the pastor of the M. E. church, with whom arrangements were made for me to occupy his pulpit on Sabbath morning, and speak in his church on Wednesday evening. I filled the appointment Sabbath morning, and at the close the pastor announced my lecture for Wednesday evening in a very mild, Christian manner, after which I left with Mr. P., who had come with his horses and sleigh to convy me to Clear Lake, ten miles distant, where I was warmly welcomed by our friends, and spoke three consecutive evenings to large and appreciative audiences.

There were incidents of special local interest here, and of general interest as showing the animus of our opponents. For instance, one man is reported to have said, "I have signed five dollars to aid the Baptist church and I am going to have my name taken from the subscription papers." Another, "I gave five to the Baptist church and now I will give ten to the M. E., because the minister would not let this man preach in his house." Such statements as these of course had an influence with thinking people and have greatly helped our cause, and to prepare the way for our convention at Clear Lake, June 29th, 1875. Rumors reached me at the Lake that the M. E. church at this point had been closed, and on arriving last eve. I found that such was the case. One of the craft, undoubtedly incited by others, demanded that the house should be closed, and it was promptly done. Of the reputation of the chief actor in the business, I refrain from speaking, preferring rather to observe the maxim, "If you can say nothing good of a man say nothing at all." Bro. Hankins, a local M. E. minister of seven degrees, who has within a short time left the lodge, promptly secured a hall which was well filled with appreciative listeners to whom I spoke for nearly two hours.

Learning that some doubt had been expressed about our occupying the Congregational church this evening, friends took measures to ascertain the fact and learned that such was the case and so we are to occupy the hall again this evening. So far as I can learn no one accuses me of immorality, or unchristian conduct, and the continued attendance shows that the people do not deem me an "idle babbler." The Masons do not attempt to answer my arguments, and reply to my statement of facts, only with denunciations. The only reason I can give for this change of purpose on the part of the Methodist and Congregational brethren is, the Masons and their satellites demand that the churches be closed, and they acceed to the demand. Which means that the keys of the M. E. and of the Congregational churches of Mason City are kept in the Masonic lodge, and used or not used at the pleasure of the most corrupt men of the order in the place. One thing, however, is encouraging. They do not love to have it so, and, will I have no doubt, take means to secure a change.

J. P. Stoddard.

Mason City, Iowa, March 11, 1875.

A "Faithful Watchman"—The Warning Heard.

Coitsville, O., March 16, 1875.

Dear Cynosure:—Rev. J. M. Wallace, the worthy pastor of the United Presbyterian congregation of Youngstown, Ohio, is doing noble service in preaching a series of discources in his own pulpit in opposition to secret societies. Last Sabbath, the 14th inst, he preached his fourth sermon on the subject, and so great was the interest manifested that the house was filled to overflowing with an attentive audience. The various secret societies of the city were well represented by their leading members, who gave the strictest attention to all that was said.

Youngstown is one of the strongholds of secret societies, and as Mr. Wallace is the only minister in the place who has had the moral courage to attack and expose the corruption of secret, oath-bound societies, and having very justly merited the reputation of being a candid, able and an elcquent speaker, it is not at all surprising that his able expose of the works of darkness is causing quite a sensation in the city. For two or three days after each sermon, groups of men can be seen all over the city discussing its merits pro and con; and, judging from the language sometimes made use of, and the oratory displayed in its delivery, the conclusion is inevitable that the Rev. gentleman has succeeded in stirring up a good deal of bad bile in Freemasons and Odd-fellows. On last Sabbath, during the sermon, the blood coursed so rapidly through the veins of a Mason that he perspired profusely, while others around him seemed perfectly cool.

The city papers are all favorable to secret societies; but the Mahoning Register and Tribune (Republican), is controlled by men of honor, and has hitherto confined itself to condensed reports of the sermons without criticism. The Mahoning Vindicator, however, a third-class Democratic sheet, at once grows wrathful, and the "gentleman of the 'black cloth'" in general are made the aim of its satiracal wit.

As Mr. W. is thoroughly ventilating the subject, we may expect good results to follow, notwithstanding the old and oft repeated assertion that every attempt to expose secret societies only influences men to join them. If this were true, adherents of the lodge would not have such a horror of free discussion, as they everywhere evince. The course he pursues is a safe one, and cannot help but carry conviction to honest hearts. The Scripture injunction, "Prove all things," is his motto, and whatever he undertakes is so well done that to dispute his conclusions would be sheer folly. W. D. Beggs.

Notes by the Way from the Illinois Agent.

Farm Ridge, March 16, 1875.

Dear Bro. K:—On the 13th inst. I visited Chebanse, Iroquois county, and found a few earnest friends of our cause, and some personal friends that I had not seen for several years. On Saturday evening I spoke in the Congregational church to a good audience, many of who were Masons and seemed greatly astonished that I should be able to tell how a man is made a Mason. It seemed never to have occurred to them that many who are outsiders know far more of Masonry than many of the regularly initiated. Some of them were frank enough to say that what I had said of Masonry could not be denied, and one of them, a worthy brother in the M. E. church, said it was true, and that he had long felt that the obligations of Masonry were wicked, and that he was done with it forever. On Sunday evening I preached in the same church to a good congregation, and in the evening spoke to a full house on the religion of Freemasonry. The impression produced on the entire community seems to have been excellent, and a new impetus was given to this most needful reform.

An incident illustrating the spirit of the lodge occurred a short time since. Mr. A. C. Willard, who is a veteran seceding Mason, and who was actively engaged in the rescue of Miller, and the arrest of the abductors of Morgan, called the lodge a snake's nest, and said they hatched vipers. The other day he was informed that there was a package for him at the express office. He went and received it after paying charges, and on opening it found a box of cotton containing three small eggs, with a note stating that they were snake's eggs for A. C. Willard. It is not probable that a very large brood of actual vipers will come out of this nest, but it is certain that a snakish spirit was very apparent, and that the conduct of the lodge here and elsewhere illustrates the words of the ancient prophet: "They hatch cockatrice eggs and weave the spider's webb; he that eateth of their eggs dieth, and that which is crushed breaketh out into a viper." Is. lix. 5.

H. H. Hinman.

A Volunteer Campaign in Southeastern Illinois.

Springerton, White Co., Ill., March 8, 1875.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

I have commenced work in good earnest against all secret bands. No man except myself has ever ventured to raise his voice in public in this part of the State against this deceptive scheme of Satan. So you see I am alone, and yet I am not alone for God is with me. The Saviour has said, "Lo! I am with you alway even to the end of the world." I was the first man in this vicinity to question the right of men to deal in the "bodies and souls of men." I am much encouraged to fight on. Southern Illinois is a noble field.

If other lecturers knew how many men there are here now ready for the work, surely some of them would "come over and help us." I have delivered ten lectures in White, Hamilton, and Wayne counties, occupying about two hours time each, and getting the very best attention; no one tried except the secretists who usually become restless, speak out, and try to interrupt me, and in so doing almost invariably render themselves ridiculous. I have swarms of warm friends at every gathering to cheer me on, much to the annoyance of the lip-locked, self enslaved gentry that always attend to hear me "kill myself," as they call it. I never make any charges against them only such as I can prove most conclusively by good authority. There have been two clear cases of Masonic murder in this county. I refer to them when it suits, and so this brings the reckless banterings of this God-forsaken clan immediately into our own door-yards. At one of my appointments, while speaking, I was repeatedly interrupted, and efforts were made by two ministers, one a Baptist, the other a Universalist, to reply to my lecture. The Baptist is a man of good information, quite an able speaker. Their combined forces were, however, very inconsiderable on this occasion, it only required a few moments for me to bring almost the entire house down upon them in uproarious laughter and cheers for the few words of answer to them. Both of these "ministers in holy things" are Masons. The course that I pursued that evening rendered these two "brothers" very uneasy, being acquainted with both, and knowing them to be Masons, I frequently gave them Masonic signs, and finally stated that "Boaz" was the name of the "grip" of an Entered Apprentice Mason. This seemed to be more than my Universalist opponant could bear, and at this point, in his bewilderment, he asked me if I could prove it; whereupon I asked him if he deinied it. He would not answer. I again put the question, "Sir, do you before this audience deny that 'Boaz' is the name of the 'grip' of an Entered Apprentice Mason?" No answer; "all quiet on the Potomac." I challenged him to deny, and if he did I would prove the correctness of my statement if it cost me fifty dollars. Still this great man proved himself to be one of the dumb animals of which the prophet Isaiah speaks. This was very enjoyable to a large majority present.

I do believe that there are a great many more men now ready for this glorious renovation than is generally supposed. I am much encouraged. Forward, brothers!

> The wars in which the heroes fight
> Are not the wars for me?
> The war in which my heart delights
> Shall end in victory!"

The Bible must be our measuring rod, our standard. I love the Cynosure much; it is one of my weapons of war. Humbly yours,

James Springer.

Ohio—Bro. Caldwell Sick.

Nevada, O., March 16, 1875.

Editor of the Cynosure:

Dear Sir:—At the request of Mr. Caldwell, I want to say through your columns to the friends who have been disappointed or may be disappointed in not receiving lectures as per agreement that the cause is personal affliction. He has been lecturing almost every evening since the Mansfield Convention, until last Wednesday evening, when unpleasant symptoms began to manifest themselves on the surface of the face which have since developed in erysipelas. He is now confined to his room and under medical treatment and is likely to be for some time.

With the most flattering results he will not be able to resume his work for two weeks or more. Although taken in time it has covered half of his face, which is very much swollen; one eye has been entirely shut. The doctor thinks he will succeed in confining it to the one side. He is extremely anxious to be up and doing; has appointments arranged for the rest of this week; expected to speak to-morrow, but will not be able; desires the friends to exercise patience and forbearance hoping to be with them soon. To Prof. Ramsey of Iberia College he wishes me to say that he has not forgotten his promise will be there as soon as practicable, the Lord willing.

Respectfully yours,
(Mrs.) S. J. Caldwell.

The Cause in New Hampshire.

Center Strafford, N. H., March 9, 1875.

The cause of anti-secrecy is gaining in New Hampshire, but we suffer loss in being isolated from our brethren in the West and from one another. There are many good and true men, but we need organization. We need a State lecturer. The harvest is ripe but the laborers are few. The Morning Star, of Dover, the organ of the Free Baptist denomination occasionally speaks against oath-bound secret societies, but with so many apologies as to almost nullify its testimony.

I have lectured against secret societies several times with encouraging success and rejoice to know the seed has fallen in good ground. The hardest argument I have to meet is that secret societies cannot be so bad since so many ministers of the Gospel belong to them. Many of these Masonic ministers are sick of the works of darkness, but their tongues are tied by oath-bound consciences, by self-interest and by fear. But we have one minister who has broken the bonds of wickedness and denounces the lodge as a work of darkness and an engine of Satan. I need not tell you that his course has subjected him to great abuse, for the serpent of secrecy is the same everywhere; it bears the mark of the beast, a persecuting spirit. It is my impression, however, that the state of civilization is such in New Hampshire that the lodges would not find it to their advantage to resort to such arguments as they do in Connecticut, New York and the West, viz., arsenic, blood-letting and decayed eggs. There is a strong popular feeling against secrecy and it only needs expression and guidance to become a power for good. We would like help from abroad but we shall wait for it. With the help of the truth-telling Cynosure, and your excellent publications, we propose to do all we can to hasten the glad day of deliverance from secret society nuisances that infest the land. I take this opportunity to confess myself opposed to all secret societies.

S. C. Kimball.

Correspondence.

A Canvasser's Experience.

Hutton, Coles Co., Ill., March 11, 1875.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

It may perhaps be of interest to your readers to hear again from Coles county. I purpose to give to you a few of the many cases of conversations or arguments which I have had with persons while working for your paper.

Mr. A. was a member of the (U. B.) church and I thought a sure place for a subscriber, so I conversed with him on the subject of secrecy and wanted him to subscribe for the Cynosure. He replied that he had read it some and did not believe what it said about Masonry, for the reason that they were all perjured men who claim to reveal Masonry and therefore could not believe them. But I always had good authority at hand, so we procured Webster's Unabridged Dictionary and showed him that the word perjury meant the violation of an oath lawfully administered, and that Masons who revealed the secrets of Masonry were not perjured men; to which he had to consent.

I also referred him to the law which recognized the testimony of one of two thieves, who took the benefit of the law and went free, but convicted the other. During the same conversation we got the Bible and turned to Lev. v. 4, where it reads as follows: "Or if a soul swear pronouncing with his lips to do evil or to do good," etc., and wanted him to give his opinion on that passage of Scripture, to which he said he would study on it.

I saw him in a week or two again and called for his opinion but he said he had not examined it yet, so the third time I saw him I asked again, but the same answer as before. And the fourth time, it being the night before he joined the Masonic lodge, while talking about the grange, I asked him again, to which he replied, "That is dretty hard to get over." But the next time I think he will be able to explain. He said that he could find more argument in favor of secrecy than he could against it, but did not give any, and I hope that he will be so kind as to give us a letter through the Cynosure.

The next man has been a Mason for many years, but joined the church on conditions to cease to be a practicing Mason, so I am told; but he has failed to do so. He is what I call one of the stall-fed Masons, fed by other more popular Masons on some such arguments as this: that there is no man or family but what has secrets that they would not for the world have made known, and that the secrets of Masonry are nothing but a few signs that they may know each other by. These being about the best arguments that they can produce.

But there is a mystery about Masonry that I cannot solve, and need a little light and that is: Why do Masons who profess to be Christians, say they will leave the church before they will Masonry? As in the case of this man; he says that he expects when he dies to be buried by the order of Masons, and at the same time he belongs to a church that has a burial ceremony.

Professing to live a life in the church as a Christian walking in the footsteps of his Master and at the same time be joined to an idol that he holds so sacred that in the hour of his death he will forbid to be buried in the name of Christ, but in the name of Masonry. How this is I know not, for "thou shalt have no other gods before me."

PELEG.

A Letter to Rev. W. Post.

DEAR EDITOR:—You are at liberty to publish the following if it will subserve the cause and you so elect.

Yours truly,
WOODRUFF POST.

32 MEIGS ST., ROCHESTER, N. Y., Feb. 8, 1875.

My dear friend, W. Post:

I want to see you very much. Believe me in saying I have a high regard for you personally, and a deep solicitude for your welfare. I was fearful the blood-hounds of Freemasonry might worry you into silence, [which they have tried to do by lying, slandering, defaming, proscribing and threatening.] But when I read your article in the Cynosure of the 5th inst. I was rejoiced beyond measure that you are undaunted, and bidding defiance to this fearful beast, believing as I do that the Christian religion, pure and undefiled, is the "salt of the earth" however short I may come of its requirements and that it is losing its "savor," its purifying influences at this time, in a lamentable degree.

This is chargeable in a great measure to the sentinels who have volunteered to give warning and to sound the alarm of approaching danger. But when a portion of these prove traitors to their trust, and pervert their high and holy vocation, can we set too high a value on those that are true to this great trust, involving the present and the eternal welfare of the whole human family? I have looked upon you as being worthy of this high trust; ever since I saw you for the first time, on the platform of Corinthian Hall in the meekness of the blessed Savior, sounding the trumpet he had put into your hands, of the fearful and demoralizing tendencies of Freemasonry, and of the sad inroads it was making on the purity of the Christian religion.

Believe me also that I have an equal and universal solicitude and high esteem for all God-fearing sentinels, that withstand the wily temptations of this most alluring device of Freemasonry; that it would seem as though the evil one himself, could not improve one iota to deceive the unwary into his folds.

Like the slave-holders these wily craftsmen warn all men to let them alone. If their warnings were open and manly, we would know where and how to meet them "on the square;" as they are sworn to meet each other within their clan.

This brings me to the point of what I had wished to see you for, and will now communicate on paper. Probably you have not forgotten the eulogy on Masonry and the vindictive denunciation by the Rev. D. H. Muller, on the 28th of Dec., 1874. This extraordinary discourse was sanctified with the formula of taking a text from Holy Writ, without seeming to have any use for it. As I understand the genius and practical workings of the order, this is easily accounted for. That is, he dare not defend Masonry from the Scriptures if he would; but as a strategetic point, used its forms. To give you my views of his so-called sermon, in brief, it was without exception the most audacious piece of effrontery that ever came under my observation, from the pulpit. That it was virtually endorsed in silence in the Christian city of Rochester where delivered, has caused many forebodings in my mind for the future of my country, in thus debauching the sanctuary, and the consequent defilement of the Christian religion. Yours as ever in the truth as it is in Christ Jesus,

WELLS SPRINGER.

Sense and Scripture.

In the spirit of the Gospel and language of Scripture I would say, to the slaves of secretism, "Turn you to the stronghold, ye prisoners of hope." What, is there hope? that they who have taken the covenants and obligations of secretism, can ever become God's free men? Such hope is; and is founded on the sure word of prophesy; Rev. xvi. 2: "And I saw as it were a sea of glass mingled with fire; and them that had gotten the victory over the beast, and over his image, and over his mark, and over the number of his name, stand on the sea of glass, having harps of God." This sublime symbol seems to represent something deep, solid or permanent, something reliable as the foundation of man's hope of happiness, upon which he may stand or become established. The sacred Scriptures, the fountain of divine truth, is regarded as the true antetype of this passage.

Victory implies a previous struggle. This struggle has been with the beast. "Truth has made them free." We admire the description of these victors. They are not represented as bowing, crouching, crawling, but standing; nor fear nor flattery can move them from their steadfastness. They have the harps of God. In third verse, they sing the song of Moses. The Bible student understands this song to be a song of deliverance.

We understand the victors here spoken of, are those that have renounced the service of the beast. What is the difference between the victor who has renounced the beast and his service, and those who have suspended his service for present convenience? (Perhaps till they get on to another circuit or change where secretism is less offensive.) Answer.—The victor sings, while the other, so far from singing, seems not to enjoy the singing of others. Let the victors who may be in attendance at your convention take courage from these scriptures and stand boldly forth, showing that the truth has made them free.

MRS. B. HEYES.

A Methodistic View.

Though but recently the question of the possible right or wrong of secret societies, especially Freemasonry, has risen in my mind, and though I have not searched fully the tenets of the Masonic order, yet have I arrived at the conclusion that reason should and that my Bible does teach me Freemasonry is an unholy institution. And that reasoning, thinking men who stand at the head of all movements in church and state should for a moment countenance this institution which undermines the teachings and destroys the effect of the death of Christ, and renders powerless our federal government, is a wonder of wonders to me. May the Omnipotent hasten the day that shall come and must come in which a reaction shall take place.

I have been reading Webb's Monitor and I see their own words condemn them. First, let us look at "The importance of the secrets of Masonry demonstrated." Mark, "demonstrated!" He says, "if the secrets of Masonry are replete with such advantages to mankind it may be asked: "Why are they not divulged for the general good of society? To which it may be answered, were the privileges of Masonry to be indiscriminately bestowed, the design of the institution would be subverted, and being familiar like many other important matters, would soon loose their value and sink into disregard." Yes, my Masonic friend, you hit the nail on the head unawares in your own answer. If it were, as you say, "indiscriminately bestowed," or brought out into the daylight, where they would receive cold streams from the fountain of truth and where the Word of God would have access to them, they would very soon "sink into disregard." If I wish to enter your order I must first take an oath that even against honor and at the sacrifice of virtue and my loyalty as a citizen, I must ever keep secret something of which as yet I have no knowledge, whether it be good or evil, in concord with Christ or Belial. "The design of the institution" would very soon lose all hold upon mankind if you would but let your "Masonic light" shine.

But let us investigate farther. "It is a weakness," says Webb, "in human nature that men are generally more charmed with novelty than the real worth or intrinsic value of things." So then, you own that Masonry depends not upon its sterling merit, but in the "novelty of the thing." My friends, let us look at this "novelty." Fancy the taking of an oath to ignore the distinction between right and wrong; to assist a fellow Mason in all difficulties "murder and treason not accepted" under the moral and agreeable penalty of such "novelties" as having your throat cut, bowels torn out, body burnt, etc. This is indeed "real worth and intrinsic value," How truly exalting, how noble, wise and consistent it seems for a minister of the Gospel, or even a layman, to take an oath to keep secret this hellish formula, the very wording of which denies all Christian spirit! This is a fair specimen purporting to be a prayer, "May the blessing of Heaven rest upon us and all regular Masons. May brotherly love prevail, and every moral and social virtue cement us. Amen." Compare that with the prayer which our heavenly Master taught us, and tell me if that is true Christian spirit. And again, "Your virtue, honor and reputation are concerned in supporting with dignity the character you now bear. Let no motive therefore make you swerve from your duty, violate your vows, or betray your trust."

Christians, let us arise in all the strength of God, and cast this hydra-headed monster from our church. It is a deplorable fact that the M. E. church still is regardless of the command, "Come out from among them and be ye separate saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you." Shall this, must this still continue. N. A. PRICE.

Lott's Creek, Iowa.

How does Odd-fellowship Compare with Freemasonry?

At the beautiful village of H——r, N. Y., many years since, there was a discussion in the lyceum of the merits and demerits of Freemasonry and Odd-fellowship; the writer was one of the debators. There being no one present disposed to favor Masonry, the support of the affirmative devolved upon Odd-fellows with respect to their institution. In the progress of the debate, an eminent lawyer, who was a Freemason, supported the negative on general principles in opposition to secret societies. In regard to Masonry he said he was a Mason and had not renounced it; but it had had its day of usefulness; we have better institutions now, and peace to its ashes. He knew nothing of the secrets of Odd-fellowship; but he once asked a brother Mason, who was an Odd-fellow, how it compared with Masonry? In reply he said as the kine-pox does to the small-pox. Perhaps the answer is expressive of their comparative characteristics; the one being less revolting in its oaths and requirements than the other.

S. S. B.

OUR MAIL.

Job Willets, Huntingdon, Ind., writes:

"I helped put down Freemasonry once and saw his head wounded to death; but it lived again healed by the black salve of abomination. . . 'Wo unto them! for they have gone in the way of Cain, and ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and perished in the gainsaying of Korah.'"

John Milner, Greenfield, O., writes:

"A great many ministers of the Gospel, who set themselves up for guides, belong to the Freemasons. I talked with one the other day who said Freemasonry was all right, and no harm could possibly come of it. I have been scattering Honeywell's tracts pretty freely, and am not at all backward in telling all Freemasons where they stand in my estimation. Some say but little. Others attempt to argue; but some say the subject is not to be argued."

R. E. Adams, College Springs, Ia., writes:

"I praise God for the prosperity of the anti-secret society cause. I have more faith in the power of prayer than I ever had before. I am determined to labor on while God gives me strength to work."

Wm. Davis, East Trumbull, O., writes:

"If a good lecturer could get in here, it would wake up the people so they would dare to read, and yet I do not know as a subscription could be raised to defray expenses, but I know there is a better time coming when people will get their eyes open."

Geo. McElheny, Darlington, Pa., writes:

"Anti-secrecy principles are permeating this region. The Cynosure is moreover, to some extent, circulating in this community. Convincing by its ever growing facts and arguments of the necessity of incessant opposition against the powers of darkness. . . The increase of anti-secret literature since the first National Christian Convention May 7th, 1868, is a cause of gratitude to God."

Frederick Huber, Newcorner, Ind., writes:

"I am opposed to works of darkness. I am nearly the only man here who names them to oppose them, and I will be a thorn in their flesh here by the help of the Lord."

Rev. N. R. Luce, Lockport, N. Y., writes:

"Count me a life subscriber. I have girded on the armor and do not propose to put it off until we gain the victory."

J. A. Brown, Columbus, O., writes:

"The friends of the cause here donate a copy of the Cynosure to the public reading room, and I am quite sure it is a good way to introduce the paper. I loan my paper to the Freemasons and Odd-fellows, and some of them like to read it from the fact that it is intelligently edited. We are gaining ground here for which we thank the Lord."

J. M. Bryant, Bethany, Mo., writes:

"Secret organizations are making a great effort in this county, but I think if we could have a few good lectures delivered in this county that they would be crowned with good success. . . I feel that the time has fully come to draw the lines at the ballot box."

A. S. Badgley, Bellville, Ill., writes:

"I think with the help of your paper I can keep my sons at least from taking the first step in Masonry. One step in bondage, with a lock on their mouths."

W. H. Parker, Palmyra, N. Y., writes:

"In Barnum's book on humbugs he speaks of some travelers in Asia who came across a people who had something that they kept with great care, and which they refused permission to see, or even to impart any information as to its character or properties. Some of the travelers, breaking through every obstacle, obtained access to the sacred object which was carefully rolled up in cloths; and after unrolling about one hundred and fifty coverings, they found—O wonderfull simply an old broken bottle. So strip Masonry of all its disguises, and I think one would find something just about as sacred as that old broken bottle."

G. W. Statten, Hagerstown, Md., writes:

"I am heart and soul in sympathy with its (the Cynosure's) sentiments."

L. Landon, Kennebec, Kan., writes:

"The first grange has been formed in our county. Half or more of the people are living on charity, and yet they can find money to spend in so doing, but have none to buy bread; and they talk as if they expected to make a small fortune in so doing; because they can buy so cheap, and many of them have not a dollar to pay with in advance. Strange inconsistency it seems to an outsider."

E. J. Chalfant, York, Pa., writes:

"Our cause is steadily gaining ground. Reason and conscience are more than a match for the knaves and fools of the secret empire. What a grand high school a Masonic lodge is for the cultivation of fools and conspirators!"

Rev. Wm. H. Jamieson, Butler, Pa., writes:

"I am heartily inlisted in the cause you so warmly advocate, and may God speed the day when these abominations shall have no place in our land."

Alfred Sergant, Waterport, N. Y., writes:

"I think secretism is doing more evil than all other causes combined, so I am in for the war as long as I live."

J. B. Crosby, Apple Creek, O., writes:

"Having read your paper for several years, I heartily endorse your views of secret societies and wish your paper was a visitor to every family in our land."

S. S. Bradford, Hammond, Wis., writes:

"No one here manifests any interest in the cause of Anti-masonry."

H. J. Harman, York Springs, Pa., writes:

"As long as you hold up the doctrine you now do, you will have my name on your list. The Cynosure is the right paper in the right place."

S. H. Skinner, Avalon, Mo., writes:

"I wish to continue a subscriber to the Cynosure . . until its mission shall be accomplished in the downfall of the accursed systems of iniquity that are now darkening our land."

M. W. Bicknell, Stanwix, N. Y., writes:

"I did not commence taking the paper to learn what Masonry is. I thought I knew all I wanted to know about it at the time Morgan was put to death. But I find I am not too old to learn. I am getting much good from your paper. My main object in taking it is to help you along in the good cause."

The Sabbath School.

Lesson for April 4th, 1875.—Israel's Promise.

Joshua xxiv. 14-18.

14 Now therefore fear the Lord, and serve him in sincerity and truth: and put away the gods which your fathers served on the other side of the flood, and in Egypt; and serve ye the Lord.

15 And if it seem evil unto you to serve the Lord, choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether the gods which your fathers served, that were on the other side of the flood, or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord.

16 And the people answered and said God forbid that we should forsake the Lord, to serve other gods.

17 For the Lord our God, he it is that brought us out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage, and which did those great signs in our sight, and preserved us in all the way wherein we went, and among all the people through whom we passed.

18 And the Lord drave out from before us all the people, even the Amorites which dwelt in the land; therefore, will we also serve the Lord, for he is our God.

GOLDEN TEXT.—And the people said unto Joshua, The Lord our God will we serve, and his voice will we obey.—Joshua xxiv. 24.

SCRIPTURE HELPS.—For "gods on the other side of the flood" (Jordan), see Gen. xxxi. 17-35 and Ex. xxxii. 1-24. For verse 15, see Ex. xxxii. 25-35, and Elijah's proposition, I. Kings xviii. 17-40; also Josh. xxiii. and xxiv. All must choose between Christ and Satan: Matt. vi. 24: Rev. iii. 14-22. The best time: v. 15; Ps. xcv. 7; Prov. viii. 17; Heb. iii. 1. 7-15 and iv. 7 2 Cor. vi. 2; Is. lv. 6; Acts iii. 19; Matt. vi. 33. Not safe to delay: Acts xxiv. 25 and xxvi. 27-28. Israel recounted the mercies of the Lord and replied, v. 16; to us are given "exceeding great and precious promises" and the Spirit often invites, see Prov. i. 10-23; Is. lv. 1-7; Matt. viii. 7; Rev. xxii. 17. To refuse God is fearful: Prov. i. 24-33; Ps. ii. 12. Let us choose as did Israel, see Golden text; and Mary, Luke x. 42; and as Christ also, Is. viii. 14-16.

A Chronological Table.

OF SOME OF THE MOST IMPORTANT EVENTS IN POPERY.

	A. D.
Holy water introduced.	120
The surplice introduced.	122
Telesphorus introduced the lent of seven weeks before Easter.	133
Hygenius introduced godfathers and godmothers at the baptism of infants.	139
The term pope first applied exclusively to the bishop of Rome.	154
Penance introduced.	159
It was ordered that wine should be consecrated in a glass vessel only.	210
Calixtus I. broached the celebacy of the clergy, but could not establish it.	220
Calixtus ordained a three-fold fast in the year	224
Urban I. decreed that houses and lands should be attached to create revenue for the clergy.	228
Gorgeous robes, mitres, tiaras, wax-tapers, etc., introduced.	286
The sacrament administered to infants.	300
The council of Elva condemned the use of images in religious worship,	305
The celebacy of the clergy warmly discussed first general council at Nice.	325
Exorcism, or an act of conjuration, to expel demons from people, introduced.	258
The sign of the cross first used in infant baptism.	263
The order of monks first instituted.	335
Martin I. introduced the singing of the Nicene creed.	336
The monks went about selling the bones and other fragments of imaginary saints.	345
Pope Cyracuse insisted in vain on the celebacy of the clergy and excommunicated those who were twice married.	385
Anastasius I. introduced the practice of standing up at the reading of the Gospel.	399
Bells first used in churches.	400
It was decided that lying and deception to promote the welfare of the church were acts of virtue.	406
It was decreed that noncompliance with the requirements of human creeds after repeated admonitions should be punished with death.	408
The oil of chrism as used in Extreme Unction was administered by the laity as well as by the clergy for the healing of the body.	416
Zozemes introduced the use of tapers in the church.	417
Celestin I. caused the Psalms be to sung in Antiphony.	426
Hilary I. broached the use of Litany in the church.	464
The Virgin Mary was first called the mother of God.	485
Felix III. decided that no church should be consecrated but by a bishop.	488
Pope Galasius decided that those who would not receive the sacrament in both kinds of bread and wine should be deprived of it altogether.	492
Felix IV. decided that Extreme Unction ought to be applied to dying men.	528
Pelagius I. decided that heretics and schismatics should be punished with temporal death.	558
The use of indulgences broached.	580
Purgatory introduced.	593
Gregory I. declared that it was heretical, unchristian and diabolical for John Patriarch of Constantinople, to seek the title of Universal bishop.	594
St. Augustine, commissioned by Gregory I., came to England with forty monks to establish popery among the Saxons. He first obtained the approbation of King Ethelbert, then got the army to go against those who opposed his religion and in the skirmish slew 1,200 of the English clergy.	595
Gregory I. called himself "Servus Servorum Dei," Servant of the servants of God,"	596
The canon of the Mass introduced.	598
Boniface III. obtained the title of "Universal Bishop," of Phocas, who first murdered his master Mauritus, the Emperor, and then usurped his throne.	606
Boniface IV. instituted "All Hallow day," and dedicated the temple of Pantheon to the Virgin Mary.	610
Boniface V. decreed that all murderers and thieves who would take sanctuary in a church should evade the hand of justice.	620
Honorius I. instituted the feast of the exaltation of the cross.	635
Vitalian I. broached the use of organs in the church service.	662
Vitalian I. commanded the Liturgy to be read in the Latin language everywhere and thereby mocked the subjection of the church to the Pope of Rome.	666
Agathe I. ordained that the Pope's sanctions should be as firmly kept as those of the Apostles.	680
Leo II. ratified the sixth synod to confirm the canon of the Mass.	684
Leo II. introduced the practice of kissing the Pope's slipper.	684
Benedict II. was the first Pope that was styled, "Vicar of Christ."	685
Invocation of saints made an article of faith.	700
Invocation of the Virgin Mary introduced.	715
Masses for the dead introduced.	752
Stephen II. received Lombardy as a gift from Pepin the usurper, for freeing him from the oath of allegiance to his rightful sovereign. From this time the pope was a temporal prince and wore two swords.	756
Stephen III. brought in the worship of images; and subjugated Milan to his see.	770
The worship of images publicly established by Irene the Empress.	784
The worship of images permanently established by a decree of the second Council of Nice.	787
The doctrine of transubstantiation broached in the Greek church.	789
Kissing the pope's toe introduced.	809
Pascal I. created the first cardinals. They are to be seventy in number.	820
The doctrine of transubstatiation was introduced into the Latin church by Pascasius Radbert, a monk.	831
Sergius II. was the first who changed his name on receiving the popedom who was followed by the popes ever since.	845
Leo IV. collected "Peter Pence" in England.	848
Pope Joan, a disguised woman, was elected to fill St. Peter's chair. She died in childbirth on her way to the Vatican.	854
Nicholas I. was the first that prohibited by law marriage to Roman clergy.	860
Adrian I. decreed that the pope should be elected exclusively by the Roman clergy.	885
Stephen VI. abrogated all the acts of Formoses, his predecessor, took his body out of the sepulcher, set it in the ponifical seat, excommunicated it and cut off two fingers and then buried it.	899
John IX summoned a council of seventy-one bishops and rescinded the acts of Stephen VI. and restored those of Formoses.	902
Sergius III. ordained the burning of candles at the feast of the purfiation of the Virgin Mary, hence called candlemas day, and rescinded the acts of Formoses.	906
Saints first cannonized.	993
Indulgences were first sold, which afterwards became a scource of great wealth to the popes.	1000

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 25, 1875.

"THE COMING POLITICAL PARTY."

An article will appear in the next week's Cynosure with the above title, which our readers will welcome. It is from the Christian Statesman, and is exceedingly able. Its doctrine is that when no moral principle divides political parties they are at once essentially demoralized. The most important consideration remaining being money, salary-grabbing becomes the order of the day. "Righteousness exalteth a nation," not "currency." And the Statesman writer shows that the Republican and Democratic parties are divided by no moral consideration since slavery fell; and the Republicans bailed the worst criminal and traitor of the rebellion, and entered the scramble with the Democrats for Southern votes.

There are issues still depending in which the very life of the nation is still bound up. The Anti-masonic party of 1828–31 was neither a fanaticism or a mistake. A secret government within a government, with courts behind its courts, and oaths behind its oaths is the certain destruction of that government. But political Anti-masonry went down because the lodge was not seen to be a false religion and a political remedy could not cure a religious evil; because the lodges 'played possum,' i. e., feigned dead, worshiped in secret, and their members joined and demoralized the movement. This alone would not have killed political Anti-masonry had not the slavery question arose, and

"Like Aaron's serpent swallowed all the rest."

But the game is now unearthed, and can never again get to cover. The world sees now the terrible vitality of the lodge; and as when the rellgious sentiment of the country began in earnest to cast out slavery, politics began to drop it, so will it be with the lodge. And it must now fight till it dies. If it should sham dead again, somebody will hold a candle to its nose.

Then Mormons and Chinamen will force us to say what our Constitution means by the word "RELIGION;" whether our government is Christian or heathen; whether the United States is within Christendom or outside. Our nation like Pilate has a Saviour on their hands whom we must or shall recognize or crucify.

Then the priest and atheist will force us as a people to say whether there is any Lord's day, and whether, by the laws of God and human nature, the laborer has a right to rest and worship on that day.

Then the traffic in intoxicants, and its relation to law. These are actually existing issues, and, in this country, such issues have already found their way to the polls, and they cannot, will not be driven back. And parties leaving these issues out must stuff their platforms with straw, and then only men of straw will vote for them.

—The United Presbyterian notices the aspersions of the lodge against that church and its teachings:

"We hear now and then that so many United Presbyterians are in the lodges of Freemasons and Odd-fellows. It is told by some astute disciple of the apron and hatchet that in a particular congregation there is such a number, and that they will cling to the order no matter what the church may say. It appears to be the policy of the lodge to propogate such an opinion. And it is natural, too; for as such institutions are founded on secrecy and deception, it is to be expected they will make a boast of having a membership that is doubly dishonest. But when asked to point out the members of this character they always fail. It is not possible that any rule in the church or any place else can have infallible application; but we venture the belief that the law in regard to seeret societies of the United Presbyterian church is as nearly lived up to as any one in any point of doctrine or practice in any of the churches."

BISMARCK'S FALK-LAWS.

Hume, skeptic, tory and royalist though he was, has these sensible words in his History of England, II., 555:

"It is certain that the restless enterprising spirit of the Catholic church, particularly of the Jesuits, merits attention, and is, in some degree, dangerous to every other communion. Such zeal of proselytism actuates that sect, that its missionaries have penetrated into every nation of the globe; and, in one sense, there is a popish plot perpetually carrying on against all states, Protestant, pagan and Mahometan."

At the time Hume wrote the above, Jesuitism was the most unpopular, as it is now the controlling order of the Romish church; and Bismarck is the only statesman on earth who dares undertake to protect his government against that terrible power. We understand the meaning and intent of the laws which he has enacted, to be that priests, paid by German taxes, shall be educated in German schools, and recognize the German Empire. He does not propose to enforce conscience, but to prevent crime. And while he is willing, as he says, to respect the Pope as a bishop and his creed as religion, he will not own him as his master and the civil ruler of German, Protestants, nor, for that matter, of German Catholics either.

True, as the Advance suggests, there are provisions in the Falk-laws which would not be borne here. That is true because priests and ministers of religion are not paid here out of the public treasury. If the treasury at Washington paid the preachers, it would then be right for Congress to say, if it choose, that no man should be a priest who had not read and approved the United States Constitution.

Suppose General Robert Lee's College in Virginia still openly taught that treason to the Union was duty to God; that secession was a right and enforced Union a crime; would our Government, after suppressing secession by its arms, be in duty bound to pay and support secessionists, and schools and teachers of secession? Surely not.

If priests do not like the German schools, they ought not to claim German money. The laws, as we understand them, do not forbid young priests studying popish theology, but requires them to go to German schools where there are even now more than a fair numerical proportion of Catholic teachers; but teachers who recognize the Emperor, not the Pope, as the civil head of the realm. After they have been taught in the gymnasia, they can study at Romish seminaries if they desire.

NOTES.

—J. A. Davidson, late State Lecturer for the Grand Lodge of Good Templars of Pennsylvania, and who has probably organized more lodges of that order than any other man in that State has gone back on his pledge to that order. He was lately arrested for the second time on charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct in Erie. This is but one of a thousand instances of the kind, only more prominent. The secret ensnaring order should bear this fall and not the good cause by which it seeks to gain respectability.

—A clergyman writes to the Advance of the unprofitable character of "outside" funerals, that is, of non-church-goers. On one instance, he says, he traveled over eight miles on a tedious day to take charge of such a service for a deceased Mason, which was attended by a large procession of the "aproned brotherhood." But no sign of remuneration or acknowledgment of obligation ever came from that rich and "independent fraternity." He was evidently not a reader of the Cynosure or he would never have expected any.

—In Iowa secret orders among the farmers prove to be about as useful and as long-lived as the chinch-bugs in their grain. A Chicago Journal correspondent says of the grange: "Over 1,100 of the 2,000 granges of Patrons are in arrears for dues. The import is that working farmers have got tired of paying their money to sidewalk farmers who don't work. They are beginning to learn that the National Sponge is more for the benefit of office-holders than the granges; and that a vast amount of the machinery of the higher granges is both useless and expensive. So they are striking out for themselves and organizing independent granges in various counties. The collapse of the order as a State organization in Iowa is a foregone conclusion. And so the reformers will die of their own defermities."

—The Christian Expositor (United Brethren) has the following illustration of the expediency of the following two or three kinds of religion. No doubt there might be found hundreds of like cases: "In the spring of 1873, two ministers weresent to take charge of congregations in an eastern town. The M. E. minister, and educated man, such as give 'dignity to a conference, presents visiting members with grace,' is a Mason, Odd-fellow, and a member of other orders. During the year he had some conversions, and eight accessions. His church-door was open for men and women of all orders. The U. B. minister is not an educated man, did not possess the concomitant advantages, is Anti-mason. During the year he had about 90 conversions, and 76 accessions. His church-door was opened only to those for whom the Bible and discipline opened it. Only those of the secret order were admitted who first left the order, (and there were such, who are still faithful and true,) and became willing to be governed by church discipline."

—In a work published many years since by Samuel Greenleaf, "An Inquiry into the Objects and Principles of Freemasonry," the following is quoted from a letter written Oct. 21, 1818, by David Poor, a missionary of the American Board, and a Freemason: "But it is worthy of inquiry whether we have not been guilty of the practical error of substituting our fraternity for the whole human family." A matter of very serious inquiry to an individual with his connections.

—A correspondent signing himself "S. R. H. B." labors through a three-column article to tell the benevolent public of the bad management, or worse, of the Filmore County Aid Society, Nebraska. The society, he says, was organized by men of low repute, and $1.00 demanded of every one who joined—an unusual and suspicious proceeding certainly. Some of the members while receiving aid from the East spent their money at dances and for whiskey and tobacco, and those who opposed begging for such characters found themselves much out-voted. The letter concludes with advising that donations be sent to responsible individuals through the State Aid Society.

—The widow of the late Gerrit Smith, died at Peterboro, N. Y., March 6th, aged 71 years. She was receiving medical aid in New York city when her husband died, and went home greatly benefited. The severe winter which has proved fatal to so many elderly persons, tried her beyond her strength and she died of some inflammatory disease.

—The Attorney-general of Kansas has ordered the $7,000, used by the infamous York to defeat Pomeroy's election to the Senate, to be returned to the latter. This puts an end to the case in law for the bribery suits were long since dismissed. The facts, so far as the lodge has permitted them to become public, are these: Mr. Pomeroy, at the time of his election, (Jan., 1873) had promised to help start a bank at Independence, in southern Kansas, furnishing $8,000. He stated to the Congressional committee of investigation, three or four weeks after the occurrence, that on the evening before the election, York came to his room in the hotel and on a pretense of friendship and with great indignation at the lack of confidence at first shown by Pomeroy, obtained $7,000, not for himself or as a bribe, but merely to convey to Page, the banker. This, we believe, York never denied, nor has it been disproved in any court. On the other hand, York boasted and the Congressional inquiry proved that he only carried out a plot carefully prepared by himself, Ingalls, and other Freemasons in the Kansas Legislature. Why the case never came to trial it is safe to say that the lodge was managing here as well as in the election. Senator Pomeroy and York were the only parties personally knowing of the interview, and while a stout lie backed by a handful of stolen greenbacks could create a sudden fury and carry a vote, it might not hold so well in court. The lodge controlled the press and always made it appear that Pomeroy was anxious to put off the trial which its own adherents at last gave up. Of the sum mentioned, $2,000 has been retained by the State to cover the cost of investigations and court fees, but with what color of justice does not appear; it has the likeness of all the rest of this cut-throat business, an infamous swindle. But the ex-Senator may be thankful to be clear of this Masonic gang.

Anti-secret Society Political Party.

ARKANSAS CITY, Kans., Mar. 2, 1875.

It is not my design to discuss the formation and support of such a party; should it be formed, I expect to support it, and vote for its nominees for office, unless very strong reasons should forbid. In the Cynosure for Feb. 25th, G. W. Needles suggests for President, Vice-President Wilson, and for Vice-president of the United States, Gen. Sheridan. Whether it is time yet to discuss the fitness of different persons for the high positions referred to, I am not prepared to pass judgment; but as the subject has been introduced by the writer above named, should the party named obtain from Henry Wilson of Massachusetts, permission to use his name for the office of President of the United States, it is likely they could not bring into the field an abler statesman, or one of a more unsullied moral character. As to the fitness of General Sheridan for the office of Vice-president, I am not well informed. His military education and life would not qualify him to preside over the Senate, and to preside over the destinies of this great Republic, in the event of the death of the President during his term of office, as has three times occurred in the history of our government. What the sentiments of the General may be in regard to secret societies in general I do not know; but it appears he entertains no good opinion of the White Leagues of Louisiana, whom he proposed to treat as bandits. The most powerful secret society in the world, I believe, to be the order of the Jesuits, and from his connection with the Romish church, which is completely ruled by the Jesuits, it is presumed that he would deal very gently with that secret society, were he in civil office. Before pressing the claims of any Romanist for office, we would recommend friend Needles to study Gladstone on the Vatican Decrees. Romanism is hostile to Freemasonry, which swears its members to "always conceal, and never reveal any" of its secrets. Now, if that oath were kept, no Roman Catholic could make a clean breast of everything which he knew to his priest. The ground of opposition to secret societies is not because they are anti-Christian or anti-republican, but because they hold secrets which they cannot, consistently with their oaths, disclose to the Father Confessor, who claims the right to be made acquainted with all the thoughts and intents of the hearts of all persons in every station from the most humble to the most elevated in society. Popery is making gigantic efforts to gain this country and England to its interests, and wo to them that aid it in such efforts. See Rev. xiv. 9–11.

In a free government like ours, a great responsibility devolves on Christians to employ all their constitutional rights to elevate to office, "able men, men of truth, fearing God, and hating covetousness." "As a roaring lion and ranging bear; so is a wicked ruler over the poor people." "When the righteous bear rule, the people rejoice, but when the wicked bear rule, the people mourn." "The wicked walk on every side when the vilest men are exalted." That the Ruler of nations who puts down one, and sets another up, who rules in the armies of heaven and among the inhabitants of the earth, may long preserve our liberties, and not in wrath set up over us the basest of men, but such as will be a terror to evil-doers, and a praise to them that do well, is the prayer of

DAVID THOMPSON.

Gen. Phelp's Book.

A St. Albans (Vt.) daily has the following review of this work which we commend to every reader of the Cynosure who has not read the book:

SECRET SOCIETIES, ANCIENT AND MODERN, an outline of their rise, progress and character with respect to the Christian Religion and Republican Government. By Gen. J. W. Phelps of Brattleboro. Chicago: EZRA A. COOK & Co.

This is a 12 mo. of 240 pages, price 50 cents, bound in paper and designed for popular distribution. It is wholly different from any former work on secret societies that has come under our notice, in that it does not pretend to make any exposition of their secrets, gives no illustrations and recites no formalisms. It is, on the contrary a historical, philosophical and statesmanlike treatise, written on a high key, in a pure tone and with profound learning. Whatever may be a man's predilections, this book will impress him with the sincerity, honesty and intense earnestness of the writer, and from a religious and patriotic standpoint it cannot fail to convince many that the whole category of secret societies, from Masonry down to grangerism, is essentially dangerous in tendency in spite of the many good things contained therein.

The book is divided into thirteen chapters, on the following subjects: the antiquity of secret societies; the life of Julian; the Eleusinian mysteries; the origin of Masonry; was Washington a Mason; Fillmore's and Webster's defense to Masonry; a brief outline of the progress of Masonry in the United States; the Tammany ring; the Credit Mobilier ring; Masonic benevolence; the uses of Masonry; an illustration, and the conclusion.

The general theory of the writer is that secret societies originated in heathen nations, where mysteries, polytheism and superstition held sway, and the symbolism that is kept up to-day is but an offshoot of the pagan worship, divination and idealism of the past. It is unchristian, unrepublican and unmanly. It sets up a code of morals that many accept in lieu of religion and often regard them as superior thereto. It governs society, not by laws that bear equally upon all, but by favoritism, partiality and combination. It destroys a man's individuality, self-reliance and moral convictions, by teaching him to be subservient, by often helping him to success without merit, by shielding him by deserved punishment and thus confusing his notions of right and wrong, compensation and atonement, by giving him, if crafty and ambitious, a tremendous power of communication and organization for the advancement of his purposes and gaining advantage over his fellow-men.

That Gen. Phelps profoundly believes all this no one will doubt, and that he has marshalled many convincing reasons for it no one who reads his book can deny. It these times when there are more secret societies than any one can name, and when they are rapidly forming—one to offset another or one necessitated by another—so that social, charitable and even commercial affairs are more in their control than they are in that of the church, the state, or the natural laws of trade, such a book cannot fail to be of great interest, to provoke antagonism and to find followers throughout the land. We differ from the writer in many of his conclusions, but it is refreshing, always, to read the theories of an honest, patriotic and independent mind, especially when he sails far above all the grovelling prejudices of time and place, and looks down upon human affairs with the eye of a philosopher, an historian and a seer.

S. D. Greene's Letter to the Lockport Convention.

Noticing a piece in the Cynosure of March 4th in reference to an expression of mine in the addressed to the N. Y. State Convention held at Lockport, signed "J. D," I thought I would give you the communication and let you publish it.

CHELSEA, Mass., Dec. 19, 1874.

To the Presiding Officer,

DEAR SIR:—You preside over a body of fellow citizens, though perhaps but a moiety of your great State; yet by no means meagre, or wanting in strength or diction. But possessing the mind and power under God, which inspired the minds of men of my native State, to resist the power of oppression and taxation, and to throw the imported tea overboard. So also you must importune Jehovah to elighten the minds of the people of this nation to remove another imported scourge and curse, Freemasonry; which is stealthily usurping the reins of government, creeping into the church of Christ, barring its portals, paralizing its functionaries with its false and brazen pretentions as slavery did; which must, like it, be met separately. So says one of our greatest statesmen, the late Hon. Charles Sumner in a letter to me: "Both are tending to centralization and anarchy and they must both be destroyed in our country, if it is to be the home of the free as our ancesters designed it." Under the march of enlightened civilization and freedom of thought, the nations of the earth are called upon by our nation to respect the individual right of one citizen, because the rights of one citizen are the rights of the whole. It seems strange that a transaction dating back no farther than 1826 should so soon be forgotten; and that Freemasonry, on account of its unlawful oaths, and anti-Christian principles, was renounced and denounced by thousands of true Christians. It is strange that, when thousands of upright men withheld their attendance upon the lodge, and lodge charters were returned, and Freemasonry was supposed to be dead, the fools, as Cadwalder D Colden, their great high priest in 1826, called them, that is, those that are pleased with its show, its parades, its gewgaws, as well as those who love and cherish unholy principles for filthy lucres' sake, should, like the possum in danger, pretend to be asleep so many years, then again arise and by their show and pomposity and by the unlawful and irreligious principles of the order, invite further investigations into their secrets and their oaths, which are their laws, and in obedience to which the Morgan outrages were perpetrated. The doors of justice were closed; the churches of Christ assailed by persecuting its members who left the lodge, having been beguiled by its false pretenses, or the salvo that the oaths should not militate against their religion or politics, or civil or religious duties, which ex-President John Q. Adams after careful examination says "is falehood and hypocrisy superadded to the breach of law and profanation of the name of God." But such is the depravity of the human heart without grace, it grasps the object of its love; and Freemasonry, like its prototype, the enemy of all virtue, clothes itself in light, to draw the unwary and innocent into the darkness of its purposes, to sustain its wicked designs. While, if the dupe of its power should act conscientiously and revolt, he is made to feel all the maledictions of its wrath. The Christian can look back nearly 1,900 years, with mingled horror and sympathy at the buffetings, scourging and crucifixion of their Lord and Master, while the Jews and ungodly mock and disregard the whole affair. So also, while the arms of our country so recently engaged to overthrow an oligarchy in the slave States, founded upon slavery; yes, this oligarchy and Freemasonry consorted the rebellion and fanned its flames and often checked the progress of the war for its overthrow, is apparent to one who knows its unlawful oaths and practices. To show this fact, Gen. Albert Pike, a noted rebel and Freemason, got up a Masonic lodge of sorrow before he was pardoned, in honor of Masons who drew the sword to prevent their fellow-creatures becoming free. Is this like Freemasonry? Fraternally yours,

SAMUEL D. GREENE.

The Home Circle.

Mother's Fingers.

Mother's useful fingers, sewing dainty seams;
While her faith is brooding over hopeful dreams;
While her heart is happy in a dawning love,
Deftly move her fingers for the coming dove.

Mother's feeble fingers, fluttering, slow, and mild,
O'er the tiny features of her welcome child:
Stroking cherub dimples, smoothing ruffled hair,
Tending baby treasures with unrivaled care.

Mother's busy fingers, working late and long,
Small and soft and slender, only through love strong.
Swiftly working wonders, never idly still,
Children's bread and raiment rousing parent-skill.

Mother's loving fingers, raising up the weak,
Passing, cool and gentle, o'er the fevered cheek;
Soothing sick and weary, like a touch of dew,
Lifting sinking spirits to their life anew.

Mother's pious fingers, turning o'er and o'er
All the glowing pages of our sacred lore;
Falling on the young brows, with a blessing fraught,
Mute and earnest pleading, when her God was sought.

Mother's faithful fingers stretching thro' the cloud,
Beckoning back the wanderer and the sinful bowed;
Clasping hands that Virtue scarce will touch again,
Clinging to the fallen, heedless of each stain.

Mother's tender fingers, guiding falling eyes,
Holding all the closer as the darling dies,
Lingering o'er each duty to the passive form,
Shrouding silent features from the sun and storm.

Mother's lifeless fingers, folded on her breast,
All their duty ended, laid at last to rest:
Noble work accomplished, quiet fingers cold,
Laid in peaceful silence 'mid the coffin mould.

Mother's angel fingers, waking golden strings,
Where, a holy harper, sweet her spirit sings;
Pointing out the sky-way, leading those who come;
Dear immortal fingers, in the Father's Home.

—Jessie M. Saxby.

Sabbath Evening Entertainment.

I was paying a visit to a friend who seemed to me in many respects a model in the training of children. But she complained of her want of success in interesting them in suitable Sunday occupation.

It chanced that one Sunday during my stay was so stormy that few could venture out, and by the middle of the afternoon her little flock became very restless, and in despair she applied to me to suggest something that would preserve a reverence for the day.

"Children," said I, "suppose you take your Bibles and letter-paper and pencils into the dining-room, and I will try to entertain you."

As Sunday-school lessons had been duly conned, Peter cried out, "We don't want it unless it's tip-top."

"What must we do first?" asked Murray.

"First of all take seats around the table. Then each of you in turn give the name of your favorite fruit, then we will search in the concordance for some text of Scripture relating to it, and after that we will turn to the commentary for an explanation of the subject, and talk about it.

"As Bob is the oldest ,we will begin with him. What fruit do you like best, Bob?" "I know," said Bessie. "Yes, but Bessie, you must answer in turn." "Guess you'd think it was grapes, if you had seen the way he went into them out at Uncle Charley's," said Tom. "Well, Bob, then turn to the fifth chapter of Isaiah, fourth verse, and read it aloud." "What could I have done more to my vineyard, that I have not done in it? Wherefore when I looked for it to bring forth grapes, brought it forth wild grapes," repeated Bob.

"Read what Scott says about that." "Good purposes are not enough; there must be fruit, that is a good heart and a good life—the vineyard produced wild grapes, that is things that seemed like fruit but were not."

"The prophet Isaiah," said I, "was speaking of the Jews, but what he said applies just as well to us. It is not enough to say, Oh, I mean to be good and obey my mother and keep Sunday holy, and learn my lessons and not do these things after all. We must really do them.

"Clara, you are next older, what is your favorite fruit?" "Apples," she replied. "Well, Solomon says, in Proverbs xxv: 11, 'A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures (or a net-work) of silver.' Here Solomon shows how important it is to speak properly, to say just the right thing at the right time.

"Now, Murray." "Pears," he answered quickly. "I cannot find any text about pears: but never mind, we will take up flowers next, and you shall lead."

We went on in this manner until the maid came to set the tea-table, and then I had to promise to renew the exercise in the evening. It worked so well we concluded to go on with it every Sunday evening.

After fruits and flowers were exhausted, we selected animals, birds, precious stones, etc., and I myself became acquainted with portions of Scripture I never knew before.—Am. Messenger.

Casting Down Imaginations.

Oh! if human nature were only willing to let God speak for himself, and to give him the credence which it demands for itself! But that is just what it is most reluctant to do. There was a time when, for God to speak, was for man to hear, believe and obey. And only when that time comes again to each one does the capacity to know God come with it. This poor human nature, unconscious that it is not itself, and like every other madman fancying itself perfectly sane, may thrust into a dungeon of darkness the faith which should sit on the throne within. And having thus deprived itself of the only faculty by which spiritual truth can be apprehended, it may compel its other and lower potencies to attempt the work that can be done only by faith. Will it succeed? The intellect may toil for a lifetime in fitting in a mosaic of beauty the shreds of its conjecture, or the dreams of its conceptions of things divine. But what are they after all but imaginations—images of a created image-maker. Behold the fragments of them that lie broken to dust along the highway of ages behind the advance of the Gospel of eternal truth. Every age has furnished theorists and theories, wildly contradictory to them that have preceded them. Their vast multitude is their fatal feature. How can they all be what they claim to be? If they are to be trusted, each one disproves some other. Each new cloud-ladder is set up because all before it have failed to reach the top. Aye, and so must it be forever; for they are reason undertaking the task of faith: human nature dictating to God what he shall say, instead of listening to what he does say—imaginational! Not the revelation, the manifestation of what he is, received by reverent, meek, obedient faith; but the ambitious conception of what he ought to be. What signify ten thousand such conjectures? Is he? and what is he? are questions that cover all. If he will answer these questions what can be done but listen, and believe, and thus come to know him? And when one revelation of himself in human speeches comes to men, when the one transcendent manifestation of himself appears among men, if it be really the revelation of himself, the manifestation of himself which moves with the calm but terrible steadfastness of conscious fact against hollow, fragile images, who can doubt what the result will be? or how certain the advance of the invincible gospel will be, to "cast down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God."—Dr. R. Thompson.

In the Cleft of the Rock.

A Highland mother, at the close of spring, was suddenly overtaken, in a wild glen among the mountains, by what was long recalled by her fellow villagers as 'the great May storm.' After attempting in vain for some time, with her infant in her arms, to buffet the whirling eddies, she laid the child down among heather and ferns, in the deep cleft of a rock, with the brave resolve, if possible, to make her way home through the driving sleet, and obtain succor for her little one. She was found by the anxious neighbors next morning stretched cold and stiff on a snowy shroud. But the cries of the babe directed them to the rock-crevice, where it lay, all unconscious of its danger, and from which it was rescued in safety. Many long years afterwards the child returned from distant lands a disabled soldier, covered with honorable wounds. The first Sabbath of his home-coming, on repairing to a city church (where he had the opportunity of worshipping God 'after the manner,' and in the cherished language of his forefathers), he listened to an aged clergyman unfolding, in Celtic accents, the story of redeeming love. Strange to say, that clergyman happened to be from the same Highland glen where he himself had spent his youth. Stranger still, he was illustrating the Divine tale with the anecdote, to him so familiar, of the widow and her saved child! A few days afterwards, the pastor was summoned to visit the death-bed of the old soldier. "I am the son of the widow," were the words which greeted the former, as he stood by the couch of the dying man. "Lay my bones beside hers in the churchyard among the hills. The prayers she used to offer for me have been answered. I have found deliverance in old age where I found it in my childhood—in the cleft of the Rock; but it is—the Rock of Ages!"—Macduff.

Admiral Foote.

Admiral Foote, if not a great man when judged by the highest intellectual standards, surpassed common men in some things. He surpassed them in moral force. The central element of his character was this—an immutable resolution, under a religious sense of duty, to pursue the right. The principles he had deliberately chosen he carried to sea with him and into public life, and into his intercourse with men everywhere and under all circumstances. He was an ardent believer in the Christian faith and a believer in prayer—these had been wrought into his spirit in his youth, and he sailed under that flag to the day of his death. He wrote to his wife after the capture of Fort Henry that "he had agonized in prayer for victory." Another man might have won the battle, and not have prayed for it; but he did, and he recognized the hand of God in the victory that was gained.

He may be thought to have been too radical in his ideas of reform. Some of his naval friends held this opinion, and did not scruple to tell him so. Indeed, in his early professional career he often endured contempt and persecution on this account. He was one of the instances in history of the "saints who are in Caesar's household;" or men true to their convictions of duty in circumstances of peculiar difficulty and temptation. He believed in total abstinence as the sheet-anchor of sailor character; therefore, at the East and West he fought out his temperance principles till at last—by his speeches, letters, and above all, personal example—he carried through the temperance reform in the navy and abolished spirit rations. His own crew ware noted for their sobriety and good conduct, not only on shipboard, but when they were ashore, at home, or in foreign ports. So it was with the observance of Sunday, the prohibition of profanity, and many other things that he had made up his mind about as being right; and because he believed them to be right, without much consultation with others, as far as his authority extended, he put them in practice. If reasoning would not do, he did it by command. He held to a principle to the last breath.

He was not a dry-hearted egotist, either as a Christian or an officer. He was open, cordial, confiding. He was extraordinally social in temperament whenever he was in good health and spirits; wherever he was there was hearty life and hilariousness. He was not, perhaps, a man of real humor, but he was noted for telling a "good story, appreciating a good jest, and enjoying a good laugh," and, until borne down by the burden of care, he was the best company in the world, and to the day of his death his boyish and fun-loving spirit flashed out. A genial temper, thoroughly kind, though not without a sprinkle of the salt of the rough ocean, made this hero of iron clads a delightful man in society. The little that he was permitted to have of this kind of life on shore he was thoroughly happy in; and when with his own family and in the circle of his friends, both young and old, then he was seen at the best, and his frank, loving, cheerful nature came out to great advantage. His intercourse with the world, and with those of the highest position in all parts of the globe, had given his manners great ease and polish.—Hoppin.

Value of Time.

He who every morning plans the transactions of the day, and follows out that plan, carries a thread which will guide him through the most busy life; the orderly arrangement of his time is like a ray of light, which darts itself through all his affairs. But where no plan is laid—where the disposal of time is surrendered merely to the chance of incidents—all things lie huddled in one chaos, which admits neither distribution nor review.

The first requisite for introducing order in the management of time, is to be impressed with a just sense of its value. Let us consider well how much depends upon it, and how fast it flies away. The bulk of men are in nothing more capricious and when they think of it as the measure of their continuance on earth; they highly prize it, and with the greatest anxiety seek to lengthen it out, but when they review it in separate parcels, they appear to hold it in contempt, and squander it with inconsiderate profusion, at the same time complaining that "life is short."

Among those who are so careless of time, we cannot expect to find order much observed in its distribution; and, by such fatal neglect, how many materials for severe and lasting regret are they laying up in store for themselves! The time which is suffered to pass away in the midst of confusion, bitter repentance seeks in vain to recall. What was ommitted to be done at the proper moment, arises to be the torment of some future season. Manhood is disgraced by a neglect of youth. Old age oppressed by cares that belong to a former period, labors under a burden not its own. At the close of life the dying man beholds with anguish that his days are finished, when his preparation for eternity has hardly commenced. Such are the effects of a disorderly waste of time.—Phrenological Journal.

Give Your Child a Paper.—A child beginning to read becomes delighted with a newspaper, because he reads of names and things which are familiar, and he will progress accordingly. A newspaper in one year is worth a quarter's schooling to a child. Every father must consider that information is connected with advancement. The mother of a family, being one of its heads and having a more immediate charge of children, should herself be instructed. A mind occupied becomes fortified against the ills of life and is braced for emergency. Children amused by reading or study, are, of course, more considerate and easily governed. How many thoughtless young men have spent their earnings in a tavern or grogshop who ought to have been reading! How many parents who have spent twenty dollars for books for their families, would have given a thousand to reclaim a son or daughter who had ignorantly, thoughtlessly, fallen into temptation.

A Century Ago.

Events were crowding one another a century ago, and we passed on the 26th of February the hundredth anniversary of the first actual resistance to British arms. This took place at Salem, Mass., the 26th of February falling for that year on Sunday. Information had reached General Gage at Boston that some munitions of war were stored at Salem, and he sent a detachment of the 74th Foot, under Col. Leslie, to capture them if possible. Almost every soul in town was at church, but the movement of troops was discovered, and the parson probably cut short the services. At all events, the congregation, with the parson at its head, was promptly on hand at a certain draw-bridge which afforded the only approach to the town. The draw was raised, and when the soldiers attempted to appropriate two scows that lay near by, the owners and bystanders scuttled them, at the cost of a scuffle during which some slight bayonet wounds were received. Both parties were anxious not to transgress the law, and as the bridge was private property, not a public highway, Col. Leslie was at a loss how to proceed without actual violence. He compromised, however, by pledging his word to march only thirty yards beyond the bridge, thus obeying the letter of his instructions as to entering the town of Salem. Meanwhile the stores had been removed to a place of safety, so that the Salemites did not care whether the British Colonel broke his word or no. He kept his promise, marched over the bridge and back, and departed for Boston with the honors of war. Meanwhile the country was aroused, and by Monday morning some thousands of men were under arms, in the belief that hostilities were about to begin.—Ex.

Four, Five, Six, Seven, Eight,—yes, eight prayers of sufficient length might have been offered while there were only two! One of the greatest temptations of prayer-meetings, is long prayers and exhortations. Says the Religious Telescope: "Who has not been severely tired by them? Who has not groaned under them? Who has not become nervous, and fidgety, and lost the spirit of prayer, on account of them?"

When will professing Christians learn charity or even good common sense? When these long-winded praying ones have prayed all over the world and back again two or three times, generalized and generalized, some ten or fifteen minutes, till the bones and sinews of every one fairly ache, and perspiration flows freely from every pore, the good brother on his knees winds up by saying (as a plea for his brevity): "We are not heard for our much speaking."

D. F. N.

Children's Corner.

How a Beggar Boy Grew.

A New York merchant who is a Sunday-school teacher, was called upon for a speech, at a great Sunday-school meeting out in the West. He said:

"I'll tell you a little story of a beggar boy. I started out one fine Sunday morning, to get up some recruits for my class. At the corner of the street I met a barefooted boy, without hat or coat. His hair was fiery red, and looked as if it had never been combed. I asked the boy if he would come to school.

"'No, sir,' was his sharp reply.

"'You ought to go to Sunday-school,' I said kindly.

"'What for?' he asked.

"'We teach boys to be good,' I said.

"'But I don't want to be good,' he said.

"'Why not want to be good?' I asked earnestly.

"'Because I am hungry,' was his quick reply.

"'It is now nine o'clock,' I said, looking at my watch. 'Haven't you had any breakfast yet?'

"'No, sir.'

"'Where do you live?"

"'Up the alley there with aunty. She's sick.'

"'Will you eat some gingerbread and crackers if I go to the bakery and buy some?'

"'Yes, sir, that I will and be glad to get 'em.'

"I bought a lot and set them before him. He ate them in a way which showed how keenly hungry he was. I asked him if he would like some more.

"'A little more, if you please sir,' said the boy.

"I got a fresh supply and set them before him. I waited till he had done eating. Then I said, 'My boy, will you go with me to school now?'

"'You have been so kind to me sir,' said he, 'I'll go anywhere with you. Please wait till I take what's left of the gingerbread round to aunty, and then I'll go with you.'

"He returned directly to the sidewalk where I was waiting for him, and went with me to school. He had never been to school before. He thought of school as a place where boys had to hold out their hands to be slapped with a ruler, and have their hair pulled, and their ears pinched. But when he found himself in the hands of a pleasant-looking young lady, who treated him kindly, and said nothing about his shabby clothes, he was greatly surprised.

"He became a regular attendant. He told all the boys of his acquaintance about the school, and persuaded many of them to attend. About two years after this, a lot of boys from New York were sent out West, and distributed among the farmers. My red-haired boy was sent among them. I used to hear of him for a while that he was getting on and doing well. I have lost sight of him for years now, but I have no doubt he is doing good wherever he is." The gentleman then said a few words about the importance of getting the poor and neglected children of our large cities into Sunday school, and then sat down.

In a moment, a tall, good-looking gentleman, with red hair, stood up in the meeting, and said:

"Ladies and Gentlemen: I am the red-haired beggar boy, of New York, who ate that gentleman's gingerbread. I have lived in the West for years, and been prospered. I am now a rich man. I own five hundred acres of as good land as the sun shines on. My horses and carriage are at the door, and when the meeting is over, I shall be happy to take my old friend to my home where he will be welcome to stay as long as he pleases. I am a member of church, and the superintendent of a Sabbath-school, and I owe all that I have in this world, and all that I hope for in the next, to what was taught me about Jesus in the Sabbath-school."

Now the growth of a great oak tree from a little acorn is not at all more wonderful than the change which took place when that little, hungry, ignorant beggar boy, was turned into that intelligent, Christian gentleman. And yet it was all brought about by the light which Jesus gives.—S. S. World.

Anything for that Squirrel.

Before I left Illinois I was crossing the prairie between Richmond timber and Virginia, the county seat then of Cass county, Illinois. I saw and caught a beautiful prairie ground squirrel, and placed it in my coat pocket.

When I arrived at the public well in the town, from which I wished a drink, there were three well-dressed boys, about twelve years old, each of a separate family, who saluted me very respectfully. I told them that I had a beautiful pet, which I would give to the one who should give me the best answer to such questions as I should ask him. Said I to one of them:

"What are you, Whig or Democrat?"

His reply was, "I—I am—a Whig," loth was he to speak, as he did not know my politics. To the next one I propounded the same question. Said he:

"Sir, I am a Democrat, and so are all my folks; and I intend to be one always, whether I get the squirrel or not."

Of the third boy I asked the same question.

Said he: "Sir, I am just anything you want me to be, or that you are, if you will give me that squirrel."

To the first boy I said: "Let me advise you to be firm in whatever course of life you pursue, if right and proper. Never swerve from the right for squirrel, or office, or fame. Your answer to me was hesitating, and therefore, I cannot award you the squirrel.

To the second I said: "I am well pleased with your answer. You are firm in what you are, believing it to be right."

To the third boy I said: "I fear that all through your life you will be anything for the squirrel. Alas! there are so many men now who act upon the same principle. In politics, religion, law, and in all pursuits, with them the squirrel is the grand object. Now be advised by me, 'Be sure you are right, then go ahead,' as Davy Crockett advised."

I then brought forth the squirrel, and handed it to the Democrat boy, telling him that I was a Whig.—Christian Weekly.

EXPOSITION

—:OF:—

THE GRANGE.

—‡o‡—

Illustrated with Engravings, showing the Lodge Room,

Signals, Grips, etc.

EDITED BY REV. A. W. GEESLIN.

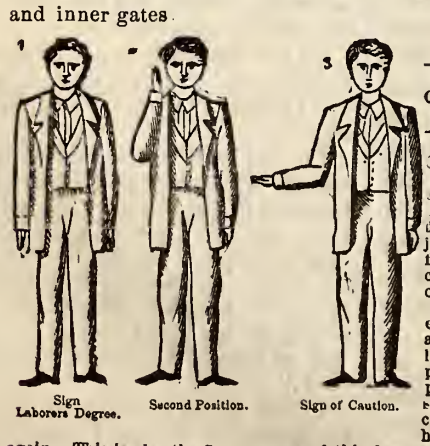
—:o:—

Entered according to Act of Congress in the year 1875
BY EZRA A. COOK & CO.,
In the office of the Librarian of Congress at Washington, D. C.

—:o:—

LABORERS DEGREE CONTINUED.

Steward to Candidates:—I must call your attention to the animals that, as a laborer, will come under your charge. The domestic animals are committed to our keeping by the Great Author of our being. We are ever dependent upon the brute creation; without them man could never have risen from barbarism to civilization. Practice mercy and compassion toward them. Never overwork or overload them; guard against haste in reprimanding. Treat them with kindness and affection, and they will learn to love you. It is one of the principles of our order to protect the dumb animals from abuse and any member who countenances their ill-treatment is liable to censure and expulsion.



Assistant Steward to Candidates:—I will now introduce you to our worthy Chaplain.

Chaplain to Candidates:—Worthy brothers, agriculture is the first and most noble of all occupations. It is the only one of divine origin. God planted the Garden of Eden, and placed man therein to keep it. He caused to spring forth out of the ground every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and bearing fruit good for food. It was a command of the Almighty that man should till the ground. History proves that where agriculture has been fostered by a people, that nation has prospered and reached a high degree of perfection; but where it has been neglected, degeneracy began. Let us heed the warning and escape the doom.

Assistant Steward to Candidates:—Brothers, that you may receive the implements of labor I will now conduct you to our Master.

Worthy Master, our brothers are prepared to receive the tools of laborers.

Master to Candidates:—I will now call your attention to the implements of this degree, the Axe, Plow, Harrow, and Spade. The Axe is used by us to cut away obstructions in the fields and prepare timber for use. Its use is emblematical of perseverance in overcoming obstacles, for, as by repeated blows it cleaves its way through the strongest wood, so should we by repeated trials be able to surmount every difficulty. The plow is used by us to break up the ground and prepare it for planting; and this should teach us to diligently drive the plowshare of thought through the heavy clods of ignorance, and thus prepare the mind for the seeds of knowledge and wisdom. The harrow is also an implement used by us to pulverize the soil as well as to cover the seed. Let this be emblematical of that course of study and observation necessary to enable you to fully understand your business, and also that thorough training which all must undergo who would become prepared to have the lessons of experience and wisdom firmly implanted in their minds. The spade we use when we wish to go deeper in the soil than can easily be penetrated by the plow, and as by its use we drain our land of surplus water, admitting the air and warmth to permeate and quicken the hitherto cold and unproductive soil; so may the knowledge you acquire through your connection with this order be the means of divesting your mind of ignorance, and imbue it with the spirit of philosophical investigation and research; ever remembering that in the members of this fraternity you have cordial co-workers and ardent sympathizers. I will now give you the sign of a laborer. Master instructs the candidates in the signals at the outer and inner gates.

Sign Laborers Degree. Second Position. Sign of Caution.

SIGNAL AT OUTER GATE:—Three Raps.

PASSWORD AT OUTER GATE:—Adam.

SIGNAL AT INNER GATE:—Two Raps.

PASSWORD AT INNER GATE: Laborer.

SIGN OF FIRST OR LABORER DEGREE: Pass thumb of right hand forward of fingers till it touches at junction of third and fourth fingers with hand, thus concealing it in the palm of the hand.

SECOND POSITION: Bend elbow, bringing the forearm up till hand is on a line with the face, fingers pointing straight upward, palm of hand toward the shoulder, thumb still concealed in hand; then let hand fall quickly to side again. This is also the SALUTATION of this degree. The sign of caution is now given.

SIGN OF CAUTION: Standing erect, as in giving sign of degree, conceal thumb in palm of right hand, throw palm outward from the body.

Sign of Caution, Second Position.

SECOND POSITION: Bring arm over shoulder till the ends of the fingers nearly touch shoulder under right ear; let hand fall quickly to the side.

PATRONS' GENERAL SIGN: *Bring left forearm horizontally across the body, closing the hand on the left lapel of coat or other garment you may have on, with the thumb pointing straight upward. The sign of this deg. signifies that "a good laborer places faith in God."

Patrons' General Sign.

*To illustrate: Suppose that A. and B. meet. A. throws out the sign to B., B. answers it [by giving the same sign] and then approaches A, and says, "Are you looking for a Patron?" A. answers, "For a Patron." They then shake hands.

Master to Candidates:—You are now laborers in the first degree of our honorable order. Our Worthy Patronesses, Ceres, Pomona and Flora, will furnish you with advice essential to aid you in your duties.

Assistant Steward to Candidates:—I now present you to our worthy Patroness Ceres.

Ceres to Candidates:—As laborers you will require food for sustenance; take of this corn, but save a portion of the fairest for seed. Let it also be your duty, as far as it is in your power, to assist your companions in securing an abundance of seed for their lands and at the proper season. Let me counsel you also to be active laborers. The enlivening influence of Spring extends to all creation; the Spring grows brighter in color as it feels the genial warmth of the morning sun. The winged songsters joyfully resound their artless notes, and all nature is alive. The husbandman, at this season, must be earnest in his labors, knowing full well that if he fails to sow he cannot reap; and while he is occupied in the hopeful work of seeding his lands, may he never lose sight of preparation for that great harvest-field in which he will sooner or later be garnered.

Assistant Steward to Candidates:—I now present you to Flora.

Flora to Candidates:—To me belongs the forest, its fruits, and its garlands of flowers. Remember that trees are needed for shelter, shade, and ornament; spare the trees and shrubs that are needed to lend fragrance to the breeze and beauty to the landscape, while they interfere not with man's wants and pleasures. Save enough of those to shelter house, orchard, and field from blasting winds, and give comfort to the overheated and weary; by so doing even the quadrupeds who aid, and the feathered tribes which cheer your labors will call for blessings on your head.

Assistant Steward to Candidates:—I next present you to Pomona.

Pomona to Candidates:—That you may have refreshment while laborers take of this fruit. Fine fruits are the flowers of commodities; they are blessings designed to please the eye and gratify the taste, multiply our comforts and elevate our social and moral condition. The culture of fruits indicates refinement. Their use as food tends to a healthy and refined temperament both of body and mind, and should be esteemed as necessaries rather than luxuries. It is therefore our duty to develop and increase these bounties to their utmost extent.

Assistant Steward to Master:—Worthy Master, our brothers are now ready for labor in the field.

Master to Candidates:—I now greet you as Worthy Laborers, and charge you always to keep in remembrance the pledge you have given, and let your future conduct be regulated by the precepts of wisdom and virtue.

Master to Assistant Steward:—Worthy Assistant Steward, you will please introduce our brothers to their fellow laborers.

MAID, OR FIRST DEGREE FOR LADIES.

(The Ladies receive the same signs in all their ceremonies as are given to men.)

Candidates sign the roll-book, properly robed and blindfolded in preparation room. The Lady Assistant Steward now signals at the door.

Steward:—Who comes?

Lady Assistant Steward to Steward:—Those who desire to assist us in our work.

Steward to Lady Assistant Steward:—Please tarry while I inform our worthy Overseer.

Steward to Overseer:—Worthy Overseer, there are strangers at the gate seeking admittance.

Overseer to Steward:—Satisfy yourself that they are worthy and if so admit them.

The Steward opens the door and says, "None but those worthy and well qualified can enter here; do you vouch for your companions.

Lady Assistant Steward to Steward:—I do.

Steward:—Enter, then, and pass to our worthy Overseer.

Lady Assistant Steward enters with candidates. They pass once around, stopping at Overseer.

As candidates enter the following song is sung.

SONG.

"Welcome, sisters to our Order;
We shall need your help and care,
In the harvest and the vintage
You shall have a rightful share.
Welcome, welcome, welcome, welcome,
Heaven bless you, is our prayer
Welcome, welcome, welcome, welcome,
Heaven bless you is our prayer."

Lady Assistant Steward to Overseer:—Worthy Overseer, I present friends who desire to be initiated into the mysteries of our order.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Miscellaneous.

—George DeBaptiste, colored, famous in the ante-bellum days as conductor on the underground railroad, died in Detroit, Feb. 22d., aged 64 years. He was steward of the White House in 1841, and President Harrison died in his arms.

—In Italy seventeen millions out of a population of twenty-four millions, are unable to read or write.

—The Japanese have paper which is water-proof, and of which garments, handkerchiefs, hats, umbrellas and purses are made, and also paper warranted to wash, and of sufficient strength and pliability for any use.

—The Department of Agriculture has made a statement of the extent of the injuries inflicted by the grasshoppers in the West. The area of the section visited is from 200 to 225 miles wide, extending from southern Dakota, through Nebraska and Kansas, 500 miles in length. The extent of territory visited exceeds 100,000 square miles. The approximate population of the districts desolated is about 750,000, The cases of total and partial destruction to crops in thirty counties in Kansas are over 40,000, and in the entire State 50,000. The number of people more or less severely affected by the pest in all the devastated region is from 75,000 to 100,000.

—The discovery of frozen ground at a considerable depth in a Colorado silver mine affords a new problem for geologists. The mine is located high up on McClellan mountain at an altitude of over 12,000 feet. The miners were tunnelling into the side of the mountain, and had attained a distance of about ninety feet without encountering any unusual obstacles, when they were astonished to find the ground before them solidly frozen. Through this frozen area they have already tunnelled to the distance of more than two hundred feet, and it is probable the frost extends much farther. There appears to be no crevice or channel through which the frost could enter from above, and it is altogether impossible that the cold of our present winters could have penetrated to such a depth. How, then, did the frost get there? is the puzzle. One solution that has been suggested is that it was frozen during the intense cold of the glacial period. The fact that numerous evidences of glacial action are found on the mountain and in the vicininty, give some plausibility to this theory.

Religious Intelligence.

—From fifteen to twenty of the middle class in Yale Seminary are expecting to spend the summer vacation, four months, in preaching on the frontier, probably in Kansas.

—It is said that every student in the Baptist Female College in Lexington, Mo. has professed conversion.

—Bishop Janes has dedicated more than one hundred Methodist Episcopal churches in the State of New Jersey.

—The New York Advocate says: "There are in the United States about fifty missionary associations, whose annual receipts and expenditures amount to $6,000,000. Of this, the Episcopal and Congregational churches each contribute about $300,000; the Presbyterian, $500,000; and the Methodist Episcopal about $700,000.

—From reports of the Methodist Episcopal Book Concern it appears that the New York Christian Advocate has a circulation of 50,000; the Western of Cincinnati over 20,000; the Northwestern of Chicago over 17,000; while the Methodist Advocate of Atlanta, Ga., one of the best and most loyal of the whole family and the only member in the South, has less than 4,000. The Sabbath-school paper issues 276,000, and 956,000 copies of the Berean lesson leaves are called for. The missionary Journal has some 104,000 circulation.

—This is how the Washington Street Baptist Church of Lynn, Mass., settled the pew rent question, according to a correspondent of the Watchman and Reflector: "When we came together to consider the best interests of the church, we determined that it should never be shut to any of God's people who might desire to worship here. The plan of free seats was discussed. Many objections to this appeared. We then thought of making each alternate pew free. This, too, was rejected. The thought of placing a mere nominal price on the pews, and raising the balance needed for the support of worship by subscriptions, did not meet approval. Finally, we united on this plan. We place no price on the seats. To any one desiring to worship with us, we say, select any unoccupied pew in the house which pleases you, then decide how much you feel able and think it your duty to pay for the support of worship, and that shall be your rent. Thus the one to whom God has given ability to pay $100, and he whose restricted means allow him to pay but $1, sit together as neighbors, and none save the collecter knows the poor from the rich. As God's treasures, we propose to accept 'according to that a man hath and not according to that he hath not.' Every man's self-respect is regarded, and all meet together as equals, in God's house. We claim that this is a true Gospel plan for the support of public worship, and we believe that this our Master's house none too good or too elegant in which to illustrate it"

—A writer in the Occident makes some curious calculations about the giving power of the Presbyterian church. He comes to the conclusion that $500 a year is within the average income of each church member, which upon a membership of say 500,000 makes the total annual income $250,000,000. One-tenth of this would be $25,000,000 annually; the contributions actually given average about $9,000,000 or a little over four per cent. He adds: "Comparing ourselves with other denominations, we doubtless have done well. But comparing our work with God's bestowment of this world's good upon us, have we not reason to be humbled before him? And may we not hear the voice of his providence, and his grace, saying, 'Speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward?'"

—The Indiana Conference Ministerial Association of the Wesleyan church holds its first session at Fairview, June 1st. Bro. A. J. Hiatt, a seceding Mason, is secretary, and a number of active men in the anti-lodge reform take part in the meeting, among them are the following: J. T. Horne, discusses the nature and tendency of secrecy; J. T. Kiggins, duty of the church with relation to secrecy.

—The Wesleyan church, A. F. Dempsey, pastor, in Seneca Falls, New York, where the State Association was held a year ago, is enjoying a revival season.

—A powerful revival is reported in Delhi, New York, in which 150 persons have been converted, many of them prominent business and professional men.

—The membership of the Presbyterian church at Georgetown, Ill., has increased during the last two months from ten members to sixty-three.

—One of the churches of Farmington, Maine, has adopted what is called the Bible service in place of Sabbath forenoon preaching service. Its nucleus is the Sunday-school. It embraces: 1. Devotional exercises conducted mainly by the pastor. 2. Study of a uniform portion of the Word of God in classes under eighteen teachers including the pastor. 3. A short unwritten sermon or address by the pastor, summing up the lesson and applying its main spiritual truths. So successfully has this plan worked that in four years the church membership has increased from 199 to 408, and ninety per cent. of those present at the Bible exercises regularly attend the preaching service in the afternoon. This new system has had the effect of encouraging the Sunday-school teachers and making the young people feel nearer their pastor; and it brings the congregation into closer fellowship with each other. The pastor thinks so much of the value of the change in the services that he says: "If I could have but one service each Sunday for building up a people into Christian manhood, I am not certain but I should prefer fifteen minutes preaching upon a theme which all had been studying, to twenty-five or thirty minutes preaching without that advantage."

News of the Week.

General.

Brigham Young, having refused to pay the $3,025 required by the late suit of Ann Eliza, was sentenced to prison for twenty-four hours for contempt of court. That the law is thus able to assert itself in Salt Lake City over the "Prophet" once so powerful, shows the low ebb to which Mormonism has been brought.——Vasquez, one of the most noted desperadoes of modern times was hung at San Francisco on Friday last. His deeds of violence commenced in 1854 and most of the time since he has led a robber band and spread terror through several counties in California.——The Austin Powder mills, located near Cleveland blew up last Tuesday. The works, ten or twelve buildings were completely demolished. There were eight or ten men at work in and about the mills at the time of the explosion, three of whom were killed, the others escaping with a few slight bruises. The two magazines, in which is stored a large quantity of powder, did not explode. In Cleveland the effect was very destructive to plate glass. Scarcely a window is left upon Broadway and the adjacent streets south of the market. The sensation at a distance of five miles was similar to that of a severe shock of earthquake.

Flood and Storm.

The Susquehanna river, from Port Deposit at its mouth to Pittston and Scranton in north-east Pennsylvania, was filled with ice gorges last week, and poured its floods over railroads, cities and bridges. At Port Deposit the water on the 19th was from 5 to 15 feet deep in the streets. The whole town was flooded as never before known. At Marietta, Pa., ice was piled in the streets and on the railroad track from 10 to 40 feet high. There has been great destruction of property at these places, and at Wilkesbarre, Bainbridge, Middletown and Columbia. No lives were reported lost.

Foreign.

—A Berlin dispatch says that the German government, in order to check the emigration to the United States, proposes to set apart certain portions of the Crown lands, to be broken up in small lots, in order that the poorer classes (from which the emigrants are chiefly drawn) may have the privilege of purchasing and holding homesteads within their means, in their own country.

—In the Lower House of the Prussian Diet last week, debate was opened on the first reading of the new Ecclesiastical bill which receives greater importance from the late encyclical of the Pope granting special privileges to Catholics under Austrian law, but requiring disobedience on the part of Prussian Catholics to the laws of that State. Dr. Falk, Minister of Public Worship, in a speech explaining the necessity for fresh legislation on the relations of the State with the church, dwelt especially on the fact that the Pope had authorized the Austrian Bishops to obey laws similar to those which he denounced in Prussia. Prince Bismarck made a powerful speech for the bill. He said the maxim that more obedience was due to God than to man certainly did not mean that more obedience was due to a Pope, misguided by Jesuits, than to the King. The Government was doing its duty in protecting German freedom of mind against Rome. On the 18th the main clauses of this bill withdrawing State grants from Roman Catholic bishops were passed by an overwhelming majority.

—The attendance and enthusiasm of the revival meetings of Moody and Sankey continues. A London dispatch says under date of March 19—5:30 a. m.—"There was much confusion at the revival meeting in Agricultural Hall last night. The crowd was so great that order could not be preserved. The pressure was tremenduous. People were badly crushed, and there was some fighting. The Times this morning favorably reviews the mission of Moody and Sankey."

A HISTORY OF THE REFORM AGAINST SECRET SOCIETIES.

Reasons for Sustaining the Christian "Cynosure."

[Published in the Religious Telescope, Feb., 1875.]

MESSRS. EDITORS:—I see, in a recent number of the Telescope, some objections to our encouraging the circulation of the Christian Cynosure. It seems to me those objections are very objectionable, 1st, because it is one of the best weeklies in this country; 2d, it is strictly in accordance with our book of discipline; 3d, it is a great assistant in the great and terrible war with secret, oath-bound societies. It goes before, clearing the way, and does much hard work for us that we may the more easily and successfully extend our lines and build up Christian societies at home and abroad. There are many of our ministers and members who read the Cynosure, and who say they could not get along without it. In many places, under various circumstances, it works side by side with the Telescope in all the reforms of the day in church and state. Furthermore, what the Cynosure is doing for us as a church it is doing for sister churches which exclude members of secret societies, and, under God, assists in renovating churches corrupted by the dark orders.

Again: we cannot fail to give the Chistian Cynosure a high recommendation if we contemplate the class of persons who patronize it and work in the cause it represents. They are found among the humble, devoted, self-sacrificing, earnest Christian workers of all evangelical denominations, many of whom are learned, refined and intellectual, possessing warm hearts and clear minds, occupying, as they do in many instances, high positions in church and state. With modest pride we might refer to the class of men now in the lecture-field. Suffice it to say that the national agent and lecturer, in the person of REV. J. P. STODDARD, is a worthy and able minister in the Congregational church. When called into this wide field the society, which he served as minister and pastor eleven executive years, refused to allow him to relinquish the pastorate. Seeing that he must go, they employed another minister to serve them as such for the time being.

Mr. Stoddard as national agent and lecturer, has discharged the functions of his high office to the acceptance of the Executive Committee and with good success. He is very careful in his selections of men to be employed as State agents and lecturers. In this critical and important duty he has acted wisely and without blunder. His corps of chosen men now in the lecture-field were men of position, and, so far as I known, in the enjoyment of pleasant home circles. They have allowed themselves to be called to the front to be sent out as sheep among wolves, to brook the terrible element of Masonic vengeance. These men have proved themselves trustworthy, have rendered good service, and have been successful. The good cause in their hands, under God, has prospered beyond our most sanguine expectations.

This band of noble men are staunch friends of the Cynosure. We can refer, also, to our bishops. At least three of them are good Cynosure men and successful laborers in its cause. Bishop Edwards, a day or two after he reached Baltimore with his family to set up housekeeping in his new home, informed me that as soon as he got his household affairs set to rights he had to start to meet his appointments. He had six conferences to attend in as many weeks, and one lecture on secrecy to deliver after each conference appointment. Since that time he has been across the continent, and of course he has not forgotten the Cynosure and its good cause. Bishop Weaver has engaged to lecture in California, on secretism, when he gets here. We may rest assured that he will weave a web for the Californians that will never wear out. I am glad to see Bishop Dickson, in the Cynosure, recommending and urging the immediate prosecution of a great enterprise which the Executive Committee have in contemplation in Chicago. I have referred to these great and good men as specimens of scores and hundreds of others who are in sympathy with the Cynosure and the good cause it represents.

I beg leave to give one more reference. PRESIDENT BLANCHARD of Wheaton College bought the United Brethren Church History, read it through, gave it a high recommendation, and advised others to do the same. He holds our church, its discipline, and the Telescope in high esteem. He is editor of the Christian Cynosure, and is one of our best friends. I know we need the sympathy of such men in this our day of trial.

Now, I ask shall we turn the cold shoulder to such friends? In our present course we have a host of such friends. If we discountenance the Cynosure we will wound them all and do ourselves the greatest possible injury and our enemies a great pleasure but a great injury also.

Now suppose we should never speak a good word for the Christian Cynosure, or any other paper, or take any other paper published outside of our own publishing house. We would follow the example of the Masons and all other selfish sinners. I remember of reading: "He that watereth shall be also watered himself;" "Let not every man look on his own things, but also on the things of others." It is patent to every Christian that to bless others is to bless ourselves. We must do good to our enemies; and why not to our best friends, such as the Christian Cynosure and others of the same kind? There is a goodly number of our brethren who take the Cynosure, but there are thousands who do not. It is mainly for their sakes that the above is written. I have tried to represent it correctly to them. For that purpose I have referred to the class and character of men who patronize and work for it and the cause it represents. It is conducted by men of extensive experience and information, learned, intelligent, pious, devoted, self-sacrificing Christians. The Christian Cynosure has passed through flood and flames,—once drowned, twice burnt. Still it lives, and may it live on to proclaim those truths and principles that shall live when sin is all destroyed.

Now, among the one hundred and forty thousand members of the United Brethren church, can there not be at least one thousand new subscribers raised for the Christian Cynosure? But be sure to take your church paper, the Religious Telescope, first; then, if you have $2 20 left, send to Ezra A. Cook & Co., publishers, No. 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill., for the Christian Cynosure.

JOHN MILLER.

Wauseon, Ohio.

Home and Health Hints.

THE DANGERS OF FOUL CELLARS.—Nearly all farmers and villages keep through the winter a stock of fruit and vegetables in the cellar. As spring comes on they decay rapidly, and they are unusually thrifty housekeepers who extend their house-cleaning below the kitchen floor. Very seldom, indeed, is the cellar sufficiently ventilated, and the results need no description. The apartment which should be sweet and clean smells offensively, and loads the atmosphere of the whole house with poisonous effluvia. In selecting a summer home, therefore, take your eyes and nose at once into the cellar. The worst evils here are generally easily remedied, and the most ignorant householder will appreciate the change which a single day's labor will accomplish.

LACK OF GOOD GUTTERS.—See that the eaves of the house are provided with gutters. Many farm-houses are not, and the frequent dripping from them so close to the walls keeps the latter soaked in moisture. If there be gutters they are not unfrequently choked with debris. Then they overflow and drench the walls from above. One cannot have been a frequent visitor in the country without having become disagreeably conscious of the chill which especially prevades that portion of the house not in ordinary use, but is felt as well in any part which is carefully shut in from the sun and wind. The heated air which will escape in is, of course, overladen with moisture, and as it cools deposits the excess on every object.

BAD WELLS.—Repulsive as are rotten cellars and damp walls, impure water is one of the worst, as it is one of the most irremediable sources of disease in rural districts. Too often "the old oaken bucket" overflows with poisonous germs. We do not exaggerate when we say that not one country well in five hundred is located at a sufficient distance from filthy surroundings. They derive their supply of water from a variable distance, depending on the character of the soil, but never should they be less than fifty feet from any possible source of impurity. Generally, however, they are placed, for convenience sake, beside the kitchen door. Here are thrown slops from the kitchen, if nothing worse. Too near are the barn-yard, and other sources of pollution which need not be named, and through all these are leached the contents of the "old oaken bucket that hangs in the well." Careful filtration through charcoal will remove some of these impurities, and, with greater care regarding the refuse do as much as can be done from the kitchen to remedy possible and probable evils from this source.

To Clean Paint.

Save the tea leaves for a few days, then steep them in a tin pail or pan for half an hour, strain through a sieve and use the tea to wash all varnished paint. It requires very little "elbow polish," as the tea acts as a strong detergent, cleaning the paint from all its impurities, and making the varnish equal to new. It cleans window sashes and oilcloths; indeed, any varnished surface is improved by application. It washes window panes and mirrors much better than water, and is excellent for cleaning black walnut picture and looking-glass frames. It will not do to wash unvarnished paint with it. Whiting is unequaled for cleaning white paint. Take a small quantity on a damp flannel, rub lightly over the surface and you will be surprised at its effects.

Farm and Garden.

Get Ready for Spring.

The time for preparing for the spring campaign is at hand. Next to having good teams is having good harness for them to work in. Good snug-fitting collars are wanted for the horses. Don't buy cheap collars. Those rightly made of the best material, are far the cheapest in the long run. Indeed cheap things are nearly always dear. Strong harness, made of the best leather, so they will not break, and an extra harness or two, in case of a break, is a good thing to have on hand.

The plows and harrows of the best pattern should now be provided. If the share or coulters or teeth need sharpening, now is the time to have the work done. If old trees or brush or trash need removing from the fields that are to be plowed, now is the time to do the work. If an abundant supply of fire-wood is provided, for all the spring and summer, and cut up to the proper length for the stove, and piled snugly under shelter, now is the time to do the work. Tired men from the plow and harvest field are in no humor to cut wood. This is the season to do that work, so that it shall not interfere with the work of the summer, or sour the temper of the good wife, who has to fret and scold to get firewood to cook their victuals.

The garden seeds and field seeds should be obtained so as to be on hand when needed. Everything should be in repair. An extra coat of paint on the wagons, plows, &c., will do them good, and make them last the longer. A plan must be laid for the coming campaign. The farmer should determine how many acres to be put into grain and grasses. He should determine to what purpose each field should be devoted. If he has not the best breeding stock, now is the time to make inquiries or visits for the purpose of securing it. It is the best stock that pays best, as it is the best fields, the best culture, the best machinery, that gives the most profit in the long run.

WHITEWASH FOR OUT-DOOR WORK—Slack half a bushel of lime in boiling water, keeping it covered during the process. Then strain it and add a peck of salt previously dissolved in warm water. Then add three pounds ground rice that has been put into boiling water and boiled to a thin paste, half a pound Spanish whiting, and a pound of clear glue dissolved in warm water. Mix all well together, and let the mixture stand for several days. Keep this wash ready in a kettle, and when used put it on hot as possible with paint or whitewash brushes.

ANTI-MASONIC BOOKS,

(Not our own Publications.)

For Sale by EZRA A. COOK & CO

13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

[FOR CATALOGUE OF PUBLICATIONS OF EZRA A. COOK & CO., See page 15.]

All books sent post paid, on receipt of retail price, but BOOKS SENT BY MAIL ARE NOT AT OUR RISK.

Books ordered by express are sold at 10 per cent. discount and SENT AT OUR RISK. Party ordering must pay express charges.

Elder Stearns' Books.

Stearns' Inquiry Into the Nature and Tendency of Masonry

With an Appendix.

SEVENTH EDITION.

338 Pages, in Cloth.....60 cents.
" " " Paper.....40 "

Stearns' Letters on Masonry.

Showing the antagonism between Freemasonry and the Christian Religion.
Price, 30 cents.

Stearns' Review of Two Masonic Addresses.

In this scathing review the lying pretentions of the order are clearly shown.
Price, 10 cents.

Levington's Key to Masonry.

This is Rev. Mr. Levington's last, and in the judgment of its author, best work on Masonry. The contents of the first chapter are as follows:

"Commencement and growth of Speculative or Symbolic Freemasonry—A table showing the thing at a glance—The use that the Atheists made of it—Identical with Illuminism—Its connection with the French Revolution, and with the Irish Rebellion—The action of the British Parliament with regard to it—Proofs of its diabolical purposes—Its Introduction, doings, progress and designs in the United States."

The contents of the Eleventh chapter are thus startling:

"Knights of the Golden Circle—Graphic account of them by a seceding Knight, and remarks thereon, showing the identity of the order with Masonry—Quotations from Sir Walter Scott."

This work is thrilling in statement, and powerful in argument. 425 pages,
Price, $1.35.

Light on Freemasonry,

BY ELDER D. BERNARD,

TO WHICH IS APPENDED A

Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship by a Member of the Craft.

The whole containing over five hundred pages lately revised and republished. Price $2.00

The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages in paper cover, will be sent post paid on receipt of $1.

MASONRY A WORK OF DARKNESS

ADVERSE TO CHRISTIANITY,

And Inimical to a Republican Government
BY REV. LEBBEUS ARMSTRONG,
(Presbyterian.)

A Seceding Mason of 21 degrees.

This is a very telling work and no honest man that reads it will think of joining the lodge.
PRICE, 20 cents each; $1.75 per doz., post paid

Walsh's Review of Freemasonry

REVISED EDITION,

Is a Scholarly Review of the Institution, by REV JNO. T. WALSH.

Price 25 cts.

Finney on Masonry.

BOUND IN CLOTH, PRICE $1.00.

CHEAP EDITION,

Twenty-five dollars per hundred, by express and not less than 25 copies at that rate.

BY MAIL, POST-PAID:

Per doz.....$3 75.
Single copy,..... 35 c.

THIRTEEN REASONS
Why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

BY

REV. ROBERT ARMSTRONG.

The author states his reason clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the Lodge.

Single copy, by mail post paid..... 05
Per doz., " " 50
" 100, express charges extra,.....3 50

Masonic Books,

FOR SALE AT THE CYNOSURE OFFICE.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

Allyn's Ritual of Masonry,

Illustrated by a large number of engravings, and containing a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, Orange and Odd-fellows' societies. Price, $5.00.

Mackey's Masonic Ritualist;

OR

MONITORIAL INSTRUCTION BOOK

BY ALBERT G. MACKEY,

"Past General High Priest of the General Grand Chapter of the United States, Knight of the Eagle and Pelican, Prince of Mercy," Etc. Etc.
Price, $1 75

Mackey's Lexicon of Freemasonry,

Containing a Definition of Terms, Notices of its History, Traditions and Antiquities, and an account of all the Rites and Mysteries of the Ancient World. 12 mo. 526 pages, $3 00.

MACKEY'S MANUAL OF THE LODGE,

OR

Monitorial Instructions in the Degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft, and Master Mason; with Ceremonies relating to Installations, Dedications, Consecrations, Laying of Corner-stones &c. Price, $2 00.
Paper Covers 2.00.

MACKEY'S TEXT BOOK

OF

MASONIC JURISPRUDENCE.

Illustrating the Laws of Freemasonry, both written and unwritten.

This is the Great Law Book of Freemasonry 570 pages. Price, $3.50

Webb's Monitor of Freemasonry,

LARGE EDITION, WITH NOTES

By ROB. HORRIS, Price, $1.50.
Pocket Edition, 75 cts.

SICKELS' FREEMASON'S MONITOR,

Containing the Degrees of Freemasonry embraced in the Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery, embellished with nearly 300 symbolic Illustrations. Together with Tactics and drill of Masonic Knighthood. Also, forms of Masonic Documents, Notes, Songs, Masonic dates, installations, etc. By D. Sickels, 32 mo uck. Price $1.50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry,

A Practical Guide to the Ceremonies in the Degrees conferred in Masonic Lodge Chapter, Encampments, etc. Illustrated Edition. In cloth, $1 25; paper, 75 cts.

Chase's Digest of Masonic Law.

Comprises a Complete Code of Regulations, Decisions and Opinions upon Questions of Masonic Jurisprudence. Price, $2 25.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor

Illustrated with Explanatory Engravings
Price $2.50.

Books on Odd Fellowship.

Donaldson's Odd Fellow's Text Book,
By Pasonal Donaldson, D. D.,

GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF NORTHERN N. Y.,

Illustrated with numerous engravings, showing the emblems of the order. A detailed account of the Forms, Ceremonies, Funeral Services and Odes with music, and a complete manual for the guidance of Officers and Lodges. Pocket edition Tuck, $1.50.

Grosh's Manual of Odd Fellowship

BY REV. A. B. GROSH.

Containing the history, defence, principles and government of the order; the instructions of arch degree and duties of every station and office with engravings of the emblems of the orders, etc
Price in Cloth,.....$2 00
" Tuck, abridged edition, 1 50

Descriptive Catalogue of Publications of Ezra A. Cook & Co.

13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

BOOKS.

FREEMASONRY EXPOSED,

by CAP'T. WILLIAM MORGAN.

THE GENUINE OLD MORGAN BOOK:—republished with engravings showing the Lodge Room, Dress of candidates, Signs, Due Guards, Grips, Etc.

This revelation is so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. Thousands have testified to the correctness of the revelation and this book therefore sells very rapidly.

Price 25 cents.

Per Doz. Post Paid..... $2.00
Per hundred by express, (express charges extra.).....$10.00

ODD FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

A complete exposition of the Lodge Encampment and Rebecca (Ladies') Degree. The Signs, Grips, &c., shown by engravings.

Single copy, post paid,..... $ 25
Per Doz., " " 2 00
Per Hundred, Express charges extra,..... 10 00

EXPOSITION OF THE GRANGE.

EDITED BY REV. A. W. GEESLIN.

Illustrated with Engravings showing Lodge Room, Signs, Signals, etc. NOW IN PRESS; will be completed about June 1st.

All orders for 10 or more copies, with Cash, received before June 1st, will be filled at 100 rates.

Single Copy, post paid..... $ 25
Per Doz., " " 2 00
Per 100 Express charges extra..... 10 00

Judge Whitney's Defense Before the Grand Lodge of Ill.

Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the Lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the Lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry.

Single Copy, post paid..... $ 25
Per Doz. " " 1 50
Per 100, Express charges extra..... 8 00

THE BROKEN SEAL.

OR PERSONAL REMINISCENCES OF THE ABDUCTION AND MURDER OF Wm. MORGAN,

By SAMUEL D. GREENE,

Price in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.
In Paper Covers per Doz. Post paid..... .....$4 50
" per hundred by express (ex. charges extra $25.00

That the book is one of great interest and value is shown by the following

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"A MASONIC REVELATION.—Mr. Samuel D. Greene is a venerable gentleman of the highest respectability, whose statements seem to be worthy of full credence. The Broken Seal; or, Personal Reminiscences of the Morgan Abduction and Murder, is the title of a book of some three hundred pages just issued by him, purporting to give a full and accurate account, from personal knowledge, of the Morgan 'abduction,' and other masonic matters which made such an excitement in this country, now almost half a century ago."—Congregationalist and Recorder, Boston.

"We are acquainted with Mr. Greene, and have no doubt that his account is entirely reliable, and of great historic and moral interest. Capt. Wm. Morgan was Mr. Greene's neighbor in Batavia, N. Y., and a member of the same lodge with him at the time of the great excitement in 1826. The titles to these chapters are sufficiently exciting to give the book a large sale:—'The Storm Gathering;' "Abduction of Morgan;" "Attempted Abduction of Miller and his Rescue;" "What became of Morgan;" "What Morgan Actually Revealed;" "Confession of the Murderer;" "Allegations against Freemasonry, etc."—Boston Daily News.

History of The Abduction and Murder of Cap't. Wm. Morgan.

As prepared by Seven Committees of Citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan.

This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons, abducted and Murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offence than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife, and no candid person after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable FREEMASONS. in the Empire State, with others were concerned in this crime.

Single Copy, post Paid,... ..... 25 cents.
Per doz. " ..... $2,00.
Per 100, Express Charges Extra,..... 10.00.

Valance's Confession of The Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.

This confession of Henry L. Valance, one of the three Freemasons who drowned Morgan in the Niagara River, was taken from the lips of the dying man by Dr. John C. Emery, of Racine County, Wisconsin in 1848; The confession bears clear evidence of truthfulness.

Single copy, post paid,..... 20 cents.
Per doz. " ..... $1.50.
Per 100 Express Charges Extra,..... 8.00.

The Mystic Tie or Freemasonry a League with the Devil.

This is an account of the Church Trial of Peter Cook, and wife of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a Reverend Freemason; and their very able defence presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry, is antagonistic to the Christian Religion. Single Copy, post paid,..... 20 cents

Per dozen, post paid..... $1 50
Per hundred Express charges Extra,..... 9 00

NARRATIVES AND ARGUMENTS,

showing the Conflict of Secret Societies with the Constitution and Laws, of the Union and of the States.

by FRANCIS SEMPLE of Dover, Iowa.

The fact that Secret Societies, interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of Law is here clearly proved. price 20c.

Per dozen, post paid..... $1 75
Per hundred Express charges Extra..... 9 00

The Antimason's Scrap Book,

CONSISTING OF

21 CYNOSURE TRACTS.

In this book are the views of more than a Score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of Secret Societies.

The dangerous tendency and positive evil of organized Secrecy is here shown by the most varied and powerful arguments and illustrations that have ever been given to the public.

Lecturers and others who wish to find the best arguments against the Lodge. should send for this book.

Those who wish to circulate Antimasonic Tracts ought to have the book to select from.

Single Copy, post paid, ...20 cents.
Per Doz. " $1.75
Per 100, Express charges Extra,.....$10.00

PHELPS' SECRET SOCIETIES Ancient and Modern.

A NEW BOOK OF GREAT INTEREST.

This work is particularly commended to the attention of Officers of The Army and Navy, The Bench and The Clergy.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

"THE ANTIQUITY OF SECRET SOCIETIES, THE LIFE OF JULIAN, THE ELEUSINIAN MYSTERIES, THE ORIGIN OF MASONRY, WAS WASHINGTON A MASON? FILMORE'S AND WEBSTER'S DEFERENCE TO MASONRY. A BRIEF OUTLINE OF THE PROGRESS OF MASONRY IN THE UNITED STATES, THE TAMMANY RING, MASONIC BENEVOLENCE, THE USES OF MASONRY, AN ILLUSTRATION, THE CONCLUSION."

Single Copy, Post Paid..... 5c
Per Doz " " $4 75
Per Hundred, Express Charges Extra.....$33 00

MINUTES OF THE SYRACUSE CONVENTION,

Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. D. Greene, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. S. D. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. Unpublished Reminiscences of the Morgan Times, by Elder David Bernard; Recollections of the Morgan Trials, as related by Victory Birdseye, Esq., and presented by his daughter, Mrs. C. B. Miller; Secretary's report; roll of delegates; songs of Mr. G. A. Clark, paper by Enoch Honeywell; Constitution N. C. A.; reports of committees, and a report of the political meeting.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion.

A clear cutting argument against the Lodge, from a Christian stand point.

Single Copy..... $ 05
Per 100..... 8 00

SERMON ON MASONRY,

BY REV. W. P. M'NARY,

Pastor United Presbyterian Church, Bloomington, Ind.

This is a very clear, thorough, candid and remarkably concise Scriptural argument on the character of Freemasonry.

Single Copy, Post Paid,..... 5
Per Doz,..... 50
Per Hundred, Express Charges Extra.....$3 00

COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES.

Their Customs, Character and the Efforts for their Suppression.

BY H. L. KELLOGG.

Containing the opinion of many eminent College Presidents, and others, and a FULL ACCOUNT OF THE MURDER OF MORTIMER LEGGETT

Single Copy, post paid..... $ 35
per Doz " " 2 50
per 100 Express charges extra..... 15 00

ANTIMASONIC TRACTS.

WE NOW HAVE 22 ENGLISH TRACTS, ONE GERMAN, AND ONE SWEDISH

These tracts are sold at the rate of $1.00 per 1000 pages.

A Tract Fund for the Free Distribution of Tracts.

HAS BEEN SECURED AND WE HOPE WILL NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fund a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE.

Many of our most earnest workers in this cause of God are poor men, who would be glad to circulate thousands of pages of Antimasonic literature if they could have them free.

SHALL WE NOT HAVE AN INEXHAUSTIBLE TRACT FUND?

"THE ANTI-MASONS SCRAP BOOK."

Contains our 21 Cynosure Tracts, bound together, price 20 cents. See advertisement.

Address EZRA A. COOK & Co.,
13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

TRACT NO. 1:

HISTORY OF MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT J. BLANCHARD, OF WHEATON COLLEGE.

This is now published in three tracts of four pages each. Price of each, 50 cents per 100; $4 per 1000.

TRACT No. 1, PART FIRST—Shows the origin of Speculative Freemasonry, and is entiled "HISTORY OF MASONRY."

TRACT No. 1, PART SECOND—Is entitled "DESPOTIC CHARACTER OF FREEMASONRY"

TRACT No. 1, PART THIRD—Is entitled "FREEMASONRY A CHRIST-EXCLUDING RELIGION."

TRACT NO. 1, IN SWEDISH;

translated by Prof. A. R. CERVIN. A 15-page tract at $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 2:

MASONIC MURDER,

By REV. J. R. BAIRD, of Pleasantville, Pa., a seceding Mason who has taken 17 degrees. A 2 page tract at 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 3:

SECRETS OF MASONRY,

BY ELI TAPLEY.

This is a 4-page Illustrated Tract, showing the signs, grips and pass-words, of the first three degrees. 50 cents per 100, or $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 4:

GRAND! GREAT GRAND!!

BY PHILO CARPENTER.

This is a 2-page tract, calling the attention of the public to the despotic and ridiculous titles of Freemasonry. Price 25 cents per 100; $2 00 per 1,000.

TRACT. NO, 5:

Extracts From Masonic Oaths and Penalties, as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.

This tract is a reprint of a tract published in 1834, and is a very weighty document. A 4-page tract at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 6:

Hon. John Quincy Adams' Letter.

Giving His and His Father's Opinion of Freemasonry (1831.);

AND

Hon. James Madison's Letter,

Giving His Opinion of Freemasonry (1832).

Both of these letters, in one 4-page tract, at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 7:

SATAN'S CABLE-TOW.

A 4-page tract. This is a careful analysis of the character of Masonic oaths, and shows them to be most blasphemous and unchristian; and the Masonic Cable Tow is clearly shown to be the Cable Tow by which Satan is leading thousands to eternal death. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 8:

Is a 2-page double tract, "ILLUSTRATED." The first page represents a Mason proclaiming the wonderful wisdom and benevolence of the order, with an article below, entitled "Freemasonry is only 152 Years Old," and gives the time and place of its birth.

The second side is entitled, "Murder and Treason not Excepted," and shows that the Masonic order is treasonable in its constitution, and is both anti-Republican and anti-Christian. Price 25 cents per 100; $2 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 9, ILLUSTRATED:

FREEMASONRY IN THE CHURCH.

Copy of a petition for the higher degrees of Freemasonry, in which Blasphemous and Despotic Titles are enumerated and prayed for. The Copy was printed for the use of "Occidental Sovereign Consistory S. P. R. S.," 32d degree—a Chicago Lodge—and was ordered by a deacon of a Christian Church who is Grand Orator of the Grand Lodge of Ill.

TRACT NO. 10:

CHARACTER AND SYMBOLS OF FREEMASONRY.

A 2-page tract, (ILLUSTRATED) by its "Grand Secretaries, Grand Lecturers, Perfect Prince Freemasons, Grand Inspector, Inquisitor Commanders, Grand High Priests," etc. The wonderful symbolical meaning of "the Cable Tow," "the Square and Compass," "the Lamb Skin, or white Apron," and "the Common Gavel," are given in the exact words of the highest Masonic authority. 25 cents per 100 or $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 11;

Address of Niagara County Association, New York,

TO THE PUBLIC;

Concerning the Morgan Murder, and the character of Freemasonry, as shown by this and other Masonic murders. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 12:

JUDGE WHITNEY AND MASONRY.

This tract contains a condensed account of Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois, on charge of unmasonic conduct in bringing Samuel L. Keith the murderer of Ellen Slade, and a member of his Lodge, to justice, with Judge Whitney's subsequent renunciation of Masonry,

An 8-page tract, $1.00 per 100; $8.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 13:

DR. NATHANIEL COLVER ON MASONRY,

and

HOWARD CROSBY, D. D.,

Chancellor of the University of New York, on SECRET SOCIETIES. A double 2-page tract 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 14:

GRAND LODGE MASONRY;

ITS RELATION TO CIVIL GOVERNMENT AND THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION.

Opening address before the Monmouth Convention, by PRES. J. BLANCHARD of WHEATON COLLEGE. This is a 16-page tract at $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 15:

MASONIC OATHS NULL AND VOID.

A clear and conclusive argument proving the invalidity of any oath or obligation to do evil. By REV. I. A. HART, Secretary National Christian Association. Published by special order of the Association. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 16:

HON. SETH M. GATES ON FREEMASONRY.

PROOF THAT THE INSTITUTION THAT MURDERED MORGAN IS UNCHANGED IN CHARACTER

This is a letter to the Monmouth Convention by Hon. Seth M. Gates who was Deputy Sheriff of Genesee County, and also Secretary of the Leroy Lodge at the time of Morgan's Abduction. A 4-page tract, 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 17:

Origin, Obligations and Expenses of The Grange,

WITH A CONSTITUTION OF A FARMERS' CLUB.

This little tract ought to be put into the hands of every Farmer in the United States. Four-page tract, 50 cents per 100; $4 00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 18:

HON. WM. H. SEWARD ON SECRET SOCIETIES.

Extract from a Speech on Know-Nothingism in the U. S. Senate in 1855.

The testimony of JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, MILLARD FILLMORE, CHIEF JUSTIC MARSHALL and others, is added.

A 2-page tract, 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 19.

BRICKS FOR MASONS TO LAY.

WASHINGTON, MADISON, MARSHALL, RUSH, HANCOCK, ADAMS AND WEBSTER, give brief clear testimony against the Lodge A 2-page tract 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 20:

OBJECTIONS TO MASONRY.

By A SECEDING MASON, of Cornton, Vermont.

This tract contains many strong arguments against the Lodge drawn from personal experience, observation and study of its character. A 4-page tract at 50 cents per 100; $1.00 per 1,000.

TRACT NO. 21:

MASONIC CHASTITY.

BY EMMA A. WALLACE,

The author, by wonderfully clear illustration and argument, shows the terribly corrupt nature of Freemasonry. No true woman who reads this will ever speak with approbation of this institution A 4-page tract 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

GERMAN CYNOSURE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason

By REV. A. GROLE, Pastor, German M. E. Church

WORCESTER, MASS.

This is our first German tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. Price 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

ENOCH HONEYWELL'S TRACT

TO THE YOUNG MEN OF AMERICA. Postage, 3 cents per 100. Tracts. Tracts Free.

Publishers' Department.

This is the last copy of the Cynosure those whose subscriptions expire in March will receive unless they notify us that they wish the paper continued. Please notice the label on your paper and if your time is out, renew your subscription promptly.

Is your time out in April? We hope, if it is, that you will send in your renewal as early in the month as possible. We will be glad to send extra copies of the Cynosure and tracts to those who wish them for canvassing purposes.

Is your postage on the Cynosure paid?

Next week we report the size of the Cynosure subscription list; which will be interesting to all who desire the enlarged circulation of the paper. We are glad to receive word from several subscribers that they are doing all they can to increase the subscription list.

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED DURING WEEK ENDING MARCH 20, FROM:—J S Amidon. T C Appleton, P Bacon, G Burnett, D D Beal, I Burroughs, J L Barlow, Mrs M E Cravath, C D Coppock, W McCullough, B F Cole, Rev A D Carter, C Clingman, J A Conant, Mrs E Cowell, W Gassett, S A Gilley, M Gallup, H H Hinman, G Hayes, T C Hahn, C W Hauptman, W Henderson, J W Jones, H S Jackman, E Jenks, J A Knepper, M J Lauffer, P M D Longenecker, C S Lowrie, D Louther, J Maxwell, W Mosher, R A McAyeal, L Monteith, H McLaughlin, J E McArthur, A W May, G Marcy, Mrs M Neubauer, A Pontius, A E Parsons, J H Paul, Mrs L W Rowley, C H Reed, Wm Ripley, W Stewart, W H Sawyer, J H Spohn, A B Sherk, J M Snyder, J P Stoddard, J Seely, S Sweat, A Spencer, J Seamahorn, C W Sterry J M Stevenson D Thomas, B Ulsh, B Vincent, C F Wirt, C Winter, S Waldron.

Address of Anti-masonic Lecturers.

General Agent and Lecturer, J. P. STODDARD, Christian Cynosure Office, Chicago.
State Lecturer for Indiana, J. T. Kiggins, Waterloo City, DeKalb county, Ind.
State Lecturer for Illinois, H. H. Hinman, Farm Ridge, LaSalle Co., Ill.
State Lecturer for Ohio, D. S. Caldwell, Nevada, Wyandot, Co., Ohio.
State Lecturers for New York, Z. Weaver, Esq., and J. L. Barlow, 89 Mulberry St., both Syracuse, N. Y.
State Lecturer for Pennsylvania, J. W. Raynor, Uniondale, Susquehanna Co., Pa.
I. A. Hart, Wheaton, Ill.
C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
P. Elzea, Wheaton, Ill.
W. A. Wallace, Bentonville, Ind.
J. B. Nessell, Ellington, N. Y.
John Levington, Detroit, Mich.
D. P. Rathbun, Lisbon Center, N. Y.
S. Smith, Ionia, Iowa.
R. B. Taylor, Summerfield, O.
L. N. Stratton, Syracuse, N. Y.
N. Callender, Green Grove, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
Linus Chittenden, Crystal Lake,
P. Hurless, Polo, Ill.
J. R. Baird, Royalton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
C. Wiggins, Angola, Ind.
E. Johnson, Bourbon, Ind.
Josiah McCaskey, Fancy Creek, Wis.
C. F. Hawley, Millbrook Pa.
W. M. Givens, Center Point, Ind.
J. L. Andrus, Mt. Vision, N. Y.
J M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
Wm. Dillon, Dayton, O.
Samuel Hale, Mallet Creek, O.
A. Mayn, Promise City, Wayne Co, Ia.
A. H. Springstein, Ypsilanti, Mich.
R. Faurot, DuPlain, Mich.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, Ashland Co., O.

TERMS FOR THE CYNOSURE.

$2.00 per annum, in advance.
20c " " " for postage.

All who canvass for the CYNOSURE are allowed a cash commission of twenty per cent. or twenty-five per cent in books at retail prices, one-half this percentage on renewals, and any one sending $100. for the CYNOSURE during three months, will be entitled to an extra five per cent.

All responsible persons who desire to promote this reform are authorized to act as agents.

CLUB RATES.

No commission is allowed on club rates. Club rates are intended for those who wish to give the commission to subscribers.

Subscriptions may all be sent at one time, or at different times, and in all cases the sender should keep an account of the names and amounts sent.

CLUB RATES, INCLUDING POSTAGE.

Two new subscriptions, one year	$3.90
One new subscription and one renewal, sent ten days before expiration of subscription,	3.90
4 new subs., 1 year., 1 copy free to sender,	8.75
5 " " 1 " 1 " "	10.50
6 " " " " "	12.25
7 " " " " "	14.00
8 " " " " "	15.75
10 " " " " "	19.50
20 " " " " "	36 00
10 Renewals " " " "	22.00
50 " " " " "	95,00

Twenty subscriptions for six months count the same as ten for a year.

Postage on the Cynosure.

THE POSTAGE ON THE CYNOSURE MUST BE PAID AT CHICAGO. It is twenty cents a year.

The cost of postage now depends entirely on the size and weight, and therefore some smaller papers charge but fifteen cents; and others about the size of the Cynosure charge twenty-five cents a year for postage.

If the subscription price of the CYNOSURE was $2.50 or $3.00 a year, the price of many religious papers containing no more reading matter, we might afford to pay the postage ourselves, but at $2.00 a year we cannot do this with our present Subscription list.

Therefore let all send the postage, 20 cents a year, 10 cents for half a year with their renewals.

The commission on one new subscription for a year will pay the postage on your own and the new subscriber's paper. We would rather have the postage paid by commissions than in any other way.

When postage is not paid we shall have to shorten the time of subscription sufficiently to pay it.

How to Send Money.

Post office orders, checks or drafts on Chicago or towns east of Chicago, and currency by express may be sent at our risk. If it is not possible to send by either of the four ways named, money in a registered letter may be sent at our risk, but it is not as safe.

The date at which subscriptions expire is with each subscriber's name on the address label. Send renewals before this date occurs. Notice if this date is changed to correspond; if not or if the paper fails to come, write without delay.

We discontinue during the first part of each month all subscriptions which expire during the preceding one except such as are ordered continued with a promise to forward the money soon. We do not like to lose a single subscriber and will not remove names simply because the cash is not received promptly, if we understand that the paper is wanted. Address all letters with subscriptions or orders for Books, Tracts and donations to the Tract Fund to EZRA A. COOK & Co., 13 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1	square, 1 insertion,	$2.00
1	square (1 inch deep) one month	7.00
1	" " 2 "	10.00
1	" " 3 "	15.00
1	" " 6 "	25.00
1	" " 12 "	40.00

Discount for Space.

On 2 squares 5 per cent, On 3 squares 10 per cent
On 4 " 15 " " On 5 " 20 "
On ¼ col. 25 per cent On one col. 30 per cent

Agents Wanted!

TO SELL THE PUBLICATIONS OF

EZRA A. COOK & CO.

Liberal Terms Offered.

Capable persons who are in need of pecuniary aid may clear

Handsome Profits,

While at the same time aiding the cause of Reform. Apply to EZRA A. COOK & CO., No. 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

SOMETHING NEW.

A CHART OF MASONRY

Showing the degrees from the first to the thirty-third, entitled

Degrees of Ancient Accepted Scottish Freemasonry,

According to a Manual by Wm. M. Cunningham 33d Degree.

Designed by Rev. P. Stoddard, to explain Freemasonry, as shown by Morgan's Exposition and Richardson's Monitor.

A Neat Lithograph 22x28 Inches.

Single copies finely colored, post paid	$ 75
Per dozen " " " "	5 00
Per 100 " " " " Express charges extra	35 00
Single copy, colored, varnished and mounted postpaid	1 00
Per dozen colored, varnished and mounted, post paid	7 50
Per 100, colored, varnished and mounted, express charges extra	50 00

25 COPIES OR MORE SENT AT THE 100 RATES.

Excelsior Marriage Certificate.

It is decidedly the most BEAUTIFUL, TASTEFUL and SENSIBLE thing of the kind I have ever seen."—Rev. F. G. Hibbard, D. D.

"The most SCRIPTURAL, BEAUTIFUL and APPROPRIATE Marriage Certificate I have ever seen."—Late Rev. H. Mattison, D. D.

"SOMETHING NEW AND BEAUTIFUL, which we pronounce the handsomest thing of the kind we ever laid eyes on."—Meth. Home Journal, Phila. Contains two Ornamental Ovals, for Photographs

A BEAUTIFUL LITHOGRAPH 14 1-4 by 18 1-4 inches. 25 cts each, $2.25 per doz- $15 per 100.

For Sale by Ezra A. Cook & Co.. CHICAGO.

Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill.

The Spring term opens April 8th. It is the term for the study of Botany. There are some beautiful rooms for young ladies yet unoccupied. The Winter term has been very pleasant, and very successful. Write for Catalogue to J. BLANCHARD, Wheaton. Ill.

—The Secretary of the Interior has made a report, showing that during 1873 405 Indians were killed and 227 captured by United States troops, and that 44 citizens and 48 soldiers were killed by Indians. During the first six months of 1874, 158 Indians were killed and 73 captured by troops, while 36 citizens and 3 soldiers were killed by Indians.

MARKET REPORTS

CHICAGO, March 23, 1875.

The following are the latest advices:

Grain Wheat—Spring, No. 1	$97½	98
" No. 2	94½	95½
" No. 3	87	89
" Rejected		82
Corn—No. 2	66	66½
Rejected	63½	64½
Oats—No. 2	53	54
Rejected		50½
Rye—No. 2	97	98
Flour—Winter	4 25	6 75
Spring	3 50	4 75
Hay—Timothy	16 00	18 50
Prairie, "	13 50	16 00
Lard		13¾
Mess pork, per bbl		19 85
Butter	18	32
Cheese	10	18½
Eggs	25	26
Potatoes, per bus	1 00	1 20
Broom corn	05½	13
Seeds—Timothy	2 35	2 50
Clover	6 40	6 50
Flax	2 07	2 25
Chickens, dressed, per lb	14	16
Turkeys, do. per lb	15	18
HIDES green to dry salted	07	15
Lumber—Clear	37 00	55 00
Common	11 00	12 00
Lath		2 25
Shingles	1 50	3 25
WOOL—Washed	40	53
Unwashed	27	37
LIVE STOCK Cattle, extra	6 50	7 00
Good to choice	5 40	6 25
Medium	5 00	5 25
Common	3 50	4 75
Hogs	7 00	8 25
Sheep	4 00	6 75

New York Market.

Flour	$ 4 25	8 00
Wheat	1 12	1 38
Corn	84	85
Oats	67	70½
Rye	90	95
Lard		14
Mess pork		20 75
Butter	15	22
Cheese	12	16
Eggs	32	33

ESTABLISHED 1868.

EZRA A. COOK & CO.,

STEAM PRINTERS,

Lithographers,

STATIONERS

—AND—

Book Binders.

NOS. 7, 9, 11 & 13

Wabash Avenue, Chicago.

We were in the Stationery, Printing and Lithographing business before the Cynosure was started.

WE LITHOGRAPH

Business Cards, Letter Heads, Note Heads, Bill Heads, Circulars, Checks, Drafts, Certificates of Stock, Certificates of Deposit, Plats and Charts; also elegant Diplomas for Colleges. Literary Societies, and Agricultural Societies, in one, two or three Colors. Samples and Prices sent on Application.

WE PRINT

Books,
Pamphlets,
Catalogues, Business Cards, Show Cards, Letter Heads, Bill Heads, Note Heads, Circulars, Hand Bills, Posters, Checks, Drafts, Notes, Certificates of Deposit, Certificates of Stock, Diplomas, etc.,

IN THE BEST STYLE,

at the

LOWEST MARKET RATES.

WE FILL ORDERS PROMPTLY, and

GUARANTEE GOOD WORK.

SPECIAL ATTENTION GIVEN TO ORDERS

BY MAIL.

Samples and prices sent promptly when desired.

Address:

EZRA A. COOK & CO.,

7, 9, 11 & 13 Wabash Avenue,

CHICAGO.

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

"In Secret Have I Said Nothing."—Jesus Christ.

EZRA A. COOK & CO., PUBLISHERS, NO 13 WABASH AVENUE.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 1, 1875.

VOL. VII., NO. 25.—WHOLE NO. 260. WEEKLY, $2 00 A YEAR.

Contents.

	Page
TOPICS OF THE TIME	1
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
Our House and Home	8
What Next	8
New Politics	8
Notes	8
CONTRIBUTED AND SELECT ARTICLES:
Light in Masonry	1
Masonic Persecution in the United Brethren Church—III	2
The Coming Political Party	3
No Enemies	3
REFORM NEWS and NOTICES: From Wentworth Co., Wis.; From Bro. Caldwell's Work in Ohio; Monthly Meeting in S. W. Illinois; The Cause in Steuben Co., Ind.; From Harrison Co., O.; From Western Missouri; From Ashland Co., O	5, 4
CORRESPONDENCE: The Mansfield Convention; Local Politics in Linden, Mich.; The Great Ring; The Prince of Wales; Previous and Present Thoughts; Our Mail	3, 6
Obituary—Robert Harper	9
Letter from Rev James Hankins	9
The Methodist Bishops	13
A Chronological Table of Events in Popery.	7
Exposition of the Grange (Continued)	13
History of the Reform against Secret Orders	12
THE HOME CIRCLE	10
CHILDREN'S CORNER	11
The Sabbath School	7
Home and Health Hints	14
Farm and Garden	14
Religious Intelligence	9
News of the Week	12
Publishers' Department	16

Topics of the Time.

Occasional notice has been taken in our columns of the rowdyism almost daily exhibited in the Illinois Legislature. Indiana appears to be close behind, while the Pennsylvania body, if reports are to be credited, is even worse. The character of these legislatures may be inferred from the practical repeal of the Baxter temperance law in the former, and the passage of a local option repeal bill with license clause attached in the latter. From Harrisburg we hear of disgraceful personal quarrels and a standing fight between the houses. Lately, in the anxiety to pass a bill affecting the pecuniary interests of a certain corporation, an all-night session was held and the voting, shouting and reading of bills was carried on in the midst of the wildest confusion, and continued long after it was known that a quorum was not present. In striking contrast with these shameful scenes is the legislature of South Carolina in which the colored element is predominant and a colored man presides. A gentleman of some experience described it lately as one of the most ignorant, yet the most orderly body of its kind he ever knew. Such transactions are making the best arguments for political reform, which voters will take good heed at the next general election.

The record of Andrew Johnson ten years ago is comparatively fresh in the minds of the American people. Elected governor of Tennessee to keep a worse man from the place, he filled the air with boasts of friendliness to the colored race, and finally reached the Senate. The same great appearance of doing or being something secured his election as Vice-president in 1864, a compromise measure at best. But when an unsearchable Providence brought him to the Presidential chair, his character became better known. From the maudlin speech of inauguration day, every patriot knew a grave mistake had been made. Then followed the struggle between the Executive and Congress, in which Johnson proclaiming himself the Moses of the freedmen, and urged his ruinous policy of reconstruction. The impeachment trial hardly sobered him, and he retired amid general rejoicing. When it was known that Tennessee had made him again the choice for the Senate, it was hoped that a few years of private life had improved his temper. But no; he is the same pugnacious, vindictive Andy Johnson. He has not found the outside of his "circle" yet. His election he regards as a vindication of "my policy," and the Senate listened to one of the tirades of 1867, when he—as President!—used to harangue the rabble from the steps of the Capitol.

Perhaps the New York Tribune and Christian Union and papers like them can find time amid their salutations to the new Cardinal, to tell their readers in what way the Romish church proposes to "protect" the freedmen, and what may be the exegencies requiring such protection, as the following from the Boston Pilot indicates will some time come: "The Catholic Church has to-day in its schools over 300,000 colored children. It is educating colored youth at Rome for its missionary work in America and Africa. In the West Indies, Central America, and South America nearly 9,000,000 Africans acknowledge its faith. All that the poor down-trodden blacks of the United States have to do is to 'fellowship' with this strong, courageous, well-disciplined church, and they thereby become, not only a part of her power, but add to the power which will protect them." The movements of Romanism in America are one in nature and purpose. Freedmens' missions, cardinals, and assaults on the school system, mean aggrandizement. Mr. McCloskey may be a very amiable, intelligent person, of blameless life and unquestioned official integrity, still that does not soften the harsh title, Prince of the see of Rome, nor exculpate those journals which seem anxious to forget the history and temper of that licentious, persecuting power, in a cowardly fawning for patronage. His appointment means that the power of Rome has grown among us into vast proportions and influence (The Tribune states that two Presidents have signified to Rome their desire that an American cardinal be appointed. This may be true, but needs verification); so that it must be equipped with all the honors and dignities shown in other lands. It also signifies a more united action in politics, where the papacy expects to gain its victories. Hence, its activity among the freedmen, and efforts to subsidize the press. How well the latter have succeeded is seen in the general congratulation to McCloskey, although to accept the dignity of a temporal prince from a foreign power on the part of an American citizen, is a clear violation of the privileges of such citizenship. Bismarck has no such shallow policy. The obstinate Bishop Ledochowski was appointed cardinal with Mc Closkey. The great Prime Minister replied to the Pope by clapping him into prison.

Light in Masonry.

[Concluded from last week.]

But to proceed. The rope being removed and the kiss of betrayal given, the Master steps back a few paces and in a tone of mock solemnity inquires, "Bro. Jones, in your present condition what do you most desire?" And right here I would like to ask any clergyman in the country who has been initiated into Freemasonry what his real desire was just at that particular time? When you knelt half naked and blindfolded at that Masonic altar, and when the above question was asked of you, what, my brother, was then your real desire? Did you not sincerely wish to be out of that unhallowed place? Did you not honestly desire to have the entire proceedings thus far entirely obliterated from your memory? And did you not most earnestly desire to have the fearful weight of that sanguinary obligation forever removed from your guilty soul? Well, whatever was your real desire the Senior Deacon whispered in your ear and you answered, "Light in Masonry." There is strong presumptive evidence that this was false but having professed your faith in the Masonic god it is none too singular that you should desire to see Masonic light. But what "light" can any man possibly receive in a Masonic lodge unless it be the light of a number of gas jets or a few tallow candles? What light, my reverend brother, did you receive on the night of your initiation that was beneficial to you or would be useful to the rest of mankind? If "light in Masonry" was beneficial in your case, why should it not be a benefit to the members of your flock? And if it is good for a man to receive "light in Masonry," why should not the same kind of "light" be good for a woman. It is very singular that Masonry should profess to be a charitable institution possessing "light" of such great importance to mankind and yet be so uncharitable as not to impart his "light" to any one unless he pays from twenty-five to one hundred dollars for it and even then only under the seal of terrible sanguinary obligations. David says, "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path;" and Solomon, who is erroneously claimed by Masons to be their "first most excellent Grand Master," declares that "the commandment is a lamp and the law is light." In the gospel of St. John, verses 4 to 9, chap. 1, mention is made of that "true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world," and the same divine evangelist in his first epistle, chap. i, verse 7, uses this very emphatic and positive language, "If we walk in the light as he is in the light we have fellowship one with another and the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth us from all sin." This was evidently the only light that Saint John believed in; he knew of no other light either in or out of Masonry. It was the only light that David and Solomon and Paul knew of, and it is a fraud and a cheat for Masons to pretend that they have any light or knowledge or secret which every intelligent man and woman in the world does not possess. Freemasonry was first started in an obscure tavern or grog-shop in the city of London in 1717, and any one can judge how much of light and knowledge beneficial to mankind could proceed from such a source.

But let us see what light was imparted to our Rev. Bro. Perhaps after all Freemasonry may contain something that will be of paramount importance for us to know. The candidate having expressed his desire as above stated and the Master having called upon the brethren to "stretch forth their hands and assist him in bringing this brother from darkness to light in Masonry," he repeats a caricature of the first three verses in Genesis and blasphemously comparing the creation of light by the Almighty to the restoring or bringing to light in a Masonic lodge, he continues, "And now in humble commemoration of which ancient event, I Masonically say, Let there be light and there is light." At this moment the hoodwink is swiftly removed from the eyes of the candidate and he sees all the brethren, Master included, standing before him in two rows and each one under the sign of the due-guard.

I may explain here that the first degree contains two signs, the due-guard, and what is called the penal sign. The former alludes to the position in which his hands were placed while taking his obligation and the latter to the penalty of that obligation. The due-guard is made by holding out the left hand a short distance in front of the body with the palm open and turned upwards, now place the palm of the right hand horizontally across the left and a little above it—the position of the hands being that which they must occupy while holding a book between them. This is the due-guard. Now drop the left hand carelessly to the side and draw the right hand quickly across the throat from ear to ear and you have the penal sign, or as Masons call it, "the sign" of an Entered Apprentice Mason.

And now that the hoodwink is removed and that our reverend pastor is enabled to see what is transpiring around him, Masonry through its accredited teacher, the Master of the lodge, will doubtless cast some light upon this dark question of Masonic light. Let us watch and see. He approaches the altar where the candidate is still kneeling and says, "My brother, on being brought to light in Masonry you behold before you the THREE GREAT LIGHTS in Masonry by the aid of the three lesser lights. The THREE GREAT LIGHTS in Masonry are the Holy Bible, the square and the compass." Ah! here we have got a very pretty little plum indeed: now we are enlightened as to the true value of this so-called wonderful Masonic light. The Bible, the square and the compass are the three great lights. No distinction between them. One is equally great as the other. The compass is as great a light as the Bible and so is the square. "The true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world" is entirely cast aside and ignored and in His place are substituted an old rusty square and a pewter compass. And this is the boasted knowledge of Freemasonry—this, one of those terrible mysterious secrets to learn which the "Rev. Septimus Jones, D. D.," has suffered so much of degradation and shame, and to conceal which he has blackened his soul with a blasphemous and blood-curdling obligation. Reader, let me beg of you to reflect seriously upon this—Freemasonry places a compass and a square side by side with the Holy Bible, the revealed will of God, and then boldly proclaims that one is of equal authority with the other; that one is as great a light as the other; that one is to be prized and esteemed as highly as the other; and then ask yourself if this be so how secure are the liberties of this great nation when placed in the keeping of members of this vile institution? If Masons set no higher value upon the Bible than to degrade it to the level of an old rusty pair of compasses how much think you do they care whether it be read in our public schools or not. And yet a minister of the Gospel, and a preacher of the Word of God will "of his own free will and accord" swear allegiance to such a society and uphold and maintain such an ungodly doctrine. Shame upon the man who is guilty of such a base act, and shame upon the congregation that will tolerate him in the pulpit. Well may the prophet exclaim of such a preacher and such a people, "A wonderful and horrible thing is committed in the land, the prophets prophecy falsely and the priests bear rule by their means and my people love to have it so, but what will ye do in the end thereof." But let me hasten on to finish the balance of this initiation. The Master having fully impressed upon the mind of the reverend candidate the great value of the square and compass in reforming society, suppressing crime and elevating human character, he again steps back a few paces and explains the first step, the due-guard, and the sign already mentioned after which he presents him with his right hand and with it the grip and word of an Entered Apprentice Mason, and which for the edification of uninitiated ministers I will explain here in full.

The Master takes the candidate by the right hand as in ordinary hand-shaking and turning to the Senior Deacon (who answers for the candidate) says, I hail.

Senior Deacon to Master: "I conceal."

M. What do you conceal? S. D. All the secret of Masons in Masonry to which this token alludes. (At the word token the Senior Deacon presses the top of the candidate's thumb on the knuckle joint of the Master's hand; the latter at the same time pressing his thumb against that of the candidate's. This is the Entered Apprentice grip)

Master to Senior Deacon. What is this? S. D. The grip of an Entered Apprentice Mason.

M. Has it a name? S. D. It has.

M. Will you give it to me? S. D. I did not so receive it neither will I so impart it.

M. How will you dispose of it! S. D. I will letter and syllable it.

M. Letter it and begin. S. D. Begin you.

M. Nay, you must begin. S. D. A. M. B. S. D. O. M. Z. S. D. Bo. M. Az. S. D. Boaz.

The plug hat gent then continues—"The name of this grip, my brother, is Boaz. You must always take the necessary precaution in giving it as you have received it, and invariably commencing upon the letter A. It denotes strength and was the name of the left hand pillar at the entrance of the porch of King Solomon's temple. You will now arise and salute the wardens as an Entered Apprentice Mason." See 1 Kings vii. 21 and 2 Chron. iii. 17.

The Rev. gentleman is then assisted to his feet and the members being seated he is again toted around the lodge-room to exhibit his knowledge of the step, due-guard and signs; presented with a dirty-looking old leather apron, called a lamb-skin; requested to deposit something of a metallic kind in the archives of the lodge (which of course being half naked he is unable to do); ordered to be re-conducted into the preparation room and get into his clerical habiliments as speedily as possible. On his return to the lodgeroom he is made to stand in the north-east corner, presented with the working tools so-called (the twenty-four inch guage and common gavel) and the gigantic farce of a Masonic initiation is concluded.

And now having gone over the whole ground from beginning to end and having carefully examined each pretended secret and revealed each so-called mystery, I will leave it to the unbiased judgment of any Christian community how can they have faith in and tolerate as a preacher, a man who will uphold and defend such meaningless, nonsensical, infidel, trashy stuff as is presented in this throat-cutting degree of Freemasonry. I have too much faith in the American people that they will much longer endure to be fleeced and humbugged by any such nefarious institution, especially when it is remembered that this society is nothing more nor less than the very worst form of a despotic monarchy supported and maintained in the midst of a democratic community. In my next I may introduce your readers to the "Middle Chamber" and so pass in review each succeeding degree until the whole entire humbug of what is called ancient Freemasonry is exposed and explained, after which I shall give at least more than a cursory glance at the diabolical oath of the ROYAL ARCH.

Masonic Persecution in the United Brethren Church—III.

BY REV. W. W. KNIPPLE.

On this charge I formed many pleasant and endearing associations which still live in my memory, and will until my dying day. But ere one week had elapsed I perceived breakers ahead. At one point especially I had considerable trouble, but nothing very disasterous. I also found some Masons and Odd-fellows among the membership of the church, but took no legal action against them, I only conversed with them privately on the subject, endeavoring to show them the evils growing out of these orders, and that it would be better if they would respect the law of the church.

The following are my reasons for not enforcing the law: 1st, My presiding elder said to me, that he had not, and would not enforce the law, and that if the U. B. church wanted men to do that kind of drudgery, it might get some one else to do it. And 2d, I was an entire stranger in the conference, and thought it would not be best to press the matter too hard on short acquaintance. My presiding elder conversed several times during the year with me on the subject of secret societies, in which he endeavored to show me the folly of our prohibitory law, claiming that as a church, we could keep clearer of secrecy without a law. Thus, an Anti-mason, desiring to rid the church of the dark orders, recommends the very thing for which Masons have always clamored. "Good idea that." In the meantime Mr. Rose made two important concessions, relative to secret orders, which I did not fail to make good use of, to the chagrin of our lamb-skin brethren: 1st, that when professing Christians unite with the secret orders, it is an indication that they have grown cold religiously; and 2d, that it is madness for Masons to deny that Masonry is revealed, for Bernard does reveal Masonry as far as he had gone. I was afterward informed by a Mason that Mr. R. denyed making the above concessions. Truly, Masonry teaches men to lie.

The chain of events which have followed this year's labor, have frequently caused me to wonder if my appointment to this charge was not designed by the craft and its jack's, either to destroy me ministerially, or to cure me of my Anti-mason principles. For trouble was apprehended for the minister of this charge, whoever he might be. My predecessor endured the fiery ordeal for two years, every possible means was resorted to, by a certain refractory element, to destroy his ministerial character, and drive him from the work, but he endured it all, frequently weeping as a child, over the situation. . . . Trouble was apprehended, and I had a good share of it during three quarters of the year. I met them all, not with weeping and mourning, but with a strictly disciplinary course, and left no unsettled difficulties on the work at the end of the year.

At the close of the conference year, I attended the conference session, which was held in Fostoria, Seneca Co , O., commencing Sept. 4th, 1872. My report was called for in turn, and was read publicly before the conference, and was highly commended by one P. E. as the best report financially that had come up from that circuit for a number of years. And then an expression from my presiding elder, with reference to my character, was called for by the Bishop. He arose and simply said there were no complaints at the last quarterly conference and sat down. I thought a little strange of this seeming coolness, but had not the most distant idea, or suspicion of what was soon to follow. . . .

The conference business now well nigh through, the report of the stationing committee was introduced. In a moment all was silent, and all listening with the deepest interest, the preachers to hear their appointments, and the people to hear who should be their future pastor. I too was expecting an appointment, but was sadly disappointed.

No one but he who has had the trial, can comprehend the reality of such a reverse. I had come to the conference almost penniless; had received $480 salary, out of which I paid moving expenses from West Virginia, purchased horse and buggy, household furniture, twenty dollar's worth of books during the year, and bought all of my living. And come out even at conference, but had nothing left,—and now among strangers, no money, no work, and no home,—had occupied the parsonage, but now that must be given up to another. And then, too, the situation in which such treatment would place me, was well known to my elder. Up to this moment I was completely ignorant of Rose's state of mind toward me, we having been as I supposed, on the best of terms during the entire year. Indeed I had reposed the utmost confidence in him as a Christian, and a friend, and I so spoke of him, and wrote of him to my friends.

The next was, why such treatment, what have I done; and with the thought I went to my elder, with a broken heart, and said to him, "Bro. Rose, why is it that I am left without work?" to which I received the following reply, and that in a revengeful spirit and a repulsive tone, "We have done what we thought best for the cause. I would advise you to be more careful hereafter, what you write, and who you write to. Sometimes men are betrayed, you have been writing to the preachers in West Virginia." This reference to letter writing explained the whole matter. I had corresponded with several of the preachers of the Parkersburg Conference during the year. And, it being the year of election of delegates to General Conference, I made some reference to that matter to several of the brethren, among whom was Rev. A. Orr, now a member of Sandusky Conference.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

[From the Christian Statesman.]

The Coming Political Party.

BY THE REV. GEO. C. VINCENT, D. D.

Political parties, as well as Christian sects, must have principles,—distinctive principles if you please. Mere negations, or faults found with existing parties, will not answer the purpose. Such procedure may avail to render existing parties or powers unsavory. It may diminish their numbers and abate their enthusiasm; but to constitute an organization and centralize power so as to accomplish any desired results, we must have principles, and these principles must appear. They must appear to be connected with the welfare and prosperity of the country.

In 1860, the Republican party had at least one distinctive principle. As a party, they opposed the extension of slavery. The slavery propagandists soon furnished them with several other principles, which were accepted, one by one, till it was broad as the platform of national existence, and stringent as the 15th Amendment to the Constitution.

The Republican party has a sublime history. It is so in its conception, in its maturity, and in its administration of the government up to the year 1865, the period of Reconstruction. In its inception, or rather in its antecedents, it has a most praiseworthy record. It began, to my knowledge, in the year 1834, with the question of the abstract right and wrong of American Slavery. The area of my observations, not to overlook Boston and Massachusetts, was western Pennsylvania and eastern Ohio. The anti-slavery reform was agitated with determined earnestness and with marked success. In the region of country to which I have adverted, discussions were frequent and earnest. The earnest, persistent efforts of the Smiths, the Sloans, the Walkers, the Hannas, the LeMoynes, the Burleighs, the Blanchards and the Bailey's are still green in memory.

In the year 1840, the nascent party to which the preceding discussions had reference, made its appearance. It was called the "Liberty Party." It was based on substantial truth, and on the eternal principles of divine justice. Those who opposed and resisted this day of small things, "knew not what they did." Such men and such a cause could neither be laughed nor frowned out of countenance.

Moving steadily forward, they gained strength. In 1848, receiving another element of strength, they became the "Free Soil party." This name was ominous. Truly, "coming events cast their shadows before." This is the point where rebellion in 1861, made the issue. Should slavery be national, or should it be confined within certain limits? "Free Soil," yes, and free speech, and a free press, throughout the national domain: this, in the face of human bondage clanking its chains in our ears, was a glorious party platform.

The agitation of these first truths was calculated to dispel the fog and clear the atmosphere all around. These great principles agitated, defended, and applied to existing things in the policy, both of church and state, was most salutary. Under these discussions the people were educated up to a higher standard of virtue. Not only the platform, as at first, but now the pulpit and the press, came to the rescue.

In this way the Republican party came into existence, and in 1860 elected the Chief Magistrate of the nation. The same became the war party, the exponent of the will of the loyal States. This party saved the country in its integrity. The preceding administration saw no power in the Constitution to "coerce a State." The nation then must have gone into dissolution.

In 1865 the war was fought through to a successful issue. The rebel army surrendered. The country was at peace. But now comes a crisis requiring skill beyond what was necessary to drill soldiers or handle them successfully in actual encounters with enemies in the field. Caesar, or Alexander, or Cromwell, could vanquish armies, but could not govern a State.

The first blunder committed, and that by which the party lost its hold on the conscience and the confidence of the people, was in failing to visit the leaders of the rebellion with any penalty for their crimes. Much has been said of clasping hands across the bloody chasm; but where is the loyalty of the wife who can cordially clasp the hand stained with her husband's blood? Where the heart of the parent, who can shake in cordial friendship the hand stained with the blood of his son? Say I these things as a man, or saith not the law the same also; for it is written, "The land cannot be cleansed from blood, but by the blood of him that shed it." By this unwarranted leniency the government let itself down from the dignity of its position as an "ordinance of God," to that of a mere human association, and disparaged its own claims to the respect of its citizens. It offered indignity to the living and insult to the dead. The dead reck not of it, but the living who survive the toils and dangers of war, and those also who gave their sons, and husbands, and brothers to death for the salvation of their country, will not soon forget how lightly the government esteemed the crime to thwart which they suffered and risked so much. This I mark number one in the counts derogatory, by which the Republican party has thrown itself out of the confidence of many of its best friends.

The second great blunder of the party in power, by which it further dislodged itself from the confidence of the people, was the extension of indiscriminate amnesty to rebels. Whatever exceptions were made in the general act have been provided for by other means, so that it has virtually amounted to universal amnesty; and, in consequence, eighty-five members of the next Congress were rebels, and mostly military or civil officers during the war. This is a fair specimen of the clemency of the Government under Republican rule, towards those who sought to dismember the nation in the interest of human bondage. For the rank and file of ignorant rebels who bore arms, the request of Benhadad, King of Assyria to the King of Israel, "Let me live," should have been enough. They should have been permitted "to live;" to drag out their existence in private life. But restoration to political privileges, including the right to vote and hold office under the government they attempted to overthrow, should not have been lightly conceded. . . . .

This restoration of rebels to citizenship, was, I dare say, if we except the rebellion itself, the greatest blunder ever committed in the history of our country. I cannot now think of any other nation perpetrating such folly. Blatant rebels, who never shed a tear over all the ruin they had wrought, nor even professed to repent of the crime which caused the death of more than half a million of men, fill the highest places of honor and trust, and blurt out their treason in the very halls of national legislation. We have an injunction to "honor the king," that is the ruling power, but it must be confessed that the ruling power should, as an inseparable condition of this homage, have some respect for itself. When, however, it sets men guilty of treason on a level with honest and loyal citizens, it puts us to a severe test. No party in any nation had a better opportunity of establishing themselves permanently in the confidence of the people. No other party could have successfully disputed the control of the government for the next fifty years. But the mighty are fallen, the shield and scepter are vilely cast away.

Another act of indiscretion, to call it by no more odious name, is the action of the forty-third Congress, in appropriating to themselves "back pay," or, as it eventuated, double-pay for their services. In order to understand this, let it be understood that the pay of members of Congress was fixed by law when these parties were elected, and when they accepted office. A contract was thus fairly understood between them and the people, or the government accepting their services. Then let it be further understood that the members of the House were, by the Constitution, made the guardians of the people's rights, so far as the appropriation of money is concerned. Hence, no bill for revenue or the appropriation of money can originate, except in the House. The members of that department of the Legislature are considered nearer the dear people, and so fresh from among those whom they so much love, that their money will be safe in their hands. So it is presumed, and so the Constitution has it. These men, however, all the world doth know, entered into a conspiracy to rob the public treasury, and, under color of law, did it to the amount of about $5,000 each.

It is no palliation that Democrats as well as Republicans had a hand in this. We know all that, and that some of them are capable of very mean things. But still it was a Republican Congress which passed the act, and a Republican President endorsed it and shared in the spoils.

I have no fitting words in which to denounce that transaction. So far as I know, it is the most flagrant act of public treachery ever performed under color of law in the United States of America. Oakes Ames may have been a swindler, and so may George O. Evans, but their conduct had the appearance of a business transaction, or of some service rendered, and hence some show of respectability, but this "back pay" swindle wears no mask, and makes no apology. Of itself it is enough to sink into everlasting reprobation, the party which assumed its responsibility, and the men who did the thing.

When the party was young, it rested on principle. Only patriots of high-souled integrity could bear its reproach. Corruption has kept pace with popularity. The Adams, the Geddings, the Hales, and the Sumners have disappeared, and with temptations to the spoils, the cormorants of the nation have rushed into it, and suck it while yet in the dew of its youth.

There has been recently reaction in the public mind with respect to political parties. But let not the old Democratic party lay the flattering unction to its soul that it has become, or ever can become, the favorite of the American people. It has made full proof of its fidelity in days gone by. There is chagrin that the Republican party has disappointed the just hopes of the people desiring settled peace. Hence the reaction. How far it may go, or how long it may continue, we presume not to say; only this:—The party which comes permanently into power will rise upon new issues. This, in the language of the great departed statesman, is "irrepressible."

No Enemies.

Indeed, no enemies, sailing smoothly heavenward! How do you live, brother? how do you preach, how do you pray? Do you rise up against the enemies of truth, as God commands, stand up against the works of iniquity, "reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine"? Do you suffer sin to rest upon your neighbor? Do you clear your skirts of the blood of souls? Do you cry aloud, spare not, lift up your voice like a trumpet, show the people their transgressions and the house of Jacob their sins? Do you search out every Achan, slay every Agag, and yet have no enemies? Friend, where is your cross, where your hopes, where your heaven? How was it with the holy prophets, apostles, the martyrs? How with Bunyan, Baxter, Wesley, Whitfield?

> "Must I be carried to the skies,
> On flowry beds of ease.
> While others fought to win the prize,
> And sailed through bloody seas?"

"He that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." "Wo to you when all men shall speak well of you." Says an interesting writer. "Heaven help the man who imagines he can dodge enemies by trying to please everybody! If such an individual ever succeeded, we should be glad to know of it. Wear your own colors, spite wind or weather, storms or sunshine. It costs the vaccilating and irresolute ten times the trouble to wind and shuffle and twist, that it does honest, manly independence to stand its ground. Take what time you please to make up your mind; having made up, stick to it. Half-way men are of no use: they can never get to heaven, they are not known in hell, and are not wanted on the earth."

D. F. NEWTON.

Notices.

The Seventh Anniversary of the National Christian Association will be held in the City of Pittsburgh, Pa., June 8th to 10th, 1875.

The National Christian Association.

PRESIDENT.—B. T. Roberts, Rochester, N. Y.

DIRECTORS.—Philo Carpenter, J. Blanchard, A. Wait, I. A. Hart, C. R. Hagerty, E. A. Cook, J. G. Terrill, O. F. Lumry. J. M. Wallace, Isaac Preston, Wm. Pinkney.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.—C. A. Blanchard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

RECORDING SECRETARY AND TREASURER.—H. L. Kellogg, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER.—J. P. Stoddard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

AUDITOR.—H. A. Fischer.

OBJECT.—"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved; to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

Life membership, $10.00; annual do, 25 cents. The names of members and general correspondence of the Association should be sent to the Corresponding Secretary. To carry on the increasing and successful lecture work by agents in different States and for promoting the general work of the Association donations of any amount are solicited from all friends of the reform. All donations or bequests should be sent to the Treasurer.

The Corresponding Secretary or his assistant may be seen at the Cynosure office from 9 to 11 A. M.

Important for our California Subscribers.

Bishop Weaver expects to visit California early next May and is willing to deliver a few Anti-masonic lectures at prominent points if they are arranged for beforehand.

Will all Cynosure readers who can obtain church or hall and arrange for one or two lectures on Masonry to be delivered in prominent places in California, by Bishop Weaver next May, ascertain what they can do in the matter, and write promptly to

C. A. BLANCHARD,
Cor. Sec'y. N. C. A.
13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Reform News.

—The General Agent started for Fenton, Michigan, on Friday last, to attend the State Convention on Tuesday and Wednesday. Reports of the new organization may be expected next week.

—J. T. Kiggins writes that he will for a short time be engaged in the work in Wayne, Henry and Hendricks counties, Ind., and desires his letters sent to No. 16 East South St., Indianapolis, until April 9th.

—The Illinois agent, excepting a visit to Chebanse reported last week, has been somewhat confined at home on account of sickness in his family. He expects to remove to Wheaton soon.

—Friends in Iowa, and all other places too, will be pleased with the introduction of Rev. James Hankins of Mason City whom they recommend for the State work. He has had serious experience inside the lodge, and it is believed can stand the storm now he is outside.

—Bro. Love sends more good news from the churches in western Missouri. We hope the progress of the reform in that section will bring frequent letters. It is due to say that part of his letter referring to politics has been reserved for a separate article.

From Walworth County, Wisconsin.

VIENNA, Wis., March 22, 1875.

BRO. KELLOGG:—Prof. C. A. Blanchard of Wheaton College, visited Spring Prairie, Walworth Co., Wis., on Saturday the 13th and lectured against secret societies, and especially the grange; and as in the days of Christ when he told the Jews of their hypocrisy they gnashed on him with their teeth, so in this place, and like Herod and Pilot, professed Christians and non-professors used the tongue of slander freely; yet there was a goodly number who heartily endorsed what the speaker said. On Sunday the 14th, Bro. Blanchard preached against the religion of Freemasonry. It was one of the best efforts I ever heard. On Monday evening he was to lecture against Masonry, but a severe storm hindered. May God in his providence send him this way again.

Yours in Christ,
M. R. BRITTEN.

From Bro. Caldwell's Work in Ohio.

BUCYRUS, O., March 17, 1875.

Editors Christian Cynosure:

I wish to let your readers know what the State Agent has been doing the last few weeks in this county. He has been laboring almost all the time, and there are many calls for lectures. Part of the time he talks direct to the grangers, reading to them what the Bible says about men that "love darkness rather than light." Those who profess to be religious seem to hate him heartily. I have been with him most of the time and love to see the grangers squirm. We have had great discussion about the women being blindfolded and a cloak thrown over them. They have told us several times that the cloak and blindfold was all false. But the secretary of the grange in Holmes township in trying to reply said their deputy told them that they need not use the blindfold. So much for getting them out of their dens. Bro. Caldwell spoke twice in Liberty township. Three meetings were held in Sandusky township. At Biddle church the class leader of the United Brethren church is a granger, and is said to be a Mason also. He tried to reply to Mr. Caldwell, but he was forgetful and his mouth would not work in the right direction. So he had to sit down and listen to an anti-secret laugh. Another gentleman tried the same, but he could not make a speech and down he went. Two grangers could not agree about the cloak. The grangers and the Masons think Rev. Caldwell had better stay at home for he is destroying the churches. My opinion is, if we had more men like Rev. Caldwell to preach the whole truth, the church would soon be rid of secret men. I have noticed that as soon as mention is made of secret societies and the Bible how quickly the grangers and the Masons begin to howl. All the grangers and other secret men can say in reply to Rev. Caldwell's speeches is to say he lies and misrepresents them. At one place where he spoke the grangers represented him as saying that none but lewd women joined the grange. Another said that he said that the women undressed all but their under clothes when they joined the grange. When they are asked to bring forth their proof they fail, and their last state is worse than their first. Last week three grangers attempted to reply to Rev. Caldwell's Bible argument against the grange. One was a deacon, one an infidel. Satan came with them to the door, got ashamed of himself and left them alone. The deacon said that Christ required his disciples to keep everything secret, Matt. xiv. 20; and vi. 3 and 4. In explaining Matt. v. 14–18, he said that referred to religion; that we should let our religion shine. The object of the grange was worldly, hence the Scripture had nothing to do with that.

G. W. PARK.

The Monthly Meeting in Southwestern Illinois.

COULTERSVILLE, Ill., March 18, 1875.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Another meeting in the interest of anti-secrecy has been held in our part of the country.

This meeting was held in the Reformed Presbyterian church in Sparta, on March 17th, at two o'clock P. M., pursuant to adjournment of a previous meeting in Coulterville. The meeting was called to order by Rev. Gillespie, in the absence of both the chairman and secretary of the previous meeting. Rev. Guthrie, D. D., was chosen chairman and J. M. Faris secretary. Prayer was offered by Rev. Wright.

It was resolved to spend a short time in devotional service. Portions of a few Psalms were sung and prayer offered. A committee appointed at the previous meeting to prepare resolutions reported. Their report was accepted and laid on the table for the present.

Rev. Henderson of Oakdale, having been previously appointed, delivered an able and appropriate address one hour and twenty minutes in length. It was the intention to have held an evening session, but on account of prayer-meetings in the place it was agreed to dispense with the evening meeting.

It was resolved to hold another meeting in Marissa on the third Tuesday of April, at one and a half o'clock P. M. The resolutions laid on the table will be the order of the next meeting, and an address by Rev. P. P. Boyd. The meeting adjourned with prayer by Rev. Smiley, singing of the portion of a Psalm and benediction.

I. A. FARIS, Sec'y.

The Cause in Steuben County, Ind.—Annual Meeting.

SALEM, Ind., March 12, '75.

We had our annual meeting of our anti-secret society on Friday evening, March 5th, and elected officers for the year 1875: President, D. D. Denison; Vice-president, S. S. Butler; Secretary, H. P. Butler; Treasurer, John Cary; Executive Committee, George W. King, Avery Emerson, George Cary. We some expected Mr. Kiggins to be present and give us a lecture, but in his absence we had a class meeting of our own, and at the close of our meeting voted to invite some man who has been a Mason to come and lecture for us, and Mr. Givens of this State was selected. We would like to have a man who has gone as far as the Royal Arch. The Masons here say that Masonry cannot be exposed and that if a seceding Mason comes to lecture he will not expose Masonry. Now we want a man that dares to say he has been a Mason and knows full well what Masonry is and will expose it. We do not want a man to come till the roads are settled in the spring unless he could come very soon.

H. P. BUTLER.

From Harrison County, Ohio.—The People Organizing.

DEERSVILLE, O., March 10, 1875.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—For the encouragement of the friends of moral reform, permit me space in your pages to say that we are "pushing things" in this locality. Recently Rev. George Richey of Pataskala, Licking Co., O., delivered three lectures at this place, in which he dealt terrible blows on the anti-Christian nature of secret societies. He sent the challenge in advance to the lodge that he would debate the proposition with any Mason: "That no man can be an intelligent Freemason and a Christian." But the fraternity acting on the principle that prudence is the better part of valor kept quiet, except two of them, who, to their great discomfort lost their jewel, which aided the cause of truth, as is always the case.

Rev. Richey assisted us in organizing an association opposed to secret societies in which are represented five different townships, and four different churches. We are to hold our next meeting on the 22d, to discuss the relation of secret societies to civil government and the Christian religion; at which time we propose to make arrangements to hold meetings and give lectures in the surrounding neighborhoods and townships, during which I shall do what I can to obtain subscribers for the Cynosure. I take pleasure in saying that the Wesleyan church in this place, of which I am pastor, is a unit on the anti-secrecy question.

Yours for truth, A. D. CARTER.

From Western Missouri.

PROGRESS IN CHURCH PURITY—LECTURES IN THE CIRCUIT COURT ROOM—A WHINING PREACHER—HONEST MEN LEAVING THE LODGE.

BAKER, St. Clair Co., Mo., March 12, 1875.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Since my last, considerable, and I think permanent, advance has been made. The work is growing. The people are eager to learn, and even the mystic brotherhood, although they are slow to learn, seem to be awaking to the fact that this movement is not to be silenced and crushed by threats, bold fronts, and grandiloquent talk about the antiquity and invincibility of the order. And so far as I have anything to do about presenting the issues of this contest to the "widow's sons" I give them to distinctly understand, that if they intend to try to snub the honest masses rallying to the support of this reform, the sooner they don their snubbers and get at the work, the better for them; and further, that the churches of this country can be run without them, for "God needs no man nor nation;" and that the fifteen sixteenths of our voting population, who are not Masons, are well able to manage the affairs and fill the offices of this government without drawing on their ranks for any aid whatever. . . .

Religiously our cause is growing. There is an under-current of dissatisfaction among all the churches about Masonry being in the church. This under-current has risen to the surface at Zebo Church (Baptist) Henry Co., Mo.; and as a result the church has divided and the truth-loving part of it, true to their principles, have organized upon a basis that shuts out from its membership all the adherents of the secret orders. And thus is the truth slowly but surely prevailing.

Allow me to add a few lines in regard to a couple of lectures delivered by the writer at Osceola, the county town of this county, on the evenings of the 5th and 6th inst. Notice of lectures had been given in the Osceola Sentinel, and as it was circuit court week there were people in town from all parts of the county, and quite a number of the legal profession from other counties. The use of the court-house was granted, and to a full house of intelligent and well-behaved citizens I spoke for an hour and a half; he first night on the claims of Masonry to antiquity, and upon the truthfulness of the Morgan exposition. The Masons behaved well, with the exception of one Royal Arch, who had more bad whisky in his stomach than judgment in his head. While tracing the exposition, all was still until I came to the letters on the key-stone. Here I read the verse in Revelation (which Bernard said they told him would enable him to expound the Word of God) in such way as to make the impression that that was what was on the key-stone. And as I had departed from the exposition they could now truthfully deny, which they lost no time in doing. The aforesaid Royal Arch was on his feet instanter with a flat denial. Another Royal Arch, a prominent citizen of the town, kindly came forward with his key to show me that I had made a wrong statement. After they had committed themselves, I then explained the design to the audience and read the true meaning of the initials. There was no denying then. The audience saw the point and the two royals took their seats and to reflect upon how much they had done to help me establish the truth of my proposition while the house was filled with the roar of laughter and shouts of applause. There was no more denying that even ing.

The evening of the 6th I spoke on the religion of Masonry, showing it to be false by comparing it with the standard by which all religions must be measured, viz., the system taught by our Saviour. The attention was good. When I came to the obligation of the Master Mason there was some questioning and higgling, but no denials. It was amusing to watch the actions of the craft. Some were composed, thoughtful, and even serious; others tried to take it easy and laughed when the audience did; while not a few chaffed under the remarks. After I closed, the Presbyterian minister, who is a Mason, and who by the way thought I had hewed so close to the line that I did'nt leave a Mason much of a chance to be a Christian, arose, made some pitiful remarks about some dear dead friends who had been Masons and against whom he seemed to think I had closed the door of heaven. (The remark I made was no man could be a Mason at heart and a Christian.) He then told a couple of Esop's fables, for the reason, I suppose, that he lacked brains to manufacture either fables or arguments of his own, and left the room before I could reply.

To speak against Masonry was a new thing to many. I had invitations to extend the lecture but want of time forbade it. I think good was done. I found a number of true friends to our cause. One Royal Arch, who is a pious and Christian man of fine mental powers, has told me since the lectures that he was glad in his heart that I spoke. He said I read the key-stone just right. He is heart and soul with us. Other Masons are getting bold enough to say they would be glad if the thing was forever done away. I trust it will not be long until we have the requisite number of Masons with us to establish the truthfulness of the revelations by living men in our own midst. I offered the thousand dollar guarantee in my lectures at Osceola, but it of course was not accepted. I will close this letter, already of greater length than interest, by promising in the future to write oftener and shorter.

Yours for the war. W. M. Love.

From Ashland County, O.

Albion, O., March 6, 1875.

Another gun has opened fire on the enemy in this locality, where Masonry, Odd-fellowship and the grange want to control everything. The speaker explained from good authority how to make a man a Freemason, a wonderful art; and then the grips and signs, how to know a brother Mason; then the swearing room, to keep all a profound secret, with the death-penalties. He did honor to himself, while he inflicted many wounds on the enemy, for they kept their jewel. But the Odd-fellows tried to shield and defend the Masons, which pressed the speaker to turn upon them and give them a withering shot which drove them to the wall, and to hug their chains, and with them their sins. The ice is broken I think in this locality. The speaker was Rev. John Cressinger of Sullivan. He spoke in a school-house, known as the Whitney School-house, Sullivan township, Ashland Co., O. More anon. A. C. Read.

Correspondence.

The Mansfield Convention—What the Lodge says of it.

West Unity, O., March 20, 1875.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

We find some of our newspapers, especially those under Masonic control, considerably exercised in reference to our convention, met in Mansfield in Feb. last, on account of its being—some say a fraud; some, a farce, &c. Coming from such high authority, (for we know of no persons who would be more likely to be good judges of a first-class fraud or farce than the disciples of "Hiram") we propose to notice some of their remarks. The Bryan Democrat notices it in this wise: "The anti-secret society shriekers had their little meeting, and said their little say at Mansfield, but the world wags on as usual." Now we think that if willful murder, as in the case of Morgan and others, fails to check the wheels of time, it would be folly to expect the world to come to a full stop on account of our little meeting at Mansfield; but those who were there and saw the crowd and heard the speeches, we think would be best qualified to judge as to the question. Was the Democrat well informed as to the size and ability of the meeting? Again in an article in the same paper, also headed "The Anti-Secret Society Shriekers" and dated, Mansfield, O., Feb. 18th, he says: "Professor Fairchild of Oberlin, made a very liberal speech this evening, which was well received by both sides." As the Professor spoke from manuscript we hope the fraternity will get a copy, and have it published, so that all may see just what will please both sides. We will admit that it did seem rather mild, compared with the speeches made by Prof. J. P. Stoddard, Rev. R. H. Pollock, D. D., of Wooster; Rev. H. H. George, D. D., of West Geneva; Prof. J. G. Carson and others, yet he did tell us, "There is no end to the mischief Masonry brings;" and again, "Masonry must change its nature, and blot out its history, before it can be entitled to the confidence of an enlightened people." But the position of President George, and Professor Carson in reference to the communion of Christians with the members of secret societies, is what seems to strike our cable-towed friends between wind and water; and we trust that the time is not far distant when all anti-secretists will take the same position that they did forty-five years ago on the question of church fellowship with secret societies. What church would think of receiving Tom Paine, or one of his followers into its communion? Why they would be most likely to say, They reject the Bible. Now we see but little difference between rejecting the whole Bible with Paine, or a portion of it with the Mason. If Paine did put the Bible on a level with fables, how much less does Masonry do that puts it on a level with the Koran or any other book that a superstitious people might deem sacred?

But to show the difference between Christianity and Masonry a little clearer, let us suppose an old-fashioned class meeting in heaven. The Redeemer opens the meeting by saying, "I spake openly and in secret have I said nothing." Paul follows, "While on earth I kept back nothing that was profitable unto them. I am pure from the blood of all men, for I did not fail to declare the whole council of God." Now let us suppose some Masonic minister, who had strayed from the "Grand Lodge above," following something after this fashion. "Down where I used to live Masonry was very popular, in fact from some cause or other but few ministers got good positions or fat salaries that were not Masons, therefore, of my own free will and accord, uninfluenced by any mercenary motive, I appealed for admission, and was received of course. I must admit that I found quite a number of very profane men in the lodge, and some who did not pay a proper regard to the seventh commandment, yet the institution was very popular with our church, and our church was very popular with the institution. I learned some things of the Bible that I was of course not permitted to communicate to the profane world, this would have been very unmasonic in me, and I should have been expelled from the lodge, besides marking myself liable to that very common Masonic epithet a 'perjured old villain.' But just here let me state, I never found anything in the lodge that interfered with my politics, or my religion."

We think that for the sake of "harmony in heaven" it would be necessary for all such ministers to be—some where else. J. G. Mattoon.

Local Politics at Linden, Mich.

In view of the State meeting at Fenton, in the immediate vicinity the following extract from a late letter will be of general interest:

It is doleful to know that such institutions exist among us, and the masses slumbering on in innocence and ignorance, with such danger hanging over them. This state of affairs must be averted, and I know of only one way to do it; that is, to buckle on the armor of Christian and political warfare. Fight them with the weapons of truth and right, in the churches and in politics until they are subjugated; then keep them so. The only way to start the ball is to labor with the masses, arouse them, wake them up, and when thoroughly awake do as we did at our corporation election this spring. The challenge was thrown out by the Masons in nominating a ticket of Masons, which had been calculated upon for months, and they felt sure would be elected with the help of "Jacks" of which they have several here; but this was met by a ticket of good, substantial men gotten up on the spur of the moment, and which was elected by an overwhelming majority. The most glorious day for our little village for years; it far exceeded in glory the abortive attempt of the fraternity to make a magnificent and public display last summer. The gauntlet has been thrown down by them for years, but the people have failed to see and accept it. But let them be aroused now, and we will serve them nationally, as little Linden did corporately.

A Lover of Justice.

Linden, Mich., March 9, 1875.

The Great Ring.

While the muzzled editors of nearly all the muzzled newspapers of the United States are winking and telling their readers all about the little rings that are robbing all the town, city, County, state and national treasuries, perhaps it will not be out of the way to tell only a little bit about the great ring to which nearly all these editors belong. And, if we suggest that these winking editors of the blinking newspapers all wear leather specs when they look at the sly work of their sly brethren of the square and compasses, will any one wonder if people who wear such spectacles don't get well paid for it by the leaders of the little rings?

And, after all, is not the Masonic brotherhood only an enormous gang of banditti, bound together by bloody oaths, like pirates and highwaymen, whose main object is to take advantages of unsuspecting or defenseless men, women, and children?

And, again, is it not evident that Freemasonry is a system devised by dishonest men for the purpose of obtaining advantages over outsiders? And, if a thief is a person who slyly takes anything, what are we to call those who cunningly take advantages, great or small? If such persons are not thieves in principle and thieves in practice, I fail to see why they are not.

E. J. CHALFANT.

York, Pa.

The Prince of Wales.

In the public press, the news reaches us that the Prince of Wales has taken the highest degree in Masonry, and also sits as Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of England.

Thanks to the Cynosure for letting us see all that is implied in this high (!) honor. We trust that Elder Bernard's book, entitled "Light on Masonry," will never go out of print till this system is thoroughly exposed to the world. It is as much needed now as ever, though, as a Master Mason some time ago informed me on the Canada Southern R. R. that this book was doing the lodge no harm, for it was used as a text book in the initiating of candidates in the higher degrees!

Thus Freemasons do candidly confess that their secrets are now accurately revealed. What shall we say then of men who are willing to be hood-winked, and dragged into Masonry, knowing beforehand its deistical, idolatrous and anti-Christian tendency?

How can the Prince of Wales reconcile his place in the Grand Lodge with his requirements as the heir presumptive to the throne of the British Empire? From the revelations made known through your work, this is impossible. He stands to this secret fraternity like hundreds of thousands of your own citizens, disloyal to the Magna Charta they have sworn to defend. This has been clearly proven in every case in which a contest has been waged between the lodge and the powers that be. Masonic oaths and obligations have ever been found paramount to the law of the land.

We trust that by the grace of God, all who are bound in the meshes of this soul-enslaving ordinance shall escape.

If there is anything which, more than another, fills us with admiration or our beloved Queen and her late truly amiable and excellent consort, Prince Albert, it is her devotion to her people and the impartial manner in which she has ever executed her law. It pained her husband to find that doubts had been cast on the fact of his being at heart a thorough Protestant. Yet no such charges were ever brought against Prince Albert as those which your excellent paper shows may be brought legitimately against His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, touching his religion.

Should this brief note merit a place in your columns and ever meet the eye of the Prince, I hope it may lead him to renounce the friendship of a fraternity far from being above suspicion. By continuing his present relations he can never expect God's blessing. What could the prayers of state sycophants, bribed by money, ever avail with heaven that God would prosper one who was publicly leagued with Satan for the overthrow of the church of Christ, and the establishment of idolatry on its ruins.

J D.

London, Ont.

My Previous and Present Thoughts.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

Immediately after my conversion, four years ago, and after I had joined the church of the United Brethren in Christ, my mind began to be exercised more or less in regard to the question of secrecy. I said but little to any one on the subject, and continued to think the more. Finally, I saw a book bearing the title, "Masonic Conspiracy." by Rev. John Levington, which was placed in my possession for perusal at leisure, and which I read. Yet my mind was not free from scepticism, and I would imagine that a great deal more was written against the institution of Masonry then was necessary or really true. I did not doubt the sincerity of the author of that book, and yet, I thought there could be possibly some room allowed for the excited condition of the mental man, upon this, as upon any other theme. Still I "pondered these sayings in my heart," and after a time, I saw another book, (the world is full of books) which purported to disclose all about Freemasonry even by its own clan. I looked at that book, it was in a secrecy sympathizing family, and weighed it well, and came to the conclusion that it was a "sell," gotten up by the fraternity as a screen, behind which to conceal their real secret motives, designs, and plans. I continued to go "forward" and thoughts of Masonry increasingly multiplied and together with the thoughts of a new heart, which I had recently received. I also felt impressed with the duty of preaching the Gospel. This latter impression would not leave me for a moment. I also, about this time, made the acquaintance of a family of Christians who, I thought, were over-zealous in regard to the secrecy question, because I rarely heard them express themselves on the subject of religion, but the poor Masons, as I had it, were keeping in a hot crucible by this family and subjected to the most intense scathing.

I thought much of that holy and responsible duty which seemed imperatively demanded of me by the Almighty, and while meditating in silence, the thoughts of regeneration, of a call to the ministry, and of secrecy, would each in turn demand a place in my mind. At one time I nearly came to the determination that after I had entered the ministry, (although I knew it was contrary to our book of Discipline) and had occasion to open the doors of the church to admit members, I never would demean myself by asking if either were members of a secret order. I thought it would be none of my business, and very much out of place in one to do so. More than this, I thought that if Jesus could pardon the sins of a member of a secret order and recieve him, the church ought certainly to do as much as to extend the right hand of fellowship. At this very time I wrote to this effect a letter to the Telescope, our church organ, but I suspect that it was righteously hurried into the waste basket. But the longer I lived, the more I saw, heard and read, the more deeply I became convinced, that secrecy was arrayed directly in opposition to the Holy Bible. And not only so but it is against the science of good government, like the battering rams of ancient times, it is arrayed in opposition to the establishment and progress of every good and glorious cause on earth. I am no longer bestride the fence; no longer a "lean to" for secrecy; but I am an "out and out" anti-secrecy advocate. "know I the Rock from whence I am hewn," and I must believe that all who do have an experimental knowledge of sins remitted, must be ashamed to uphold either directly or indirectly such a Christless institution as Freemasonry is.

GEO. H. VARCE.

OUR MAIL.

Andrew Pontius, Sycamore, O., writes:

"I have been a Mason of three degrees, and I know Masonry is a corrupt thing which is leading our government to ruin; and I believe that it will destroy all churches that it is connected with."

Wm. McCullough, Cadwallader, O., writes:

"Last week Rev. George Richey of Licking county gave us three lectures in Deersville. Among the best I ever heard on Masonry. We had a large attendance."

Rev. J. S. Amidon, Findley's Lake, N. Y., writes:

"I prize the Cynosure very highly for its outspoken opposition to all organized oath bound secrecy, and its moral and highly religious character I do not feel willing to do without it. It has been a welcome weekly visitor in my family for two years. I have in the past year labored for its circulation, but not with that success I would be pleased to see. With some the complaint is hard times. With others the complaint is 'you can never break up these secret societies and there is no use of trying;' but this shows how little faith they have in the truth and the God of truth. We have only to look on the past and present to see that our cause is moving onward even beyond the most sanguine expectations of its friends. We expect Rev. J. L. Barlow, our State lecturer, to be here some time in April."

A. B. Sherk, Port Elgin, Ont., writes:

"The secret orders are pretty well represented in this section. We have Masons, Orangemen, Sons of Temperance, Good Templars, Patrons of Husbandry, and I just learned that an effort is being made to organize a lodge of Odd-fellows in this town. Last Sabbath the Masons had a grand funeral at Southampton, five miles from here. I am informed that the fraternity had representatives from different sections of the province. They buried the body of James Adair. He is said to have been one hundred years of age, and one of the oldest Masons in the dominion. There is, however, nothing said about his being a Christian. The services connected with his burial were, as a matter of course, 'very impressive.' Now it is almost time something were done to stir up the 'secretists' in this section. For this purpose we want tracts, &c. to scatter light.'"

J. C. Washburn, Salem, Kan., writes:

"I am in a land of famine of soul as well as body. For the men that will step out upon the platform of God's truth and declare all of the council of God and even that part which pertains to secret societies are hard to be found. God has blessed me and anointed me with the oil of gladness in a most glorious manner. I have met with much opposition from professed followers of the Lord Jesus and especially from those who in theory profess better things. God pity men who hold to principles imbodied in their discipline and dare not stand up for them in the face of opposition."

Benj. Ulsh, Silver Lake, Ind., writes:

"I received those books (one hundred and twenty-one) and have sold sixty-seven of them already. We meet with heavy opposition but the cause is on the advance. We need help, by way of lectures. I will send you some money as soon as I get to Warsaw."

We publish the above because its stirring, business ring pleases us and may possibly interest our readers.

Wm. Gassett, Hutton, Ill., writes:

"I have given away all the Cynosures received and people are beginning to think more particularly."

Geo. Hays, Hamilton, Mo., writes:

"I send the paper and the tracts broadcast."

Henry W. Steele, Canton, Dakotah Ter., writes:

"We have a copy of 'Finney on Masonry' and are keeping it out among the people. There are some here who have known brother Finney in former years, a three degree Mason who was converted under his preaching is now a United Brethren preacher and headed one of those petitions."

Silas Waldron, Norfolk, N. Y., writes:

"I read your paper and then give it to my neighbors. Especially to those that I think are inclined to Masonry; and I think my labor is not lost. . . Our pastor is not a Mason; but two class leaders and the steward are Masons. . . I am seventy-one years old yet I give them battle at times."

Daniel Thomas, Fairmount, Ind., sends four new subscriptions and writes that he will look after others.

Jacob Sceamahorn, Lockport, Ind., writes:

"This part of God's land is taken by the troups of darkness."

Chas. H. Read, Breckenridge, Mo., writes:

"I will be glad when men and especially those who profess to be followers of Christ will leave the worship of Satan in the lodge. For such is all that I consider it to be."

Chas. S. Lowrie, Hazelton, Mich., writes:

"We have a few Masons in our neighborhood and quite a good many that think there is no harm in it; they are not willing to post themselves. We have a few that are Anti-masons. May the Lord hasten the time when the works of darkness shall come to naught."

A. W. May, Cornland, Ill., writes:

"I have been a reader of your paper for four months. I heard of the paper and went twelve miles for a copy. The paper has far surpassed my expectations. I have four weekly and two monthly papers. I would stop all of them before the Cynosure. The platform in March the 11th, 1875, is so complete I cannot see any place to amend. May God pour out his light on the hearts of the people of this great nation so that they may become aroused in time to stop the ship before she goes over the great cataract of destruction. I have been a member of the Methodist Episcopal church for twenty-three years. I saw the great hydra-head seven years ago. I did not feel free to support pastors that were Freemasons then, and for the last four years I have refused to pay. I never will pay another cent to an adhering Mason as pastor. I am thankful to God that there are some that are not asleep. I know that no man can be a Christian and an intelligent Mason at the same time."

T. C. Hahn, Kirwin, Kan., writes:

"I am a member of the United Brethren church and have opened hostilities against the grange, as many are joining in order to try to get some help in their time of need. This is a trying time for some Christians. By request of the quarterly conference held at my house last Saturday, Elder R. Loggan, presiding elder of this district lectured on secrecy and church government. It has caused quite a buzz in the grange circles Brother Loggan read their oaths (obligations) and explained their constitution and secret working. Some were convinced of their wrong. Some would hear again of this matter; while others do not want to hear anything."

T. C. Appleton, Aurora, Ont., writes:

"I hope the time is not far distant when the church will arouse to do her duty. We have a Masonic lodge and an Odd-fellow's lodge. The Odd-fellows had a ball last night and some professors of religion and Sabbath-school teachers were drawn in and took part in it and yet there is hardly a person that will say a word against them."

C. W. Sterry, Rowe, Ill., writes:

"I believe the Cynosure to be engaged in a most worthy cause, and therefore wish it good success."

C. W. Dain, Norwich, N. Y., writes about names on his petition:

"I have solicited the ministry, not one could be got in this place. All tied up to some lodge. Most all to Masonry. . . I find not scarcely a man who dares open his mouth against the lodges to-day. But, thank God, light is breaking."

John Maxwell, Flat Rock, Ill., writes:

"I have been opposed to Freemasonry and all her secret handmaids since I was a man grown. I am now nearly seventy years. I cannot think that a man can be a Christian and a Freemason at the same time, as we cannot serve God and mammon both. We will hold to the one or the other. I also believe that secret societies are a great curse. I am at war with them and expect to be while I live. I belong to the associate church generally called seceders, which never admits persons belonging to any secret society to her communion."

The Sabbath School.

Lesson for April 11th, 1875.—The Promise Broken.

Judges ii. 11–16.

11 And the children of Israel did evil in the sight of the Lord, and served Baalim:

12 And they forsook the Lord God of their fathers, which brought them out of the land of Egypt, and followed other gods, of the gods of the people that were round about them, and bowed themselves unto them, and provoked the Lord to anger.

13 And they forsook the Lord, and served Baal and Ashtaroth.

14 And the anger of the Lord was hot against Israel, and he delivered them into the hands of spoilers that spoiled them, and he sold them into the hands of their enemies round about, so that they could not any longer stand before their enemies.

15 Whithersoever they went out, the hand of the Lord was against them for evil, as the Lord had said, and as the Lord had sworn unto them: and they were greatly distressed.

16 Nevertheless, the Lord raised up judges which delivered them out of the hands of those that spoiled them.

COMMIT TO MEMORY, vrs. 11, 12.

PARALLEL PASSAGES.—1 Kings xi. 6; Neh. ix. 28.

SCRIPTURE READINGS.—Did evil (verse 11), see uses of this phrase, Judges iii. 7; iv. 1, and compare 1 kings xv. 5; "provoked the Lord," (v. 12), see Deut. xxxi. 16, 17; concerning "Baal" (v. 13), see Numb. xxii. 41; and "Ashtaroth," 1 Sam. vii. 3; as to "spoiler"s (v. 14), see 2 Kings xvii. 20; with v. 15, compare Josh. i. 9; aud upon "the Lord has sworn," see Lev. xxvi. 37.

GOLDEN TEXT.—They soon forgat his works, they waited not for his counsel.—Ps. cvi. 13.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—Men rob God.

HOW DID THE APOSTACY BEGIN?—By positive disobedience as to the inhabitants of the land. Contrary to God's command, they not only tolerated but made leagues with them (v. 2); a step so grave that the anger of the Lord rebuked them at Bochim, and a temporary repentance was the result (v. 4). But only temporary! The people of the land had their local, ancient gods. The sentiment of the whole surrounding region was with them. Usages, customs, indulgences, society, traditions, amusements, festivities, all were in the direction of the old worship. It imposed no restraint on human lusts and passions. On the contrary, it provided for them. The young Israelties, as they grew up, thought their fathers, the elders, too strict. "Times had changed. They were not narrow or bigoted. They were liberal. There was a great deal of good in all religions. They rather liked Baal-worship; it expressed some fine ideas." So they mingled with its adherents, they joined them; they forsook God.

WHAT CONSEQUENCES FOLLOWED?—Instead of their being strengthened by him against their foes, they were "sold," given over, delivered into the hands of the plunderers, "spoilers" only occurring once more (1 Kings xvii. 20). In early unsettled life, wandering hordes moved to and fro, living by plunder (see 1 Sam. xxxiii. 1), and resting like the Huns, Goths, Vandals and modern Bedouin, where they were comfortable.

The Hebrews in vain made head against them (v. 15). Joshua xxiii. 9, 10, is reversed, and Deut. xxviii. 25, fulfilled; and they get no help from their adopted brethren!—S. S. World.

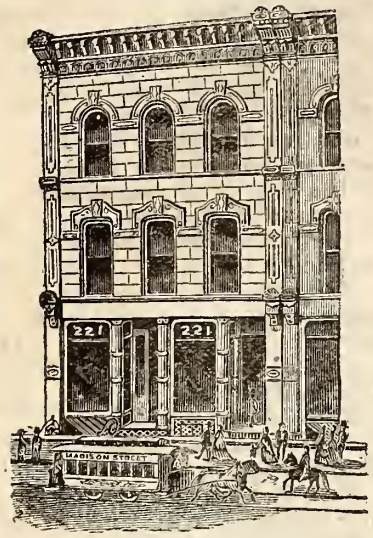
"They disliked the service of God and the communion of saints. They chose the fellowship of sinners, and felt the consequences. The cruel gods made cruel people, even their 'tender mercies are cruel.' Wicked men use traitors, but they neither love or respect them."

A Chronological Table.

OF SOME OF THE MOST IMPORTANT EVENTS IN POPERY.

[Concluded from last week.]

	A. D.
John XVII. appointed the feast of "All souls."	1003
Thirteen pious persons were burned alive in France for denying the doctrines of transubstantiation and the worship of images.	1017
The decree of the pope commanding the celebacy of the clergy met with great opposition in Germany.	1020
Gregory VI. received the keys when there were three popes extant at the same time.	1046
Leo IX. is the first pope that kept a standing army.	1054
Nicholas II. confined the election of the pope to the college cardinals.	1059
Infallibility made an article of faith.	1076
The first crusade to the Holy Land in which 800,000 men were induced to enlist by a bull of absolution of all their sins by the Pope.	1096
The rosary and crown were introduced in honor of the Virgin Mary.	1130
Celestin II. invented that mad manner of cursing with "Bell, Book and Candle."	1143
The sect of Henricians was formed.	1147
The sect of Gibbertines formed.	1148
Henry II. King of England conquered Ireland and forced the popish religion on the inhabitants.	1171
The principles of the Inquisition were first published in a constitution by Pope Lucius in the Council of Verona.	1184
The Inquisition was set up in Thoulouse by Pope Innocent III.	1208
The sect of the Franciscans formed.	1209
Innocent III. established the doctrine of transubstantiation as an article of faith.	1215
Papal supremacy an article of faith.	1215
The sect of the Dominicans formed.	1215
Innocent III. imposed auricular confession on the people.	1216
Honorius III. introduced the elevation of the Host.	1217
Kneeling at the sacrament commanded by Pope Honorius III.	1218
The words, "Hic Deum adora," "Worship God here," were written on the tabernacle that contained the Host for the sick.	1220
The superintendence of the Inquisition committed to the Dominicans.	1233
The Council of Beziers gave the Inquisition a constitution of thirty-seven articles.	1245
The sect of the Mathurines formed.	1257
The festival of the holy sacrament institu'ed.	1264
Boniface III. instituted the famous jubilee to be celebrated every hundredth year.	1300
Urban III., in his famous Bull, declared that it was necessary to salvation for every human creature to be in subjection to the Roman Pontiff.	1302
The seat of the popes transferred to Avignon in France for seventy years, during fifty of which there were two popes and sometimes three reigning at once, who did little else but hurl anathemas at each other and their adherents.	1308
The Council of Constance (sess. 13) decreed that although Christ administered the sacrament after supper in both kinds, yet it ought not to be received after supper but fasting, and that the bread only ought to be given to the Laity, and that the Patriarchs must effectually punish all who transgress this decree.	1414
In England it was made death and confiscation of property to read the Bible in English or be a heretic.	1414
The Council of Constance publicly burned John Huss alive for being a heretic.	1415
Purgatory established as an article of faith by Pope Eugene in the Council of Florence.	1430
Paul II. enriched his mitre with all manner of precious stones, conferred a scarlet gown on his cardinals, and fixed the jubilee to twenty-five years.	1463
Indulgences were granted to all who would celebrate an annual festival in honor of the immaculate conception of the Virgin Mary.	1476
Alexander VI. died of a poisoned draught which he took in mistake that he had prepared for some of his cardinals.	1503
John Tetzel collected in the space two days, by the sale of indulgences, 2,000 florins.	1507
The Inquisition was more perfectly established by a Bull of Pope Clement VIII.	1525
The order of Jesuits was formed by Ignatius Loyala, a wild fanatic.	1540
The Council of Trent was convened which sat for the space of eighteen years.	1545
Seven sacraments made an article of faith.	1547
The Inquisition was established in ships on sea.	1571
On St. Bartholomew's day the sanguinary papists in Paris, murdered 10,500 unoffending Protestants; in a few days, after 60,000 more.	1572
The gunpowder plot was discovered which had been laid at the instigation of Pope Paul V., with a design to destroy the principal Protestants in England, Ireland and Scotland.	1605
The Jesuits expelled from England.	1604
The Jesuits expelled from Venice.	1606
Gregory XV. founded at Rome the magnificent college, "De propaganda fide," for the propagation of the Popish religion through every part of the globe.	1622
200,000 Protestants were murdered by the blood-thirsty Papists in Ireland.	1641
The privateers of Bristol took up a galleon in which they found 500 bales of popes' bulls of indulgences; sixteen reams in a bale, varying in price from 25 cents for the poor, to $55.00 for the rich; in all amounting in value to $21,000,000.	1709
The Jesuits banished from the kingdom of Portugal.	1759
The order of the Jesuits banished from France by royal edict.	1763
The Jesuits were expelled from Spain and Sicily.	1767
Pope Clement IV. suppressed the order of Jesuits entirely in all popish countries.	1773
Pope Pius VI. died the prisoner of Buonaparte.	1779
Buonaparte compelled Pius VII. to crown him in	1804
And deprived him of all his territories in	1808
Pius VII. excommunicated Buonaparte and all his army.	1810
Napoleon overthrew the Spanish Inquisition.	1813
The Spanish Inquisition was reestablished.	1814
Pope Pius VII. re-established the order of Jesuits.	1814
The Douay Bible containing horrible and murderous notes, was published under the sanction of the Catholic Archbishops of Ireland, but was subsequently suppressed.	1816
The Bull of Pope Pius VII. against Bible societies was published.	1816
The sect of the Trappists instituted.	1818
The Purgatorian Society was formed in Clarendon Street Chapel, Dublin, Ireland; the object of which was to collect money to hire the Catholic clergy to celebrate masses for the relief of the suffering souls in purgatory.	1819
The Inquisition at Velencia was broken open by the revolutionists and 500 prisoners released from its dismal cells.	1820
A stereotype edition of the Rhemish Testament was printed by R. Coyne, Catholic bookseller, Dublin, Ireland.	1820
Another stereotype edition of the Rhemish Testament was printed by Eugene Commiskey, Catholic priest in Philadelphia. The writer bought a copy of each of them in his store. Both were sold for authentic translations of the New Testament, and on a careful examination 3,520 differences were found between them, and in 1 Cor. xv. a direct contradiction!	1829
A bill passed by the British Parliament was signed by the king to prevent the increase of the Jesuits in the British dominions.	1829



The above is an imperfect list of the enormities of the apostate church of Rome, with the date of the introduction of each, which may not in every single case be exactly correct, but certainly approximate the truth so closely as not to invalidate any one of the charges in the slightest degree. The church of Rome, as she now exists bears all the marks and characteristics of the great apostasy which was to last 1,260 years as foretold by Daniel the prophet (Dan. vii. 19–27); by St. Paul (2 Thes. ii. 2–12; 1 Tim. iv. 1–3; 2 Tim. iii. 1–9); and by St. John (Rev. xiii. 1–7).

SPECTATOR.

Atlanta, Ga.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 1, 1875.

THE CARPENTER DONATION.

Idolatry is a fundamental sin. It is a personal affront to the Almighty, placing the thing idolized on a level with himself. And who would remain one hour in a house where he was placed by the inmates on a level with the animals, or things in that house.

But Freemasonry is idolatry, putting God on a level with Baal, Christ with Mohammed, and the Bible with the Koran. Such is idolatry in itself considered. But when we remember that "Satan and his angels" are the gods of all human idolatries, inhabiting the shrines, receiving the worships, and displacing God from human allegiance, how fearful must be the doom of Freemasons when they "fall into the hands" of that God whom Freemasonry insults and dethrones!

The man who deserts right principles at the bidding of circumstances is wicked. But he who acts, as though there were no circumstances, nothing but principles, is insane. For the circumstances which surround a man are a part of God's truth, which his providence is revealing every hour; and it is either stupidity or madness to disregard it.

The rule is that expediency must be always overruled by principle when they conflict, as the common law is silent where the statute has spoken.

OUR HOUSE AND HOME.

The picture of this handsome building greets our readers in this number of the Cynosure. Our readers will hail it with renewed thanks, to the donor, and to God who has raised him up to stand in the breach which the deluge of darkness is making in the walls of "Zion, City of our God."

Mr. Stoddard informs us that he has one-fifth of the first ten thousand dollars requisite to secure the full occupancy, rents, etc., of the property, already raised. At this rate (he has but just begun) one-half of the whole thirty thousand ought to be raised before the 8th of June meeting at Pittsburgh, and the whole sum before our anniversary closes. If this can be done, darkness itself would turn pale, and daylight streak the east.

Mr. Carpenter has consulted the best legal advisers and made the terms for the good of the cause and not for his own. If the beloved Gerrit Smith were here, think we he would not place this great center and home of reform on a safe footing? Let those who survive him do this thing with their might;—

"Since no device nor work is found
Nor faith, nor hope, beneath the ground."

The Association will accept interest-bearing notes, payable at the donor's option during his life by himself, or by his executors after his departure. This is better, far better than putting property into a will, which can be disputed by heirs, or endangered by Masonic county officials. Surely this is benevolence to give us thirty thousand dollars, and the property should rate at that, if we in this whole land will raise an equal sum.

WHAT NEXT?

A few readers of the Cynosure have remonstrated with us by letter against its utterances respecting H. W. Beecher, and the editors have concurred with the said remonstrants in the undesirableness of filling our columns with the trial for adultery. We have never given one word in vindication of Tilton, Mrs. Tilton, Moulton, or Bowen. That Mr. Beecher has had the first three named as his chosen and cherished associates and bosom friends; with Oliver Johnson for his office editor, who says under oath that he is a consulter of spirits, a Universalist and a Unitarian, we have long insisted, was sufficient to settle Mr. Beecher's character with all men who fear God or value his truth, without a conviction in a Brooklyn court. What was he with those persons for? Sundays and week-days; months and years? What fundamental truth of the Bible has he not disparaged or denied? He has called the Eternal Father a dim and imperfectly conceived "effluence." He has denied the proper deity and humanity of the Son. He has burlesqued baptism, professing willingness to immerse the same man once a week. He procured the dropping out of future punishment from the Plymouth creed. He has advocated running cars, and opening libraries and art galleries on the Sabbath. And, when assailed for any of these errors, he has in some instances, with shocking facility, professed by implication their opposites! And if we take as proof his own letters, published and acknowledged genuine, he is a person with whom

'No pledge is sacred and no home is sweet.'

But we were scarcely ourselves prepared for his late article "About a red hat," by which sign the Pope of Rome has made Archbishop McCloskey of New York, a Cardinal. In this editorial, he ridicules the fears of popery, which the historian Hume, himself prelatist and skeptic, declares to be a "perpetual plot" against churches and nations. He (Mr. Beecher) bullies and browbeats all papers which warn the public against papal aggression thus:—"We expect that the next issues of the "Protestant Bull-dog" and "The foe of Popery" will declare that we are at once an infidel and a papist. Nevertheless, we make bold to wish Dr. McCloskey joy of his 'red hat," etc., etc. Just as if "infidel and papist" was an impossible combination. The Jacobin club of Paris and the anti-Bible school board of Cincinnati were both made up of papists and infidels; the first deceiving men, and the other denying God.

NEW POLITICS.

"It is high time for men to recognize that party names have lost their value, and to cast their votes upon an independent estimate of their effect upon the great questions of time."

We clip the above from a widely-read paper which is altogether guiltless of reform. It is the sentiment of multitudes of thinking men. But the great question is how and what are we to do? We did well to issue a platform from Oberlin, though our morning star had scarce then shone above the national horizon dusky with sworn secrecy. Another Presidential election is now nearing us. What shall we do next? We have now grown so considerable that our nomination of a candidate, and his acceptance would, of course, destroy him for any other party, while, if we do not nominate, and the the two main parties should be nearly balanced, and one of their candidates should be a Mason and the other not, we might cast votes enough to defeat the sworn devotee of the secret empire. Mr. Carpenter inclines to think perhaps we had better make local issues against the lodge in towns, counties, and even States, where we can, and when the two great selfish parties are in deadlock help defeat the worst candidate, if his opponent is not a lodgeman.

This would satisfy our notions of political morals. The State being a league in which bad and good men; children of the world, and children of God unite and co-operate, so that non-regeneracy does not disfranchise a man and take away his vote, we do not feel compelled to the same strictness in state as in church relations. Yet we are clear that an adhering Mason is an alien in fact, and has, in equity and propriety, no right to vote or hold office under our government whose laws he is sworn to evade and help others to evade.

The question of nominating or providing for nominating federal candidates at Pittsburgh, is therefore, with us, a question of sound prudence and discretion. Mr. Needles of Missouri, and others, are in favor of nominating, and any ten or one thousand men have, in this country, the right to nominate, or write and cast their individual votes, on the day of election, against the candidates of the lodge.

The plan which Mr. Carpenter suggests, of making local nominations till we get a strong paper or two in each State, has much to recommend it, though it will in some places endanger the temperance and other good causes in counties where a Masonic issue would divide and weaken other needed reforms. It is now a good time to consider these questions of wisdom and duty, while we are all cool, and only determined on the one point of doing our utmost, living and dying, to cast secret alienism out of American politics, and idolatry out of our religion.

The Circuit Court is sustaining the decision of the lower courts against dramselling in Du Page county, this State, and we hear the most cheering news of this reform from all quarters. The skies are everywhere brightening and the shadows must soon flee away.

NOTES.

—The Friends are moving slowly and cautiously, but surely, on the question of secret societies. In Iowa they are leaving the grange and though their quarterly meetings are making efforts to have well-defined action taken on the secret society question in the yearly meeting at Oskaloosa next September, and incorporated into their discipline.

—Miss Emma Allen of Seneca Falls, N. Y., who will be recollected for the interesting part she volunteered to fill at the Syracuse Convention last year, is lecturing on temperance and other social interests with popular effect.

—During the next six months books will be opened for subscriptions for a suitable monument to the memory of the loved Adam Crooks. Many of our readers will rejoice in an opportunity to contribute to such a fund.

—The expenses of the National Grange last year were about $160,000—a snug little sum for the State lecturers to be happy for, when they magnify the wrongs of the farmers and denounce cut-throat monopolies. This is the cost of the central office only, remember.

—The grange membership in Ohio is reported to be 65,000 in 1,146 granges. Delaware has just formed a State grange, from eighteen subordinate bodies and 1,000 membership. Kansas reports at the close of the year 1,360 granges, with 39,681 members. One hundred and eighty-six of these grangers are delinquent.

—The New York Freemasons are preparing for a great ado on the 2d of June next, at the dedication of a new Masonic temple. Grand Master Thorne has sent around the country and to foreign parts and expects the largest procession "ever seen in any city in the world." This is to be understood Masonically. Last summer the Masons were to be in procession by the ten thousand in Chicago, but there were more newsboys and bootblacks than the fraternity could muster.

—The Boston News of the 22d ult. reports from Groveland, Essex county, Mass., "At the late town meeting the anti-secret society portion voted solidly against the acceptance of any person on the jury list who was a member of any secret society. A number of Masons and others joined the movement.

—The secretists of New York State have formed a "Juvenile Templar" Society, of which a Mrs. M. B. O'Donnell is Chief Superintendent. Such zealous but misguided persons are little apt to reflect on the effect of their senseless rituals and secret pledges on young minds; but they are surely opening the door to a flock of greedy vampires that suck the blood of souls.

—One of the results of the Beecher trial is the knocking over of reputations of some standing. This is one instance: "Mr. Wilkinson, a leading partner of the Christian Union, counseled as a means of stopping Tilton's revelations to insert lauditory articles concerning him as editor of the Golden Age in the Independent and Christian Union, which was accordingly done. That is, two so-called Christian papers boosted up a man who had been dismissed from the editorship of one of them because he was believed to be an infidel and a libertine, the facts being well known to all concerned."

—The Wesleyan Publishing House, Syracuse, have issued one of Elder Barlow's popular addresses, "Freemasonry a modern anti-Christ," delivered last fall at De Ruyter, N. Y., and printed by request.

—Some time since we noticed the trouble into which Daniel Boone Lodge, Knights of Pythias, located in Cincinnati, was about to be precipitated by an unbelieving widow. Just about a year ago her husband, David Lamadrid, a strong, healthy man, was initiated into this lodge and received injuries, it is claimed, which caused his death in a day or two. The lodge says it was an attack of the heart disease, but Mrs. Lamadrid thought otherwise and has filed a petition in the Common Pleas court claiming $50,000 damages.

—Another case. This one between a St. Louis National Bank and the Missouri Masonic Grand Lodge. It seems that in 1869 the Grand Lodge passed a resolution by which payment of certain bonds of an Association for building a Masonic Hall was guaranteed by the lodge, The bonds were sold under this endorsement, but next year the G. L. repudiated by repealing its former action. The Masonic Hall Association is insolvent and the Second National Bank has $10,000 worth of the bonds and brings suit to recover from the guarantee. It has come out that one man, who sold out several parcels of this paper to different parties, found an old woman who had saved $5,000 by twenty years hard work. On his recommendation she invested her savings in the Masonic business and lost her money. But the kind-hearted Mason, in view of his agency in the case, made provision for the old lady in his will, which in the natural course of human events would be worth about as much as the bonds. The lodge will find with Brigham Young, that with all the assumption of false sanctity, the law, if tardy, yet may find a way through its triple-plated injustice.

—The action of the general bodies of the United and Reformed Presbyterian churches warning their membership against the grange, and the renunciation of Mr. Cogswell at Mansfield, O., are attracting general attention in the press, and the frequent impartial notices are significant of the increasing aversion to the lodge.

—Our contributor, "Royal Arch," complets in this number the third of his forcible, scathing reviews of Freemasonry. If any one has omitted to read them as they appeared he should turn back to January 21st and Febuary 18th and read without fail. Seldom has anything been written from a like standpoint. The author could any day compel recognition from any lodge in Chicago; yet from his intimate knowledge of the institution he knows its depravity and warns community against the viper in its bosom. He expects to address the citizens of his ward, the 18th, at the hall of Bremer Street School on the evening of the 11th inst. The lodge may be sure of a faithful delineation of its boasted virtues from one who has studied them.

Obituary—Robert Harper.

From the Christian Instructor we learn of the sudden and painful death of Robert Harper of West Hoboken, N. J., the publisher of the pamphlet "Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason." Mr. Harper was born in the county of Londonderry, Ireland, removing to this country in 1849, where he settled in West Hoboken with other members of the family, and has ever since been a pillar in the United Presbyterian church of that place. On the 30th of January last while engaged in clearing snow from the roof of a building adjoining the church, the ladder slipped and Mr. Harper fell heavily, striking his head. He was stunned for a time, but on being carried into a drugstore recovered his senses, but internal injuries caused death in a short time. On being told by the physician that he could live but a short time he expressed his resignation, committed his soul calmly to God and made a hasty disposition of his property, which he hardly completed before death closed his eyes and labors forever. Mr. Harper was never married, and spent much of his spare time in attending to the interests of the church which he loved so well. He was a man of superior natural ability and of varied and very thorough acquirements. Among insurance men he was looked upon as an accomplished and very reliable authority. He was very active in the anti-secret reform from its first national meeting at Pittsburgh in 1868. For several years five copies of this paper have been sent to his address; and, as above mentioned above, he published "Thirteen Reasons," a brief pamphlet, but handling the main arguments against the lodge in a thorough and Christian manner. This work has had a large sale, the publishers of this paper having purchased some three thousand copies.

Letter from Rev. Hankins of James Iowa.—His Experience of Freemasonry.

I am not much accustomed to writing for publication, and would not attempt it now only to enter my protest against one of the great evils of our day, and all the more dangerous because of its great popularity. I speak of secret organizations, and Freemasonry in particular. That being the father of all others, when it is exposed and shown to be evil, we will naturally conclude that the children partake more or less of the nature of the parent; and when I hear a man stand up and talk as Bro. Stoddard did last week, and tell so much truth, and then hear men who make pretensions to truth and religion, say that what he said was false, I am alarmed for my country and my race.

Now for a little of my own experience. In 1855, I joined the Masonic fraternity in the town of Vinton in this State; was regularly initiated an Entered Apprentice Mason; was soon passed to the degree of a Fellow Craft, and raised to the "sublime" degree of a Master Mason. In the last degree I have always seen something objectionable, and suppose I have never been a true Mason, for I have never seen a time that I would or could keep a brother Mason's secrets safe when he was guilty of crime of any kind, much less that of murder and treason, which in the oath of this degree is left to my own election. I subsequently took a demit, and in 1860, when I was on the Mason City charge as a minister of the M. E. church, I affiliated with the lodge at Mason City where I now reside; two years after, when I was on the Iowa City work, and transferred my membership to that place, and in the summer or fall of 1862 took the four chapter degrees, and in the seventh or Royal Arch degree, I saw so much that was mockery, and so much that to me was objectionable, especially that part of the obligation that bound me to defend a companion, right or wrong, and to keep his secrets, murder and treason not excepted, I became alarmed and declared I never would enter the lodge again. However, I took my demit from the Blue lodge and chapter both, and have not been in either since; except in one case, and then I only staid in the room till the lodge was called from labor to refreshment. That was about three years ago and I have told a number of Masons that I never intended entering another lodge. I took my chapter demit to the lodge that night to show the same; left it there; subsequently requested it to be returned to me, and after urging its return several times in about a year and a half the lodge voted it to be returned; but it never could be found, which showed their sincerity in ordering it thus.

Now I say in conclusion that if Masons (many of them) were not better than their Masonic obligations, our churches, especially that branch of the church to which I belong, would have no moral power and almost all our courts would be an expensive farce; and this is too true largely in both cases. Where is the moral power of our church? Why is it that all over this land criminals go unpunished, and if punished at all, why does the law only lay its little finger upon them and not its whole hand, and lastly I say (not boastingly,) that twenty years living in northern Iowa and sixteen years in the ministry, with all my noted peculiarities, has left no stain upon my moral character, and no one dare attempt anything in this direction. So far as I have any influence I am ready to labor for the downfall of this corrupt institution, Freemasonry.

JAMES HANKINS.

TO ALL SECEDING MASONS.—By vote of the National Christian Association, all seceding Masons are requested to send their names to the Recording Secretary, with their endorsement of Bernard's Light on Masonry; they are also requested to send their post-office address, number of degrees taken, number of years connected with the lodge, the date of leaving it and where residing when they joined.

H. L. KELLOGG, Rec. Sec'y.
13 WABASH AVE.

Religious Intelligence.

—R. Pearsall Smith, the well-known lay preacher, has gone to Berlin, where he will hold a series of meetings by request of the chaplain to the Emperor William, in the interest of free salvation.

—During the sixty-four years of its history six missionaries of the American Board have suffered martyrdom.

—Mr. Gibson, in San Francisco, recently held his first Chinese love feast. Thirty-five persons gave a relation of Christian experience, and thirty persons partook of the communion. There were fifty present—men and women.

—The title "reverend" it is pointed out in a London paper, in no way declares a man to be a clergyman. Two hundred and fifty years ago the English Masters in Chancery were styled reverend.

—Mr. George H. Stuart of Philadelphia, estimates the number of conversions in Great Britain, through the instrumentality of Messrs. Moody and Sankey of Chicago, at 25,000 or 30,000. No such prevading religious interest has been known in England since the days of Whitefield and the Wesleys.

—The interest of the Greek Christians in the Protestant mission services at Damascus continues, according to recent reports, unabated. The native Christians of the United Presbyterian church have been greatly stirred up to evangelistic labors in view of these enlarged opportunities. A Bible book-store and reading-room have also been opened in the most important bazaar in the city.

—The young Japanese churches are distinguished above those in almost every other mission field for the spirit of self-support. Dr. Berry writes in regard to the congregation about to be formed at Sanda, where eight persons are awaiting baptism, that the intention has been already expressed: "As soon as we have a church here the church will take care of the hospital, and through it do much charity work."

—The flourishing station of the Church Missionary Society, Metakahtla, is situated on the borders of Alaska. Indians from this American territory have visited the station and have shown great interest in the Gospel. From the island 450 miles to the north earnest appeals have been made to be taught as the Tsimpheans are at Metakahtiah. The Greek church formerly had missionaries in Alaska, but has recently withdrawn them. The Roman Catholics have one missionary stationed in that country.

—Good tidings are received of copies of the Bible sent three years ago into the interier of Abyssinia. The hearts of many Abyssians have been enlightened, and priests and laymen have, in many places, gathered the people together and read to them the Bible. Four converted teachers are making tours among the Jews, proclaiming the Gospel to Jews and Christians. Sixty-nine converted Jews were last year received into the Christian church, and twice that number are ready now to unite.

—In 1863 there were only four ordained Hawiian pastors on the islands, now there are not less than thirty; then there were only four or five churches, now there are fifty. In discipline and spiritual tone, they compare well with those which were under American supervision. Their annual missionary contributions have advanced from three thousand five hundred and sixty-nine dollars to ten thousand eight hundred and forty-nine dollars. In 1863, there were only two female boarding schools for all the islands, with not over thirty pupils. Now there are five places where schools of this character may be kept—one on each of the large islands of the group, excepting Oahu, where there are two. On Kauai, there is also now a theological seminary, with young ministers training for the work. The change from foreign to home supervision, seems to have been followed by real and substantial growth.

—The revival labors of Messrs. Whittle and Bliss at Louisville, Ky., have already brought into the churches over 250 new members and the end is not yet.

The Home Circle.

God is Love.

There are mysteries all around us—
  Dark clouds oft veil our sky;
Our way seems hedged before us,
  And none can tell us why.

We are often disappointed
  In our plans we thought were right;
Our joy is turned to mourning,
  Our day to blackest night.

Friends that we thought were truest
  Have falsest sometimes proved.
And we have found they ne'er possessed
  The qualities we loved.

We see the heartless villain
  On velvet carpets tread,
While the children of the "righteous"
  Do sometimes lack for bread.

We see the highest merit,
  Trampled by wicked might,
And, indignantly, we scorn to hear
  That "whatever is, is right."

We see truth—bleeding—crushed to earth,
  We know it shall rise again,
But, while error's so proudly boastful,
  We can only whisper, "when?"

We see the death-gasp of the right--
  We hear the shouts of wrong—
And we cry in bitter anguish,
  "How long, O Lord, how long!"

But do we ever begin to doubt
  That a just God reigns on high?
The right will surely at last prevail,
  Though it waits—we know not why.

Do our own especial sorrows
  Seem greater than we can bear?
And does it seem as though our God
  Had forgotten to answer prayer?

Though we sink beneath our burden,
  And beneath the chastening rod,
All things will work together
  For good, if we love God.

Though sometimes we can find our way
  By the eye of faith alone,
We soon shall see as we are seen,
  And know as we are known.

That which was wrapped in shadow
  Will then be clear as day,
And the loving hand of Jesus
  Will wipe all tears away.

We shall know why wrong was permitted,
  For a season to have its sway,
We shall see how a little of darkness
  Has brought a glorious day.

We shall know for what we suffered—
  We shall see that it brought us rest.
We shall thank our Heavenly Father
  That he did what he saw best.

Oh! let it cheer us ever,
  To know God reigns above;
And to feel, in the darkest hours,
  That surely God is love.

—Church Advocate.

Our Florida Letter.

WEATHER TOPICS—JACKSONVILLE AND ITS PEOPLE—COLORED SCHOOLS AND CHURCHES—VISITORS, ETC.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 3, 1875.

Those who came to Florida this year expecting to find perpetual sunshine and a clear, dry atmosphere, sweet with the breath of roses and orange blossoms, have been doomed to disappointment. Never before, say long-time residents, has she presented so frowning an aspect to her numerous visitants. Clouds, sunshine and steady rain alternated, during the month of January and nearly all of February, varied by occasional gleams of sunshine and a few pleasant days. Yet we saw no ice, and the few frosts did little harm. Even on the coldest days we were very comfortable by our coal and wood fires and could pick up Northren papers and read with much complacency such items as the following: "Unprecedented cold weather. Thermometer 30 degrees below zero. Frozen to death. Hydrants all frozen," etc. Or we could look out of our windows, down the avenue of stately oaks, clad in dark green verdure, and into the adjacant gardens upon tropical plants, and orange trees bending under their load of golden fruit, and enjoy a summer scene—rather incongruous, it is true, to the one within doors—but only waiting to be lighted up by the sun and blown upon by the south wind, to become the glorious reality which we have been enjoying for the past ten days. Now, those trees and shrubs that are bare during the winter months are putting forth foliage, and the tints of spring mingle with those of summer, and the blossoms of the wild olive, plum, peach and orange with the perfected fruit of the latter, making the landscape indescribably lovely. Add to this the singing of birds, and a view of the waters of the St. John's river flashing in the sunlight, and lively with boats of every description, inviting to excursions to various points of interest, and it will not seem strange that enthusiasts sometimes even run wild in their descriptions of this country.

The land on which Jacksonville is located rises gradually to the height of ten or fifteen feet from the western bank of the St. John's river, twenty-five miles from its mouth. It is very rolling, so that the center or one side of a block is often much higher than the other part. Its wide streets are well shaded with the water oak and adorned with many fine residences and pleasant gardens. The business street of the city is "Bay," which runs parallel with the river's bank, and is a mile in length, containing numerous stores of every kind, the Grand National Hotel, Post-office, bank, curiosity shops, market, etc. Here the people throng, and it is interesting to view the variety that the human family presents in form, color, and expression of countenance. All shades of color, from the dark hue of the pure African to the delicate white of the Northern infant, that lifts its smiling face to you from its little carriage, are seen in a few moment's walk; and you catch from each face some slight impression of the mental, moral, and physical condition of its possessor, making an aggregate as varied as the shifting views of the kaleidoscope. Old and young, queenly looking ladies and ragged beggars; dignified and refined looking gentlemen and disagreeable, vicious looking men, all crowd past in rapid succession. One morning in our walks, we came upon a Chinaman with his basket of fans and feather brushes, and specimens of tea. He told us there was only one more of his kindred in the city.

We hear many unkind flings at the colored race, which forms about one-half of the population, as to their indolence, incapacity, thieving propensities, etc.; dictated it would seem by an unchristian spirit, and a desire rather to crush than to lift them up. A better spirit is leading some to establish schools for their mental and moral elevation. The gratifying results that attend such efforts may be seen at Stanton Institute, where several New England ladies are laboring with great zeal, week days, and on the Sabbath, for their improvement. They have between three and four hundred pupils, and though many of these are obliged by poverty, to be irregular in their attendance, you want only to look into their intelligent faces and listen to their recitations to be convinced of their capabilities for improvement. We have never seen a more interesting or better conducted Sabbath school than theirs. Numerous visitors from the strangers in the city, are present every Sabbath, and on these they rely for teachers, as the churches in the city give them little or no aid. This institution was formerly under the auspices of the American Missionary Association, but is now supported by the county and donations of friends. The building was given them by the Freedmen's Bureau,—one of the last acts of Gen. Howard, and is a very good one. The Methodist denomination have also a school called "Cookman Institute" and are expecting to put up a new one.

The colored people have several churches. Their ministers are reported to be ignorant and incapable, and their services, on Sabbath evenings, are said to partake of that wild character so commonly attributed to their gatherings. The two services that we attended were conducted by strangers, one of them the Presiding Elder, who preached a good sermon in which he condemned merely emotional religion; the other, a young mulatto, who also preached well, making, of course, some grammatical blunders, but leaving a very good impression. There are two Presbyterian, two Methodist and one Baptist churches with white congregations.

The number of visitors in the city is said to be greater than ever before. Both of the large hotels, all of the smaller ones, and the numerous boarding-houses are well filled and many private houses have opened their doors to the strangers. There must be between two or three thousand present now. The population of the place is 8000; some make a higher estimate.

It is almost impossible to convince a man used to rich prairie soil, that the sandy soil of Jacksonville and vicinity can be productive. He may look into the gardens and see peas several feet high, and potatoes, cabbage, beets and lettuce growing finely—he may listen to statements of residents who have raised two hundred and fifty bushels of sweet potatoes to the acre; may look at a cane from one to three inches in diameter, made from pig weed, and at wild bean pods a foot long and nearly two inches wide, and like "A man convinced against his will, be of the same opinion still." The large growth of oak, magnolia and orange must be explained, and so the air and climate get a large share of praise. Those better versed in such matters than ourself, must decide this important question. If fertilizers could be readily and cheaply obtained no doubt that would throw light on the subject.

Society in Christ.

BY REV. HOWARD CROSBY, D. D.

That which leads young people astray is not so much any concrete form of pleasure as it is evil companionship. The devil's choicest emissary is a bosom friend, and that which is sapping the life of the church is that its members find their bosom friends in those who know nothing of a Christian's faith and a Christian's Saviour. I can imagine a theater that would be pure and virtuous, but I cannot imagine an evil companionship that would be pure and virtuous. I would far rather have my child live among Christians, I mean real Christians, who played all sorts of games, than to live among Christless people who carefully abstained from playing any games. I am afraid that many Christian teachers do not make this just discrimination, and hence fulminate against this or that outward form of amusement, when the serpent in the whole thing is evil companionship.

It should be the constant care of Christian parents to see that their children, while yet small and under complete control, have the companionship of such children who belong to decidedly religious families, and, as they grow older, to strengthen the tendency thus formed, to union with a godly society. But oh! what objections arise to this plan! "The rule would keep my children from intimacy with some of the very cynosures of wealth and ton. And just think of my bringing them up as Cinderellas! And, hen, too, what a sour-visaged generation would I rear, only fit for funerals and prayer-meetings! Besides, Christian youth are so dull and stupid. If I wish my children to have wit and snap, they must go elsewhere to get it." This is the familiar style of repartee which a faithful man meets when he endeavors to show a young Christian mother or father what the claims of Christ are upon the parent. It is vain to show the falsehood of some of the statements and the vanity of others. The ears are deaf. The trouble is, the heart is set on the tinsel of fashion, and everything is distorted by this radical perversion. Christian society does seem stupid and prayer-meetings very melancholy things to a man who is inhaling the nutritious oxide of a worldly society. Sober things are miserably dull to a drunken man. But, after all, the sober things are the best.

But even when Christian parents are not themselves plunged up to the neck in worldliness, they are often willing to let their children jump in. "It is liberal," says the devil. And they take him to be an angel of light; and so reluctantly they say, "We-e-e-ell, yes;" and away the son or the daughter hies to the school of immorals. How often we find that the Christian parent is an invertebrate animal!

Now I take it that fun and frolic and every other innocent good thing is at home among consistent Christians, and, what is better, Christ is there too. Is mirth sanctified no longer mirth? Is merriment that recognizes Jesus no longer merriment? The very pith of the Christian's happiness is, that whether he eats or drinks, or whatever he does, he can do all to the glory of God. What a dreadful misconstruction it is that confounds godliness and gloom! Let us teach our young people from the beginning on this subject, before the world gets its lie in their heads, that sets them longing for Moab or Philistia. Let home be made both Christian and cheerful. The two adjectives should never be separated. Under such influences let our young people be brought up with as little idea of joining the gay idlers of the world as of joining the pot-house politicians. Let their tastes be formed in a Christian mold, which discriminates between recreation and indolence, between joyousness and gaiety, between manliness and worldliness, between social activity and fashionable society, between healthy excitement and dissipation.

Now the key to all this is the deliberate formation of Christian acquaintance. Refinement need not be sacrificed, nor education, nor special tastes. Perhaps an error has sometimes been made just here, and the innocent demands of the character and disposition have been ignored and rudely shocked. There is abundance of good material for every Christian family to use in this most important work of anchoring young hearts amid Christian influences when their social instincts are strongest. Let the Lord's people draw together. They are a large host. "He that walketh with wise men shall be wise; but a companion of fools shall be destroyed." Prov. xiii. 20. "Be ye not unequally yoked with unbelievers." 2 Cor. vi. 14. The Old Testament and the New are at one. It is in a separation from the world and a separation unto Christ, that the highest type of Christian character, with its peace and power, its glory and gladness, is found.—Am. Messenger.

Macaulay on the Corruption of Religion.

The ark of God was never taken until surrounded by its earthly defenders. In captivity its sanctity was sufficient to defend it from insult, and to lay the hostile fiend prostrate on the threshold of his own temple. The real security of Christianity is to be in found its benevolent morality, in its exquisite adaptation to the human heart, in the facility with which its scheme accommodates itself to the capacity of every human intellect, in the consolation which it bears to the house of mourning, in the light with which it brightens the great mystery of the grave. To such a system it can bring no addition of dignity or of strength, that it is part and parcel of the common law. It is not now for the first time left to rely on the force of its own evidences, and the attractions of its own beauty. Its sublime theology confounded the Grecian schools in the fair conflict of reason with reason. The bravest and wisest of the Cæsars found their arms and their policy unavailing, when opposed to the weapons that are not carnal, and the kingdom that was not of his world. The victory which Porphyry and Diocletian failed to gain, is not, to all appearance, reserved for any of those who, in this age, have directed their attacks against the last restraint of the powerful, and the last hope of the wretched.

The whole history of the Christian religion shows that she is in far greater danger of being corrupted by the alliance of power, than of being crushed by its opposition. Those who thrust their temporal sovereignty upon her treat her as their prototypes treated her. They bow the knee and spit upon her; they cry Hail! and smite her on the cheek; they put a scepter in her hands, but it is a fragile reed; they crown her, but it is with thorns; they cover with purple the wounds which their own hands have inflicted on her; and inscribe magnificent titles over the cross on which they have fixed her to perish in ignominy and pain.

"Paddle your Own Canoe."

Hamerton in "Chapters about Animals," gives a fine illustration of the success of people who seek for distinction by imitating some successful genius:

"In my goat-house there is a hay-rack placed low enough to be conveniently accessible for the full-grown animals but rather high for young kids, who are supposed to be nurtured on the maternal milk. One of the kids, in the spirit of exploration which characterizes them, put its fore paws against the wall and got its head level with the bottom of the rack, on which another, desiring to imitate the first, in exactly the same place, could only manage it by getting on his brother's back. The same desire took possession of their sister, who got upon the back of number two. It is evident that only the first of the three could reach the hay, so that the two others remained in a state of unavailing aspiration. They reminded me of the consequence of imitation in literature and the fine arts. An original artist has access for himself to nature, but his imitators think to get at the hay by climbing upon his back, which is just the way not to get at it. There is plenty of it to the right and left if they would go to it for themselves."

Children's Corner.

March.

In the snowing and the blowing,
In the cruel sleeet,—
Little flowers begin their growing
Far beneath our feet.
Softly taps the Spring, and cheerily,
"Darlings, are you here?"
Till she answers: "We are nearly,
Nearly ready, dear."

"Where is Winter, with his snowing?
Tell us, Spring," they say;
Then she answers: "He is going,
Going on his way.
Poor old Winter does not love you,—
But his time is past;
Soon my birds shall sing above you,—
Set you free at last!"

A Letter from California.

WRITTEN BY A LITTLE BOY JUST EIGHT YEARS OLD.

A kind lady who remembers the little folks, has sent a long and very interesting letter from little Charlie —— describing his journey to California. The first part of the letter tells of the journey across the plains. This we print now, and next week will be the story of the mountains. The lady who sent the letter gives us an introduction to our little letter writer. She says: "Charlie has never been to school. He has received some instruction at home, though his advantages have not been first-class; but he is very observing and has a very good memory. His mother is American and his father German, a professor of music. Olga is Charlie's sister, not quite two years old. Their home was in Indiana; last October they moved to California stopping on their way to visit friends in Du Page county, Illinois, to one of whom this letter was written." The letter is printed just as Charlie wrote it.

MARYSVILLE, Dec. 8th, 1874.

DEAR L———:—You will see by the date of my letter, that I am writing on my birthday. I guess you will think I have not improved much in the past year, but I will try and improve more in the next year, than I have in the past one. . . . We got to the Mississippi just at dusk and I saw the big iron bridge and saw a steamboat on the river, when the cars stopped there at Clinton. Pa was most the first one I saw. I was glad for it seemed so long without him; the cars soon started on and I began to want my supper, so Pa went through into the baggage car and got the basket that my dear friend L—— had filled with so many good things for us, and grandpa was so good and kind to think of so many things for our comfort. I might as well say grandma and Aunt C—— too, for you were all so kind and made our visit so pleasant that I shall not forget it very soon. After I had my supper it was dark. I could not see anything to interest me so I soon got sleepy; so with my pillow and blanket I made myself comfortable for the night; the next morning I was up early that I might see whatever was to be seen; I soon saw three Indians in their blankets, comeing towards the bluffs, for we were all ready in sight of Council Bluffs; such high bare Bluffs they were allmost as high as you could look; here we come to the city of Council Bluffs but it does not look like our cities at home, the houses looked so low and black; we are 2 miles from Omaha, from here we take the exchange car for that place; I wish you could have seen Olga; it was raining, so Ma put a nubia on her head and Ma's big water proof cape around her, and she took her band box and started, every one walked very fast and she kept along with the rest; it made the folks laugh to see her she looked so cunning. we were soon in Omaha and here it took 3 hours to get the baggage changed; the baggage room is as long as 3 of your Depots. It was full of trunks. everything is re-checked here; such a rush of people with checks in their hands listening for their numbers to be called. the baggage master calls out the number and another rolls the trunk on the scales, weighs it and so on; it passes from one hand to another until it reaches the baggage car; this is all done as fast as you can think, and yet it took them 3 hours to get it all re-checked and loaded. Pa listened all this time for his numbers to be called and when they got through he found that our baggage was not there; it had not been transferred; we thought we should have to stay until the next day as there is but one train a day leaves here for Ogden; just as the train was going to start Pa got it fixed so it would come safe after us; now you may think we had to rush fast to get our baskets and satchels all on board before the train began to move; little Olga troted off with her band box as usual. the car was crowded so that we could not get a seat till the Conductor came through and made some go out, that had second class tickets; one after another left the car so by bed time we had plenty of room to make ourselves comfortable. As we were now on the plains we had nothing interesting except the prairie dogs and wolves; the young men in our car kept shooting at them; then we saw droves of Antilopes feeding, but they did not come so close as the dogs and wolves; some of them thought they could see some buffalo but it was so far off they were not sure about it; once in a while we could see a little hut or house. I hardly know what to call them; they were made of clay cut in the shape of brick and dried in the sun and laid up with clay plastering. Some of them were right in the ground like the outdoor cellars at home. I guess they are used by herdsmen for I saw so many herds of cattle and sheep. I do not know how they live there for the ground was so brown and bare, not a shrub nor a tree to be seen for hundreds of miles, but they told me it was the best kind of grazing for cattle. I should have thought what there was would have been burned up for I could see the big prarie fires in every direction.

[Concluded next week.]

Waiting for Jesus to Pass By.

Willie was a little boy in the city of New York, who was run over in the streets, not long ago, and seriously injured. He was carried to a hospital, where on examination it was found that his leg had been badly crushed and broken by the accident. An operation was performed, and every care was taken to sustain his strength, but the poor little fellow appeared to sink under his load of pain. One day, while lying in his cot, he groaned and cried very much, and aroused all the sympathies of a little girl who lay near him.

She turned on her pillow, and tried to comfort him. "Little Willie," she said, "is your pain so bad that you moan so? Why don't you ask Jesus to take it away?"

"I don't know Jesus; who is he?" said the child.

"Why, he is our Saviour, Willie. Don't you know Jesus? When we suffer pain, we tell Jesus, and he comes and takes it all away," said the dear little girl, whose name was Sarah.

"And will he come to me and take away my pain, Sarah?" asked the boy, eagerly.

"Yes, Willie, I know he will, if you ask him."

"But I am such a little fellow; don't you think the Saviour may overlook me among so many here?"

"No, Willie, He comes for every little child." Then Sarah told him her little story about Jesus, and ended by saying, "He loves little children; and when he lived on earth, he took them up in his arms and blessed them."

"Then I will hold up my little hand," said Willie, "and when the Saviour passes by, he will notice me."

The trembling hand was raised, and he waited patiently for Jesus; but being weak and weary from suffering, he dropped asleep. How long he slept none knew, for when the nurse went to his bedside some time afterward, little Willie was dead. The Saviour had passed by while he slept, and taken him from all pain and suffering.

"Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."—S. S. Visitor.

A HISTORY OF THE REFORM AGAINST SECRET SOCIETIES.

Testimonies of Different Religious Bodies against Freemasonry and Kindred Organizations.

The American Missionary Association in October, 1869, passed the following resolution:

"WHEREAS, The freedmen are at this time exposed to be attracted by the secrecy, ceremonies and showy parades of popery and the secret orders; we affectionately advise the members and ministers of our churches not to unite with them."

In October 28th, 1874, the following resolution was passed by the same body:

"Resolved, That we renew that [the above quoted] advice with spec al reference to the secret college fraternities, and hope that all our institutions of learning will carefully exclude these "brotherhoods" as hostile to the best interests of learning and religion."

The Interior, Presbyterian, said in July, 1874, editorially, that Masons "must expect and respect sharp criticism and earnest opposition from evangelical Christianity."

The General Association of Congregational churches of Illinois in 1866, passed resolutions drawn up by Rev. Samuel C. Bartlett, of their Theological Seminary, from which we quote the following:

"Fourth resolution. That there are certain other widespread organizations—such as Freemasonry—which, we suppose, are in their nature hostile to good citizenship and true religion, because they exact initiatory oaths of blind compliance and concealment, incompatible with the claims of equal justice toward man and a good conscience toward God; because they may easily, and sometimes have actually, become combinations against the due process of law and government; because, while claiming a religious character, they, in their rituals, deliberately withhold all recognition of Christ as their only Saviour and of Christianity as the only true religion; because, while they are in fact nothing but restricted partnerships or companies for mutual insurance and protection, they ostentatiously parade this characterless engagement as a substitute for brotherly love and true benevolence; because they bring good men in confidential relations to bad men; and because, while in theory, they supplant the church of Chr st, they do also, in fact, largely tend to withdraw the sympathy and active zeal of professing Christians from their respective churches. Against all connections with such associations we earnestly advise the members of our churches, and exhort them, 'Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers.'"

A triennial convention of Congregationalists, representing 1,150 churches and about 70,000 members, residing in eight different States, in April, 1873, while in session in Chicago,

"Resolved, That we desire the directors of the WESTERN EDUCATION SOCIETY to decline aiding into the ministry any young man . . . who is connected with any secret, oath-bound society."

Sixteen days previous'y, a local Congregational Association at Aurora, Ill., refused to approbate a young man to preach the Gospel while he continued his adherence to the lodge.

The United Presbyterian church states in its testimony: "That all associations, whether formed for political or benevolent purposes, which impose upon their members an oath of secrecy, or an obligation to obey a code of unknown laws, are inconsistent with the genius and spirit of Christianity, and church members ought not to have fellowship with such associations,"

The Reformed Presbyterian organization testifies:

"We reject all systems of false religion and will-worship, and with these, all forms of secret, oath-bound societies as ensnaring in their nature, pernicious in their tendency and perilous to the liberties of both church and state: and pledge ourselves to pray and labor according to our power, that whatever is contrary to godliness may be removed and the church beautified with universal conformity to the law and will of her divine Head and Lord."

The Free Methodist church believing that "evil works instinctively incline to darkness;" that "good works grow up in the light;" that "God commands us to let our light shine;" that "a bad institution ought not and a good one need not be secret," maintains the following rule:

"Any society requiring an oath, affirmation or promise of secrecy, as a condition of membership, is held to be a secret society; and any member joining, or continuing in such, violates his covenant obligations and shall in due form be excluded from the church."

The Wesleyan Methodist church states in its discipline:

"We will on no account tolerate our ministers or members in joining or holding fellowship with secret societies, such as Freemasonry or Odd-fellowship; as in the judgment of the Wesleyan Methodist connection it is inconsistent with our duties to God to hold such connections."

From the discipline of the Friends we take the following on secret societies:

"It being obvious that the public entertainments, and the vain, ostentatious processions of those called Freemasons are altogether inconsistent with our religious profession: if therefore, any of our members shall join therein or unite in membership with them, they are to be treated with as in other cases of disorderly conduct, and if, after tender admonition and brotherly labor, they cannot be dissuaded therefrom they are to be disowned."

The United Brethren put a rule into their discipline excluding adhering Freemasons from membership in their church in 1829. The subject came before their general conference in 1849, was thoroughly discussed and the following rule (more explicit than the other) was inserted in the place of the old one:

"Freemasonry, in every sense of the word, shall be totally prohibited, and there shall be no connection with secret combinations (a secret combination is one whose initiatory ceremony or bond of union is a secret); and any member found connected with such society, shall be affectionately admonished by the preacher in charge twice or thrice, and if such member does not desist in a reasonable time, he shall be notified to appear before the tribunal to which he is amenable; and if he still refuses to desist, he shall be expelled from the church."

The first recorded action of the Free-will Baptist church against Freemasonry was taken at general conference in 1830. A vote of disapproval was taken in 1833; again in 1844. In 1847, at Sutton, Vt, the special committee to whom was submitted some resolutions on secret societies, made the following report: "WHEREAS, This conference is fully convinced that the Bible contains a revelation of all the principles obligatory upon us in all our various relations to God and man; that these principles were designed to be exhibited to public view, and urged home upon the consciences of men in all relations of life; and

WHEREAS, All secret societies, whatever incidental or personal advantages they may seem to afford, are unnecessary for the accomplishment of any good end; therefore, (1) Resolved, That the jealousies which such organizations are calculated to excite, and the ease with which designing men may use them for evil purposes, render it inconsistent for the disciples of Christ, and especially for Free-will Baptists, to form or sustain a connection with any such associations.

(2) Resolved, That all laudable effort be put forth to prevent the members of our churches, who are now free from such societies, from becoming connected with them, and if possible to reclaim all who do now sustain such a relation."

This proposition was re-affirmed at Providence, R. I., in 1850, and at Lowell, Mass., in 1859.

Rev. S. S. Mohler, writes: "The members of the Brethren or German Baptist church, of which I am a minister, number, perhaps, more than 200,000 in the States and Territories, and are decided anti-secretists, not even tolerating connection with the grange." J. W. Beer, of the same church, gives the recorded testimony of that church against the secret orders as early as 1804. They have adopted similar testimonies in many annual conferences since.

There are three general ecclesiastical bodies in the Lutheran church in the United States and Canada. 1st, The General Synod numbering 103,362 communicants. This body has not placed itself in decided opposition to secret societies and wants no discussion. 2d, The General Council, numbering 135,602 communicants which has adopted a quasi resolution against secret societies. In this body discussion is not desired. 3d, The Synodical Conference, numbering 187,873 communicants. This body has always been steadfastly opposed to all oath-bound secret associations.

The Albrights, Christians and Winnebrennarians have testimonies against them, putting secret societies (where they put themselves), among the "works of darkness." Different bodies of Christians which will have no fellowship with Masonry find in the National Christian Association an opportunity to mass their forces and make each church feel the strength of every other, many realize in the words of Edward Burke, that "When bad men combine, the good must associate, else they will fall, one by one, an unpitied sacrifice in a contemptible struggle."

THE PEWS TO THE PULPIT.

Deacon Sylvanus Town, in an address to an assemblage of clergymen, entitled "From the Pews to the Pulpit," correctly represented the sentiment of sincere Christians in various denominations throughout our land. From it we take the following extract:—

"Nor can we understand how it is that you have so little to say, in public, against secret, oath-bound societies, when their influence is so pernicious. They are drawing our young men into their lodges by scores, and once in, they are rarely ever converted. There is just about religion enough to satisfy the carnal mind, and, as they purposely exclude Christ from their worship, there can be no salvation in them though they profess to go from the lodge below to the lodge above. We believe the time is coming when we would no sooner allow one of the members of our churches to frequent a lodge and assist in degrading the manhood of others by denuding them of most of their clothing, hoodwinking and cable-towing them, administering to them their horrid oaths and then playing the ridiculous farce of raising Hiram Abiff after he is dead and rotten, and then slaying his murderers,—I say, I believe the day is coming when we will no sooner allow our members to do these things than we would permit them to enter an idol's temple and worship a senseless god. I know you say that the lodge cannot be so bad because some good men, and even ministers belong to it. Why, brethren, there never has been an evil under the sun since Aaron made the golden calf, that could not have been justified in this same way. Our fathers, and some of us, used to drink and sell intoxicating liquor. John Newton was engaged in the slave trade. Dr. Nelson came from a meeting where he was weeping over sinners and went into his back yard to whip a female slave; so blind and inconsistent is poor human nature when partially enlightened and sanctified."

These testimonies might be indefinitely multiplied, and to the end that they may continue to increase until secret societies are overthrown, we labor and devoutly pray.

News of the Week.

The City.

The long session of the Third district election courts, eighty-five days, have closed and the voluminous testimony in the Le Moyne-Farwell case has been forwarded to Washington.——Gen. Sheridan is making preparations to receive the Grand Army of the Republic which meets here in May.——As the result of poisoning the mother and two children of a Polish family died here last week. Who was the murderer is a mystery as there is no proof to implicate the ignorant father. One child recovered, however, and told of a book the mother had been reading and put in a trunk. It was found to be a yellow-covered sensational story of a family poisoning case. It is believed that anxiety, poverty and an imagination fed by this story caused the mother to commit the awful crime.

General.

A number of Ku-Klux cases have been indicted in Kentucky. Ten were arrested in Todd county last week.——Sioux City is full of strangers ready to start for the Black Hills. Gen. Sherman's order they have no regard for.——A band of Mexicans came over last week pillaged and burned a post-office at Neuces, robbed stores and houses and marched off a number of Americans as prisoners. Pursuit was made.——A fearful tornado passed over the eastern portion of Georgia on March 20th, destroying everything in its path. A large number of people were killed and considerable property destroyed.

Foreign.

In consequence of a recent appeal made by Minister Washburne to the Deputies and principal merchants of Paris, a committee has been formed to make arrangements for the participation of France in the Philadelphia Exhibition.——Gen. Campos has defeated the Carlists before Olot and entered the town. Nine hundred Carlists were made prisoners. A conspiracy formed to assassinate Gen. Cambrera, who lately abandoned the Carlist cause, has been broken up.——Louis Kussoth, the Hungarian patriot was lately defeated in an election for member of the Hungarian Diet.——The German government has lately prohibited the exportation of horses, a measure seldom used except on the eve of war.

The Methodist Bishops.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., 1875.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Some of our bishops, we know from their own lips, are not Masons, nor secret society men; and the great majority of them, we are satisfied, have no affiliation with Masonry, nor are consciously influenced by it. Yet, bishop or no bishop, experience has proved to more than one that Freemasonry, to a marvelous extent, sways the Christian church, a branch of which is our own. It is terribly true! What can scores of bishops do when their ruling preachers and people are Freemasons? Bishops are but men, and sometimes poor specimens at that; are as ready to cater, though they may not be acting Masons, to the fraternity, as politicians ever did to corrupt constituencies. And Anti-masonic ministers and people, with comparitively few exceptions, seem as though the love of their own interests and the fear of infidel, abominable Freemasonry are more worthy of consideration than the fear of offending God, and the prosperity of Zion. A lamentable fact! Oh that God would hasten the time when these things shall not be. This is greatly ruet also in those churches known as out and out anti-secret. Lord help the people. W. POST.

THE SANITARIAN for April enters its third volume with every appearance of prosperity. The leading articles are on the Gathering, Packing, Transportation and Sale of Fresh Fruits and Vegetables; Water supply of towns and cities; Defective Drainage as a cause of Disease in New York State; with brief articles on health and ventilation in houses and schools. A. N. Bell, 234 Broadway, N. Y.

The National S. S Teacher for April will be found one of the best helps, after the Bible itself, on the lessons for the month. The teacher has an extended view of the subjects discussed in the lessons in the general articles on Baal and Ashtoreth, the Book of Judges, the Chronology of Judges, and the Gideonites; and in the notes, questions, Bible explanatory references, etc., will be found very satisfactory helps for a thorough preparation for the class. Adams, Blackmer & Lyon Publishing Co., Chicago.

EXPOSITION

—:OF:—

THE GRANGE.

—‡o‡—

Illustrated with Engravings, showing the Lodge Room,

Signals, Grips, etc.

EDITED BY REV. A. W. GEESLIN.

—:o:—

Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 1875,
BY EZRA A. COOK & CO.,
In the office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, D. C.

—:o:—

LABORERS DEGREE CONTINUED.

MAID DEGREE CONTINUED.

Overseer to Lady Assistant Steward:—Are they competent to assume the duties that will devolve upon them?

Lady Assistant Steward to Overseer:—They are.

Overseer to Candidates:—Is it of your own free will?

Candidates to Overseer:—It is.

Overseer to Lady Assistant Steward:—Before you can proceed it will be necessary for them to give a pledge of secrecy and fidelity. You will please conduct them to the altar that they may then register their pledge." (They are led to the altar and there stand and are met by the Master.)

Master to Candidates (calling up):—My friends, you are now standing at the altar of our Order. Is it your desire to give a pledge which will not conflict with your moral or social duties?"

Candidates to Master:—It is.

Master to Candidates:—You will repeat after me the following obligation. This is the same as is administered to the "Laborer." (See page 17.)

Master to Candidates:—"As your companions, which will you choose—Ignorance, or Knowledge?"

Candidates:—Knowledge.

Master to Candidates:—Your choice is good. You will now be conducted to our Worthy Overseer, that you may be brought to light." (They pass to Overseer.)

Lady Assistant Steward to Overseer:—Worthy Overseer, it is our Worthy Master's pleasure that our friends be restored to light.

Overseer to Lady Assistant Steward:—His request shall be obeyed. You will now conduct them to the Master.

Another song is sung as they pass to Master after obligation.

Lady Assistant Steward to Master:—Worthy Master, our sisters come for your counsel.

Master to Candidates:—My sisters, I am happy to meet you and to encourage you to persevere in the pursuit of the true, the beautiful and the good. Scorn not to receive instruction from the humblest object that offers you its lesson. Permit me to exhibit to you this boquet. You will see that it is composed wholly of different varieties of grass, possessing little of beauty and less of interest to the careless observer, but replete with instruction to the reflecting mind. Grass is the universal, the most useful, the most valuable product of the vegetable kingdom. Without it the higher orders of animals including man, could not exist, and the earth would be an arid, barren waste. How it makes glad the heart of man, as Spring spreads her flower embroidered carpet upon the plains, and hangs her verdant mantle upon the hills! When the sun of summer has dried the precious juices, with what care and labor does the prudent farmer gather it into his barns, that his animals may have food in winter. But looking beyond its material form and uses, may you find in it an expression of a higher truth. As you look upon this boquet, its colors faded and its fragrance departed, does it not recall to your mind the solemn reflection of Job that "all flesh is grass" and that "man cometh forth as a flower and is cut down?" But these solemn admonitions of man's transitory estate upon earth give place to a brighter and more glorious truth. As the green grass awakens to life again at the call of Spring, does not each tiny spear, as it shoots from the ground, preach to you of the resurrection and immortality? Let the modesty and usefulness of the humble grass be to you an object of imitation. As a sister in our Order, you will now be conducted to the Steward. (Music while going).

Steward to Candidates:—Sisters, you entered here blindfolded and covered with that garment. Before you were placed Ignorance and Knowledge. You were allowed to choose for yourself; though in darkness, you chose wisely, and found light. Wearing that garment is to teach you that those we admit to our circle, are not chosen by outward appearance, and that we are not deceived by display in dress. It is the mind and heart we look to in accomplishing all good works; therefore in your intercourse with the world, remember that a noble mind and generous heart are often concealed beneath the garments of poverty. (Steward now removes the cloak.) I greet you as sisters and crown you with this wreath (places a wreath of plain grass on her head.) Worthy Assistant, you will please introduce candidates to lecturer.

Music.

Lady Assistant Steward to Lecturer:—Worthy Lecturer, I bring sisters for counsel.

Lecturer to Candidates:—Sisters, when God created the garden of Eden' and planted therein all that was beautiful of tree, shrub, plant and flower, and so distributed his handiwork, it was Paradise. His last great work was to adorn it with woman, and to woman we look for those noble traits that adorn humanity. Ever foremost in deeds of charity, ever lenient and forgiving, by the sick bed ever watchful, and, where affection claims her aid, none more devoted. In ancient mythology, even among the heathen, where a charm was needed to make divinity perfect, they invariably chose the type of woman. We see this in Ceres, the goddess who presided over the golden grain; in Flora, the goddess of flowers; and in Pomona presiding over fruits. Fortune, Fortitude, Truth, Fidelity, Friendship, all prominent deities, were given the female form; therefore let me urge you to remember the high position assigned your sex, and that you walk worthily in it.

Lady Assistant Steward to Overseer:—Worthy Overseer, our sisters come for instruction.

Overseer to Candidates:—I greet you as worthy sisters to our Order. Woman is the educator of youth, and our co-student through life, and to be this she must acquire wisdom and knowledge. Education adds the greatest charm to woman, it is a companion which no misfortune can depress, no clime destroy, no enemy alienate, no despotism enslave; an ornament in prosperity and a refuge in adversity. I now decorate you with the apron, an emblem of our order. You will now be conducted to our Worthy Chaplain.

Lady Assistant Steward to Chaplain:—Worthy Chaplain, I present worthy sisters for instruction.

Chaplain to Candidates:—The interests, the social relations, and the destiny of man and woman are identical. She was intended by her Creator to be the helpmeet, companion and equal of man; each shares the glory or the shame of the other. The principles inculcated in the mind of the child by the mother are there for life; hence the importance that her mind be stimulated with the love of the beautiful and the good. It is a fixed principle of our Order that woman be taught to be a good manager, particularly in rural pursuits, that, when left without a protector, she may not be entirely dependent upon the bounty of others. Also remember, my sister, that favor is deceitful and beauty vain; but a woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised. Many daughters have done virtuously, may you exceed them all. (Music).

Lady Assistant Steward to Master:—Worthy Master, our sisters are now prepared to receive the signs of this degree.

Master to Candidates:—Sisters, I will now give you the signs by which you may at any proper time make yourself known as having received the first degree of our Order. (Same sign as given to "Laborer;" signifies the same; faith in God.) The candidates are introduced to Ceres.

PASS-WORD AT OUTER GATE (for women), Ceres.

PASS-WORD AT INNER GATE, Maid.

Ceres to Candidates:—Sisters, I welcome you to the fields, where kind nature profusely spreads her charms to cheer the eye, and fill the heart with gratitude.

Pomona to Candidates:—Let me also invite you to the orchard and fruit garden where the blessings of life in luscious fruits bid you welcome.

Flora to Candidates:—And I, too, will spread your path with flowers, whose beauty and fragrance cannot fail to make life pleasant, and teach you there is another and a better world.

Lady Assistant Steward to Master:—Worthy Master, my task is done, and our sisters are prepared to be assigned to duty.

Master to Candidates:—Sister's, I now commend you to all in our Order, assuring you that with us you shall ever find friends, in prosperity or adversity. Patrons, welcome our sisters.

SONG.

1. We bid you here welcome to altar and heart,
   We bid you here welcome, no longer to part—
   We bid you here welcome to shrine and to hall,
   We bid you here welcome! thrice welcome to all!
   Ye Reapers, and Fruiters, and Florists, rejoice
   And here in thanksgiving all lift up the voice;
   Oh, never may discord heart-music destroy,
   We'll sing the high chorus—the chorus of joy.
2. We'll sing of the grain that graces our shrine—
   We'll sing of the fruits, of the tree and the vine—
   We'll sing of the flowers, of garden and wood—
   All teaching the lesson, our Father is good.
   Thus ever from gift to the giver should rise
   Our thanks for the blessings His wisdom supplies,
   And ever should we His protection implore.
   Whose power is dispensing his love evermore."

REMARKS ON INITIATORY CEREMONIES LABORER'S DEGREE.

In the Laborer's degree are found some maxims which all persons should know and practice.

The Chaplain's Lecture, composed of selections from the Proverbs (which book we advise every real Patron of Husbandry to commit to memory) claims our approbation. Ignorance, sloth and superstition are justly characterized as enemies. Wisdom and knowledge are recommended as better than silver and gold. It is also true that farmers and others should seek peace by a charitable demeanor, cultivate their minds and be merciful to dumb animals.

In order to obtain these maxims, all which may be learned in the Bible, a man pays the price of two Bibles and submits, blindfolded, to be initiated into a society whose secret ceremonies he is not allowed to examine beforehand. Ceremonies which the Constitution of the National Grange says, in its preamble, bind the members "in mutual fraternity as with a band of IRON." The nature of this bond which unites a man to thousands of strangers in "mutual fraternity" is concealed. Wm. Sanders, founder of the order, truthfully states that the discipline necessary to secure permanent organization could not be attained by any other means than the secret ceremony. Liberty-loving farmers would not be initiated if allowed a previous examination of the ceremonies, and they surrender the rights of intelligent human beings by submitting to this ritual without first examining it.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Home and Health Hints.

Cleaning the Cellar.

One day a neighbor caught us down cellar right in the midst of our cleaning in a part of the house which we have come to regard as more essential to the well-being of the family than the parlor; and while we were giving the timbers overhead and the nicely-painted walls a good coat of whitewash, she expressed her surprise that any one should be so foolish.

"Don't you have enough whitewashing to do up-stairs? Is so much extra work necessary?

We mildly answered "yes" to the first query, and emphatically "yes" to the last, for in lieu of a cool room above ground the cellar was to be our milk room during the heat of the summer, so no unpleasant odor must linger to taint cream or butter. Our work was soon finished, and the freshly scoured milk racks and tables were in place, when two comical figures, mistress and maid, emerged from the cellar, well pleased with their half-day's work.

After tea our friend followed us down the stairway, and rewarded us with the following comment:

"How cool and light it seems! Why I should like to stay here and skim the milk myself."

This approval from the skeptic of an hour or two ago was quite encouraging, and here is the programme from the beginning to the end. In the spring, just as soon as the weather will permit, the windows and outside cellar door are opened, and all the decaying vegetables, as well as empty barrels and bins, are carried out. When it is warm enough to remove the roots to some out-building the men folks again lend us a helping hand, and the rest of the boards and boxes are piled up somewhere out of doors for further use. Nothing is left that can harbor mold or undue moisture, not even the vinegar barrel and jugs. Only the rubbish on the cellar bottom reminds us of the generous store of good things that went down in November; and when the last vestige of that is borne away by stout hands, we dismiss our knights of the hoe with thanks, for the rest of the task is comparatively easy.

First, there is a thorough sweeping overhead, down the walls, and about the grates in the windows and upper half of the doors. Then the gravelly ground, which by use has become almost as smooth and hard as a floor, gets several sweepings, till we are quite sure that no decaying matter hides in the soil, when Bridget carries the disabled spiders and scrapings off to some far-away place.

After some dry lime, such as we find partially slacked among the lumps, has been sprinkled on the ground close to the walls and in the entrance to the drain, we are ready for whitewashing. Providing ourselves with an old brush (for the process is damaging to a new one) and a kettle of whitewash made of fresh lime, a handful of salt and sufficient boiling water to allow the mixture to be spread on the stones, we give the boards and sleepers above, and every stone and crevice in the wall, a generous brushing. By the time they are dry and the air is purified by the action of the lime the cellar is perfectly sweet and clean, and we aim to keep it so. If milk is spilled, it is wiped up immediately, and occasionally dry lime is sprinkled under the racks to prevent mold. With everything banished from the room that could impart an unpleasant odor, we spend many cheerful summer hours in our dairy.—Rural New Yorker.

Farm and Garden.

Balky Horses.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, puts forth a set of rules for the treatment of balky horses:

1. Pat the horse upon the neck; examine the harness carefully, first on one side and then on the other, speaking encouragingly while doing so; then jump into the wagon and give the word go; generally he will obey.

2. A teamster in Maine says he can start the worst balky horse by taking him out of the shafts and making him go round in a circle till he is giddy. If the first dance of this sort does not cure him, a second will.

3. To cure a balky horse, simply place your hand over the horse's nose and shut off his wind until he wants to go.

4. The brain of a horse seems to entertain but one idea at a time; therefore confirmed whipping only confirms his stubborn resolve. If you can, by any means, give him a new subject to think of, you will generally have no trouble in starting him. A simple remedy is to take a couple of turns of stout twine around the foreleg, just below the knee, tight enough for the horse to feel, and tie in a bow knot. At the first check he will generally go dancing off, and after going a short distance you can get out and remove the string to prevent injury to the tendon in your further drive.

5. Take the tail of the horse between the hind legs, and tie it by a cord to the saddle girth.

6. Tie a string around the horse's ear, close to his head.

RENOVATING TREES.—(C. P. H.): To renovate an old fruit tree, cut the branches well back, cover the ends with an application of fresh cow manure secured by means of cloth bandages, scrape the dead bark from every portion of the limbs and trunk remaining, scrub them with a solution of soft soap and weak whitewash, grub up the soil carefully (so as not to disturb the roots) for a considerable distance around the stem, and apply to the surface of the soil a liberal dressing of thoroughly decayed manure. Old trees so treated seem to take a new lease of life, an abundance of young healthy shoots at once start out from the stumps of branches, and speedily form a new head, which in a year or two reward us for our trouble by a fine crop. Under certain circumstances we have known this plan to be adopted with satisfactory results on different kinds of fruit.

Millet makes a good soiling crop, as on the right soil, it will produce a large amount of green fodder of the very best quality, and if cut when fifteen to eighteen inches high will grow a second crop; but should not recommend cutting till the seed is in the milk, when fifteen tons of green fodder may be cut to the acre.

Masonic Books,

FOR SALE AT THE CYNOSURE OFFICE.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

Allyn's Ritual of Masonry,

Illustrated by a large number of engravings, and containing a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, Orange and Odd-fellows' societies. Price, $5.00.

Mackey's Masonic Ritualist;

OR

MONITORIAL INSTRUCTION BOOK

BY ALBERT G. MACKEY,

'Past General High Priest of the General Grand Chapter of the United States, Knight of the Eagle and Pelican, Prince of Mercy," Etc. Etc. Price, $1 75

Mackey's Lexicon of Freemasonry,

Containing a Definition of Terms, Notices of its History, Traditions and Antiquities, and an account of all the Rites and Mysteries of the Ancient World. 12 mo. 526 pages, $3 00.

MACKEY'S MANUAL OF THE LODGE,

OR

Monitorial Instructions in the Degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft, and Master Mason; with Ceremonies relating to Installations, Dedications, Consecrations, Laying of Corner-stones &c. Price, $2 00, Paper Covers 2.00.

MACKEY'S TEXT BOOK

OF

MASONIC JURISPRUDENCE.

Illustrating the Laws of Freemasonry, both written and unwritten.

This is the Great Law Book of Freemasonry 570 pages. Price, $2.50

Webb's Monitor of Freemasonry,

LARGE EDITION, WITH NOTES

By ROB. HORRIS, Price, $1.50.
Pocket Edition, 75 cts.

SICKELS' FREEMASON'S MONITOR.

Containing the Degrees of Freemasonry embraced in the Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery, embellished with nearly 300 symbolic Illustrations. Together with Tactics and drill of Masonic Knighthood. Also, forms of Masonic Documents, Notes, Songs, Masonic dates, installations, etc. By D. Sickels, 32 mo nck. Price $1.50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry.

A Practical Guide to the Ceremones in the Degrees conferred in Masonic Lodge Chapter, Encampments, etc. Illustrated Edition. In cloth, $1 25; paper, 75 cts.

Chase's Digest of Masonic Law.

Comprises a Complete Code of Regulations, Decisions and Opinions upon Questions of Masonic Jurisprudence. Price, $2 25.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor

Illustrated with Explanatory Engravings Price $3.50.

Books on Odd Fellowship.

Donaldson's Odd Fellow's Text Book, By Pascal Donaldson, D. D.,

GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF NORTHERN N. Y.,

Illustrated with numerous engravings, showing the emblems of the order. A detailed account of the Forms, Ceremonies, Funeral Services and Odes with music, and a complete manual for the guidance of Officers and Lodges. Pocket edition Tuck, $1.50.

Grosh's Manual of Odd Fellowship

BY REV. A. B. GROSH,

Containing the history, defence, principles and government of the order; the instructions of arch degree and duties of every station and office with engravings of the emblems of the orders, etc

Price in Cloth,.....$2 00
" Tuck, abridged edition, 1 50

ANTI-MASONIC BOOKS,

(Not our own Publications.)

For Sale by EZRA A. COOK & CO

13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

[FOR CATALOGUE OF PUBLICATIONS OF EZRA A. COOK & CO., See page 15.]

All books sent post paid, on receipt of retail price, but BOOKS SENT BY MAIL ARE NOT AT OUR RISK.

Books ordered by express are sold at 10 per cent. discount and SENT AT OUR RISK. Party ordering must pay express charges.

Elder Stearns' Books.

Stearns' Inquiry Into the Nature and Tendency of Masonry

With an Appendix.

SEVENTH EDITION.

338 Pages, in Cloth.....60 cents.
" " " Paper.....40 "

Stearns' Letters on Masonry.

Showing the antagonism between Freemasonry and the Christian Religion,
Price, 30 cents.

Stearns' Review of Two Masonic Addresses.

In this scathing review the lying pretentions of the order are clearly shown.
Price, 10 cents.

Levington's Key to Masonry.

This is Rev. Mr. Levington's last, and in the judgment of its author, best work on Masonry. The contents of the first chapter are as follows:

"Commencement and growth of Speculative or Symbolic Freemasonry—A table showing the thing at a glance—The use that the Atheists made of it—Identical with Illuminism—Its connection with the French Revolution, and with the Irish Rebellion—The action of the British Parliament with regard to it—Proofs of its diabolical purposes—Its Introduction, doings, progress and designs in the United States."

The contents of the Eleventh chapter are thus startling:

"Knights of the Golden Circle—Graphic account of them by a seceding Knight, and remarks thereon, showing the identity of the order with Masonry—Quotations from Sir Walter Scott."

This work is thrilling in statement, and powerful in argument. 425 pages,
Price. $1.35.

Light on Freemasonry.

BY ELDER D. BERNARD,

TO WHICH IS APPENDED A

Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship by a Member of the Craft.

The whole containing over five hundred pages lately revised and republished. Price $2,00

The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages in paper cover, will be sent post paid on receipt of $1.

MASONRY A WORK OF DARKNESS

ADVERSE TO CHRISTIANITY,

And Inimical to a Republican Government
BY REV. LEBBEUS ARMSTRONG,
(Presbyterian.)

A Seceding Mason of 21 degrees.

This is a very telling work and no honest man that reads it will think of joining the lodge.
PRICE, 20 cents each; $1.75 per doz., post paid

Walsh's Review of Freemasonry

REVISED EDITION,

Is a Scholarly Review of the Institution, by REV JNO. T. WALSH.

Price 25 cts.

Finney on Masonry.

BOUND IN CLOTH, PRICE $1.00.

CHEAP EDITION,

Twenty-five dollars per hundred, by express and not less than 25 copies at that rate,

BY MAIL, POST-PAID:

Per doz.....$3 75.
Single copy,..... 35 c.

THIRTEEN REASONS

Why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

BY

REV. ROBERT ARMSTRONG.

The author states his reason clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the Lodge.

Single copy, by mail post paid..... 05
Per doz., " " 50
" 100, express charges extra,.....3 50

Descriptive Catalogue of Publications of Ezra A. Cook & Co.

13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

BOOKS.

FREEMASONRY EXPOSED,

by CAP'T. WILLIAM MORGAN.

THE GENUINE OLD MORGAN BOOK:—repnblished with engravings showing the Lodge Room, Dress of candidates, Signs, Due Guards, Grips, Etc.

This revelation is so accurate that Freemasons murdered the anthor for writing it. Thousands have testified to the correctness of the revelation and this book therefore sells very rapidly.

Price 25 cents.

Per Doz. Post Paid..... $2.00
Per hnndred by express, (express charges extra.).....$10.00

ODD FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

A complete exposition of the Lodge Encampment and Rebecca (Ladies') Degree. The Signs, Grips, &c., shown by engravings.

Single copy, post paid,..... $ 25
Per Doz., " " 2 00
Per Hnndred, Express charges extra,..... 10 00

EXPOSITION OF THE GRANGE.

EDITED BY REV. A. W. GEESLIN.

Illustrated with Engravings showing Lodge Room, Signs, Signals, etc, NOW IN PRESS; will be completed abont June 1st.

All orders for 10 or more copies, with Cash, received before June 1st, will be filled at 100 rates.

Single Copy, post paid..... $ 25
Per Doz., " " 2 00
Per 100 Express charges extra..... 10 00

Judge Whitney's Defense Before the Grand Lodge of Ill.

Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the Lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the Lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry.

Single Copy, post paid..... $ 20
Per Doz. " " 1 50
Per 100, Express charges extra..... 8 00

THE BROKEN SEAL.

OR PERSONAL REMINISCENCES OF THE ABDUCTION AND MURDER OF Wm. MORGAN,

By SAMUEL D. GREENE,

Price in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

In Paper Covers per Doz. Post paid.....$4 50
" per hundred by express (ex. charges extra $25.00

That the book is one of great interest and value is shown by the following

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"A MASONIC REVELATION.—Mr. Samnel D. Greene is a venerable gentleman of the highest respectability, whose statements seem to be worthy of full credence. The Broken Seal: or, Personal Reminiscences of the Morgan Abduction and Murder, is the title of a book of some three hnndred pages jnst issued by him, purporting to give a full and accurate account, from personal knowledge, of the Morgan 'abduction,' and other masonic matters which made such an excitement in this country, now almost half a century ago."—Congregationalist and Recorder, Boston.

"We are acqnainted with Mr. Greene. and have no donbt that his account is entirely reliable, and of great historic and moral interest. Capt. Wm. Morgan was Mr. Greene's neighbor in Batavia, N. Y., and a member of the same lodge with him at the time of the great excitement in 1826. The titles to these chapters are sufficiently exciting to give the book a large sale:—'The Storm Gathering;' "Abduction of Morgan;" "Attempted Abdnction of Miller and his Rescue;" "What became of Morgan;" "What Morgan Actnally Revealed;" "Confession of the Murderer;" "Allegations against Freemasonry, etc."—Boston Daily News.

History of The Abduction and Murder of Cap't. Wm. Morgan,

As prepared by Seven Committees of Citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan.

This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons, abdncted and Murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offence than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife, and no candid person after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable FREEMASONS. In the Empire State, with others were concerned in this crime.

Single Copy, post Paid,... ..... 25 cents.
Per doz. " ..... $2,00.
Per 100, Express Charges Extra,..... 10.00.

Valance's Confession of The Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.

This confession of Henry L. Valance, one of the three Freemasons who drowned Morgan in the Niagara River, was taken from the lips of the dying man by Dr. John C. Emery, of Racine County, Wisconsin in 1848; The confession bears clear evidence of truthfulness.

Single copy, post paid,..... 20 cents.
Per doz. " ..... $1.50.
Per 100 Express Charges Extra,..... 8.00.

The Mystic Tie or Freemasonry a League with the Devil.

This is an account of the Church Trial of Peter Cook, and wife of Elkhart, Indiana, for refnsing to support a Reverend Freemason; and their very able defence presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry, is antagonistic to the Christian Religion. Single Copy, post paid,..... 20 cents

Per dozen, post paid..... $1 50
Per hundred Express charges Extra, ... 9 00

NARRATIVES AND ARGUMENTS,

showing the Conflict of Secret Societies with the Constitution and Laws, of the Union and of the States.

by FRANCIS SEMPLE of Dover, Iowa.

The fact that Secret Societies, interfere with the execntion and pervert the administration of Law is here clearly proved. price 20c.

Per dozen, post paid..... $1 75
Per hundred Express charges Extra..... 9 00

The Antimason's Scrap Book,

CONSISTING OF

21 CYNOSURE TRACTS.

In this book are the views of more than a Score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of Secret Societies.

The dangerous tendency and positive evil of organized Secrecy is here shown by the most varied and powerfnl arguments and illnstrations that have ever been given to the public.

Lecturers and others who wish to find the best arguments against the Lodge, should send for this book.

Those who wish to circulate Antimasonic Tracts ought to have the book to select from.

Single Copy, post paid, ...20 cents.
Per Doz. " $1.75
Per 100, Express charges Extra,.....$10.00

PHELPS' SECRET SOCIETIES Ancient and Modern.

A NEW BOOK OF GREAT INTEREST.

This work is particularly commended to the attention of Officers of The Army and Navy, The Bench and The Clergy.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

"THE ANTIQUITY OF SECRET SOCIETIES, THE LIFE OF JULIAN, THE ELEUSINIAN MYSTERIES, THE ORIGIN OF MASONRY, WAS WASHINGTON A MASON? FILMORE'S AND WEBSTER'S DEFERENCE TO MASONRY, A BRIEF OUTLINE OF THE PROGRESS OF MASONRY IN THE UNITED STATES, THE TAMMANY RING, MASONIC BENEVOLENCE, THE USES OF MASONRY, AN ILLUSTRATION, THE CONCLUSION."

Single Copy, Post Paid..... 5c
Per Doz " " " $4 75
Per Hundred, Express Charges Extra.....$33 00

MINUTES OF THE SYRACUSE CONVENTION,

Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. D. Greene, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. S. D. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. Unpublished Reminiscences of the Morgan Times, by Elder David Bernard; Recollections of the Morgan Trials, as related by Victory Birdseye, Esq., and presented by his daughter, Mrs. C. B. Miller; Secretary's report; roll of delegates; songs of Mr. G. A. Clark, paper by Enoch Honeywell; Constitution N. C. A.; reports of committees, and a report of the political meeting.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion.

A clear cutting argument against the Lodge, from a Christian stand point.

Single Copy.....$ 05
Per 100..... 3 00

SERMON ON MASONRY,

BY REV. W. P. M'NARY.

Pastor United Presbyterian Church, Bloomington, Ind.

This is a very clear, thorough, candid and remarkably consice Scriptnral argument on the character of Freemasonry.

Single Copy, Post Paid,..... 5
Per Doz,..... 50
Per Hnudred, Express Charges Extra.....$3 00

COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES.

Their Customs, Character and the Efforts for their Suppression.

BY H. L. KELLOGG.

Containing the opinion of many rominent College Presidents, and. others, and a FULL ACCOUNT OF THE MURDER OF MORTIMER LEGGETT

Single Copy, post paid..... $ 35
per Doz " " 2 50
per 100 Express charges extra..... 15 00

ANTIMASONIC TRACTS.

WE NOW HAVE 22 ENGLISH TRACTS. ONE GERMAN, AND ONE SWEEDISE

These tracts are sold at the rate of $1.00 per 1000 pages.

A Tract Fund for the Free Distribution of Tracts.

HAS BEEN SECURED AND WE HOPE WILL NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fund a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE.

Many of our most earnest workers in this cause of God are poor men, who would be glad to circulate thousands of pages of Antimasonic literature if they could have them free.

SHALL WE NOT HAVE AN INEXHAUSTIBLE TRACT FUND?

"THE ANTI-MASONS SCRAP BOOK."

Contains our 21 Cynosure Tracts, bound together, price 20 cents. See advertisement.

Address EZRA A. COOK & Co.,
13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

TRACT NO. 1:

HISTORY OF MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT J. BLANCHARD, OF WHEATON COLLEGE.

This is now published in three tracts of four pages each. Price of each, 50 cents per 100; $4 per 1000.

TRACT No. 1, PART FIRST—Shows the origin of Speculative Freemasonry, and is entitled "HISTORY OF MASONRY."

TRACT No. 1, PART SECOND—Is entitled "DESPOTIC CHARACTER OF FREEMASONRY"

TRACT No. 1, PART THIRD—Is entitled "FREEMASONRY A CHRIST-EXCLUDING RELIGION."

TRACT NO. 1, IN SWEDISH;

translated by Prof. A. R. CERVIN. A 15-page tract at $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 2:

MASONIC MURDER,

By REV. J. R. BAIRD, of Pleasantville, Pa., a seceding Mason who has taken 17 degrees. A 2 page tract at 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 3:

SECRETS OF MASONRY,

BY ELI TAPLEY.

This is a 4-page Illnstrated Tract, showing the signs, grips and pass-words, of the first three degrees. 50 cents per 100, or $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 4:

GRAND! GREAT GRAND!!

BY PHILO CARPENTER.

This is a 2-page tract, calling the attention of the public to the despotic and ridiculous titles of Freemasonry. Price 25 cents per 100; $2 00 per 1,000.

TRACT. NO. 5:

Extracts From Masonic Oaths and Penalties, as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.

This tract is a reprint of a tract published in 1834, and is a very weighty document. A 4-page tract at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 6:

Hon. John Quincy Adams' Letter.

Giving His and His Father's Opinion of Freemasonry (1831.);

AND

Hon. James Madison's Letter,

Giving His Opinion of Freemasonry (1832).

Both of these letters, in one 4-page tract, at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 7:

SATAN'S CABLE-TOW.

A 4-page tract. This is a careful analysis of the character of Masonic oaths, and shows them to be most blasphemous and unchristian; and the Masonic Cable Tow is clearly shown to be the Cable Tow by which Satan is leading thousands to eternal death. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 8:

Is a 2-page double tract, "ILLUSTRATED." The first page represents a Mason proclaiming the wonderful wisdom and benevolence of the order, with an article below, entitled "Freemasonry is only 152 Years Old," and gives the time and place of its birth.

The second side is entitled, "Murder and Treason not Excepted," and shows that the Masonic order is treasonable in its constitution, and is both anti-Republican and anti-Christian. Price 25 cents per 100; $2 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 9, ILLUSTRATED:

FREEMASONRY IN THE CHURCH.

Copy of a petition for the higher degrees of Freemasonry, in which Blasphemous and Despotic Titles are enumerated and prayed for. The Copy was printed for the use of "Occidental Sovereign Consistory S. P. R. S," 32d degree—a Chicago Lodge—and was ordered by a deacon of a Christian Church who is Grand Orator of the Grand Lodge of Ill.

TRACT NO. 10:

CHARACTER AND SYMBOLS OF FREEMASONRY.

A 2-page tract, (ILLUSTRATED) by its "Grand Secretaries, Grand Lecturers, Perfect Prince Freemasons, Grand Inspector, Inquisitor Commanders, Grand High Priests," etc. The wonderful symbolical meaning of "the Cable Tow," "the Square and Compass," "the Lamb Skin, or white Apron," and "the Common Gavel," are given in the exact words of the highest Masonic authority. 25 cents per 100 or $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 11;

Address of Niagara County Association, New York,

TO THE PUBLIC;

Concerning the Morgan Murder, and the character of Freemasonry, as shown by this and other Masonic murders. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 12:

JUDGE WHITNEY AND MASONRY.

This tract contains a condensed account of Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois, on charge of unmasonic conduct in bringing Samuel L. Keith the murderer of Ellen Slade, and a member of his Lodge, to justice, with Judge Whitney's subsequent renunciation of Masonry,

An 8-page tract, $1.00 per 100; $8.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 13:

DR. NATHANIEL COLVER ON MASONRY,

and

HOWARD CROSBY, D. D.,

Chancellor of the University of New York, on SECRET SOCIETIES. A double 2-page tract 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 14:

GRAND LODGE MASONRY.

ITS RELATION TO CIVIL GOVERNMENT AND THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION.

Opening address before the Monmouth Convention, by PRES. J. BLANCHARD of WHEATON COLLEGE. This is a 16-page tract at $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 15:

MASONIC OATHS NULL AND VOID.

A clear and conclusive argument proving the invalidity of any oath or obligation to do evil. By REV. I. A. HART, Secretary National Christian Association. Published by special order of the Association. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 16:

HON. SETH M. GATES ON FREEMASONRY.

PROOF THAT THE INSTITUTION THAT MURDERED MORGAN IS UNCHANGED IN CHARACTER

This is a letter to the Monmouth Convention by Hon. Seth M. Gates who was Deputy Sheriff of Genesee County, and also Secretary of the Leroy Lodge at the time of Morgan's Abduction. A 4-page tract, 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 17:

Origin, Obligations and Expenses of The Grange.

WITH A CONSTITUTION OF A FARMERS' CLUB.

This little tract ought to be put into the hands of every Farmer in the United States. Four-page tract, 50 cents per 100; $4 00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 18:

HON. WM. H. SEWARD ON SECRET SOCIETIES.

Extracts from a Speech on Know-Nothingism in the U. S. Senate in 1855. The testimony of JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, MILLARD FILLMORE, CHIEF JUSTIC MARSHALL and others, is added.

A 2-page tract, 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO, 19.

BRICKS FOR MASONS TO LAY.

WASHINGTON, MADISON, MARSHALL, RUSH, HANCOCK, ADAMS AND WEBSTER, give brief clear testimony against the Lodge A 2-page tract 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 20:

OBJECTIONS TO MASONRY.

By A SECEDING MASON, of Cornton, Vermont.

This tract contains many strong arguments against the Lodge drawn from personal experience, observation and study of its character. A 4-page tract at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

TRACT NO. 21:

MASONIC CHASTITY.

BY EMMA A. WALLACE,

The anthor, by wonderfully clear illustration and argument, shows the terribly corrupt nature of Freemasonry. No true woman who reads this will ever speak with approbation of this institution A 4-page tract 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

GERMAN CYNOSURE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason

By REV. A. GROLE, Pastor, German M. E. Chur ,

WORCESTER, MASS.

This is our first German tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. Price 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

ENOCH HONEYWELL'S TRACT

TO THE YOUNG MEN OE AMERICA. Postage, 3 cents per 100. Tracts. Tracts Free.

Publishers' Department.

According to our custom, for the encouragement of all who are working for the increased circulation of the Cynosure, we give a quarterly report of our mail list. Whole number of subscribers December 31st, 4,080; exchanges 59; total, 4,139; March 27th, 4,085; exchanges 61; total, 4,146. During this time almost one thousand subscriptions have run out and have either been renewed or their places have been filled with new subscriptions; and there is a gain of five. This, considering what inclement weather we have had during the last three months, is a very encouraging report. Illinois has gained six during the last three months and we suppose intends to keep the first place. Do not fail to bring her list up to 1,000 as soon as possible; it now stands 803. Second, Ohio; third, Indiana; fourth, New York; fifth, Iowa; sixth, Pennsylvania; seventh, Michigan stand in the same place they did three months ago. Wisconsin now has regained her original position and is eighth; Missouri, ninth. Kansas comes up above Vermont and is tenth; Vermont, eleventh; Massachusetts, twelfth; Minnesota stands in thirteenth place. Connecticut has come up from the fifteenth into the fourteenth during the last three months. "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him." Oregon has the fifteenth. Washington Territory stands above California in the sixteenth place; California next. Ontario, eighteenth; Maine, nineteenth; New Jersey occupies the twentieth place. Nebraska stands next, coming up from the twenty-second place. Colorado, twenty second; Virginia, twenty-third; New Hampshire, twenty-fourth. She has come up two steps this quarter. Georgia, twenty-fifth. The next three months will doubtless be much more convenient for canvassing than the last have been. The exposition of the grange now being published will furnish an inducement to many to subscribe, and the National Anniversary meeting at Pittsburgh will be an inducement to others. We earnestly and affectionately urge all lecturers, agents and friends to make a business of enlarging the Cynosure subscription list so far as they can consistently with their other duties.

Does your subscription expire in April? Please send your renewal as soon as possible.

Is your time out in May? Can you not collect at least five new subscriptions in April and forward early in May, thus enrolling yourself in Mr. Clark's company, and swelling the subscription list?

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED DURING WEEK ENDING MARCH 27th, FROM—J A Allen, P Andreas, J T Atkinson, P Bacon, J L Buchwalter, A Blair, J Benson, J C Boyd, J Baird, G L Beachly, C A Blanchard, J Clapp, F Dunbar, S B Daniel, S Daniels, C Goodfellow, A Grattan, S M Gates, D Glaspie, E Gould, Mrs Harrington, T Hodge, A N Hudson, W Hamlyn, B J Hunt, G Harvey, W W Kenyon, P J Lewis, L W Mathews. W Miller 2, D Miller, Mrs. M May, W H Ogle, J M Oxley, D F Pratt, P Pontius, H Peace, J S Palmer, J M Russell, C W Roberts, J W Raynor, J T Russell, J Smith, H W Steele, I Strong, L Scoville, Mrs Thompson, J Turneaure, H S Thomas, B Ulsh, J B Wilkin, W S Wilson, L J Ward, D Will.

Agents Wanted!

TO SELL THE PUBLICATIONS OF

EZRA A. COOK & CO.

Liberal Terms Offered.

Capable persons who are in need of pecuniary aid may clear

Handsome Profits,

While at the same time aiding the cause of Reform. Apply to EZRA A. COOK & CO., No. 18 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

SOMETHING NEW.

A CHART OF MASONRY

Showing the degrees from the first to the thirty-third, entitled

Degrees of Ancient Accepted Scottish Freemasonry,

According to a Manual by Wm. M. Cunningham 33d Degree.

Designed by Rev. P. Stoddard, to explain Freemasonry, as shown by Morgan's Exposition and Richardson's Monitor.

A Neat Lithograph 22x28 Inches.

Single copies finely colored, post paid	$ 75
Per dozen " " " "	5 00
Per 100 " " " " Express charges extra	35 00
Single copy, colored, varnished and mounted postpaid	1 00
Per dozen colored, varnished and mounted, post paid	7 50
Per 100, colored, varnished and mounted, express charges extra	50 00

25 COPIES OR MORE SENT AT THE 100 RATES.

AGENTS WANTED

FOR THE

Leading Agricultural Weekly of the West.

LARGEST IN AMERICA!
Established Twenty Years. Seed and Chromo Combination Unsurpassed!

Western Farm Journal.

The People's Champion! The Family Favorite! New Clear Type and Elegant Paper!
SPECIAL INDUCEMENTS to good Canvassers.
STEADY WORK AND GOOD PAY.

"There's Millions In It!"

Specimen Copies, Terms, and Circulars Free.

It Will Pay

Every one who reads this to send their address at once to WESTERN FARM JOURNAL,
126 Washington St., Chicago

MARKET REPORTS

CHICAGO, March 29, 1875.

The following are the latest advices:

Grain Wheat—Spring, No. 1	$1 00	1 00¼
" No. 2	94¼	96⅛
" No. 3	91½	94
" Rejected	83	85
Corn—No. 2	67½	69
Rejected	66	68
Oats—No. 2	56	57
Rejected	54	54½
Rye—No. 2	98½	99
Flour—Winter	4 50	6 75
Spring	3 50	4 75
Hay—Timothy	16 00	19 50
Prairie, "	13 50	17 50
Lard		13⅞
Mess pork, per bbl		19 95
Butter	18	32
Cheese	10	18½
Eggs	22	24
Potatoes, per bus	1 00	1 15
Broom corn	05½	13
Seeds—Timothy	2 15	2 45
Clover	6 30	6 40
Flax	2 07	2 25
Chickens, dressed, per lb	11	13½
Turkeys, do. per lb	14	15
HIDES green to dry salted	07	15
Lumber—Clear	37 00	55 00
Common	11 00	12 00
Lath		2 25
Shingles	1 50	3 25
WOOL—Washed	40	58
Unwashed	27	37
LIVE STOCK Cattle, extra	6 50	7 00
Good to choice	5 60	6 25
Medium	5 25	5 50
Common	3 50	4 75
Hogs	6 00	8 80
Sheep	4 00	7 00
New York Market.
Flour	$ 4 50	8 00
Wheat	1 13	1 40
Corn		87½
Oats	69	72
Rye	90	1 01
Lard		14
Mess pork		20 75
Butter	15	22
Cheese	12	16
Eggs	32	33

TERMS FOR THE CYNOSURE.

$2.00 per annum, in advance.
20c " " " for postage.

All who canvass for the CYNOSURE are allowed a cash commission of twenty per cent. or twenty-five per cent in books at retail prices, one-half this percentage on renewals, and any one sending $100. for the CYNOSURE during three months, will be entitled to an extra five per cent.

All responsible persons who desire to promote this reform are authorized to act as agents.

CLUB RATES.

No commission is allowed on club rates. Club rates are intended for those who wish to give the commission to subscribers.

Subscriptions may all be sent at one time, or at different times, and in all cases the sender should keep an account of the names and amounts sent.

CLUB RATES, INCLUDING POSTAGE.

Two new subscriptions, one year	$3.90
One new subscription and one renewal, sent ten days before expiration of subscription,	3.90
4 new subs., 1 year., 1 copy free to sender,	8.75
5 " " 1 " 1 " "	10.50
6 " " " " "	12.25
7 " " " " "	14.00
8 " " " " "	15.75
10 " " " " "	19.50
20 " " " " "	36 00
10 Renewals " " " "	22.00
50 " " " " "	95.00

Twenty subscriptions for six months count the same as ten for a year.

How to Send Money.

Post office orders, checks or drafts on Chicago or towns east of Chicago, and currency by express may be sent at our risk. If it is not possible to send by either of the four ways named, money in a registered letter may be sent at our risk, but it is not as safe.

The date at which subscriptions expire is with each subscriber's name on the address label. Send renewals before this date occurs. Notice if this date is changed to correspond; if not or if the paper fails to come, write without delay.

We discontinue during the first part of each month all subscriptions which expire during the preceding one except such as are ordered continued with a promise to forward the money soon. We do not like to lose a single subscriber and will not remove names simply because the cash is not received promptly, if we understand that the paper is wanted. Address all letters with subscriptions or orders for Books, Tracts and donations to the Tract Fund to EZRA A. COOK & Co., 13 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1	square, 1 insertion,		$2.00
1	square (1 inch deep) one month		7.00
1	" "	2 "	10.00
1	" "	3 "	15.00
1	" "	6 "	25.00
1	" "	12 "	40.00

Discount for Space.

On 2 squares 5 per cent, On 3 squares 10 per cent
On 4 " 15 " " On 5 " 20 "
On ¼ col. 25 per cent On one col. 30 per cent

Postage on the Cynosure.

THE POSTAGE ON THE CYNOSURE MUST BE PAID AT CHICAGO. It is twenty cents a year.

The cost of postage now depends entirely on the size and weight, and therefore some smaller papers charge but fifteen cents; and others about the size of the Cynosure charge twenty-five cents a year for postage.

If the subscription price of the CYNOSURE was $2.50 or $3.00 a year, the price of many religious papers containing no more reading matter, we might afford to pay the postage ourselves, but at $2.00 a year we cannot do this with our present Subscription list.

Therefore let all send the postage, 20 cents a year, 10 cents for half a year with their renewals.

The commission on one new subscription for a year will pay the postage on your own and the new subscriber's paper. We would rather have the postage paid by commissions than in any other way.

When postage is not paid we shall have to shorten the time of subscription sufficiently to pay it.

ESTABLISHED 1868.

EZRA A. COOK & CO.,

STEAM PRINTERS,

Lithographers,

STATIONERS

—AND—

Book Binders.

NOS. 7, 9, 11 & 13

Wabash Avenue, Chicago.

We were in the Stationery, Printing and Lithographing business before the Cynosure was started.

WE LITHOGRAPH

Business Cards, Letter Heads, Note Heads, Bill Heads, Circulars, Checks, Drafts, Certificates of Stock, Certificates of Deposit, Plats and Charts; also elegant Diplomas for Colleges. Literary Societies, and Agricultural Societies, in one, two or three Colors. Samples and Prices sent on Application.

WE PRINT

Books,
Pamphlets,
Catalogues, Business Cards, Show Cards, Letter Heads, Bill Heads, Note Heads, Circulars, Hand Bills, Posters, Checks, Drafts Notes, Certificates of Deposit, Certificates of Stock, Diplomas, etc.,

IN THE BEST STYLE,

at the

LOWEST MARKET RATES.

WE FILL ORDERS PROMPTLY, and

GUARANTEE GOOD WORK.

SPECIAL ATTENTION GIVEN TO ORDERS

BY MAIL.

Samples and prices sent promptly when desired.

Address:

EZRA A. COOK & CO.,

7, 9, 11 & 13 Wabash Avenue,

CHICAGO

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

"In Secret Have I Said Nothing."—Jesus Christ.

EZRA A. COOK & CO., PUBLISHERS, NO 13 WABASH AVENUE.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 8, 1875.

VOL. VII., NO. 26.—WHOLE NO. 261
WEEKLY, $2 00 A YEAR.

Contents.

	Page
TOPICS OF THE TIME	1
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
A False Witness	8
How Masons Write History	8
Grand Benevolence	8
Notes	8
CONTRIBUTED AND SELECT ARTICLES:
Victory through Faith (Poetry)	1
Sumner's Estimate of Slavery and the Lodge	1
Masonic Acquaintance	2
Our New Mexico Letter	2
Masonic Persecution—IV	3
Sketches of Masonry at the South	3
Secret Societies and Trades Unions from a Catholic Stand-point	3
REFORM NEWS and NOTICES:
The Peninsular State Organized; From the Indiana Agent	4
CORRESPONDENCE:
Odd-fellowship in Court; Grange Corruption; Charity of Odd-fellows; Lodge Funeral; Masonic Dedication and Ball; Masonic Barbarity; A Few Facts in Regard to Masonry; A Veteran's Recollections; The Christian Power; Our Mail.	4,5,6
FORTY YEARS AGO; An Able Argument for Free Inquiry	7
POLITICAL: A Word on Politics from Missouri	9
Obituary—Rev. E. B. Rolins	9
Exposition of the Grange (Continued)	13
History of the Reform against Secret Orders	12
THE HOME CIRCLE	10
CHILDREN'S CORNER	11
The Sabbath School	7
Home and Health Hints	14
Farm and Garden	14
Religious Intelligence	9
News of the Week	12
Publishers' Department	16

Topics of the Time.

From more than one reliable source it appears that a new plan is maturing at the South by which to solve the problem how to secede and succeed. The experiment of war from outside the Union was a costly failure. The next time the North is expected to assume the burden of rebellion. By carrying the next general election and filling Congress with the right material, the animated remains of the slave power will dictate to the North with more than old-time arrogance. The rebel soldiers will be pensioned; the amendment against the rebel war debt will be assailed, and the North will be forced into resistance. But she will find it a rebellion against the Union, whose government, treasury and arms are enlisted against loyalty and justice. There is much that seems chemerical in this plot, yet facts give it a look of fearful reality. The next House of Representatives will be full of ex-confederates, and the Southern lodge-dens are as numerous and bold as before the late war.

The religious movement in Great Britain has been compared to the revivals under the preaching of the Wesleys and Whitefield. There is, however, a difference in the agents and their methods and probably time will show different results. The former evangelists were men highly educated as well as of great natural ability. Their methods of reaching the people were simple; their power was only in their preaching, which was largely directed to the reformation of the established church and met frequent opposition. Mr. Moody is neither liberally educated nor been ordained; his library is the Word of God, and the unction of the Spirit the seal of his apostleship. Sankey is not an artist of faultless or classic style, but his voice and heart are in tune with the Gospel. All classes and denominations join their work, which will be permanent in individual hearts; but none expect such social changes as have followed the Wesleys in the history of the Methodist church. Less is said of revivals in our own country under Whittle and Bliss in Louisville and Cincinnati, Varley in New York, Hammond in California, Morehouse and Earle in Chicago and St. Louis, Howard in Virginia and Needham in Georgia. These movements are hardly less marked and successful all things considered; and although carried on through the agency of the churches, are a testimony against soulless essays about religion, the husks on which too many popular churches are fed.

The coal and iron interests of Pennsylvania have escaped a legislative disaster which is only worth notice to show that in the abnormal struggle between capital and labor both sides may share the blame. A bill was barely defeated in the Legislature aimed to regulate these industries in the workman's interest. It authorized the election by lottery of eleven men, three of whom were to be laborers about the coal mines; three of them workmen in the mines; three of them laborers about iron and steel works; one "coal operator" and one iron manufacturer. These nine employees and two employers were to form on "Industrial Tribunal" and any seven could fix the wages for mines and furnaces, restore discharged workmen, decide how much coal should be mined, and fix the amount of profits the owners might receive. If the owner did not obey shortly, his coal mine or iron works were to be siezed and put in the hands of another person who would run it according to the decree of the tribunal. This crazy scheme never passed, and if it had was too unjust to have been obeyed. The difficulties in Pennsylvania which have led to serious riots lately can be amicably adjusted if the parties would practice toward each other the simple and sensible Golden Rule.

Our warfare is not with flesh and blood, but with the rulers of the darkness of this world. We conquer liberty, not dominion, would win human souls from the thrall of sin and Satan, and lead them into the light, the freedom, and the joy of the sons of God. We wield the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God; but it is the sword of the Spirit not our sword, God's truth not our truth."—Lewett.

Victory through Faith.

BY REV. A. J. HIATT.

Many things are sung by singers and many more may be;
Why not sing a song to-day of deceitful Masonry;
Which binds her men with oaths until they are no longer free;
For God is on our side.

Our army is a brave one and we're certain of success,
Our voices we have lifted and our souls they cannot rest
Till Jesus, blessed religion crush the "Image of the Beast;"
For God is on our side.

The lodge in vain may laugh to scorn the effort that we make;
By God's assisting grace we now the work do undertake;
To crush this false religion, though we suffer at the stake;
For God is on our side.

They have no secrets longer, for to us they all are known,
The Fellow-Craft's "Shibboleth" and the Master's "Ma-ha-bone:"
Their workings of iniquity shall to the world be shown,
For God is on our side.

Christ will ever go before us and lead us in the fight,
We are trusting in his wisdom and the power of his might;
And when we've won the victory we'll reign with him in light,
For God is on our side.

Sumner's Estimate of Slavery and the Lodge.

BY SAMUEL D. GREENE.

I have delayed the following letter from my departed friend, Hon. Charles Sumner, in hope that the Civil Rights bill (which was so near his heart) would become a law at the Congress now adjourned. As I was unwilling, in giving his views on another subject to arouse the least objection in anyone to all he wished to accomplish on that. I have given an account of a conversation I had with him on my escape from Wilmington, N. C., in 1836, and his farewell remark.

At the time of investigation by the Legislative committee of Massachusetts upon the imprisonment of free negroes by the Southern States, especially North and South Carolina, I was called before the committee to testify. This was in 1837. The result of it was the sending of Judge Hoar on a mission to Charleston, South Carolina.

This was the last time I saw Mr. Sumner to hold any conversation with him. He then said, "All secret societies are a conspiracy against the uninitiated;" and "Freemasonry is a conspiracy against God and man, and should never be allowed to exist in our free government." He also said that Gen. Washington took the right view of secret societies when he said in his last address, "Beware of such organizations." He said he would never join any secret societies or become connected with any ring, but was determined to stand upon a pure, independent platform. Slavery was working a great evil in our country and must be abolished.

I have never had a personal conversation with him since, and only a few hearty shakes of his hand with the accompaning words "I am glad to meet you." But in the early part of the fourth year after he entered the United States Senate, January 13th, 1854, he wrote me a letter of which I kept the following memorandum:

"MY DEAR FRIEND SAMUEL D. GREENE: Are you as much interested in opposition to Freemasonry as formerly? I find two powers here in Washington in harmony, and both are antagonistical to our free institutions and tending to centralization and anarchy, Freemasonry and slavery; and they must both be destroyed if our country is to be the home of the free as our ancestors designed it. Masonry seemed to be dead at home, but it is ripe here. Destroy this letter, and please never mention my name in opposition to Freemasonry, as it may weaken my determination to oppose, and if possible to destroy slavery. The battle is now against slavery. These enemies to our free institutions must be met separately."

I wrote him on the 20th of January, 1854, and fully coincided with his views, for I did not believe that any man, were he ever so good and great, could successfully battle, at the same time, two such great and tremendous evils as slavery and Freemasonry. But by the successful destruction of either, it would show the power of our nation, planted and nurtued by God, to destroy them both. "I have destroyed your letter and I will do as you request me, and will be tender of your reputation every way. I have not done anything in opposition to Freemasonry of any account for some time, having been engaged in selling the Pictorial Geography for a number of years to gain a living and educate my sons. I am now agent of the Waverly Land Company, seven miles from Boston on the Fitchburg road." I got a brief note from him saying, that he would send me his speeches and others of importance and public documents "and contrive some way to keep up a correspondence without committing myself on a subject I wish to avoid as bearing my writing. I want to stand strictly upon one platform. Opposition to slavery." He sent me his speeches and other documents as they were published.

Chelsea, Mich.

An instant decides the life of man and his whole faith; for after lengthened thought the resolve is only the act of a moment; it is the man of sense that seizes on the right thing to be done; it is ever dangerous to linger in your selection of this and that, and so by your hesitation get confused.

Masonic Acquaintance.]

BY D. B. TURNEY,
Pres. W. V. D. A. of the Methodist Church.

My recent address on A. F. A. M., published in the Cynosure, has brought war and denunciation upon my track. A personal friend, whose affection for me is as warm as the genial sunshine of an April noonday, has interviewed me, and the conversation terminated with an unsuccessful attempt to tole me into the lodge by holding out allurements, as men would tole swine into a pig-pen by shelling grains of corn along on the ground. He detailed the wonderful augustness of the majestic fraternity. "Freemasonry," he said, "engirdles the globe itself." I answered, "So does sin." "Lodges," he continued, "are spread like network over the whole earth." "Say rather 'like spider's webs,' " was my rejoinder; "for by means of oath-bound combinations and conclaves of darkness the many-linked ties of humanity, like cakes seasoned with arsenic instead of salt, are converted from a blessing into a curse." "But the lodge is doing good to the poor, and Freemasons do more for each other than professed followers of Christ do. Those very oaths to which you object teach this, and they are authoritative in their every word and syllable. How awful their binding power! How terrible their penalties! No good Mason dare disregard or break them. It is not so with your church promises and vows." I stopped my friend by a question which burst upon him like a boomshell exploding in a dilapidated fort: "Do you mean to say that Freemasonry is more practical than Christianity? If so, I shall oppose the order on the ground of its rivalry to the cause of Christ, and denounce it as the most potent nest-egg of infidelity. But it is not true; for the facts of experience and history prove that you are wrong." Our conversation drifted along for a considerable time. At last it assumed a more distinctive shape, and in that shape I shall try to paint its picture. My friend detailed the motives that led him to become a Freemason, and they are about as rational, from my standpoint, as the motives that induced Raiton to become a Mormon, or Hamil to cry "whee-oo! cope! whee-oo!" to a Mexican bull.

"1st, The motives of personal policy had some influence. The power that resides in a working organization of numbers, when used in a man's favor, must necessarily help him to gain friends, pleasures, honors, riches, business, office, and success of every kind." "Oh, yes; I see! Here is, of itself, a very unworthy motive. A most masterly stroke of cunning, using the lodge as a means of furthering your ambitious schemes." My friend resented my language and flamed up thereat, in a way that boded no good to me.

"Well, Turney, if you will hear me through without interrupting me, I will talk on; otherwise—"

"Of course I'll hear you." So I listened in silence, and the observations I shall append to my friend's motives, did not so much as show their heads during the speech that he made.

"Well, to resume," said my friend, "while there are few objections that can be raised, there are strong motives why every young man should join.

1st. Personal safety may require it. It is not safe to wrong a Freemason. A person who does so once, will generally find it to his own interest to avoid a repetition of the wrong, or he may pay a dear price for his presumption and offiense.

2d. It is no disadvantage to belong. It procures the respect of many outsiders. It gives a man a chance to establish a very good business upon a small capital, and helps him in a thousand unseen ways. It opens every road to success.

3d. As a system of mere life insurance, it is the best and safest that the world affords, and many widows and orphans can lean upon that arm which is stretched out for their assistance.

4th. The ceremonies are very instructive and grand.

5th. It affords an exhibition of the most beautiful traits of true religion."

Observations: My friend said a few objections can be raised. One valid objection would be enough to forever condemn the thing, if no fair escape could be found to mitigate the force and blunt the edge of the objection. But nature and revelation are storehouses that fairly teem with objections to the whole gigantic fraud.

1st. Personal safety no more requires Freemasonry than it does telling lies. It is just as unsafe to wrong one man as it is to wrong another, where human wisdom does not undertake to supercede divine law. Life in general is not so safe in a Masonic community as in an unmasonic one. I think the statistics of Gerrit Smith have proved this fact.

2d. As no one can join without an abrogation of his rights of conscience under a most inhuman and barbarous oath, it is a very serious disadvantage to belong. His initiation is procured at the expense of self-respect, true soul freedom; and by resigning the authority of God over his conscience, by swearing to keep secret what he as yet knows not the nature of. Thus, he answers to what he has not heard, and pledges himself concerning it. "He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is a shame unto him."

3d. As a system of life-insurance, it is the poorest and most inefficient on earth. There is no way by which to determine the equity and justness of its disbursements; and its very insurance dues are credited as the offerings of charity, thus discarding the very basis on which it might hope for honor as an honest insurance society. Besides, it leaves more widows and orphans desolate than it aids, even from the showing of its votaries. Compare the number of deaths reported with the sums appropriated, or reported as appropriated, for the widows and orphans of deceased Masons, and the astounding fact is revealed that ten Freemasons die for every single Masonic widow that gets a dollar from the lodge.

"Masonic mortality. 2,500
Widows aided by Masonic apr. . 214
Average appropriation . . . $12."

What benevolence! Twenty-five hundred Masons die, and then twenty-five hundred and sixty-eight dollars are appropriated to two hundred and fourteen of the widows, while the rest of the Masonic widows are left out in the cold to the charities and curses of the uninitiated rabble. Well, if that be the best life-insurance, I would be unable to point to the worst. Besides, when one of the unitiated, like myself, proceed to help a poor widow whose deceased husband in his life time had the misfortune to be a Freemason, the lodge takes the whole credit, by blazing abroad that Mrs. Suchandso, "a deceased Mason's widow, has been made the recipient of a sack of flour, two hams of meat, twenty pounds of butter, eight cords of wood, and twenty dollars in money." Out of personal respect, I withhold the lady's name and the other details, having sufficiently ventilated this matter before.

[CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.]

Our New Mexico Letter.

SPECIMEN OF INDIAN MANAGEMENT.

FORT STANTON, New Mexico, March 2d, 1875.

Editor of the Christian Cynosure:

There have lately transpired on this Indian reservation events of tragic interest. And as they are furnishing much good for criticism by the enemies of the humane policy adopted by President Grant toward the Indian, I thought that some facts might be of interest to your readers.

During the month of January there were two successive raids made on the Indians belonging to this agency in camp near the military post. The raiders getting off with about two hundred head of Indian horses, and according to the statement of some of their number with thirteen scalps; also perpetrating an act of most shocking barbarity, no less than dashing out the brains of a child on the rocks. The military turned out, but by the time they reached the ground the citizen raiders were gone with the plunder.

The Indians then took to the mountains; some leaving their tribe and going to the Comanche country. Others made their appearance in the neighborhood of the Pecos River, from where most of their enemies came, and there committed various depredations, stealing stock and killing several parties. But by far the larger part stopped in the mountains, only a few day's travel from the Agency. As soon as it was known that the Indians had left a company of cavalry were sent in pursuit, but after several days search they returned, not having found any Indians.

The whole country for many miles round was in a state of intense excitement. People were afraid to travel or go outside of their houses for fear of Indians. And as in all such cases where there must be a scape goat for the sins of the people, the agent got much unjust blame.

Major Crothers now sent out a couple of squaws who said they could find the Indians; but as they were returning and were within two miles of the Agency they were shot and scalped, and their scalps exhibited behind the bar of the firm who have since circulated a petition for the removal of the present agent.

Soon after the return of the first scout information was brought by Mexicans of the whereabouts of a party of Indians and Capt. F—— with his braves in blue went out, found, and with a gallant charge captured the camp and almost the entire equipment of the Indians, with about fifty ponies and one prisoner, an infant Indian of the female sex. The force thus signally routed greatly outnumbered the soldiers, but fortunately consisted mostly of women and children. After this gallant feat at arms the braves in blue returned to their quarters having first burned what stores and blankets they had captured.

Major Crothers, deeming that more could be done by peacable measures than by the military to induce the Indians to return, sent out a party of four citizens to hunt them in their mountain fastnesses and assure them of kind treatment if they would return to the Agency. He selected for this arduous undertaking Mr. Cleny, who being one of the oldest settlers in the country, and understanding their language; as well as having in former years been very active in collecting the Indians, when they were gathered from the hills and plains of Texas and New Mexico to become the government's wards, was eminently fitted for such a task. Mr. Livingston, an old miner and trapper, well versed in Indian ways, and whose hospitality many of these Indians had enjoyed in his cabin home. Also Mr. Sharp, a man who had for some time been an employe at the Agency and whom the Indians considered one of their best friends. Also a Mexican interpreter whose only fitness for the task was his knowledge of the language, and who went because the force of circumstances compelled him to go.

This little party traveled for sixteen days in the dead of winter; searching through dark canyons, climbing rugged, snow-covered mountains, traversing dense forests and arid plains, facing for days driving storms of sleet and snow; part of their number sleeping nights on the cold ground while the balance stood guard lest they should be surprised, for they knew not how they would be received by the Indians, as friends or foes. But when they did return they had accomplished more than all the cavalry that had been out, having brought in near three hundred Indians, who are now living at the Agency and most earnestly protest that in leaving they had no hostile intentions against the whites but left because they were afraid of the Texans. They say that there are bad Indians among them. That they are their enemies as well as the enemies of the whites, and that they want them punished. In the language of Gregonia, one of their head men, "We know that there is a God, and that if we steal we will be punished. We are now at peace with ourselves. We are at peace with the Mexicans. We are at peace with the soldiers. We are at peace with the Americans. The sun, the moon and the stars are at peace with us. Even the Rio Boniti is at peace, for in it there is much water." Many Indians are still out, but those that are here are sending out couriers to bring them in, and three companies of cavalry are now out on a thirty day's scout. It is hoped that peace and quiet will soon again be restored. Much credit it due both to the agent and to the military for the prompt measures taken to bring the Indians again upon the reservation.

The question now arises, what is the cause of all this trouble? We may answer on the part of the Indians: it lies with a few vagabonds who belong to the tribe, but who spend most of their time off the reservation, trading back and forth with the Comanches and thieving Mexicans; also with Indians of other tribes who steal stock and trail it toward this reservation in order to throw suspicion on the Mescalero Apaches, while they get away with the plunder. Further it lays in the fact that the country is infested with organized bands of thieves and cut-throats, mostly Mexicans, who have the game of playing Indian down to a fine thing, and who cover their tracks with the cry of "Fresh Indian depredations." Last but not least is the low tone of moral sentiment in the community and slight estimate placed on human life in Lincoln county. Almost every man goes about his business armed. Personal difficulties are generally settled on the spot, and I think I may safely assert, without knowing definitely, that within the last two years in this county alone one hundred men have lost their lives through private quarrels or bar-room rows; and yet not one murderer has, at the hands of the law, met his just dues. Stealing, if caught in the act, or calling a man a liar are by many considered capital offenses. The crime not consisting so much in the act as in its detection, or in the want of power or lack of sand to back it up. While a boy, who can catch a squaw away from camp, shoot and scalp her, is considered a promising member of society.

H. T. H.

Masonic Persecution in the United Brethren Church.—IV.

BY REV. W. W. KNIPPLE.

I give the language just as Mr. Orr gave it in a letter to Rev. I. Kretzinger, as testimony against me, under date March 17th, 1874:

"I hereby certify that the following is the substance of a letter which I received from W. W. Knipple in relation to the election of delegates to the General Conference, from the Parkersburg conference. 1st, He wanted to know who we intended to send from Parkersburg conference. 2d, He said, the only salvation for the church was to put a large majority of anti-secret men in the General Conference. 3d, He stated that Warner and Slaughter would not do, as they were rotten to the core. This is true to the best of my recollection.

(Signed,) A. ORR.

I may add, that I stated further in said letter, that there would be an effort made in the Sandusky conference to elect anti-secrecy men to the General Conference.

As further evidence that this letter was the cause of my failure in getting an appointment, I give the following expression from Mr. Bulger. Before leaving the seat of conference I met him in the church at the close of the Sabbath-school anniversary, Sabbath afternoon, and complained to him of the treatment I had received by the conference, he having encouraged me to come. He answered my complaint by direct reference to the wonderful letter, stating that I might have known that it would have cut my head off. But the complaints presented to the committee by Mr. Rose were based wholly on the ground of executive inability: 1st, That I was one of the most arbitrary men, in an official capacity, that he had ever met with, and that I would not take advice from any one. 2d, That I seemed to delight in settling church difficulties by trial, and that I invariably made them worse instead of better. 3d, That in my arbitrary way of doing business I had ruined Cardington circuit, and that he could see no propriety in permitting me to ruin others, and that I would break down the best circuit in the conference in one year. 4th, That there was but one appointment on Cardington circuit that would receive me, under any circumstances, if sent back another year. And though there was another elder on the committee, who had had a little insight to the administration on Cardington circuit, he having held my third quarterly meeting, and took some pains to inquire after my standing on the work, and found it to be, in the main, satisfactory, and so represented it to the committee, stating that there must have been a wonderful change after his visit to the circuit. Still Mr. Rose insisted most persistently that I should not have a charge, stating that a wonderful revolution had taken place after the third quarter. While the facts in the case are, that there were no serious difficulties on the work after that time, and that the only one that did exist, was reported at the last quarterly meeting, as having been amicably adjusted, and to which Elder Rose gave a hearty approval.

I ascertained the particulars respecting the character of this assault, before leaving the seat of conference, to which I said in reply, that I knew that Cardington circuit would give the lie to the whole of it. And it did it in the following paper:

Cardington circuit, Sandusky conference, U. B. church, Sept. 11th, 1872.

We the undersigned official, and private members of the U. B. church on Cardington circuit, hereby certify in behalf of Rev. W. W. Knipple.

1st, That had it been the pleasure of the conference to have returned him to our circuit to labor among us the ensuing year, we would have received and supported him. 2d, That so far as we know, he in all cases of difficulty, counseled the leading brethren before taking action. 3d, That we believe him to be a lover of peace and harmony, among the brethren. And that in his administration he labored to promote those principles, both from the pulpit and the fireside. 4th, That so far as we have reason to know, either from his own expressions, or his administration, we believe him to entertain an utter abhorrence to church trials. And that in all cases of dispute or strife among the brethren, which came under our observation, he used his utmost endeavors to adjust them without trial. And through his arduous efforts for peace, he had but one church trial during the year. 5th, That we have no hesitancy in saying that the past year of his labor, was not a fair test of his ability, or qualification as a circuit preacher, he having found a portion of the circuit in a state of confusion, which was continued to near the close of the year, through the influence of evil-designing men, principally outside of the church. True, Bro. Knipple has enemies on this circuit. But we believe they have, in the main, become to be such through his unwavering opposition to all sin, including that of secret societies. And that this is but the fate of others who have traveled this circuit whom we regarded as very good men. And 6th, That we deplore his misfortune in not receiving an appointment by the conference. Thereby being left in a destitute condition, without the means of support for himself and family. Given under our hands this the 11th day of September, 1872.

The foregoing paper was signed by three-fourths of the official members of the circuit, comprising all except the Masons and their jacks, and representing each appointment on the work. And the unanimous officiary of the point at which the principal troubles existed. It was also signed by about forty of the private members on the circuit, which were all that had opportunity, save one.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Sketches of Masonry at the South.

A non-affiliated Freemason told the writer some time ago that Freemasons regarded their Masonic oaths as more binding than the oaths required to execute the laws of the State. This was exemplified some time ago in Dawson Co., Ga. Priestly E. Willis, a Master Mason, being sheriff of the county, had a warrant put into his hand to take Willian Barrett, another Master Mason, and instead of performing his duty according to law he sent a runner to notify Barrett to keep out of his way, in conformity with the Master Mason's oath which required one Mason to apprise another of all approaching danger, and so never took him; and by this means the law of the State was frustrated. This is a positive proof that Masonic oaths disqualify men for holding a civil office in the government of the country. SPECTATOR.

Atlanta, Ga.

Secret Societies and Trades Unions from a Roman Catholic Standpoint.

Archbishop Purcell of Cincinnati, in his Lenten Pastoral, says:

For the amelioration of the condition of the aged poor and sick, the care and education of the orphans, we have asylums, hospitals and protectories, generally well sustained by public charity, and admirably conducted by religious men and women, who do their duty for the love of God and their neighbors, without fee or reward on earth. But for the laboring classes we are never without anxiety. They suffer for want of employment at times and seasons like the present. They are often tempted, perhaps we should say they deem it a duty to join trades unions and participate in strikes; they are incited to join organizations and societies which nearly resemble those forbidden by the church, exacting oaths, or promises solemn as oaths, having passwords, grips, chaplains, degrees after the fashion of the Freemasons, and other features of illicit combinations and covenants. If the A. O. U. W. present none of these objectionable traits, and if the widow or family of the deceased member receive $2,000 from the order, why are we to forbid or dissuade men from joining it? But if there are, as we have been informed, other rules than such as meet the public eye; if there is a communistic plot at the bottom of it, we say to Catholics have nothing to do with it. As the case now stands you have to pay an initiation fee of five dollars, a dollar at the death of a member, and monthly and annual dues, and meet with certain other contingencies. Think, therefore, in time, if you comply with those obligations, how much you and your family will be out of pocket, if you get tired of the society, if you fall into arrears, if conscientiously you forfeit your claims, or are expelled from the order. Better for every man to be his own treasury, his own benevolent society, his own helper.

If men who earn money will take care of it, if they invest their spare cash in responsible savings banks at legal interest, if they shun the drinking-houses and join temperance or total abstinence societies, and secure God's blessing by being friends of the needy, the poor and the orphan, they will have no need to join those which, in a free country like ours, have no necessity—we should rather say, have no right—to wrap themselves in mystery. Only "they whose deeds are evil," says the Saviour, "shun the light."

When we speak in opposition to Freemasonry, or any of the kindred associations, we do not make a charge against the character of men who are members of those societies. On the contrary, we often praise the men, wondering why, with all their excellencies, they can be so devotedly attached to bodies so puerile and unscriptural. We know many men of unusual worth who stand high as Masons. They are men of the strictest integrity, of the most amiable dispositions, and of the highest Christian benevolence, to speak against whom would be to assail persons possessing some of the finest traits of nature, ennobled by grace and culture. But we do think it is a mistake and blemish in such men to belong to orders so utterly unworthy of them. They are made to trifle with an oath, to submit to all kinds of silly mummery, to deny, if occasion demands it, the Lord who bought them, to fraternize with men for whom, in a personal and moral way, they have severest contempt, and to lend themselves to doings and influences that are precisely opposite to their highest aims and most precious hopes. They who oppose Masonry heartily and uncompromisingly, yet number among their friends many who are deeply in love with its mysteries and absurdities.—United Presbyterian.

Notices.

The National Christian Association.

PRESIDENT.—B. T. Roberts, Rochester, N. Y.

DIRECTORS.—Philo Carpenter, J. Blanchard, A. Wait, I. A. Hart, C. R. Hagerty, E. A. Cook, J. G. Terrill, O. F. Lumry. J. M. Wallace, Isaac Preston, Wm. Pinkney.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.—C. A. Blanchard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

RECORDING SECRETARY AND TREASURER.—H. L. Kellogg, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER.—J. P. Stoddard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

AUDITOR.—H. A. Fischer.

OBJECT.—"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved; to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

Life membership, $10.00; annual do, 25 cents. The names of members and general correspondence of the Association should be sent to the Corresponding Secretary. To carry on the increasing and successful lecture work by agents in different States and for promoting the general work of the Association donations of any amount are solicited from all friends of the reform. All donations or bequests should be sent to the Treasurer.

The Corresponding Secretary or his assistant may be seen at the Cynosure office from 9 to 11 A. M.

The Seventh Anniversary of the National Christian Association will be held in the City of Pittsburgh, Pa., June 8th to 10th, 1875.

Connecticut State Meeting.

The Connecticut Christian Association will hold a meeting in Hartford, commencing Wednesday, April 28th, 1875, to continue two days or more. Correspondence has been entered into with J. L. Barlow, L. N. Stratton, D. P. Rathbun and other speakers, and an effort will be made to secure a large attendance from the State.

TO ALL SECEDING MASONS.—By vote of the National Christian Association, all seceding Masons are requested to send their names to the Recording Secretary, with their endorsement of Bernard's Light on Masonry; they are also requested to send their post-office address, number of degrees taken, number of years connected with the lodge, the date of leaving it and where residing when they joined.

H. L. KELLOGG, Rec. Sec'y.
13 WABASH AVE.

Reform News.

—The Corresponding Secretary of the N. C. A. attended the Fenton Convention and will fill several appointments before he returns.

—The brief letter from the General Agent will be of interest to all who are waiting to hear from the Michigan meeting.

—The Wesleyan says that D. P. Rathbun is again on a two-weeks lecturing tour in Michigan; and that he will return by way of his old circuit in Bradford county, Pa., where he assists in dedicating a new Wesleyan church. But the Michigan friends have captured him.

—Friend Perham of Brookfield, Vt., writes that Elder Jackson and wife of Minnesota have been doing a good work in northern New England for our reform. The Elder called on us Monday on his way to the northwest.

The Peninsular State Rally—Organization, State Lecturer, etc.—From the General Agent.

HOWELL, Mich., Apr. 1, 1875.

DEAR K:—I have just reached this place direct from Fenton and the State meeting. Michigan is now among the States organized for the conflict, and should the interest and good sense exhibited in the Convention characterize subsequent efforts, as I have no doubt they will, this State will outrank her less zealous but more populous sisters.

Comparatively little had been done in advance with direct reference to the convention, but there were present at the first session seventy-nine who placed their names upon the roll. Others arrived and the roll was subsequently considerably increased. The Convention was presided over by the Hon. Geo. Kipp, Vice-president of the N. C. A., for Michigan, and the necessary business transacted in due form, of which you will receive a report in due time from the Secretary Charles Remington. The addresses were in keeping with the occasion and an excellent spirit pervaded the entire meeting. Bro. Rathbun was chosen as lecturer and agent for the State and $223 pledged towards his salary. I write in haste and as you will receive a full report from the Secretary, soon, it is only necessary for me to say that in my judgment, the convention was a success in every important feature.

Now that this mile-post is past, I shall apply myself with diligence and prayer to the work of securing funds and pledges for our Publishing House, in the hope that at least one-half the $30,000 can be secured before the first of June, 1875.

Brethren, expect me if it is possible to reach you, but do not wait my coming. Send your pledges or contributions to the Treasurer who is glad to serve you without fee or reward in receiving and accepting for your offering in this great work. J. P. STODDARD.

From the Indiana Agent.

RICHMOND, Ind., Mar. 29, 1875

Editors Christian Cynosure:

Leaving home on Thursday I arrived here on Saturday, stopping off at Portland and Newport, and arranging for future work in both localities. I have found kind friends and pleasant homes to welcome me here, and to co-operate in carrying on the "anti" war in this place. We are looking forward to the organization of this county soon. We expect to hold the convention here in Richmond. Yesterday I attended Friend's meeting at ten in the morning, and preached for the Wesleyan Methodists (colored) in the evening. Arranged for some lectures here, to begin on Wednesday evening, April 7th. The Indiana yearly meeting of Friends holds its annual Sabbath-school Convention here next week, on Friday and Saturday, the 9th and 10th. I expect to attend these meetings, and do what I can for God's cause. On Sabbath, the 6th, and Monday, the 7th, I will be at Newport. Meantime I go to Cambridge and Dublin, and friends will address me according to previous instructions. I feel very much encouraged. I think the cause has never been in so encouraging a condition in Indiana as now. JOHN T. KIGGINS.

Correspondence.

Odd-fellowship in Court; An Attorney's Experience.

FORT MADISON, Iowa, Mar. 19, 1875.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Will you permit me to give through your paper to the public, an account of my legal experience in this section of the country as an attorney.

At the February term of the District Court of Lee county, Iowa, at Keokuk, 1872, one Benjamin Reesman was indicted and tried for manslaughter for killing one Lee. Daniel F. Miller and myself were engaged for the defense. My son and present partner, was then with me, and Mr. Miller was not only eminent himself as an attorney, but was a member of a leading firm in that city. All the partners of each of us were in their sympathies interested in our success, but otherwise took no part in the case.

The court, by the mutual consent of all the counsel interested, pro and con, fixed upon a day for the trial to begin. I think this day was Thursday, but may be mistaken in this particular. On the morning set for the trial to begin, I was the first man in the court-house, except a brother of the defendant and prisoner, Mr. Samuel Reesman (I trust I may be pardoned for giving the name). Just here permit me to premise that the Reesman family were respectable people and members of the Methodist church, their family escutcheon without stain and all of them deeply interested in behalf of the indicted son and brother.

Samuel Reesman, whom I met in the court-room first that morning, at once told me that he had made a discovery; that he himself was an Odd-fellow; had discovered that there was an Odd-fellow on the panel of jurors; that he had thrown him the sign of distress, and had received in reply an exhibition of three links; had a brotherly talk, and that brother had pledged himself to hang the jury or save his brother from going to the penitentiary.

I declined advising any course to be pursued under the cicumstances stated until the arrival of Mr. Miller, my associate counsel. While speaking, he arrived, and I proceeded to lay the matter before him as it came from Samuel Reesman.

Permit me here to say that Mr. Miller is not a member of any secret society. He at once said that if we could thus use Odd-fellowship it would be policy to do so; but suggested that every able attorney in the employ of the family of the deceased, was both Mason and Odd-fellow, and would challenge from the jury the plighted member of a secret society.

When the jury was called, our pledged friend was duly called and as quickly challenged, as Mr. Miller had predicted. We went on in defense and succeeded in procuring the acquittal of Benj. Reesman in spite of all they were able to do against him.

This case induced me to think some on the subject of secret societies and their corrupting influence on the courts of the country. There is here first an agreement between two Odd-fellows to prevent the honest action of a jury in a criminal case, affecting the justice of the court and the administration of the law upon all men alike, as provided by the Constitution of our State. The challenge of our well-informed member of the bar is a clean admission that such pledges do exist among Odd-fellows. There is an attempt to use this corruption of the court, not to save a "brother" of the order, but a brot of a "brother," who is, I think, the o member of the Reesman family c nected with secrecy in any way. this case the court is kept pure by cident only. If the attorney had been informed of the workings of sec ism, Benj. Reesman would have ser and the public had been none wiser than to believe all was done h estly. The intent and capacity of O fellowship to corrupt the courts is h proved beyond any question, as I lieve.

To further throw light on this su ject, I send you copy of an article tak from the Fort Madison Democrat, givi tragic history of the result of what believe to have been the same use secretism that was attempted and fail in the Reesman case.

Now many of our people are awa that the intent, purpose, and sole ject of secret societies, is to steal fr those not of their order the most sacr and best guaranteed rights they p sess. FRANCIS SEMPLE.

[The article referred to is an accou of the trial and lynching of the noto ous Charles Howard at Des Moine Iowa, last December. Eleven of t jury were agreed on a verdict of murd in the first degree, but the twelft Thos. G. Orwig, "refused to assent to verdict of guilty at all." The case w given to the jury on Wednesday afte noon. They remained out all nigh through Thursday, Friday, and on Sa urday afternoon were called into cou given an additional charge by th judge, and sent back. The disagreein juror finally consented to a verdict murder in the second degree, and agreement was reached on this. Th sentence was life imprisonment, but Tuesday night a mob seized Howa from the jail and hung him on th nearest lamp-post.— ED CYNOSURE]

Grange Corruption.

Editor of the Cynosure:

I am exceedingly pleased to kno that there is an organization of Chri tians working against the crying evil secret organizations in our belove country. I have long looked upo Freemasonry and all other secret ass ciations as contrary to religion an morality and productive of very gre evil and injustice in every communit where they exist; and I am happy t know that there are those who hav the courage and manhood to stan up against this relic of heathenism.

We have seen some of the evil effec of secret societies here. We have flourishing United Presbyterian church All went on well with us until a le turer for the granges came along an gave us a very smooth and insinuating account of the great good to be accom plished by forming a grange. Som five of our U. P. members joined among them, one elder of the church and he was elected Master of the lodge Secret organizations being condemne by the discipline of our body, it be came the duty of the session of th church to use their authority to purg the church of this evil. Upon the ses sion informing the private members c the testimony of the church in regar to secrecy they all withdrew from th lodge.

The elder, however, could not with stand the temptation of Satan, and by his course proved that he preferred the secret lodge to the church of Christ. He refused to submit to the rules of the church, and left it, eventually preferring the works of darkness to the light of the glorious Sun of righteousness. He went over to the Methodist church which winks at all these secret organizations; and in that respect I think they are trying to render service to both God and Mammon.

I know from my own sad experience that Freemasonry is one of Satan's own institutions more particularly in preventing justice in courts and causing the innocent to suffer for the benefit of the accursed craft. When a man makes up his mind deliberately to swear that he will keep secret before he knows what the secrets are which he is required to keep, I say he has already not only unmanned himself but forsworn himself before his own conscience and his God. I therefore don't hesitate to say that the adhering members of lodges ought not to be permitted to act as jurors or witnesses, neither should they be allowed to hold offices of trust in the government. Thousands of our youth are drawn into these nets of Satan through ignorance of their evil and after they get once in they think they cannot violate the horrible oaths under which they have bound themselves to the orders, and thus remain under a cloud during their lives. What we want is the light of Christian teaching on this subject, opening the mind to see that it is not only right, but a duty, to disregard all such oaths of secrecy as bind men to do iniquity. I do hope your Christian work will be pressed forward as the anti-slavery work was by the few noble men who led that noble reform, until the works of darkness and death shall give way to the glorious teachings of Christ, and in so doing you will hasten tha blessed day when the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth. I shall use my influence to get a number of persons to take the Cynosure among us. We want this paper circulated extensively here. The leaven of unrighteousness is spreading wide, planting its roots deep in this country, working under double guards and in the darkness of night while all honest people are asleep. But God's ways are not as our ways. Often in his providence the success of the wicked has proved their ruin in this world, and always so in that which is to come. Yours very sincerely,

S. Monteith.

Charity of Odd-fellows.

I do not condemn any one, nor any society, for giving relief to the needy or aiding each other. But when it is claimed that the relief given by Odd-fellows to their brothers is on a par with Christian charity as taught in God's Word, I must take exception. And of all societies extant, the Odd-fellows are the greatest braggarts I have met, especially on this one point, charity. Let us look at it a moment. Odd-fellowship requires as a requisite for membership in the order, that you be a man robust, in health, with a visible means of support. Such they want, and such they get, consequently few poor men are found in the order; and a society is formed that needs but little aid, the bone and muscle of the land is drawn into the ring, and all cripples, old men, women, children, the lame, the halt, the blind, all left outside for those to aid who do not feel disposed to have a hoodwink placed over their eyes and a disgusting ceremony thrust upon them.

Now let us look at this picture. Here comes a crowd of people following a hearse. They are dressed in gay colored trappings; carry red and blue sticks, and collars around their shoulders. One might take them for savages only for their white faces and lack of war paint. It is an Odd-fellow funeral. A brother has gone. He fell off a building and died of the effect. They are paying the expense and throw in the ceremony. He was a robust man, in good business. He had only paid ten or fifteen dollars and they do a great thing for him.

Another picture. Over here in this little chapel are gathered a few friends of a poor woman who has died. She lived yonder in a small house by herself, earning a scanty support by her needle, known only to a few as a Christian woman. She laid sick perhaps three weeks attended by those who now surround her, and as they take the last look a tear slips down the cheeks of more than one, over this almost sinless one. They go to the lonely graveyard and lay her away. Tell me, reader, where's the true charity?

P. Woodring.

A Lodge Funeral.

Good Hope, Ill., March 23, 1875

Mr. Editor:—I have just returned home from attending the funeral discourse of an elder in the Presbyterian church, a Freemason and a near neighbor of mine. The discourse was preached by the pastor of the Presbyterian congregation of this place, who is also a Mason. It is thought not proper by some to refer to the weaknesses of humanity after it has fallen a victim. But it is often difficult for those well acquainted with the life of the deceased to harmonize all that the minister may say relative to their future condition with the conduct of their daily action. Charity does not require me to believe that men are greater saints after death than before. A brother in the same church with the one whose funeral I attended to-day died this morning; he was a very poor man in worldly goods, but rich in grace and so very poor that he could not be a member of this so-called charitable lodge. All the lodge-men were in full force to display their great love for their fallen brother, but who will look after the poor man who possessed too much manhood while living, to now be disgraced by having the adulterer and infidel follow his remains to the grave under the direction of the lodge. A few friends, thank God, will see that he shall have a decent burial.

The minister, in closing his discourse to-day, after speaking a few words to the widow and children and friends, addressed the members of the lodge, commending the life of their brother as worthy of their example. It might do for Masonry but I question its conformity to the Gospel of Christ. I observed that after we had placed this man in his coffin, we had to step back and let the lodge-men take charge of it, and then when we reached the church, the members of the lodge must take the advanced position, as though they were the only mourners in the train. I also observed that the minister divested himself of the white apron before he commenced the pulpit services. This I consider the most sensible thing I saw any of them do. The remainder was disgusting. How a minister of Jesus Christ can be so duped and stultified as to submit to such foolishness and meaningless parade I confess I cannot see.

A. B. Walker, P. E. in the U. B. church.

Masonic Dedication and Ball.

Streator, Ill., Mar. 23, 1875.

The above is the heading to a programme appearing in our Streator Monitor, and carried out last week by the Masonic lodge, No. 607. The hall was dedicated and the convivial Masonic dance had in connection agreeable to the arrangement of the order. There are a few things contained in the notice which appeared in the Monitor, which are peculiarly noteworthy.

The first is that Masonry approves, appoints and sustains, as an order, balls and routs and dances, and other convivial entertainments, after the carnal and unhallowed spirit and practice of the world. Where is its corrective and reformative influence on the practices, habits, and morals of society?

2. That Masonry is a pleasure-going, dancing institution, fully irreligious in principle and practice.

3. Those who have been initiated into the boasted order and adhere to it, belong and adhere to a dancing society which appoints and sustains balls and dances.

Who will doubt this when they look at the title of this programme and see how it was carried out? Was it not as fully a Masonic ball and dance as a dedication? And was not the appointment expressed in the programme "Opened with prayer" pertain equally to the dance and the dedication?

It must have appeared singularly appropriate to infidels and wicked men to hear ministers under solemn ordained vows opening a ball or dance with prayer. What! preach the Gospel and adhere to, and recognize membership in a dancing club or society? Preach the Gospel! and dress yourself up in an anti-Methodistic costume, giving the contradiction to the Methodist discipline on plain dress? "Can the same fountain send forth fresh water and bitter?" Again it is to be observed that they have an open Bible, but it has placed upon it the square and compass, to sanctify it, we suppose, to Masonry, and give it validity. God's Word is not sufficient for Masons without the influence of certain mechanical instruments.

B.

Masonic Barbarity.

The following instance of Masonic barbarity is well authenticated. Soon after the murder of Morgan, Eld. Joseph Robinson of Bowdoinham, Maine, of the Christian denomination, an educated man and an evangelist, joined the Freemasons, but after a year's meditation came out publicly against them, saying that Masonry was injurious to vital religion and tended to ruin the country. The Masons, in a mob at night, his horse's tail and ears off and cut his tongue out. They left a note pinned on the saddle, saying they would serve the owner in the same way. Father Allen Smith, a most excellent Christian man, now residing in New Market, N. H., then a member of Eld. R's church, related these facts and said he could take his oath to the truth of all except the note on the saddle that he did not read but believed it was as stated. His wife also confirmed the facts. Father Smith himself also joined the Masons through the influence of his pastor, Eld. R., but only attended two meetings. He verified Morgan's Revelation as far as he went. He told them he could not enjoy religion and be a Mason, that his religion left him when he went inside the lodge and that they must release him. He also bore testimony that as a rule adhering Masons, although professed Christians, were opposed to vital religion. Father Smith is still living at the advanced age of eighty-six years. S. C. K.

A Few Facts in Regard to Masonry.

In 1856, the writer applied at the Land Office in Salem, Oregon, for a contract to survey some of the public land, held by actual settlers, under the Donation Laws. The chief clerk in the land office, after some general conversation inquired whether I was a Mason. I answered in the negative. He then informed me that there was a lodge in the place, and I could be initiated, if I choose. I replied that I had traveled very extensively, and never found any necessity of belonging to the order in passing through the world; and besides, that my connection with the United Presbyterian church, as one of its religious teachers, would not allow me to form the connection that he suggested. He said nothing further to me on the subject, and though I declined his proposal, to his honor be it spoken, he treated me like a gentleman, and aided me in obtaining a contract under the government. Had I acted on the suggestion, and united with the mystic brotherhood, I could doubtless have obtained a much more lucrative appointment than I did.

Though Masons profess that they do not solicit persons to unite with their order, they know well when, where, and how to present the subject to the non-initiated, so that the indirect invitation is a strong appeal to self-interest.

During the late rebellion, the writer see. He and his company were marching toward a certain place, and met a rebel officer; the two officers recognized each other as brother Masons; and the was in company with an officer in the 17th Ohio Volunteers, and the subject of Masonry happening to be introduced, he related to me an occurrence, which took place, I think, in western Tennerebel, true to his obligation to his brother Mason, warned the latter to retreat, or he would be captured. The Federal officer with his command retreated, and escaped the horrors of a rebel prison. This incident was related to me as an illustrative argument in favor of the mystic order. Every intelligent Christian, however, who regards the sacredness of an oath; and every intelligent patriot, who regards his country's liberty, and the preservation of the lives of his fellow-citizens, will say that the rebel officer was guilty of perjury in giving an enemy notice of danger. Federal officers may have acted in this treasonable manner with rebel officers, and thus the fatal struggle between the belligerents was prolonged; thus the blood and treasure of the nation was poured out until exhaustion was like to succeed. In the case referred to, it is evident that the Masonic oath to warn a brother of impending danger, was considered paramount to the oath which had been taken for the support of the rebel government. Thus two oaths came into collision, and as both could not be kept at the same time, as a man cannot serve two masters at the same time, the confederate officer elected to serve the interests of Masonry. The foregoing instance of disregard to an oath to the government, which people acknowledged, was by no means a solitary one.

A mason, who has resided here for some years in a state of separation from his wife, in the East, died and was buried a few days ago. Whether a divorce had been obtained by either party I cannot say, but the report is that he wished to form another matrimonial alliance here, but did not succeed; and that the repulse received affected his health. In his sickness he was attended and nursed by a young man who has no connection with the Masonic order and who seems opposed to it. This nurse went twice to the Master of the lodge and acquainted him with the condition of his brother Mason, but no brother Mason came to nurse him in his sickness. Masonry flings in the church's face the reproach that she neglects her members in their distress, and boasts that she sympathizes with the distressed, supplies the wants of the destitute, and sends them on their way rejoicing. But is this the object of the Masonic institution, to perform a part of the church's work which she neglects? If this is so, it is strange that this service is not confined to church members; if the church neglects her poor, why does not Masonry search them out, and act the part of a kind parent to them? We would like to know whether their church connection would give them any claim on Masonic charity. If so, it should be recognized as a new argument in favor of the order. Does Masonry in very deed "give a cup of cold water to a disciple in the name of a disciple" of Christ? If so, let it be put on record. If the order has indeed been instituted to supply the shortcomings of the church in caring for her afflicted members, why are oaths of secrecy administered about the management of this charitable fund? It has been stated that Masons here neglected their sick brother; they met, however, and with their regalia on, they conducted him, that is, his body, to "the house appointed for all living." They had applied at a distance for a Masonic Baptist clergyman to officiate as chaplain; but as he did not make his appearance, one of the fraternity requested Rev. R. J. Thompson of the U. P. church, who was present without invitation, to address the company, stating at the same time, that if he would not officiate, no religious services would take place on the occasion. This young brother, construing his commission as authorizing him to "pray everywhere," and that he should bear testimony to the truths of the Gospel, "publicly and from house to house," he addressed the throne of grace in the name of the Redeemer. No Jew was present to object to these sentiments of the officiating clergyman, and others raised no objection. The local paper, however, in noticing the funeral and eulogizing the deceased, said nothing about the services of the extemporized chaplain. Whether they will ever call on him, in a like case, remains to be seen.

Being once in company with a Mason, who at the same time was in fellowship with an Anti-masonic church, I casually mentioned to him that Masons did not use the name of Christ in their prayers. This statement he contradicted in an angry tone, saying that having been in the lodge, he knew better. Well the truth appears to lie here. The name of Him who is the only Mediator between God and men is not used in their printed forms of prayer; but notwithstanding this, if the officiating chaplain should omit the printed form, and pray extemporaneously, and use the name of our great Intercessor with the Father, the prayer may be tolerated, providing that no Jew or deist is present to object.

Under the law of Moses no person was allowed to offer sacrifice except through a priest; the stranger who would presume to disregard this law was to "be put to death." Num. iii. 10–38. He, who is the faithful and true Witness, assures us that "no man cometh to the Father but by Him." John xiv. 6. The prayers of the saints must ascend out of this Angel of the Covenant's hands, perfumed with the abundant incense of his merits. Rev. viii. 3. Through this divine person, manifested in the flesh, we, both Jew and Gentile Christians, have access by one spirit in our approaches to the Father as reconciled to us. Eph. ii. 18. Well would it be for Masons and their advocates, to consider seriously the forecited Scriptures and compare them with the Christless prayers in Masonic rituals.

DAVID THOMPSON.

Arkansas City, Kans., Feb. 13, '75.

A Veteran's Recollections.

BRODHEAD, WIS., March, 1875.

About fifty years since I was initiated into a Freemason's lodge. I have taken three degrees. I met with the Masons a few times. Just then as God would have it, by his spirit I was brought to feel myself a sinner and by his grace, his free favor, I was led to Christ as my only hope and refuge. I saw in him a fullness, all a poor sinner needed. From that time to this writing I have not seen the inside of a lodge. I cast my lot with God's people and here I have found all the fellowship I desired or needed. My brethren were pleased to designate me as a preacher of the Gospel. I accepted the appointment and have been blessed in the duties of the station I have so poorly sustained. Often have I been solicited to return to enslavement, and more frequently besought to unite with Odd fellows and kindred societies, as Good Templars, Sons of Temperance, and last of all the grange but my sense of secret societies has prevented my doing any such a thing hitherto, and I trust will to my latest hour. My last hour at the longest cannot be far hence, for I have made quite an advance on my 74th year. I was quite familiar with the events transpiring in "Morgan times," but had ceased to be a "Mason" ere that scene was opened or came to light. I am what is called an "old fogy" in relation to religious things, the practice of many professors of Christ's religion meets my disapproval. I think the church of the Redeemer has lost its spirituality and of course its designed power amongst men. It is astonishing how any lover of the Gospel and ministers of Christ can consent to encourage the tomfoolery of a Masonic lodge and take a part in Masonic funerals, etc. "Tell it not in Gath."

I little thought of letting my pen run riot; when I sat down to write I intended only a business letter. I esteem the Christian Cynosure; I like the religious style of the paper. O for the return of good, old-fashioned gospel simplicity and fellowship and works of love!

Of Gerrit Smith allow me to say I have not seen yet one word too much praise of the poor man's friend. I knew him personally. I lived in the same township in Madison county, N. Y., where he lived and died, Smithfield, seven miles from his home in Peterboro. He was a man, and many will bless his memory.

And now another, John G. Stearns; I was intimately acquainted with him; by him I was baptized nearly 50 years ago, and have known him all along his journey of life. He, too, died in the faith. His end was peace. It is possible that you may hear from me again at no distant day. Pardon me for this intrusion, I am but a humble person not much known in the world; but I feel it my duty to bear testimony against iniquity though it be found in high places in church or state. Free grace in Christ Jesus is my theme and shall be until I die. Yours for light,

DENISON ALCOTT.

The Christian Power.

UTICA, MINN., March 18, 1875.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

God is awakening the hearts of many and stirring up the nations. Only let the enemies of the reform clasp it in their arms and try to stifle it, it will gather strength under their pressure and come forth ten times more formidable. There is but one order that is holy and makes man holy, and that is Christianity. There is an immeasurable superiority of God's servants over all the great ones of earth. The Christian is not called upon to count his forces or number his means of victory if he looks only to his Master's glory. God grant that no human power may be able to resist this reformation. MRS. L. R.

OUR MAIL.

Wm. Miller, Uniopolis, O., writes:

"I consider all secret societies dangerous to any free government, political or ecclesiastical. I hate them with a perfect hatred. I hate them because I know that Jesus hates them. I have one of the first copies of your excellent paper that I have laid away carefully in my drawer as a relic for my friends when I am dead and gone. I wish it to be known while I live, and when I am dead, which side I am on. I am surrounded with secret societies, especially grangers; nevertheless, God being my helper I shall stand up and battle for the right."

Mrs. I. A. Morgan, Crystal, Mich., writes:

"I lend my papers and they are read and re-read. I think they may do some good. Masonry abounds here and it makes an awful community. Drinking and revelry go with it."

B. J. Hunt, Waitesburg, Wash. Ter., writes:

"The good work has commenced to move here in this land of secret societies. May the time soon come when hundreds may take your noble paper."

J. M. Oxley, New Concord, O., writes:

"The more I read the Cynosure the more it appears to me that it has no rival. It would be the last paper that I would drop. I hope to get some new subscribers soon. There is not so much excitement on the subject as I would like. We have not had any lectures here for some time. I hope we may have a shower here this spring that will cause the seed that has been sowed to sprout and bring forth fruit abundantly to the honor of our glorious Captain who is leading us on to a sure and glorious victory."

Mrs. May, Grant City, Mo., writes:

"Now that I am left alone in the world I do not feel like giving up the Cynosure. May God bless you and strengthen you that you may ever battle manfully for the right."

Lyman Scoville, Monroe, Wis., writes:

"I read your paper with interest, and pray for the principles it advocates. I am much pleased with your platform. Think it could not be bettered."

David Glaspie, Oxford, Mich., writes:

"I was a young man at the time of the abduction and murder of Morgan. I well remember the excitement that it caused. I supposed that the old handmaid had committed suicide and buried herself beneath her own rubbish (at that time), but soon after I began to perceive that the old serpent was still alive, and, in her snake-like manner, was making great progress in popularity, and also making deep inroads in society. I believe it to be a noble calling to work for God in putting down secret societies and in building up Zion everywhere in the name of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ who said nothing in secret."

Harvey Pease, Scipio, Ind., writes:

"I am a poor man seventy-two years old, not able to do much in the Anti-masonic cause, but I was an Anti-mason before the Morgan tragedy."

Mr. Pease wants a lecturer. Can Mr. Kiggins pass that way?

Samuel W. Elliott, North Rome, Pa., writes:

"The lodge-power is quite strong here, and makes itself felt whenever possible. I am seventy-four years old, but I intend to take your paper as long as I can see to read it. I lend the paper to my neighbors, and in that way do what I can in the cause of reform."

David Foreman, Milton, Ill., writes:

"I like the paper extremely well. I shall pray for its success. May the Lord still guide you in the future as he has in the past."

Mrs. Harrington, Union City, Pa., writes:

"My husband saw Wm. Morgan after he had lain in the river thirteen months. He saw his wife when she came up; she recognized her husband and said she knew what they had done with him now.

I believe in God, and I ask the help of his Almighty arm in this our war."

Mrs. Thompson. Mid Prairie, Ia., writes:

"I am still sending Cynosures over the country. I hope the work may go on." We are glad to see the ladies spending time and thought in this reform. We hope that their numbers may constantly increase."

L. W. Mathews, Lincolnville, Ind., writes:

"The Quakers here seem to be passive so far as an aggressive movement against secret orders is concerned. Aggresssion! Aggression!! is what is needed in this reform."

O. Bickford, Wilton, Ill., writes:

"I am a constant reader of the Cynosure; its weekly visits are looked forward to with a good deal of interest by us all. We like the fearless manner in which it deals blows at the hydra-headed monster (Masonry.) May the day soon come when it will be as unpopular to defend Masonry and kindred societies as it is now to oppose them."

C. W. Roberts, Pomeroy, O., writes:

"Your paper is an invaluable treasure. It is a blazing star in the moral world, from whose center radiates truth which cuts. I am scattering Cynosures and talking with the people privately on the subject. I find that the minds of the people are changing very much in regard to secret societies, even within a few months. I have succeeded in turning one Mason. Our leading and intelligent men are getting hold of the Cynosure. It makes them a little wrathy. I think I will get a subscriber or two before long."

John Smith, Baldwin, Pa., writes:

"There is some talk of forming a county organization in this county about the first of next May."

We are glad to know this, and hope similar organizations will be formed all through the country. Let those which are formed rouse to the importance of the work and be earnest in it.

Curtis Cogswell, Deer Lick O., writes:

"I am now seventy years old and not able to get round much. I joined the Masons soon after they murdered Morgan, and went to the dishonorable degree of Master Mason. I saw the iniquity of the beast and left them right off; and have been fighting Masonry ever since. . . They had a fire a few days ago in Bryan our county seat, and God burned up the Masonic hall with all its implements of idolatry, for which I thank him. I wish that false worship and idolatry all over these United States could be destroyed in the same way, and be burned out of the hearts of the people. . . I am a poor man, but I have sent of my money for the paper for sixteen different men in the last year. I wish we could have some lecturers come this way and stir the people up. May God destroy this system of idolatry and drive it out of our country."

Can any of our Ohio readers, Mr. Caldwell, or others, arrange to lecture in Williams county?

Mrs. S. B. Allen, Morrison, Ill., writes:

"The Anti-masonic cause is gaining a little."

Asher Thompson, Mina, N. Y., writes:

"I think since you have been through fire and water, and stood the test, coming out brighter than ever, we may take courage. Brother Amidon and myself have been scattering Anti-masonic books and papers. . . Brother Amidon has written to J. L. Barlow to be at our place the last of next month, as we have several places for him to lecture in in this vicinity. My prayer is as ever that light and truth may triumph, the glory of God be revealed, and souls saved from the unfruitful works of darkness."

The Sabbath School.

Lesson for April 18th, 1875.—The Call of Gideon.

Judges vi. 11-18.

11 And there came an angel of the Lord, and sat under an oak which was in Ophrah, that pertained unto Joash the Abi-ezrite: and his son Gideon threshed wheat by the winepress, to hide it from the Midianites.

12 And the angel of the Lord appeared unto him, and said unto him, The Lord is with thee, thou mighty man of valor.

13 And Gideon said unto him, O my Lord, if the Lord be with us, why then is all this befallen us? and where be all his miracles which our fathers told us of, saying, Did not the Lord bring us up from Egypt? but now the Lord has forsaken us, and delivered us into the hands of the Midianites.

14 And the Lord looked upon him, and said, Go in this thy might, and thou shalt save Israel from the hand of the Midianites: have I not sent thee?

15 And he said unto him, O my Lord, wherewith shall I save Israel? behold, my family is poor in Manasseh, and I am the least in my father's house.

16 And the Lord said unto him, Surely I will be with thee, and thou shalt smite the Midianites as one man.

17 And he said unto him, If now I have found grace in thy sight, then shew me a sign that thou talkest with me.

18 Depart not hence, I pray thee, until I come unto thee, and bring forth my present, and set it before thee. And he said, I will tarry until thou come again.

COMMIT TO MEMORY, vrs. 13, 14.

SCRIPTURE READINGS.—Concerning "the angel," see Judges ii. 1, and Gen. xvi. 7; the hiding of the wheat, 1 Sam. xxiii. 1; the angels appeared, Judges xiii. 3; and salutation, Ruth ii. 4; concerning the Midianites (v. 13), see v. 1-6; on the force of "looked," see 2 Sam. ix. 8; and on thy "might" (v. 14), see Eph. vi. 10; with v. 15, read Ex. iii. 11; and with v. 16, Ex. iii. 12; and on the sign (v. 17), see Gen. xviii. 3, and Luke xxiv. 41-43.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world.—Matt. xxviii. 20.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—The Lord chooses the weak things of the world.

SUGGESTIVE TOPICS.— Judges— what kind of officers—why raised up—by whom—on what occasion—the sin of Israel—the warning—the prophet—Gideon—his family—rank—how employed when visited—what it shows—his might—how increased—his complaint—the token given him—why asked—his preparation for the work—his assurance founded on what—similar cases—how revelation to a man may be gradual—how hateful is apostasy—the way of escape from its consequences—how freedom is to be secured—how mighty ones are strengthened.—S. S. World.

M.	Gen.	12: 1-18..The Call of Abraham.
T.	Ex.	3: 1- 5..The Call of Moses.
W.	1 Sam.	3: 1-20..The Call of Samuel.
Th.	1 Sam.	16: 1-13..The Call of David.
F.	1 K.	19: 1-21..The Call of Elisha.
S.	Acts.	9: 1-22..The Call of Saul.
S.	Is.	55: 1--13..The Universal Call.

—Natl. S. S. Teacher.

Forty Years Ago.

An Able Argument for Free Inquiry.

A discourse at Woodstock, Conn., Sept. 11, 1829, by Daniel Dow, Pastor of the church in Thompson.

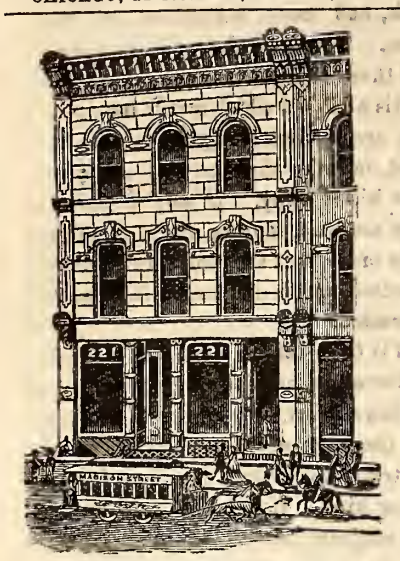
If ye will inquire, inquire ye.—Is. xxi. 12.

God has endowed the human mind with the faculty of inquiring, reasoning, and, in this way, arriving at the knowledge of truth. This faculty, it is conceived, was not given to lie dormant; but to be exercised. And it would seem inferable from the very constitution of our nature, that nothing ought to be believed; and that nothing ought to be done, for which no reason can be assigned. Hence it is generally conceded, that free inquiry is the common privilege of all mankind; and that in regard to all subjects, so far as is needful to form a proper estimation of them, and to act accordingly.

It is farther to be observed, that God himself, not only allows, but enjoins, the exercise of free inquiry, even upon subjects the most momentous. He does not require us to attend to the concerns of our everlasting salvation, without a rational inquiry. "Come let us reason together, saith the Lord." Saith our Saviour, "Why even of yourselves, judge ye not what is right?" Again, God calls upon his people, to judge of the equity of his government: "And now, O inhabitants of Jerusalem, and men of Judah, judge, I pray you, betwixt me and my vineyard. O house of Israel, are not my ways equal? are not your ways unequal?" And even an appeal is made to reason, by an inspired apostle, to prove the Divine existence: "For the invisible things of Him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead." While on the other hand, such as deny the supremacy of Jehovah, are expressly called upon, to bring forth their strong reasons. It is not displeasing, then, to the Almighty, that mankind should exercise their reason in the investigation of truth. But on the contrary; the belief of any doctrine, or the practice of any supposed duty, for which no reason could be given either from the light of nature, or from the Word of God, would not be acceptable in his sight.

Accordingly, all subjects are fairly open to free inquiry. And who will dispute the right? Were we, this day, to search into the merits of any question, relating either to natural philosophy, history, civil jurisprudence, ethics, or theology; were we to inquire concerning any object either in heaven, or on earth, either in the natural, or moral world, and were to do it with a right temper, observing proper decorum, our right to do so, by this enlightened assembly would not be disputed. If the subject of Freemasonry be an exception, it is the only subject there is, about which it is unlawful to inquire. And even to say, that it is unlawful to inquire about this, requires a reason to be given, which I for one, have never been able to discover. I take it for granted, then, that it is as lawful to inquire about this subject as any other.

2. Freemasonry is a subject which merits inquiry. If it be what its friends have represented; of all subjects in the world, it is most worthy of attention. Its most able abettors, Mr. Town, Mr. Preston, Mr. Webb, and others, whose writings have been approved and recommended by the higher authorities of the order, declare it to be not merely the handmaid of religion, but to be Christianity itself—the highest kind of Christianity, even the perfection of it. If this be true, it certainly demands inquiry. It should be looked into most carefully, by every one who has any faith in Christianity, and who would ever wish to attain to the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ. All who can possibly gain admittance, ought immediately to take their standing in the lodge. And if one-half of the human race, even all females, must unavoidably be forever excluded from participating of its blessings and its privileges, it certainly is not too trivial to inquire after the evidences, if not the reasonableness, of so mysterious a dispensation.



If it be, or be not, what its enemies represent, it is a subject which merits inquiry. Its enemies aver that all its pretentions to religion are sheer hypocrisy; that whilst it professes to be Christianity, it is in fact nothing but infidelity; that it profanes the Word of God and the ordinances of religion by applying them to the vilest of purposes; that its oaths are bloody and blasphemous; that its object is wholly selfish, its ceremonies most degrading, and that it is an institution which has not only a tendency to make infidels, but to corrupt the morals of society. All this, and more is asserted by its enemies. Now whether all, or even any of these charges be either true or false, it is a subject which merits inquiry. If they are not true; inquiry ought to proceed, in order that the foul slander may be wiped away. If any of these charges are true, inquiry ought to proceed, in order that the imposture may be detected, and its deleterious influence counteracted.

Or if it be a subject which in itself is indifferent, of no kind of importance, still it is a subject which merits inquiry. Some there are who consider it as a mere trifle, calculated to do neither good nor hurt. If it be so, still very trifling subjects become important, because they are esteemed important, and the minds of men are as much agitated about them as though they were so; and hence it becomes needful to inquire into them in order that they may be duly appreciated. Thus with Freemasonry, whatever it may be in itself, it certainly is a subject which has been considered by many as being vastly important; by some, for its good; by others, for its bad tendency. There are many here present, who will bear me witness, that it is a subject capable of agitating, and which does agitate the minds of men. Even admitting, then, what some aver, that is a subject of a very trivial nature, inquiry ought to proceed, in order that it may appear such; and that thus all unhappy excitement may be allayed, as it certainly will be, when the people become convinced that the occasion of it is a subject of little or no consequence. Whether Freemasonry, therefore be as it is represented by its friends; or as bad as it is represented by its enemies; or as trifling as any one who feels indifferent has esteemed it; the inquiry ought to be made. What is this novel and alarming subject, which has been the occasion of so much excitement? For until it be duly weighed and appreciated, you may rest assured the excitement will not abate.

This subject merits inquiry, in view of the condition in which it has involved the churches of Christ. It is well known that, at the present time, there are many professing Christians who really believe that Freemasonry is an anti-Christ. At the same time there are members of the Christian church, in all denominations, who belong to that fraternity. Now it would seem from the necessity of the case, that some inquiry should be made, that we may be able, understandingly, to discharge our duty. For how will it be possible for any one to determine, which of the two is in the wrong, or to exercise that Christian watchfulness, which the Gospel requires, without serious inquiry into the merits of the case. It would seem, that no Christian church, at this day, can do their duty to their brethren, either in vindicating or reproving them, without inquiry. For without this, they would be as likely to censure the innocent, as the guilty; and to justify the guilty, as the innocent. And to sit down and do nothing, when duty calls to action, would be to sustain the character, and to fall under the condemnation, of a slothful servant. The present condition of the churches, evinces that inquiry on this subject is needful.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 8, 1875.

THE CARPENTER DONATION.

The legal form by which possession and ownership of this fine building is given appears on the 12th page, and some words from the General Agent on page 4 should not be omitted.

A FALSE WITNESS.

SHARON, Wis.

DEAR SIR:—The pastor of our church, who is an Anti-mason, put this question this morning to one o the members of our assembly who is a Mason and a man of honesty and integrity. The question,—"Did you ever take an oath in the Master Mason's degree which was in substance like this: that you would defend a brother Mason right or wrong? Answer,—"I never did; and I was never in a lodge where they took such an oath. And if you will bring in the justice of the peace I will swear to it. I am a Master Mason." Please answer through your columns and oblige.

Tom. Here, you, Dick, let go that kite-string.

Dick. (dropping it). I ain't touching your string. What you talking about?

That is the nature of the reply usually given by Masons when they are pushed to an extremity; not outright lying judged by the hair-splitting rule, but it would have been a moment before with the boy, and with the Mason, if a word or two in the question is changed without affecting its sense. Thus in the above, if instead of saying "in the Master's degree," it had been 'during the initiation of the Master's degree,' and instead of "defend a brother Mason" it had been 'a brother Master Mason,' putting in the two well-known exceptions of murder and treason a denial could hardly wrench itself out of the mouth of "a man of honesty and integrity." Masonic ministers have been known to forearm themselves against mischievous inquiry by asking permission to retire, or to have their eyes covered, or to be placed so as not to hear, during the ceremonies of initiation, but the reply above is more sweeping. It might explain the answer to know with what lodges the party has affiliated.

As this is not a supposed case, with fixed premises, there is a further explanation, which charity for the Mason and the judgment of his friends would incline us to omit. But it is by no means unusual, even with men believed to be of integrity and honor. An actual incident will illustrate.

When Dr. T. M. Eddy was officiating in one of the Methodist churches of this city he became engaged in conversation with the redoubtable Nathaniel Colver on the subject of Masonry, not knowing that the latter had ever been inside the lodge. In enforcing some line of argument Colver quoted part of the Master's oath. Eddy tried to avoid the stroke by a forced laugh and the remark that the Baptist brother had been duped by some pretended revelation and that no such expression was used in the oath. Colver roused and turning right upon the other said, "Dr. Eddy, you know that is in the oath and I know it." Eddy looked with a surprised and curious stare into the unflinching eye of his opponent for a moment, and reading there that his subterfuge was known, turned without a word and walked off; nor from that day would he give the remotest opportunity for a renewal of the conversation. Perhaps the Sharon friend would be found out by a similar treatment. "Now as Jannes and Jambres withstood Moses, so do these also resist the truth," writes Paul to Timothy. President Finney, who has been a Mason, and has a fair reputation for honor and integrity, says in his well known work, p. 234, "While a Mason adheres his word cannot be credited on questions relating to the secrets of Masonry."

GRAND BENEVOLENCE.

"'They say' that Odd-fellows take care of their own. Who says so? Those Pharisees who see no good except in themselves or their own works—the holier-than-thou people. They ignore the relief sent by Odd-fellows to famishing Ireland, plague-stricken Norfolk, Wilmington, New Orleans, Memphis, Shreveport, etc., etc., and say Odd-fellows only care for and aid their own." Thus begins an editorial flourish at the opponents of secrecy in the Heart and Hand of March 6th, immediately following another full of talk about the sufferings of the poor, which finally concludes that "something must be done. How to do it will afford food for thought;" and as spring had already come it was best to do it immediately. In another column is a communication from the O. F. Grand Master of Indiana to the pseudo-dignitary of like title in Nebraska giving leave to ask the Indiana lodges for aid, dated Feb. 20th, and saying the aid of these lodges had been already solicited for the western sufferers, but having no notice from the Grand Lodge of Nebraska that Odd-fellows were needing, the lodges "felt that it would be hazardous to donate the amount they would otherwise donate." In the Heart and Hand of March 27th appears a communication from the Grand Master of Kansas stating that he had just sent to all the States an appeal for aid in the shape of money only.

This is certainly "food for thought." While the generous public has been sending since early Fall to relieve these sufferers, the "great Odd-fellow order" as soon as warm weather comes finds out that it is a "benevolent" society. "Better late than never" to be sure, but not a flattering commentary on the swelling boasts of the order. What sort of charity are we to call that that considers it "hazardous" to clothe the naked and feed the hungry because some "Grand" individual has sent no word whether these poor are of the right sort? Away with such falseness! Because the poor mother with her children don't know the grip or the sign they may get food as they can. Men would curse the name charity, if these false lodges were its only supporters.

HOW MASONS WRITE HISTORY.

Charles C. Northrup, 32nd deg., of New York, is preparing a Masonic Annual for 1876 from information drawn from all the lodges of the country, to which circulars have been sent. On the back side of one of these circulars is an epitome of an article by Daniel C. Emery of Portland, Me., entitled "The Anti-Masonic War," which is here given to our readers as a genuine specimen of Masonic history. It is hardly necessary to say that its whole aim is falsehood, proven to be so by the investigations ordered by the State of New York and by conventions of the people in charge of some of her best and most uncorruptible citizens; and also by various court trials, up to the Supreme Bench of the State whose reports contain the oaths of the blue lodge as taken and published under the authority of the State. (See Wendell's Supreme Court Reports, Vol. xii., pp. 9 to 26.) For other documents containing evidence on this case our readers are referred to The Broken Seal, The Anti-mason's Scrapbook, Valance' Confession, Minutes of the Syracuse Convention and The History of the Morgan Abduction, all published at this office: Also to Harper's Magazine for January, 1874, the American Encyclopedia, and the letters of Benjamin Rush. It is well to be aware of the falsehoods of the order, and this is one:

It was at first an insignificant affair, resulting from a petty quarrel between the proprietors of two country papers, and unnoticed, would have been forgotten, but agitation increased the feud.

It commenced in Batavia, New York. Wm. Morgan, David C. Miller (proprietors of one of the papers referred to), and John Davis, all of Batavia, and Russel Dyer of Rochester, induced by a desire of gain, arranged to publish a book, purporting to reveal the mysteries of Freemasonry. Morgan, who was poor, illiterate, intemperate and dissolute, was to be the editor, the other parties furnishing material for the work, and giving Morgan one-fourth the proceeds. While the sheets were in press, an effort was made to suppress the work, which only gave it tenfold notoriety. Soon Morgan was reported kidnapped, and murdered by the Masons. This story created such intense excitement, that when the book was issued the sale was immense.

Designing men now tried to prove that no Freemason was worthy of trust, and thus succeeded in forming an Anti-masonic party; they prostituted press and pulpit to uphold them, arraigned the best men in the community, upon infamous charges, and disorganized society generally. A species of madness ruled the hour.

In the midst of this confusion, Thomas Hamilton appeared in the vacinity of Batavia; although unworthy of confidence, he bore a conspicious part, pretending to know about Morgan's death; he gave no particulars, but expressed great fear of the Masons. Representing himself a Methodist preacher, he fleeced citizens out of their money, and was finally imprisoned for that offense. Even this the ringleaders turned to advantage, holding that Hamilton was persecuted by Masons. He was heralded as a martyr, and soon set at liberty, and a time set for him to expose his persecators, but at the time he was dead drunk. Nothing daunted, his position was laid to the persecutions of the Masons. He was secreted and reported missing, and murdered. About this time the body of Norman Fay who had been drowned, was recovered, and said to be that of Hamilton. His identity was proven by witnesses, when Hamilton suddenly appeared before the court in his proper person. One would think the imposition discovered, but the fact was concealed, for an election was close at hand, and the Anti-masons determined if possible to ride into power on this whirlwind. About this time another body was found, and buried as unknown: the managers of the excitement immediately seized the circumstance, and turned it to advantage.

Morgan had been missing thirteen months, and witnesses were found who under oath, recognized the body as that of Morgan.

The funeral took place with great display, the remains being interred in Batavia. This gave a new impetus to the feeling of hatred toward the Masons, and all who did not join against them were denounced. The feeling was augmented by the support of religious associations and men of high standing.

Shortly after the funeral, a Mr. Munro was reported to have been missing, and a description of his appearance coinciding with that of the supposed Morgan, the body was disinterred and re-examined, when the body was proven to be that of Munro. After this, the excitement abated, resulting in the elevation of a few men into public office who otherwise would have been unknown, but the community was most egregiously humbugged.

NOTES.

—Can Bishop Cheney or any member of the new denomination show why the Wesleyan is not correct in the following remark on the Reformed Episcopal church?—"The reform proposed by this church, is hardly to be attained through such logical discrepancies as is exhibited between its dogmas and its practice. One of its fundamental principles is that "this church recognizes and adheres to Episcopacy, not as of divine right, but as a very ancient and desirable form of a church polity." Yet "the Reformed Episcopal church" admits Masons to its sacred offices and communion, who believe that Masonry is of divine origin. All the male adult members of this so-called Reformed church ministers, deacons and all, might be Masons believing in the divinity of Masonry, and yet reject a divine origin for their church? Masonry is divine, but the church of Christ is not! Such is the practical logic of this new reform in religion."

—Last week we noticed a practical feature of the reform set forth by the good and true men of Groveland, Mass. Now we have another instance in the same county of Essex. At the town meeting of Ipswich, says a late Boston paper, it was voted that the names of all persons belonging to secret societies be stricken from the jury list. A correspondent says this is the result of seed sown there two years ago by the circulation of tracts and copies of the Cynosure. That's worth a cheer.

—We see a statement that the only place where there is preaching in the Irish language is in Elmira, Ill. This is an error as to language used, which is the Gaelic of Scotland. A large and very thriving neighborhood in Stark and Henry counties around Elmira was settled years ago by Scotchmen direct from their original glens. The church, which is Scotch Presbyterian in every respect, has sent out some able workers, through Monmouth, into the United Presbyterian ranks.

—Eastern Massachusetts is getting its grand juries right on the lodge question. Now in the western counties they have begun with the churches. A Berkshire county paper tells us of "probably the first and only instance of the kind, for the same cause, that ever occurred" in that district, namely, the dismissal of a minister for his Masonry. The Baptist church of Cheshire finding their pastor, H. A. Morgan, worshiping at the Baal altar of the lodge, and loving to do so, met the case fairly and firmly, and dismissed him by a vote of 27 to 2. The Masons thereabout made great show of indignation and spread false reports of the case, but without avail. Speed the day when this example shall be followed by all our churches.

—The tenth stanza in the poetry on the first page of two weeks ago was probably noticed to be disjointed which made an address to truth's warrior, "Shrink" not from the task before you, mean nothing at all.

Obituary—Rev. E. B. Rollins.

The Biblical Messenger of Waterbury, Vt., brings us the first notice of the death of this veteran. A correspondent at Brookfield writes that he died at half-past three on the morning of February 1st. During his last illness, which he did not think until a short time before death to be fatal, he was attended by the kind offices of neighbors and friends. His funeral was attended by large numbers of friends and several ministers who felt sincerely the loss of a good and useful man. He leaves a widow in feeble health. The Vermont Quarterly Conference of the Christian church of which Mr. Rollins was a member, passed the following memorial resolution at its meeting March 3d:

"WHEREAS, death has suddenly caused the labors of our venerable and much esteemed brother, E. B. Rollins, to cease since our last conference, thereby taking from our membership one whom devotion to divine truth, to righteousness, humanity, to equity and justice, from early manhood, led cheerfully to accept privation, hardship, trial and exposure to pain, one whose courage and devotion knew no abatement, at the advanced age of 80 odd years, although called to contend with sickness in his family and with poverty to the end of his life: therefore, Resolved, That we do deeply mourn the death of our brother so endeared to us by every recollection of his heroic and faithful defense of the Gospel of our dear Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and that we do hereby tender to his dear afflicted and invalid wife, our heartfelt sympathy; and Resolved further, that we will use our best endeavors to look after her temporal comforts, that she whose earthly staff is broken may suffer no needless privations that it is in our power to prevent, thus giving her substantial tokens of our regard for him whose loss we with her do truly mourn."

Mr. Rollins is best known to our readers through his remarks at the Syracuse Convention, and an address to his Christian brethren, originally published in 1829, appearing in these columns last December. He had just passed his 82d year when he met in the Convention as a delegate from East Braintree, Vt., yet spoke with great force and earnestness though his voice was not strong. He had taken seven degrees in Freemasonry though but a short time connected with the order. Its abominable principles were too clearly seen for him to continue in its fellowship. Withdrawal was followed by persecution. Every means, even the press and the church, were suborned. In defense Mr. Rollin started the Vermont Luminary, which quickly became a power against the lodge. The reform grew rapidly, and on the nomination of Mr. Rollins through the Luminary, Wm. A. Palmer was elected governor, the election having gone to the Legislature. He was also elected to a second term. The charter of the Grand Lodge was revoked by the Legislature, and the State brought into the foremost rank on this question. Father Rollins maintained his good fight to the end, never failing in his testimony and activity having delivered public addresses against the order on several occasions during the past season. May his testimony be like seed truth in the old Granite State and an army of earnest men be found pressing to victory where a few like him have been pushing on the battle.

Political.

A Word on Politics from Missouri.

Masonry, in political parlance, is a faction, with its members to be found in both the existing political parties of the day, evidently for the purpose of securing to its own members all the offices of honor, trust and emolument within the gift of the people. And for the American people to expect or look for an honest and impartial administration of the affairs of this government, (one which will secure justice to all classes), from either of the present parties, while they are managed and manipulated as they now are, by men who are under obligations which they consider paramount, to secure the advancement and interests of their own members and order, is sheer folly and nonsense. The leaders of the Republican party here are as truly Masonic as are those of the Democratic party, and nothing can be judged here of a man's position during the "late unpleasantness" by the side he takes in the movement now on foot, which fact makes me feel like offering a few suggestions to the Cynosure and some of its correspondents.

And allow me to say here that I am not warped or prejudiced in what I shall say, for if I understand myself I am a firm supporter of the principles set forth in our Declaration of Independence and embodied in our Constitution down to the last Amendment. In the war I rallied to the flag of our country as a private, and since then have stood by and supported the Republican party, even when it has suffered defeat in two States, Tennessee and Missouri. What I wish to say is this: I have spent my life in two Southern States since the close of the war (Tenn. and Mo.), and have mingled with the people in all the relations of life and I am satisfied that the masses of the people of the South were honest in their views of the war, no matter how clear it may appear to others that they were wrong. And when we take into consideration the circumstances, the institutions and the political and religious training of the Southern people, nothing is more natural than that they should fall just where they did in the conquest. I further believe that the masses are honest in accepting the results of the war, and are now willing and desirous of having pure and good government which will secure life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness to all its citizens.

But now to apply. If I understand the nature of the movement against the secret orders it is national, and designs to unite in opposition to these orders all who favor good government and are opposed to the prostitution of our principles of free government, for the purpose of advancing the ends of an organization whose lodge government is directly antagonistic to our Constitution. The plaster should always be as large as the sore. Masonry knows no North, no South, no East, no West, and those who oppose it should not either. If the leaders of the rebellion used Masonry to furthering it the people knew not of it, and to charge the Democratic party of the South (as a mass) as favoring Masonry is unjust, unwise and impolitic. A very large majority of those who favor the reform here were Southern men. And many of the expressions of correspondents charging the Democratic party en masse with supporting Masonry because it may have favored the rebellion, are caught up by Masonic Democratic leaders and used to prejudice the minds of Democrats against the movement on the lodge. And it is evident that the Masonic leaders of both parties here would rather see discord, contention and strife spring up among the people over the issues of the war, than for the lodge to loose its supremacy and they suffer a just and merited rebuke. The lodge will not suffer past issues to affect it, neither should we.

I have written the above in a spirit of brotherly love, and from what I know here and believe it to be true of the South in general, and I hope a word to the wise will be sufficient. Let us, forgetting the past, rally to the support of the American party all those of every party who desire good government and are willing to work for the demolition of this giant of Gath who is not only threatening our civil liberties, but is defying the church of the living God.

W. M. LOVE.

N. C. A. Receipts for March.

1st Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.	$ 5,00
Memberships	10,00
P. P. Chapman and others, Farmington, for Ill. Fund,	7,00
C. F. A. Gantzchow, Hartsville, for Ind. Fund,	5,00
Do for Publishing House Fund,	10,00
	$ 37,00

There is needed immediately to settle accounts now due $200 for the work at large, $75 for the Ohio fund and $55 for the Indiana fund. Who will help? H. L. Kellogg, Treas.

Religious Intelligence.

—Bro. S. P. Hoy writes of a generous revival work in Streator, Ill., in which there have been ninety conversions and ninety-one accessions to the United Brethren church. This blessing makes the lodge envious, and Good Templar have been put forward to check it, but as yet without success.

—The Washington Conference is the largest and wealthiest colored conference in the Methodist Episcopal Church. It has 3,053 probationers, 24,272 members, 205 local preachers, 105 traveling ministers, 177 churches, valued at $454,728, and twenty parsonages, worth $21,630; 239 Sunday-schools and 11,432 scholars.

—According to a recent report there are 180 church edifices in Suffolk county, in which Boston is situated. Their estimated value is $11,240,200.

—The work of Moody and Sankey has encouraged a rather remarkable revival in France. United services for several days were held by the clergymen of the National, Free, Methodist, and Baptist churches in Paris. Similar meetings have since been held at Nismes, where 100 ministers were present, and at Montauban, the seat of the Theological Seminary of the Reformed church of France. Large congregations met at every place, four places of worship being opened at once at Nismes.

—It is cited as a remarkable instance that the various Protestant denominations in some parts of Ireland are holding united evangelical meetings.

—The establishment of a Young Men's Christian Association in Yale College has been abandoned after discussion among the students. They have determined to begin more earnest efforts for the conversion of members of the institution.

—Talmage lately spoke of his Tabernacle congregation on "Brooklyn or Sodom," and used very plain speech on the infamous scandal of the Beecher case. He described it as a corpse rotting for eight months in the sun. Three daily papers came to his house that day with 123 feet of scandal. No one can estimate the evil influence of 300,000 daily papers of that city bringing five million columns of licentiousness into the houses of the people. Well may we cry to the Lord to save his people.

—Mr. Bruce, the missionary who has been revising the Persian Scriptures, returns to England in order to put his manuscript through the press. The Mohammedan priesthood is intensely fanatical, as the recent persecution of converts of the American Presbyterian missionaries at Yezd and Tabriz have shown. The ripeness of the Persians for the Gospel seems, however, so evident that the Church Missionary Society is about sending two missionaries in Mr. Bruce's place—into a country which, with the exception of a temporary irruption of Buddhism, is, as Mr. Markham says in his recent history of Persia, "the only one of all the nations of the world that has never at any period of her history worshipped graven images of any kind."

—Henry Varley, a converted London butcher and lay preacher in Spurgeon's church, has been preaching with great power in New York for two or three weeks, in different churches and halls. His audiences have grown to as many as ten thousand at times and the largest public buildings like Barnum's Hippodrome, and the skating rinks have been occupied. He speaks with great plainness and earnestness. At some of the meetings the Hutchinson family have assisted by singing.

—The buildings of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary, this city, will be enlarged the coming summer by the addition of a chapel to cost about $20,000, $15,000 of which is already secured by subscription.

—Rev. J. E. Carroll, pastor of the Wesleyan church at Cleveland, O., and who acted as Secretary of the Oberlin Convention of our National Association, expects to close his relation with that church this year.

—A number of the spring conferences of the Wesleyan church meet during the present month and the first of next. Some feature of the anti-lodge reform is made a subject of discussion in nearly all these meetings.

The Home Circle.

To Spring.

O, thou with dewey locks, who lookest down
Through the clear windows of the morning, turn
Thine angel eyes upon our western aisle,
Which in full choir hails thy approach, O Spring!

The hills tell each other, and the listening
Valleys hear: all our longing eyes are turned
Up to thy light pavilion; issue forth
And let thy holy feet visit our clime.

Come o'er the eastern hills, and let our winds
Kiss thy perfumed garments; let us taste
Thy morn and evening breath; scatter thy pearls
Upon our lovesick land that mourns for thee.

Oh, deck her forth with thy fair fingers; pour
Thy soft kisses on her brow; and put
Thy golden crown upon her languished head,
Whose modest tresses were bound up for thee.

Home Reading—A Delightful Plan for Mothers.

BY MRS. M. J. WHIPPLE.

Mothers, with silvering locks and care-crossed brows, bending over the burden of daily toil, and crying out that you have no time for mental growth, a word to you.

Train up your bright-eyed boys and sunny-haired girls to read to you while you fashion their frocks or bake their bread. Their idle hands are aching for something to do, their empty minds are longing to be filled, and Satan stands waiting to employ their fingers, and fill their heads with mischief. Thousands of homes contain books and periodicals just waiting to be read; thousands of weary mothers are just hungering to know something of the great world outside; and thousands of children are just tiring the patience of those mothers with their noisy inventions to fill up the vacancies of child-life.

Every day request each one in turn to read something profitable to you, while you ply needle and thread. It may seem like a task at first, but soon, thus accompanied, the minor melody of household mending will soon become the sweetest harmony, and the little folks' faces will light up with new intelligence.

We know a boy of only nine years who, ever since he learned to read, has been accustomed to thus entertain his mamma, and to-day he knows more history, literature and poetry, than many a boy twice his age, and so much attached to certain fine old poems is he, that he is ready at any time to drop everything to read them to her, while his little sister, not yet six, comes up every day with her book, saying, "Mamma let me read this story to you while you do that work." And very nice stories can she read too. She did not like to be told she could not read well enough for mamma to understand, so she has beset everyone with questions about this word and that word for a year past, until she is a reader for mamma.

We know a white-haired farmer among the old granite hills who excels all his neighbors in the art of reading, beside possessing a larger fund of general information than those around him. How did he learn to read and to love it? Sitting beside his father, evenings, while that father, after working hard all day on the farm, was making shoes to cover ten pairs of feet.

There is a young man in New York, a mere lad, who excels prominent literary men in the art of conversation. How did he acquire that art? His father, an active business man, with his own time wholly occupied, takes several papers, whose contents he has his son report to him at his dinner. This method has led the boy not only to read with care, but also to communicate to others what he has read. A very ungrateful child is that who would not be glad to read for an overworked parent.

Now, we have spoken of the benefit reading aloud is to the child first, in order to secure your attention, for mothers always want to hear what will advance their children. You will plan and plan and toil and toil, to let Johnny, and Charlie, and Willie, and Kittie, and Jessie, and Hattie go to school, but in the evenings, when that great basket of rent garments is brought out to have its wounded contents bound up, and you look with longing eyes at the book-shelves and paper-racks, where are those bright boys and girls for whom your labor stops not at set of sun? Do your boys want to steal away to town to see and hear some of its abominations? Do your girls sigh in one corner over sickly sentimental fictions? What have you ever done to cultivate in them a taste for more solid reading? Taken the books or stories away from the offenders whenever you have caught them in the offense? Better have them read to you, and you point out to them the reasonableness and the unreasonableness of the plots.

But best of all begin in the beginning to mould the literary tastes of your children. Let them learn from reading to you something about the early history of mankind. Let them read to you the lives of those whose names have pierced through the darkness of forgetfulness, and have come to us lighted up by the brightness of worthy deeds. History and biography contain more fascinating hair-breadth escapes and astonishing narrations than fiction can possibly produce, for fiction must all the time be covering up her doubtful form with such a smooth surface of probability, that she loses half her charm. Minds, whose taste for literature has developed in your and history's society, until their bodies have reached the age of sensational sentimentalities, are far above them. Booksellers wrap up their packages with startling first chapters and suggestive coarse wood cuts in vain; such minds never read the half-sheet tucked under the door by the rag-tag from the newsdealer. Give your boy Roman history to read and encourage him to relate to you what he finds in it, and he will trace out to you the rise and progress of the Romans with an untiring earnestness and interest. And before you are aware you will find him devouring the history of the world with a Roman zeal. By and by, when your children in their turn shall have taken up the great burdens of life, how will they thank you for their knowledge of history and literature. Moreover, you will find your own minds abundantly improved.

When all mothers shall have become as careful to provide food and clothing for the minds of their families as for their bodies, then shall gossip cease to be a scourge and the term backbiter shall fall into decay.

Mothers of ten children ought, by the time the youngest is six years old, to be at least as well informed in history and literature as an ordinary professor in a Collegiate Institute.

Bunker Hill Academy, Ill.

Sunday in Europe.

The American traveler who visits, for the first time, the continent of Europe, has naturally many surprises in store, many things to learn. But there is, perhaps, nothing that startles him more than the irreverent manner in which the inhabitants of the large cities are accustomed to spend the day of the Lord. Let him enter Paris, Berlin, Vienna, or any other European capital on Sunday, and he would never recognize the day. Indeed, the so-called Continental Sunday has nothing whatever in common with the Protestant, English or American Sabbath, save the name. The streets and public squares present their usual animated, bustling appearance. Traffic and business proceed as usual. The click of the mason's trowel and the blows of the carpenter's hammer are heard in all directions. The work of building on public and private edifices progresses without interruption. The shops are all open, the artificers are all busy, the unintelligible criers vociferate their wares, and the laboring classes wear their work-day dresses. There may possibly happen to be some church goers among the busy crowds that hurry along, but they are too few to be distinguished from those who are evidently bent only on following their ordinary pursuits. The hotels, restaurants and cafes are overflowing with customers. Men are wheeling barrows and carts, heavily-laden wagons roll by, merchandise is received and delivered, bands are playing, street minstrels are drawling for coppers, hand-organs are distracting musicsl ears, mountebanks and quacks of every species are giving al fresco performances, and the noise and confusion are bewildering. Such is the strange spectacle which a large Continental city generally presents to an American on the first day of the week until the hour of noon, and even later, when the countless places of amusement begin to exert their attraction on the population. Then the business portions of the city assume a holiday appearance; counting houses and offices, stores and workshops are shut up and their released denizens hasten to the suburban beer-gardens, casinos, and public parks, where the merry crowds talk, laugh, smoke, clink glasses, and beat time to the music until the doors of the theater and concert halls swing open. Dancing usually winds up the day which men are commanded to keep holy.

The truth is that the Continental Sunday is, to a large majority of the inhabitants of European cities, not a period of rest and devotion, but one of mixed toil and devotion. By far the greater part of the day is given to work and business, while pleasure and amusement claim the remainder.—Interior.

The Death of Livingstone.

Soon after Livingstone left Unanyembe he began to suffer from a chronic complaint, which occasioned much loss of blood, and exhausted his strength. The highlands, near Lake Tanganyika, were hard traveling, and he was obliged to climb the mountains himself, for fear of killing his donkey. He also felt the sun when he rode more than when he walked. But far worse than the mountains were the floods around Lake Bangweolo. It rained almost every day; the sky was covered with clouds; the earth was covered with water. The native canoes would not live on the lake, and he had to wade from morning until night, day after day. The country was desolate; there was no game, it was thinly populated. Sometimes the cooing of doves, the screaming of the francolin, the music of singing birds, announced that a village was near; but the people supposed him to be a slave hunter, concealed their food, and deserted their villages as soon as he approached. Others pretended to act as guides, misdirected him, and on one occasion he lost his way for a fornight. This terrible life soon began to tell upon a constitution already enfeebled by disease. He offered up prayers that he might be allowed to finish his work and return and be at rest. But first he must find the four fountains. "Nothing earthly," he says, "will make me give up my work in despair."

On the 10th of April he writes, "I am excessively weak, and but for the donkey could not move a hundred yards. It is not all pleasure, this exploration." On the 21st he started in the morning from a village where he had slept; but before he had gone very far he fell from the donkey, and was taken by his men back to the village. They made a litter, and carried him slowly from village to village. On the 25th he was brought to a hamlet from which the people had not run away. He called them, and asked if they knew of a hill on which four rivers took their rise. They replied that they were not in the habit of traveling. On the 27th he made the last entry in his diary. "Knocked up quite, and remain—recover—sent to buy milch goats. We are on the banks of the Molilamo." He was now unable to stand upright. He often implored his bearers to place the litter on the ground. Sometimes a drowsiness came over him, and the men began to be frightened, for they knew that death was drawing near. They arrived at Ilala, and laid him in a hut, on a native bed raised above the ground. Beside him was placed a box with the medicine chest upon it; outside, near the door, was lighted a fire, and around it sat the watchers, waiting for the end. A boy lay down within the hut.

It was at the night of the 30th of April. At 11 P. M., he sent for Susi, and asked whether those were his men shouting. Susi replied it was the natives scaring away a buffalo from their field. He then asked how many days it was to the Luapuia, and soon afterwards sighed as if in great pain, and said, "O dear!" and then dozed off.

At midnight Susi was sent for again, and Livingstone took a dose of calomel. He then said in a feeble voice. "All right; you can go now." These were his last words. At 4 A. M. the boy ran to Susi, and said, "Come to Bwana. I am afraid; I don't know if he is alive." Susi called Chumah and four other men, and they entered the hut. Their master was not on the bed, but kneeling beside it; a candle stuck by its own wax to the top of the box, shed a light sufficient for them to see his form. His body was stretched forward, his head was buried in his hands upon the pillow. One of the men approached softly, and put his hands to his cheeks. They were quite cold. Livingstone was dead. A little while afterward the cocks crew. It was the morning of May 1, 1873.

Beyond Comprehension.

When Daniel Webster was in his best moral estate, and when he was in the prime of his manhood, he was one day dining with a company of literary gentlemen in the city of Boston. The company was composed of clergymen, lawyers, physicians, statesmen, merchants, and almost all classes of literary persons. During the dinner the conversation incidentally turned upon the subject of Christianity. Mr. Webster, as the occasion was in honor of him, was expected to take a leading part in the conversation, and he frankly stated as his religious sentiments, his belief in the divinity of Christ, and his dependence upon the atonement of the Saviour. A minister of very considerable literary reputation sat almost opposite him at the table, and he looked at him and said: "Mr. Webster, can you comprehend how Jesus Christ could be both God and man?" Mr. Webster, with one of those looks which no man can imitate, fixed his eye upon him, and promptly and emphatically said: "No, sir, I cannot comprehend it; and I would be ashamed to acknowledge him as my Saviour if I could comprehend it. If I could comprehend him he could be no greater than myself, and such is my conviction of accountability to God, such my sense of sinfulness before him, and such is my knowledge of my own incapacity to recover myself, that I feel I need a superhuman Saviour.—Bishop Janes.

Men abuse the world. when they make it their master. When God created man he put a crown on his brow and a sceptre in his hand, and told him to have dominion over the world. And man throws his crown on the ground, lets the sceptre fall from his relaxed grasp, and becomes the slave of his own servant. Every man who is slave to his own counting-room, every women who is slave to her own housekeeping, every one who is driven by the world, instead of breaking it in, harnessing it, and driving it himself, abuses the world; or what is worse he lets the world abuse him. Use the world, do not let it use you.

Children's Corner.

A Child's Birthday Hymn.

What shall I ask from heaven,
On this memorial day,
When one more year of childhood life
Has just now passed away?

I'll ask the Lord in prayer,
To pardon all the past;
To bless the future with His grace,
So long as life shall last.

I'll ask the spirit, too,
To come as gentle dove,
To teach the Saviour's precious name,
And fill my heart with love!

I'll ask the Father's hand,
To guide my steps aright,
And lead me safe through every snare,
To His own Home of Light!

A Letter from California.

WRITTEN BY A LITTLE BOY JUST EIGHT YEARS OLD.

[Concluded.]

Now we come to Wyoming it is more rolling; we begin to see the snow fences they are built to keep the snow from blowing on the track and were made of boards and are from ten to a hundred rods long; they stand in every shape you can think of, some with the end towards the road, some biasing, then there would be 8 or 10 in a roe, 10 or 15 feet apart and perhaps 20 rods long, in this way you can see them for miles, sometimes more and sometimes less; as we pass on we begin to see the peaks of mountains and in this Territory is the largest coal mine in the world allmost mountains of coal, and spreads over thousands of acres; near streams of water the ground is white with saleratus, one man told me there was places where they could take it out by wagon loads; as we near the mountains the Rail Road is protected by snow sheds, every little ways a tite shed and as dark as a tunnel, and now we see the big snow mountains they are so high that I can see the tops of them far above the clouds; then look in other directions and see the rocks piled up in every shape you can think of, and so high that they looked frightful, Ma said they looked Majestic, I hardly understand what she means by that; I forgot to tell you for the last few hundred miles the whole face of the earth is covered with a brown looking brush about a foot high, called sage brush. well we stoped here amongst these Rocks, and hitched on another engine, we soon found ourselves winding around and up the sides of a mountain, when we got to the top, a man who knows the country well, told me we were over 11,000 feet above the level of the sea; we soon wound our way down the side of the mountain, and through the deep canions and once in a while a tunnel, and then snow sheds; then we got into Utah. here we pass through what is called the 5 mile canion: L—— I wish I could draw a picture so you might see its beauties, for I cannot tell you anything; we would winde a round through those mountains, and the rocks on both sides were about as high as my eye could reach; when we passed through this Canion Ma and I stood on the platform of the last car so we had a good view; and there was a gentleman there that lived somewhere in that part and knew and explained everything and give names and then would tell me what to look for next; as we passed along through this Canion was a pretty stream called the Hombolt River; we would pass through snow sheds and quite a while after we would come around so it would look as though we were going through them again this is the way we wound round through the mountains, and away up there in the rocks we could see great holes as though there might be a cave there and so high up too; this gentleman told us to look on the left hand side when we had gone about so far and at the same time he gave us a history of what we might see: years ago one of the first families that ever emigrated to California, even before gold was found, they were passing through this lonely but very Beautiful spot, there only daughter was taken sick and died here, they buried her on a little flat perhaps a hundred feet above the cars and just far enough off to make a good view, the only mark they could leave was a board with the time age and name; she rested without farther notice till the Rail Road was being built. they found it and had it fixed up, nicely pavid with stone and a Cross erected modestly and on this is engraved so as to be easily read from the cars; The Maiden's Grave. Ma said she thought it a beautifull spot for a resting place; we pass on a little farther and we come to a tree called the thousand mile tree it was a very common looking tree not large; I guess what made it noted was because it was the most like a tree of anything in all that distance and I think I heard some one say that it was just 1000 miles from Omaha. near this was the Devil's Slide I don't know why they give it that name; it was on the side of one of the highest mountains I saw and was strait down from the top, and was solid Rock and looked as if something had slid down till it was worn smooth, and I guess they thought nothing could slide down that unless it was him and maby that is the reason they gave it this name. We soon passed near Salt Lake City and might have seen a part of it at a distance if it had not been quite so dark; the cars being over three hours behind time we lost quite a number of fine sceneries, so two men told me, they were on the cars three or four days, I got well acquainted with them, one of them is Proff. in the College at Salt Lake, he seemed very much interested with me; he would call me to him and talk with me and told me a great deal about the country; they were Mormons, but we did not know it until the cars were just stopping at Ogden; here was another change of cars; they took a train for Salt Lake to their homes and we took a train for California; it was nine o'clock before the cars started on and I had gone to sleep; the next morning when I waked, we were in Nevada. I did not see much difrence in the country, it was Mountains and Rocks and Canions and snowsheds and once in a while a tunnel, about all the diferance we could see was plenty of scruby looking pines; next morning was Sunday; we were all up early and here we had already passed into California, here every thing was changed the tall Pines stood just as thick from the top of the mountains to the bottom of the canions, it does not look like the pine at home, it does not have such wirey looking bunches, they look like those pyramid evergreens in the gardens at home, but here where the scenery was so fine we had to pass through 35 miles of snow sheds almost in one string, could only see out once in a while, we watched for a crack like a cat watching for a mouse that we could see that beautiful pine timber and surroundings, for just here we were climbing the Serrie Nevada, spoken of by every one as being very beautiful, when we reached the summit we were very high, and here we come to the gold mines, the ground looks like gold dust, and it is dug up all around, and such pretty streams of water winding around on the sides of the mountains in every direction; I wish you could have seen them, they are used for washing gold; all around the mines is little villages, I do not remember the names of any but 2, that was Dutch Flat and Colfax, and they were settled mostly by miners, the next we came to Cape Horn, a very strange and yet a very beautiful scenery, on one side not more than 5 feet from the track we could look down over 2000 feet and there you could see 2 pretty little houses and gardens, all the rest looked like homes for Grisley Bears, the Mountains rising on both sides and the largest and thickest timber all around, I would have been afraid to live there and I don't believe any one would dare live there unless it is Bear Hunters, it was beautifull to look at but would be a very scary place to live, and the other side of the cars and no farther from the track we could look as far above us at the Rocks as we looked below us on this side. The whole country had the same; as far as I could see up here on the mountains was 3 feet, but we soon left it all behind us as we rush down the mountain side and soon we began to see nice gardens and grape Vineyards; soon we came to Junction and here we left the San Francisco train and took a train for Marysville where we found my Uncle. . . there is ever so much more I want to tell you but have not got room this time; well good-bye L—— from

CHARLIE.

The Little Monitor.

A lady who had the charge of young persons not of kindred blood, became on one occasion perplexed with regard to her duty. She retired to her own room to meditate, and being grieved in spirit, laid her head on a table and wept bitterly. She scarcely perceived her little daughter, seated quietly in the corner. Unable longer to bear the sight of her mother's distress, she stole softly to her side, and taking her hand in both of her own, said, "Mamma, once you taught me a pretty hymn:—

"If e'er you meet with trials,
Or troubles on the way,
Then cast your care on Jesus,
And don't forget to pray!"

The counsel of the little monitor was taken and relief came. The mother was repaid for rightly training her child, by having her become her own blessed teacher. "Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings God has ordained praise." D. F. N.

A HISTORY OF THE REFORM AGAINST SECRET SOCIETIES.

Number of Pastors and Communicants

in churches which prohibit fellowship with secret societies.

Denominational Name.	No. of Preachers.	No. of Communicants.
Reformed Presbyterian	100	9,726
United Presbyterian	595	74,833
Associate Presbyterian	12	1,162
United Brethren	1,886	131,859
Free Methodist	145	6,113
German Baptists	1,048	200,000
LUTHERAN:
Norwegian Danish Conf.	48
Augustana Synod Swedish	93	30,127
Evangel. Synodical Conf.	930	187,873
Total,	4,857	641,693

We lack the statistics of the Wesleyan Methodists, Friend Quakers and others who do not fellowship Masonry; but this table is sufficiently complete to show that a vast body of conscientious Protestant Christians are opposed to secret societies.

Opinions of Prominent men on Secret Societies.

REV. ALBERT BARNES, PASTOR FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH IN PHILADELPHIA, FROM 1830–1867.

PHILADELPHIA, July 20, 1849.

GENTLEMEN:—I have never belonged to a secret society—Freemason, Odd-fellow, Sons of Temperance, or any other,—and with my present views, I never shall. Any good cause, I think, can be promoted openly; any secret association, is liable at least, to abuse and danger. I am respectfully yours,

ALBERT BARNES.

HON. S. C. POMEROY, IN 1869.

I have long seen clearly that the system of secret orders now everywhere so popular is in its principle and nature hostile to the whole order of things which our fathers set up in this country. One system or the other will certainly go under; they cannot co-exist and flourish together; they will not permanently co-exist; one will certainly subvert the other. And as I profoundly believe in our order of things, based on the idea at bottom, that every man ought to have a fair and equal chance, I must condemn this hostile and antagonistic system of secret orders, based on favoritism and partiality to their members, and proscription to everybody outside.

WENDELL PHILLIPS.

Jan. 22, 1874.

DEAR SIR:—I wish you success most heartily in your effort to rouse the community to the danger of secret societies. They are a great evil; entirely out of place in a Republic, and no patriot should join or uphold them.

Considering the great forces which threaten the welfare of the nation in the next thirty years, and how readily and efficiently they can use any secret organization, such should not be allowed to exist.

Yours respectfully, WENDELL PHILLIPS.

MR. C. A. BLANCHARD.

HON. WM. WIRT,

speaking of Freemasonry, says: I view it as at war with the fundamental principles of the social compact, and a wicked conspiracy against the laws of God and man that ought to be put down.

PRES. JAMES MADISON.

Jan., 1832.

From the number and character of those who now support the charges against Masonry, I cannot doubt that it is at least susceptible of abuse, out-weighing any advantages promised by its patrons.

HON. WM. H. SEWARD.

Before I would place my hand between the hands of other men, in a secret lodge, order, class or council, and, bending on my knee before them, enter into combination with them for any object, personal or political, good or bad, I would pray to God that that hand and that knee might be paralyzed, and that I might become an object of pity and even the mockery of my fellow-men.

HON. DANIEL WEBSTER.

All secret associations, the members of which take upon themselves extraordinary obligations to one another, and are bound together by secret oaths, are naturally sources of jealousy and just alarm to others; are especially unfavorable to harmony and mutual confidence among men living together under popular institutions, and are dangerous to the general cause of civil liberty and just government. Under the influence of this conviction it is my opinion that the future administration of all such oaths, and the formation of all such obligations should be prohibited by law.

GOV. JOHN HANCOCK.

I am opposed to all secret associations.

REV. JOHN TODD, PITTSFIELD, MASS.

Unhesitatingly I give my decided disapprobation of what I deem secret societies in college or elsewhere. I have never known any good results from them which could not have been attained in some other more appropriate way; and I have known great evils resulting from them. . . . . It is sometimes pleaded that these secret societies are charitable institutions and help their members in distress. It may be so; but that seems to me to be a very narrow kind of charity whose bank discounts only to stockholders.

HOWARD CROSBY, D. D., CHANCELOR N. Y. UNIVERSITY.

We have no hesitation in writing secret societies among the quackeries of this earth, a part of the great system by which the mud-begotten try to pass themselves off as Jove born.

PRES. J. Q. ADAMS.

Secrets written in blood should be revealed; a tree that bears such fruits should be hewn down. No butcher would mutilate the carcass of a bullock or a swine, as the Masonic candidate swears consent to the mutilation of his own, for the breach of an absurd and senseless secret. It is an oath of which a common cannibal would be ashamed.

C. G. FINNEY, FORMER PRESIDENT, OBERLIN COLLEGE.

God demands, and the world has a right to expect, that the church will take due action and bear a truthful testimony in respect to this institution. She cannot now innocently hold her peace. The light has come. Fidelity to God and the souls of men require that the church, which is the light of the world, should speak out, and should take such action as will plainly reveal her views of the compatibility or incompatibility of Freemasonry with the Christian religion.

ELDER DAVID BERNARD.

I declare to you my Christian brother there is no mistake—Freemasonry is a most wicked and blasphemous institution. (Elder Bernard took ten degrees in speculative Freemasonry.)

REV. JOSEPH MOORE, PRES. EARLHAM COLLEGE.

The fact that Freemasonry often thwarts every effort to enforce the law against an offender who is of the fraternity, shows it to be an obstacle to moral and civil progress.

REV. J. BLANCHARD, PRESIDENT WHEATON COLLEGE.

We object to secret societies not merely as societies which are secret, but to the secret, religious ceremonies which they all practice, more or less, from the largest to the least. Such rites, practiced by members of a body taken promiscuously from the community, professors of religion and men making no profession is nothing less than a moral and religious system in which personal piety is not required, nor general justice, but only fealty to a clan. We regard the whole system, therefore, as opposed to true religion and just government, and of course hostile to God and man.

REV. JOEL SWARTZ, D. D., A SECEDING MASON.

Its (Freemasonry's) religion is anti-Christian. . . Its prayers are blasphemous. . . Its use of the Bible is sacriligious. . . . The whole is a compound of Judaism and paganism.

REV. NATHANIEL COLVER, FORMER PASTOR TRINITY TEMPLE, (BAPTIST) BOSTON. EXTRACT FROM A LETTER WRITTEN TO A BROTHER MASON.

I am free to say it is my deliberate opinion that the vicious character of Masonry and its guilt-concealing and barbarous oaths is such, as not only to release all from their bonds, but also to lay upon them the solemn obligation to tear off its covering and expose its enormity. I regard it as Satan's masterpiece,—a terrible snare to men. It sits at this moment as a nightmare on all the moral energies of our government, and utterly paralyzes the arm of justice.

REV. MOSES STUART, PROF. ANDOVER THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY, ANDOVER, MASS.

For a long time I neither knew or cared about the subject; but recent attention to it has filled me with astonishment; and as to some things contained in it, with horror. The trifling with oaths and with the awful name of the ever-blessed God, is a feature which I cannot contemplate, but with the deepest distrsss.

Dr. Fisch of Paris, says: The church in America must stand as one man against Masonry or be destroyed.

DONATION OF PHILO CARPENTER TO THE N. C. A.

Whereas I, the undersigned Philo Carpenter of Chicago, Illinois, desire to aid the "National Christian Association," a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Illinois, to oppose and counteract the influence of secret societies, by furnishing suitable head-quarters and accommodations for the transaction of its business, and I desire also to furnish an inducement to others to aid said Association.

Now this witnesseth, that for the purpose above mentioned, and in consideration of one dollar to me in hand paid by the said corporation, I do hereby covenant and agree with it, that if there shall, within one day from the first day of April next, be donated unto it the sum of ten thousand (10,000) dollars in money, or in good, negotiable, interest-bearing notes, I will, as soon as such donation shall be made, put said Corporation in full possession of the real estate and property hereinafter described, said Corporation to retain possession and receive the rents, issues, and profits thereof up to the first day of April, A. D. 1878, and it is also, during the term of such possession, to pay all current taxes and assessments, and it shall keep the building insured in my name and for my benefit.

And I furthermore covenant and agree that if the further sum of twenty thousand (20,000) dollars shall be donated to the said Corporation before the said first day of April, A. D 1878, in money, or in good, negotiable, interest-bearing notes, I will then, when said entire sum of thirty thousand (30,000) shall have been so donated in manner aforesaid, convey unto the said corporation by a good and sufficient Warranty Deed, the premises above mentioned and desribed as follows, viz.: Lot numbered twenty-eight (28) in block numbered fifty-three (53) in Carpenter addition to Chicago, in Chicago, in the county of Cook, and State of Illinois, and situated on West Madison street between Green and Peoria streets.

The value of this property, according to the estimation of myself and of the officers of the Corporation, is as follows, viz.: The lot thirteen thousand (13,000) dollars, the building and improvements seven thousand (7,000) dollars, total, twenty thousand (20,000) dollars.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal at Chicago this 12th day of March, A. D., 1875. PHILO CARPENTER. [Seal.]

State of Illinois, }
County of Cook, } s. s.
City of Chicago. }

I, John Phillips, a Notary Public in and for the said city of Chicago in said county in the State aforesaid do hereby certify that Philo Carpenter, personally known to me to be the same person whose name is subscribed to the foregoing Instrument appeared before me this day in person and acknowledged that he signed, sealed, and delivered the said Instrument as his free and voluntary act, for the uses and purposes therein set forth, including the release and waiver of the right of homestead.

Given under my hand and Notarial Seal this twelfth day of March, A. D. 1875.

JOHN PHILLIPS, Notary Public.

EXPOSITION
—OF—
THE GRANGE.

Illustrated with Engravings, showing the Lodge Room, Signals, Grips, etc.

EDITED BY REV. A. W. GEESLIN.

Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 1875,
BY EZRA A. COOK & CO.,
In the office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, D. C.

REMARKS ON LABORER'S DEGREE CONTINUED.

During their initiation they take upon themselves (without having read it before) a solemn obligation to do many things and among them never to reveal any of the secrets of the order. The obligation requires a helpful charity toward members of the Grange but imposes no obligation concerning outsiders, thus in seeking to establish a moral law, partially within the Grange, by implication, they are released from observing that law towards those outside of this mystic circle, so that instead of promoting general honesty such obligations operate as a general license to villainy." The penalty for violating this obligation is "to be forever disgraced among those who were my brothers and sisters." This penalty is evidently DESIGNED to organize a systematic course of malicious slander against all who, having once entered the Grange, for the sake of conscience, or from patriotic, or any other motives, are lead to use their influence against it.

Our last objection to the forgoing ritual must be of great weight with Christians and with all who approve of Christianity. The fact that an AGRICULTURALIST, A POST-OFFICE CLERK, A UNIVERSALIST MINISTER together with a few Masons and Odd-fellows, should prepare a ritual and require Christian farmers and their adult children to worship according to it and yet forbid their discussing religious topics in the society where that man-invented religion is taught, proves it to be a snare laid by "the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience," for the destruction of souls.

Men who are assembled for the purpose of discussing the best methods of enriching the soil or other agricultural topics, might reasonably object to remarks on religious subjects at their meeting. But if they are assembled for "intellectual and moral" advancement as they profess to be in the Grange, and are compelled to receive the instructions of a man-invented religious ritual and yet are prohibited from all discussion of religious topics they submit to a priest tyranny as absolute and degrading as any that the sun shines upon. They are instructed in the first degree that "happy is the man that findeth wisdom;" they are not admitted unless they are "traveling in search of light;" they are encouraged to expect the "instruction of WISDOM and not silver;"—they are assured that the faith which they exercise in passively submitting to the "secret ceremonies" of the "laborer degree" is emblematical of their faith in God; they are seriously told that their walk over a wooden stile, a board (professedly laid over a ditch), some round sticks of wood and a mattress, blindfolded, conducted by a man, is similar to the manner in which sensible men overcome the obstacles which Providence throws in their way; and as they succeeded in safely passing these obstructions, by a similar perseverance they may reach the paradise above. He is warned by Ceres never to "lose sight of preparations for that great harvest field in which he will sooner or later be garnered."

Thus a man, whatever his religious convictions, both in song and ceremony, must passively take the religion the Grange offers, while she coolly explains:

"For this is a kind of engagement you see,
Which is binding on you but not binding on me."

REMARKS ON CEREMONIES, MAID DEGREE.

The objections which arise to the degree of laborer will hold in condemnation of the degree of maid also. In this degree a part of the buffoonery of the preceding is omitted, but the passive degrading submission to a secret ritual is the same.

The obligation of the Maid is the same as that of Laborer and we object to it on the same grounds in the one case as in the other. The same proportion of religious hash, poorly seasoned, is served up in an insidious manner which Christians may well abhor.

CULTIVATOR, OR SECOND DEGREE FOR MEN.

Signal from Assistant Steward,

Steward to Overseer:—Worthy Overseer, an alarm at the gate.

Overseer to Steward:—See from whom it comes.

Steward:—Who seeks admission from without?

Assistant Steward to Steward:—Brothers who have labored in clearing the field and preparing the soil, now seek instruction in planting and cultivating.

Steward to Assistant Steward:—'Tis well; wait until I obtain our Worthy Overseer's permission.

Steward to Overseer:—Worthy Overseer, there are brothers in waiting who desire to be instructed in planting and cultivating.

Overseer to Steward:—Admit them, that we may learn their qualifications.

Steward opens door and says:—It is the will of our Worthy Overseer that they be brought before him.

They pass once around the hall and stop at Overseer. The following song is sung as Candidates enter.

SONG.

"Welcome, brothers, welcome ever
To our social, friendly band,
True and faithful nought can sever
Brothers pledged in heart and hand,
Whilst our order,
Reared in love, shall ever stand,
Whilst our order,
Reared in love, shall ever stand.

Overseer to Assistant Steward:—Whom bring you here?

Assistant Steward to Overseer:—Brothers who, having served faithfully as Laborers, seek promotion.

Overseer to Assistant Steward:—Are they honest, diligent and faithful?

Assistant Steward to Overseer:—They are honest with the brethren, faithful to their pledges, and diligent in their work.

Overseer to Assistant Steward:—A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast; are they kind and careful with their animals?

Assistant Steward to Overseer:—They are.

Overseer to Assistant Steward:—Order is heaven's first law. Do they keep their tools in their proper place, and take good care of them.

Assistant Steward to Overseer:—They do.

Overseer to Assistant Steward:—It is said of evil men, as a bowing wall shall ye be, and as a tottering fence. Have they given proper attention to their fences?

Assistant Steward to Overseer:—They have; their conduct is fenced with circumspection and they regard their neighbor's landmark.

Overseer to Assistant Steward:—By what further token are they distinguished?

Assistant Steward to Overseer:—By the sign of a thrifty farmer.

Overseer to Assistant Steward:—What is that?

Assistant Steward to Overseer:—Diligence in labor and attention to his own business.

Overseer to Candidates:—A diligent man shall prosper; he shall stand before kings, he shall not stand before mean men. Brothers, your recommendations are good; you will now be conducted to the Lecturer.

The following song is sung while passing from Overseer to Lecturer.

SONG.

"Oh come at the call,
There's work for all,
And a great reward for labor;
No work offends
Or want attends
The kind, true-hearted neighbor.
Then here to-day,
Our hearts so gay,
And heaven smiling o'er us,
We all unite,
With warm delight,
To sing the farmer's chorus.

Then come to the plain
Where the waving grain
Awaits us with our neighbor,
And the bounteous yield
Of the harvest field
Will repay us for our labor.
Then here to-day
Our hearts so gay,
And heaven smiling o'er us,
We all unite,
With warm delight,
To sing the farmer's chorus."

Assistant Steward to Lecturer:—Worthy Lecturer, our brothers, who are qualified, desire instructions in planting.

Lecturer to Assistant Steward:—Have they been furnished with seed?

Assistant Steward to Lecturer:—They have.

Lecturer to Assistant Steward:—From whom did they obtain it?

Assistant Steward to Lecturer:—When they were furnished with corn for their sustenance as laborers, they received the injunction to save a portion of the best for seed, and the admonition has been heeded.

Lecturer to Assistant Steward:—'Tis well. As laborers with the axe are their blows sturdy and true?

Assistant Steward to Lecturer:—They are; and their heaviest blows fall upon Ignorance and Superstition.

Lecturer to Assistant Steward:—As Plowmen, do they plow deep and keep their furrows straight?

Assistant Steward to Lecturer:—They do, and in deep study seek truth, and by straightforward conduct secure esteem.

Lecturer to Assistant Steward:—Are their lands properly drained?

Assistant Steward to Lecturer:—They are, and by careful inquiry they find prejudice removed.

Lecturer to Assistant Steward:—None have entered here with higher testimonials. Are they kind to the poor and lenient to all?

Assistant Steward to Lecturer:—Worthy Lecturer, we are forbidden to speak of our charitable acts, but taught, in giving alms not to let our left hand know what our right hand doeth.

Lecturer to Assistant Steward:—Right, Worthy Assistant, conduct them to our Worthy Chaplain that he may instruct them that charity is inculcated in our Order.

Assistant Steward to Chaplain:—Worthy Chaplain, we come to you for counsel.

Chaplain to Candidates:—Brothers, the springing seed teaches us benevolence; the growing trees teach kindness, and all the labors of the Husbandman and his surroundings beget refinement of feelings and kindly sentiments. In no occupation does a man's daily labor bring him in such close companionship with the Great Creator as in the cultivation of the soil. Be therefore free from selfishness. If thine enemy hunger feed him. Do good, hoping for nothing again and your reward shall be great. Love one another. Be charitable and impress on your heart the teachings of Paul, who said, "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge, and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. And though I give my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity it profiteth me nothing."

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

A Working Church—Read and Heed.

WHEATON, Ill., March 31, 1875.

The First church of Christ in Wheaton Ill., had six important objects, for which regular collections are taken up at intervals of two months. One on that list is the National Christian Association. The last subscription (taken up this year) for this cause, amounts to $371. 83 cents. We send you this report, hoping that some churches which have heretofore omitted this important object, may be led to do what they can unitedly for an Association so earnestly laboring to destroy the works of darkness, and to promote a pure Christianity.

M. A. BLANCHARD, Ch'n of Com on collections for N. C. A.

News of the Week.

The City.

Lake navigation has opened but there is little activity shown among the shipping. The low railroad freights will prevent many vessels leaving port until settled weather.——The sensation of last week was the imprisonment of Storey, editor and proprietor of the Times for "constructive contempt for ten days." The Grand Jury was finding bills against the Times, which retaliated with personal abuse of the jury and perhaps pointed out some actual failings in that body. Storey was released by a supersedess after ten hours in custody. The action of of the judge is generally condemned, and the Times has a great advertisement for its pestilential columns.

The Country.

The Massachusetts Legislature has passed a bill to regulate the sale of liquors, which prohibits the open sale of liquors over the bar, but provides for licenses in connection with hotels and restaurants. The law also dispenses with State police and seizures to enforce it.——Information has been received of outrages perpetrated by white scamps upon Sioux Indians on the Nebraska border. About a year ago they killed Whistler, a friendly chief. Last Fall they killed several Indians on the buffalo hunting ground, and now the same band of trappers and hunters, headed by the notorious Wild Bill, are stealing ponies from the Sioux by hundreds. A few days since seventy-five of these ponies were taken to Kansas and sold ——New York is greatly excited over the exposure of the Erie Canal ring by Gov. Tilden. Fraudulent contracts have been running for many years and payments made regularly. The Legislature was also bribed to cover the swindle.

Foreign.

There is prospect of peace in Spain. The Carlist forces are thinning out by desertion to a ruinous extent.—Eighty ecclesiastics are at present imprisoned in Posen, Germany, alone. It is rumored that the Government has arrested the Papal delegate who has been secretly administering the Archbishopric of Posen since the arrest of the incumbent.——It is anticipated that the old law forbidding intercourse between the Pope and the Catholic clergy in Prussia, except through the Government, will be re-enacted, and that measures will be introduced wholly suspending Papal authority in Prussia until the Pope abandons his pretentions o cancel the laws of the kingdom.—— The ceremony of conferring the title of Cardinal upon Archbishop Manning of England took plac last week, at Rome, in the Church o St. Gregory. The services were most imposing, and were witnessed by a large congregation, including 1,000 English and American Catholics.

Home and Health Hints.

Carpets.

There is no question, says a lady in the American Grocer, but the bare painted floors of a German or Swiss home make the air of a house much more healthful to breathe than the thickly-carpeted English or American ones. Think of the accumulation of a year's dust under, or in, the substance of a carpet; rising in an imperceptible cloud at every foot-fall, to be inhaled by the lungs of all the dwellers in the house. Few housekeepers think of raising their carpets more than once, or at the most, twice a year—and under the prevailing fashion of covering every jog and corner of floor, and nailing the whole down with a firm, solid line of tacks, it is too formidable a task to undertake, except at those heroic periods of a woman's history yclept house-cleaning. Of course in this climate we cannot do without our warm carpets, not to speak of the fact that we have become accustomed to the furnished look which a carpet gives, and could not easily renounce it.

A square of carpet which leaves bare a foot, or two feet of space along the sides of the wall for the chairs and furniture is quite as nice in effect, and has the advantage of being easily handled and shaken. Such a one, for an ordinary sized room, can be taken out of doors weekly or fortnightly, and hung upon the line, or laid upon the snow or grass, for a good sweeping or beating, and brings with it a sense of cleanliness, when it is again laid down, which is highly refreshing. The writer of this adopted this plan some ten years ago, and finds such comfort in it that she feels impelled to state some of its advantages.

First, then, there is the wholesomeness.

Secondly, saving of labor; a room covered with a square of carpet being much more easily kept clean than one entirely covered.

Thirdly, economy; as the amount of carpet which usually covers one floor, will in this case, nearly cover two.

And fourthly, the deliverance from annual or semi-annual house cleaning, which is so dreaded and so necessary in every household where carpets are nailed down and must be "taken up."

Of course the space of floor which is left uncovered should be painted, and it is a very good plan to paint it in stripes to imitate the floors laid of alternate pine or oak and black walnut. When the planks are of uniform width this effect can be produced by painting the half of every board (longitudinally) in dark brown, leaving the other half the natural color; if it is then oiled, a very poor floor will look well and be easily taken care of.

Care of Stove and Pipes.—When stoves are no longer needed, they are quite frequently set aside in an outbuilding, or other out of the way place, with no further thought, until again wanted for use. If neglected, the rust of the summer may injure them more than the whole winter's wear, particularly the parts made of sheet iron. They should be kept as free from dampness as possiole, and occasionally cleaned if rust is observed. Our plan has been to apply a coating of linseed oil to the pipes before putting them away. It should be done while the pipes are warm, but should be done thoroughly. It is not particular that it should be linseed oil—this being mentioned as the cheapest—almost any grease will answer.—Telegraph.

Receipt for Calcimining.—Take two pounds of Paris whiting, one ounce of white glue dissolved in warm water, mix the whiting with warm water and stir in the glue made thin with warm water.

Farm and Garden.

Prune Orchards.

Trees that are hardy may be pruned in midwinter, provided no large wounds are made. All orchards properly and timely attended to will rarely require the removal of large limbs. We often see recommendations to prune early in the summer, because the wounds heal rapidly at that time. That season may answer, providing the cutting is very sparingly performed, or provided the tree stands in a very rich soil and grows with great vigor. But early summer pruning always tends to check the thriftiness of trees, and if vigor of growth is desired, always prune before the buds begin to swell—either in winter or very early in spring; and if trouble is likely to occur from the flow of the sap, cover the wounds with paint, grafting wax, shellac varnish, or a mixture of tar and brick dust or road dust.

It often happens that the owner of large orchards cannot find time to do the work himself, and is unwilling to leave a hired man, who may have no experience or judgment in cutting away the right limbs. To obviate this difficulty, and to have the work done to his satisfaction, let him take a piece of chalk in his hand, and, going along the rows, draw a chalk-line at the base of every crooked, or crossing, or needless branch, and let his man follow with the saw and remove them.

Weeds.—Spring is one of the best times to kill certain biennial weeds. They start as early as the grass, and they are easily killed with a hoe. Go through the meadows and lanes, along the fences and over the grain fields, and cut or pull all such weeds as thistles, mulleins, wild teazles, daisies, wild parsnips and carrots, and many other plants now easily seen, but which will soon be concealed in the grass. Let docks alone; if cut they will make half a dozen shoots, which will break off when one tries to pull them; allow to grow until they are nearly ready to blossom, they may be pulled easily in wet weather, and destroy root and top.

Polishing Plows.—If those who wish to save themselves the trouble of polishing a rusty mould-board, will have recourse to muriatic acid, (quite a cheap article,) they will find that this acid will not touch the iron, but will render the rust soluble and easily removed. I would not advise allowing the surface to remain moist with any acid twenty-four hours. Muriatic acid will do the work in five minutes, and should be either washed off or cleansed by running through the soil without delay.—Farm Journal.

Evergreens.—The whole growth of evergreens for the year takes place in about fifteen to twenty days, last of April and first of May or June, in the North, according to locality, &c. If they are transplanted just as the new growth commences for the year, with ordinary care they will live as readily as apple trees. When the new growth for the year commences, the tree is the most vigorous, and, of course, will bear transplanting best. I have seen small Norway spruces and balsams make eight or ten inches growth the same season, when moved at the right time; while those moved only a few days too late or too early spent about a year in dying, but generally succeeded in discouraging their owners in trying to 'raise evergreens."—Tribune.

ANTI-MASONIC BOOKS,

(Not our own Publications.)

For Sale by EZRA A. COOK & CO

13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

[FOR CATALOGUE OF PUBLICATIONS OF EZRA A. COOK & CO., See page 15.]

All books sent post paid, on receipt of retail price, but BOOKS SENT BY MAIL ARE NOT AT OUR RISK.

Books ordered by express are sold at 10 per cent. discount and SENT AT OUR RISK. Party ordering must pay express charges.

Elder Stearns' Books.

Stearns' Inquiry Into the Nature and Tendency of Masonry

With an Appendix.

SEVENTH EDITION.

338 Pages, in Cloth.....60 cents.
" " " Paper.....40 "

Stearns' Letters on Masonry.

Showing the antagonism between Freemasonry and the Christian Religion,
Price, 30 cents.

Stearns' Review of Two Masonic Addresses.

In this scathing review the lying pretentions of the order are clearly shown.
Price, 10 cents.

Levington's Key to Masonry.

This is Rev. Mr. Levington's last, and in the judgment of its author, best work on Masonry. The contents of the first chapter are as follows:

"Commencement and growth of Speculative or Symbolic Freemasonry—A table showing the thing at a glance—The use that the Atheists made of it—Identical with Illuminism—Its connection with the French Revolution, and with the Irish Rebellion—The action of the British Parliament with regard to it—Proofs of its diabolical purposes—Its Introduction, doings, progress and designs in the United States."

The contents of the Eleventh chapter are thus startling:

"Knights of the Golden Circle—Graphic account of them by a seceding Knight, and remarks thereon, showing the identity of the order with Masonry—Quotations from Sir Walter Scott."

This work is thrilling in statement, and powerful in argument. 425 pages,
Price $1.35.

Light on Freemasonry.

BY ELDER D. BERNARD,

TO WHICH IS APPENDED A

Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship by a Member of the Craft.

The whole containing over five hundred pages lately revised and republished. Price $2.00

The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages in paper cover, will be sent post paid on receipt of $1.

MASONRY A WORK OF DARKNESS

ADVERSE TO CHRISTIANITY,

And Inimical to a Republican Government

By REV. LEBBEUS ARMSTRONG,

(Presbyterian.)

A Seceding Mason of 21 degrees.

This is a very telling work and no honest man that reads it will think of joining the lodge.
PRICE, 20 cents each; $1.75 per doz., post paid

Walsh's Review of Freemasonry

REVISED EDITION,

Is a Scholarly Review of the Institution, by Rev JNO. T. WALSH.

Price 25 cts.

Finney on Masonry.

BOUND IN CLOTH, PRICE $1.00,

CHEAP EDITION,

Twenty-five dollars per hundred, by express and not less than 25 copies at that rate.

BY MAIL, POST-PAID:

Per doz.....$3 75.
Single copy,..... 35 c.

THIRTEEN REASONS

Why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

BY

REV. ROBERT ARMSTRONG.

The author states his reason clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the Lodge.

Single copy, by mail post paid..... 05
Per doz., " " 50
" 100, express charges extra.....3 50

Masonic Books,

FOR SALE AT THE CYNOSURE OFFICE.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

Allyn's Ritual of Masonry,

Illustrated by a large number of engravings, and containing a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, Orange and Odd-fellows' societies. Price, $5.00.

Mackey's Masonic Ritualist;

OR

MONITORIAL INSTRUCTION BOOK

BY ALBERT G. MACKEY,

"Past General High Priest of the General Grand Chapter of the United States, Knight of the Eagle and Pelican, Prince of Mercy," Etc. Etc.

Price, $1 75

Mackey's Lexicon of Freemasonry,

Containing a Definition of Terms, Notices of its History, Traditions and Antiquities, and an account of all the Rites and Mysteries of the Ancient World. 12 mo. 526 pages, $3 00.

MACKEY'S MANUAL OF THE LODGE,

OR

Monitorial Instructions in the Degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft, and Master Mason; with Ceremonies relating to Installations, Dedications, Consecrations, Laying of Corner-stones &c. Price, $1 00.

Paper Covers 2.00.

MACKEY'S TEXT BOOK

OF

MASONIC JURISPRUDENCE.

Illustrating the Laws of Freemasonry, both written and unwritten.

This is the Great Law Book of Freemasonry 570 pages. Price, $2.50

Webb's Monitor of Freemasonry,

LARGE EDITION, WITH NOTES

By ROB. HORRIS, Price, $1.50.
Pocket Edition, 75 cts.

SICKELS' FREEMASON'S MONITOR.

Containing the Degrees of Freemasonry embraced in the Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery, embellished with nearly 300 symbolic Illustrations. Together with Tactics and drill of Masonic Knighthood. Also, forms of Masonic Documents, Notes, Songs, Masonic dates, installations, etc. By D. Sickels, 32 mo uck. Price $1.50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry,

A Practical Guide to the Ceremonies in the Degrees conferred in Masonic Lodge Chapter, Encampments, etc. Illustrated Edition. In cloth, $1 25; paper, 75 cts.

Chase's Digest of Masonic Law.

Comprises a Complete Code of Regulations, Decisions and Opinions upon Questions of Masonic Jurisprudence. Price, $2 25.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor

Illustrated with Explanatory Engravings Price $2.50.

Books on Odd Fellowship.

Donaldson's Odd Fellow's Text Book, By Pasonal Donaldson, D. D.,

GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF NORTHERN N. Y.,

Illustrated with numerous engravings, showing the emblems of the order. A detailed account of the Forms, Ceremonies, Funeral Services and Odes with music, and a complete mannal for the guidance of Officers and Lodges. Pocket edition Tuck, $1.50.

Grosh's Manual of Odd Fellowship

BY REV. A. B. GROSH,

Containing the history, defence, principles and government of the order; the instructions of arch degree and duties of every station and office with engravings of the emblems of the orders, etc
Price in Cloth,.....$2 00
" Tuck, abridged edition, 1 50

Descriptive Catalogue of Publications of Ezra A. Cook & Co.

13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

BOOKS.

FREEMASONRY EXPOSED,

by CAP'T. WILLIAM MORGAN.

THE GENUINE OLD MORGAN BOOK:—republished with engravings showing the Lodge Room, Dress of candidates, Signs, Due Guards, Grips, Etc.

This revelation is so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. Thousands have testified to the correctness of the revelation and this book therefore sells very rapidly.

Price 25 cents.

Per Doz. Post Paid..... $2.00
Per hundred by express, (express charges extra.).....$10.00

ODD FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

A complete exposition of the Lodge Encampment and Rebecca (Ladies') Degree. The Signs, Grips, &c., shown by engravings.

Single copy, post paid,..... $ 25
Per Doz., " " 2 00
Per Hundred, Express charges extra,..... 10 00

EXPOSITION OF THE GRANGE.

EDITED BY REV. A. W. GEESLIN.

Illustrated with Engravings showing Lodge Room, Signs, Signals, etc, NOW IN PRESS; will be completed about June 1st.

All orders for 10 or more copies, with Cash, received before June 1st. will be filled at 100-rates.

Single Copy, post paid..... $ 25
Per Doz., " " 2 00
Per 100 Express charges extra..... 10 00

Judge Whitney's Defense Before the Grand Lodge of Ill.

Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the Lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the Lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry.

Single Copy, post paid..... $ 20
Per Doz. " " 1 50
Per 100, Express charges extra..... 8 00

THE BROKEN SEAL.

OR PERSONAL REMINISCENCES OF THE ABDUCTION AND MURDER OF Wm. MORGAN,

By SAMUEL D. GREENE,

Price in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

In Paper Covers per Doz. Post paid.....$4 50
" per hundred by express (ex. charges extra $25.00

That the book is one of great interest and value is shown by the following

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"A MASONIC REVELATION.—Mr. Samuel D. Greene is a venerable gentleman of the highest respectability, whose statements seem to be worthy of full credence. The Broken Seal; or, Personal Reminiscences of the Morgan Abduction and Murder, is the title of a book of some three hundred pages just issued by him, purporting to give a full and accurate account, from personal knowledge, of the Morgan 'abdnction,' and other masonic matters which made such an excitement in this country, now almost half a century ago."—Congregationalist and Recorder, Boston.

"We are acquainted with Mr. Greene. and have no doubt that his account is entirely reliable, and of great historic and moral interest. Capt. Wm. Morgan was Mr. Greene's neighbor in Batavia, N. Y.,, and a member of the same lodge with him at the time of the great excitement in 1826. The titles to these chapters are sufficiently exciting to give the book a large sale:—"The Storm Gathering;" "Abduction of Morgan;" "Attempted Abduction of Miller and his Rescue;" "What became of Morgan;" "What Morgan Actually Revealed;" "Confession of the Murderer;" "Allegations against Freemasonry, etc."—Boston Daily News.

History of The Abduction and Murder of Cap't. Wm. Morgan,

As preparcd by Seven Committees of Citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan.

This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons, abducted and Murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offence than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife, and no candid person after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable FREEMASONS. in the Empire State, with others were concerned in this crime.

Single Copy, post Paid,... ..... 25 cents.
Per doz. " ..... $2.00.
Per 100, Express Charges Extra,..... 10.00.

Valance's Confession of The Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.

This confession of Henry L. Valancc, one of the three Freemasons who drowned Morgan, in the Niagara River, was taken from the lips of the dying man by Dr. John C. Emery, of Racine County, Wisconsin in 1848; The confession bears clear evidence of truthfulness.

Single copy, post paid,..... 20cents.
Per doz. " ..... $1.50.
Per 100 Express Charges Extra,..... 8.00.

The Mystic Tie or Freemasonry a League with the Devil.

This is an account of the Church Trial of Peter Cook, and wife of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a Reverend Freemason; and their very able defence presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry, is antagonistic to the Christian Religion. Single Copy, post paid,..... 20 cents
Per dozen, post paid..... $1 50
Per hundred Express charges Extra, ... 9 00

NARRATIVES AND ARGUMENTS,

showing the Conflict of Secret Societies with the Constitution and Laws, of the Union and of the States.

by FRANCIS SEMPLE of Dover, Iowa.

The fact that Socret Societies, interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of Law is here clearly proved. price 20c.

Per dozen, post paid..... $1 75
Per hnndred Express charges Extra..... 9 00

The Antimason's Scrap Book,

CONSISTING OF

21 CYNOSURE TRACTS.

In this book are the views of more than a Score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the snbject of Secret Societies.

The dangerous tendency and positive evil of organized Secrecy is here shown by the most varied and powerful arguments and illustrations that have ever been given to the public.

Lectnrers and others who wish to find the best arguments against the Lodge, should send for this book.

Those who wish to circulate Antimasonic Tracts ought to have the book to select from.

Single Copy, post paid, ...20 cents.
Per Doz. " $1.75
Per 100, Express charges Extra,.....$10.00

PHELPS' SECRET SOCIETIES Ancient and Modern.

A NEW BOOK OF GREAT INTEREST.

This work is particularly commended to the attention of Officers of The Army and Navy, The Bench and The Clergy.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

"THE ANTIQUITY OF SECRET SOCIETIES, THE LIFE OF JULIAN, THE ELEUSINIAN MYSTERIES, THE ORIGIN OF MASONRY, WAS WASHINGTON A MASON? FILMORE'S AND WEBSTER'S DEFERENCE TO MASONRY, A BRIEF OUTLINE OF THE PROGRESS OF MASONRY IN THE UNITED STATES, THE TAMMANY RING, MASONIC BENEVOLENCE, THE USES OF MASONRY, AN ILLUSTRATION, THE CONCLUSION."

Single Copy, Post Paid..... 50
Per Doz " " " $4 75
Per Hundred, Express Charges Extra.....$33 00

MINUTES OF THE SYRACUSE CONVENTION,

Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. D. Greene, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. S. D. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. Unpnblished Reminiscences of the Morgan Times, by Elder David Bernard; Recollections of the Morgan Trials, as related by Victory Birdseye, Esq., and presented by his daughter, Mrs. C. B. Miller; Secretary's report; roll of delegates; songs of Mr. G. A. Clark; paper by Enoch Honeywell; Constitution N. C. A.; reports of committees, and a report of the political meeting.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion.

A clear cutting argument against the Lodge, from a Christian stand point.

Single Copy..... $ 05
Per 100..... 3 00

SERMON ON MASONRY,

BY REV. W. P. M'NARY.

Pastor United Presbyterian Church, Bloomington, Ind.

This is a very clear, thorough, candid and remarkably consice Scriptural argument on the character of Freemasonry.

Single Copy, Post Paid,..... 5
Per Doz,..... 50
Per Hnndred, Express Charges Extra.....$3 00

COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES.

Their Customs, Character and the Efforts for their Suppression.

BY H. L. KELLOGG.

Containing the opinion of many rominent College Presidents, and. others, and a FULL ACCOUNT OF THE MURDER OF MORTIMER LEGGETT

Single Copy, post paid..... $ 35
per Doz " " 2 50
per 100Express charges extra..... 15 00

ANTIMASONIC TRACTS.

WE NOW HAVE 22 ENGLISH TRACTS, ONE GERMAN, AND ONE SWEEDISH

These tracts are sold at the rate of $1.00 per 1000 pages.

A Tract Fund for the Free Distribution of Tracts.

HAS BEEN SECURED AND WE HOPE WILL NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fnnd a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE.

Many of our most ea rnest workers in this cause of God are poor men, who would be glad to circulate thousands of pages of Antimasonic literature if they could have them free.

SHALL WE NOT HAVE AN INEXHAUSTIBLE TRACT FUND?

"THE ANTI-MASONS SCRAP BOOK."

Contains our 21 Cynosure Tracts, bound together, price 20 cents. See advertisement.

Address EZRA A. COOK & Co., 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

TRACT NO. 1:

HISTORY OF MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT J. BLANCHARD, OF WHEATON COLLEGE.

This is now published in three tracts of four pages each. Price of each, 50 cents per 100; $4 per 1000.

TRACT No. 1, PART FIRST—Shows the origin of Speculative Freemasonry, and is entiled "HISTORY OF MASONRY."

TRACT No. 1, PART SECONN—Is entitled "DESPOTIC CHARACTER OF FREEMASONRY"

TRACT No. 1, PART THIRD—Is entitled "FREEMASONRY A CHRIST-EXCLUDING RELIGION."

TRACT NO. 1, IN SWEDISH;

translated by Prof. A. R. CERVIN. A 15-page tract at $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 2:

MASONIC MURDER,

By REV. J. R. BAIRD, of Pleasantville, Pa., a seceding Mason who has taken 17 degrees. A 2-page tract at 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 3:

SECRETS OF MASONRY,

BY ELI TAPLEY.

This is a 4-page Illustrated Tract, showing the signs, grips and pass-words, of the first three degrees. 50 cents per 100, or $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 4:

GRAND! GREAT GRAND!!

BY PHILO CARPENTER.

This is a 2-page tract, calling the attention of the public to the despotic and ridiculous titles of Freemasonry. Price 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1,000.

TRACT. NO, 5:

Extracts From Masonic Oaths and Penalties, as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.

This tract is a reprint of a tract published in 1834, and is a very weighty document. A 4-page tract at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 6:

Hon. John Quincy Adams' Letter.

Giving His and His Father's Opinion of Freemasonry (1831.);

AND

Hon. James Madison's Letter,

Giving His Opinion of Freemasonry (1832).

Both of these letters, in one 4-page tract, at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 7:

SATAN'S CABLE-TOW.

A 4-page tract. This is a careful analysis of the character of Masonic oaths, and shows them to be most blasphemous and unchristian; and the Masonic Cable Tow is clearly shown to be the Cable Tow by which Satan is leading thousands to eternal death. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 8:

Is a 2-page double tract, "ILLUSTRATED." The first page represents a Mason proclaimimg the wonderful wisdom and benevolence of the order, with an article below, entitled "Freemasonry is only 152 Years Old," and gives the time and place of its birth.

The second side is entitled, "Murder and Treason not Excepted," and shows that the Masonic order is treasonable in its constitution, and is both anti-Republican and anti-Christian. Price 25 cents per 100; $2 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 9, ILLUSTRATED:

FREEMASONRY IN THE CHURCH.

Copy of a petition for the higher degrees of Freemasonry, in which Blasphemous and Despotic Titles are enumerated and prayed for. The Copy was printed for the use of "Occidental Sovereign Consistory S. P. R. S.," 32d degree—a Chicago Lodge—and was ordered by a deacon of a Christian Church who is Grand Orator of the Grand Lodge of Ill.

TRACT NO. 10:

CHARACTER AND SYMBOLS OF FREEMASONRY.

A 2-page tract, (ILLUSTRATED) by its "Grand Secretaries, Grand Lecturers, Perfect Prince Freemasons, Grand Inspector, Inquisitor Commanders, Grand High Priests," etc. The wonderful symbolical meaning of "the Cable Tow," "the Square and Compass," "the Lamb Skin, or white Apron,' ' and "the Common Gavel," are given in the exact words of the highest Masonic authority. 25 conts per 100 or $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 11;

Address of Niagara County Association, New York.

TO THE PUBLIC;

Concerning the Morgan Murder, and the character of Freemasonry, as shown by this and other Masonic murders. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 12:

JUDGE WHITNEY AND MASONRY.

This tract contains a condensed account of Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois, on charge of unmasonic conduct in bringing Samuel L. Keith the murderer of Ellen Slade, and a member of his Lodge, to justice, with Judge Whitney's subsequent renunciation of Masonry,

An 8-page tract, $1.00 per 100; $8.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 13:

DR. NATHANIEL COLVER ON MASONRY,

and

HOWARD CROSBY, D. D.,

Chancellor of the University of New York, on SECRET SOCIETIES. A double 2-page tract 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 14:

GRAND LODGE MASONRY.

ITS RELATION TO CIVIL GOVERNMENT AND THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION.

Opening address before the Monmouth Convention, by PRES. J. BLANCHARD of WHEATON COLLEGE. This is a 16-page tract at $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 15:

MASONIC OATHS NULL AND VOID.

A clear and conclusive argument proving the invalidity of any oath or obligation to do evil. By REV. I. A. HART, Secretary National Christian Association. Published by special order of the Association. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 16:

HON. SETH M. GATES ON FREEMASONRY.

PROOF THAT THE INSTITUTION THAT MURDERED MORGAN IS UNCHANGED IN CHARACTER

This is a letter to the Monmouth Convention by Hon. Seth M. Gates who was Deputy Sheriff of Genesee County, and also Secretary of the Leroy Lodge at the time of Morgan's Abduction. A 4-page tract, 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 17:

Origin, Obligations and Expenses of The Grange.

WITH A CONSTITUTION OF A FARMERS' CLUB.

This little tract ought to be put into the hands of every Farmer in the United States. Four-page tract, 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 18:

HON. WM. H. SEWARD ON SECRET SOCIETIES.

Extracts from a Speech on Know-Nothingism in the U. S. Senate in 1855.

The testimony of JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, MILLARD FILLMORE, CHIEF JUSTIC MARSHALL and others, is added.

A 2-page tract, 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO, 19.

BRICKS FOR MASONS TO LAY.

WASHINGTON, MADISON, MARSHALL, RUSH, HANCOCK, ADAMS AND WEBSTER, give brief clear testimony against the Lodge A 2-page tract 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 20:

OBJECTIONS TO MASONRY.

By A SECEDING MASON, of Cornton, Vermont.

This tract contains many strong arguments against the Lodge drawn from personal experience, observation and study of its character. A 4-page tract at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

TRACT NO. 21:

MASONIC CHASTITY.

BY EMMA A. WALLACE,

The author, by wonderfully clear illustration and argument, shows the terribly corrupt nature of Freemasonry. No true woman who reads this will ever speak with approbation of this institution A 4-page tract 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

GERMAN CYNOSURE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason

By REV. A. GROLE, Pastor, German M. E. Chur

WORCESTER, MASS.

This is our first German tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. Price 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

ENOCH HONEYWELL'S TRACT

TO THE YOUNG MEN OE AMERICA. Postage, 3 cents per 100. Tracts. Tracts Free.

Publishers' Department.

COLPORTEURS.

The spring and summer will be full of meetings, patriotic meetings, secret society assemblies, and conventions to consider religious interests, also numerous college commencements. For instance on the 19th of April next, there is to be a large celebration at Lexington, Mass. On the third Wednesday in May Presbyterian Synods meet at Wooster, Ohio, and at Coulterville, Illinois. The Congregationalists of Illinois meet in Peoria, May 25th. On the twenty-fourth of June the Masonic temple in New York is to be dedicated. These are only samples of the numerous assemblies which will convene at intervals during the spring and summer.

On many of these occasions the assembled people would be glad of an opportunity to purchase Anti-masonic books and we desire very much to have enterprising agents, who understand the business, to have an assortment of our books to sell.

At Lexington and at the dedication of the Masonic Temple in New York, Gen. Phelp's book on secret societies would undoubtedly be a popular book to sell if well presented; also The Broken Seal and other of our publications. Are there any friends of this reform who will take books to sell at either of these places, who can devote sufficient time to the business to make a success of it? Any who would like to undertake the work of selling books at these or other places are requested to correspond with Ezra A. Cook & Co., Publishers.

At the Commencement exercises in colleges where secret societies are permitted, the pamphlet on "College Secret Societies" ought to have a large sale and the profits might aid some of the students in defraying their expenses. After Anti masonic conventions or lectures our books are almost always in demand.

Tracts can be advantageously distributed on such occasions and we hope that friends of our cause who live in the vicinity of New York will be sure to have multitudes of "Bricks for Masons to lay," and other tracts distributed among the spectators who attend the dedication of the Masonic Temple on the twenty-fourth of June.

THE CYNOSURE.

Are you going to increase the circulation of the Cynosure this month? Does your pastor take it? do the lawyers, physicians, farmers and other tax-payers take it? Do all the mothers who have promising sons and daughters to instruct take the paper? Have you requested them to do so? Read the paper carefully yourself before you go out to canvass. Take, for instance, the number issued on April first. On the first page you find Rowdyism in State Legislatures, Andrew Johnson's Record, and the Cardinal McClosky vigorously reviewed, and the concluding article from a Royal Arch Mason which is a masterly production written by the former Master of a Chicago lodge. "The coming Political Party" is an article in which every loyal citizen must be interested in reading. D. F. Newton follows with his spicy, brief, strong sentences on "No Enemies." Then comes the "Reform News" showing progress in our great reform; a comprehensive article on the Prince of Wales from one of his loyal subjects. Then a suggestive article from a minister followed by "Our Mail" which everybody is interested in. The Sabbath-school lesson and a significant list of facts about Popery which should be saved for reference. A wonderful editorial on Henry Ward Beecher, Notes, carefully prepared, clear and valuable. A valuable letter fresh from Florida is found in the family department; the children have a notable, original letter from California. The exposition of the Grange comes in for all interested in the welfare of agriculturalists to read. This is a brief mention of the contents of one paper only, but we know that the general verdict of all who read the paper is that it merits the perusal and patronage of all thoughtful readers throughout the country.

Can you obtain one new subscription this week?

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED DURING WEEK ENDING APRIL 3, FROM—Mrs. S B Allen, J Adams, A Acker, N W Allen, M Brackbill, J Barningham, M R Britten, J Bowie, C Cogswell, C Cowles, L L Cooper, J P Coulter, H Cole, J Collins, A C Daugherty, S H Davidson, W Depue, P S Feemster, C G Fait, J W Funk, C F A Gantzckow, W Gassett, J Garn, Halsey Hulburt, Emma Howard, E Hays, F A Herring, M W Holt, M Kelley, J W Knowles, F B McCormick, J Miller, A Musselman, J Morris, Mrs. R M Millard, L Montieth, J Miller, M H McCormick, D Patterson, J O Risheil, L Reynolds, G O Robinson, G Surface, J P Stoddard, P C Stone, A Thompson, J W Turner, O B Worth, Laura Thompson, P Woodrieg, R R Wilcox, R T Wylie, Chas. Wright, B Webster.

PREMIUM CHESTER WHITE PIGS.—$15 each, $28 a pair. Chester County MAMMOTH CORN, and Imported BELGIAN OATS. 4 lbs by mail, $1; peck $2; ½ bushel $3; bushel $5. Circulars and Sample Packages of Seeds Free for 2 stamps. Address,
N. P. BOYER, Parkersburg, Chester Co., Pa.

MARKET REPORTS

CHICAGO, April 5, 1875.

The following are the latest advices:

Grain Wheat—Spring, No. 1..	$	1 01½
" No. 2.....	95½	98
" No. 3.....	92½	93
" Rejected.....	84½	85
Corn—No. 2.....		70½
Rejected.....	68	69
Oats—No. 2.....	57½	59½
Rejected.....	54	54½
Rye—No. 2.....	1 03	1 05
Flour—Winter.....	4 50	6 75
Spring.....	3 50	4 75
Hay—Timothy.....	16 00	19 00
Prairie, "	13 50	17 50
Lard.....		14½
Mess pork, per bbl.....		18 00
Butter.....	17	31
Cheese.....	10	18
Eggs.....	22	24
Potatoes, per bus.....	95	1 20
Broom corn.....	06	14
Seeds—Timothy.....	2 15	2 45
Clover.....	6 30	6 40
Flax.....	2 07	2 25
Chickens, dressed, per lb.....	9	11
Turkeys, do. per lb.....	10	12½
HIDES green to dry salted.....	07	15
Lumber—Clear.....	37 00	55 00
Common.....	11 00	12 00
Lath.....		2 25
Shingles.....	1 50	3 25
WOOL—Washed.....	40	58
Unwashed.....	27	37
LIVE STOCK Cattle, extra....	6 40	6 90
Good to choice.....	5 50	6 25
Medium.....	5 00	5 50
Common.....	3 50	4 75
Hogs,.....	6 50	9 00
Sheep.....	3 50	6 50

New York Market.

Flour.....	$ 4 50	8 00
Wheat.....	1 14	1 41
Corn.....	87	88
Oats.....	72	75
Rye.....	90	1 00
Lard.....		14¾
Mess pork.....		22 00
Butter.....	15	22
Cheese.....	12	16
Eggs.....	21	21½

TERMS FOR THE CYNOSURE.

$2.00 per annum, in advance.
20c " " " for postage.

All who canvass for the CYNOSURE are allowed a cash commission of twenty per cent. or twenty-five per cent in books at retail prices, one-half this percentage on renewals, and any one sending $100. for the CYNOSURE during three months, will be entitled to an extra five per cent.

All responsible persons who desire to promote this reform are authorized to act as agents.

CLUB RATES.

No commission is allowed on club rates. Club rates are intended for those who wish to give the commission to subscribers.

Subscriptions may all be sent at one time, or at different times, and in all cases the sender should keep an account of the names and amounts sent.

CLUB RATES, INCLUDING POSTAGE.

Two new subscriptions, one year.....						$3.90
One new subscription and one renewal, sent ten days before expiration of subscription,						3.90
4 new subs., 1 year., 1 copy free to sender,						8.75
5 " "	1 "	1 "	"	.....		10.50
6 " "	"	"	"	.....		12.25
7 " "	"	"	"	.....		14.00
8 " "	"	"	"	.....		15.75
10 " "	"	"	"	.....		19.50
20 " "	"	"	"	.....		36.00
10 Renewals "	"	"	"	.....		22.00
50 " "	"	"	"	.....		85.00

Twenty subscriptions for six months count the same as ten for a year.

How to Send Money.

Post office orders, checks or drafts on Chicago or towns east of Chicago, and currency by express may be sent at our risk. If it is not possible to send by either of the four ways named, money in a registered letter may be sent at our risk, but it is not as safe.

The date at which subscriptions expire is with each subscriber's name on the address label. Send renewals before this date occurs. Notice if this date is changed to correspond; if not or if the paper fails to come, write without delay.

We discontinue during the first part of each month all subscriptions which expire during the preceding one except such as are ordered continued with a promise to forward the money soon. We do not like to lose a single subscriber and will not remove names simply because the cash is not received promptly, if we understand that the paper is wanted. Address all letters with subscriptions or orders for Books, Tracts and donations to the Tract Fund to EZRA A. COOK & Co., 13 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1	square, 1 insertion,			$2.00
1	square (1 inch deep)	one month		7.00
1	" "	2	"	10.00
1	" "	3	"	15.00
1	" "	6	"	25.00
1	" "	12	"	40.00

Discount for Space.

On 2 squares 5 per cent, On 3 squares 10 per cent
On 4 " 15 " " On 5 " 20 "
On ¼ col. 25 per cent On one col. 30 per cent

Postage on the Cynosure.

THE POSTAGE ON THE CYNOSURE MUST BE PAID AT CHICAGO. It is twenty cents a year.

The cost of postage now depends entirely on the size and weight, and therefore some smaller papers charge but fifteen cents; and others about the size of the Cynosure charge twenty-five cents a year for postage.

If the subscription price of the CYNOSURE was $2.50 or $3.00 a year, the price of many religious papers containing no more reading matter, we might afford to pay the postage ourselves, but at $2.00 a year we cannot do this with our present Subscription list.

Therefore let all send the postage, 20 cents a year, 10 cents for half a year with their renewals.

The commission on one new subscription for a year will pay the postage on your own and the new subscriber's paper. We would rather have the postage paid by commissions than in any other way.

When postage is not paid we shall have to shorten the time of subscription sufficiently to pay it.

ESTABLISHED 1868.

EZRA A. COOK & CO.,

STEAM

PRINTERS,

Lithographers,

STATIONERS

—AND—

Book Binders.

NOS. 7, 9, 11 & 13

Wabash Avenue, Chicago.

We were in the Stationery, Printing and Lithographing business before the Cynosure was started.

WE LITHOGRAPH

Business Cards, Letter Heads, Note Heads, Bill Heads, Circulars, Checks, Drafts, Certificates of Stock, Certificates of Deposit, Plats and Charts; also elegant Diplomas for Colleges, Literary Societies, and Agricultural Societies, in one, two or three Colors. Samples and Prices sent on Application.

WE PRINT

Books,
Pamphlets,
Catalogues, Business Cards, Show Cards, Letter Heads, Bill Heads, Note Heads, Circulars, Hand Bills, Posters, Checks, Drafts Notes, Certificates of Deposit, Certificates of Stock, Diplomas, etc.,

IN THE BEST STYLE,

at the

LOWEST MARKET RATES.

WE FILL ORDERS PROMPTLY, and

GUARANTEE GOOD WORK.

SPECIAL ATTENTION GIVEN TO ORDERS

BY MAIL.

Samples and prices sent promptly when desired.

Address:

EZRA A. COOK & CO.,
7, 9, 11 & 13 Wabash Avenue,
CHICAGO

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

"In Secret Have I Said Nothing."—Jesus Christ.

EZRA A. COOK & CO., PUBLISHERS, NO 13 WABASH AVENUE.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 15, 1875.

VOL. VII., NO. 27.—WHOLE NO. 262. WEEKLY, $2 00 A YEAR.

Contents.

	Page
TOPICS OF THE TIME	1
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
Ex-Bishop Kumler and the Y. M. C. A.	8
What shall be our Name?	8
What are Bismark and Gladstone at?	8
The Bible Cast out of School	9
Notes	9
CONTRIBUTED AND SELECT ARTICLES:
Manhood Pulverized	1
Masonic Acquaintance	2
George Trask	2
The Jesuits	3
Masonic Conspiracy—V	3
REFORM NEWS and NOTICES:
From the Indiana Agent; The Western Missouri Work	4, 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
Reforming the Churches; Suggestions and Encouragement; Not Fair on the Masons; From a Seceding M. E. Minister in Northern New York; Open Benefit Societies; Our Mail	5, 6
FORTY YEARS AGO; An Able Argument for Free Inquiry	7
Exposition of the Grange (Continued)	12
History of the Reform against Secret Orders	14
THE HOME CIRCLE	10
CHILDREN'S CORNER	11
The Sabbath School	7
Home and Health Hints	14
Farm and Garden	14
Religious Intelligence	9
News of the Week	12
Publishers' Department	16

Topics of the Time.

A week or two since a tornado raged through the central counties of Georgia, leaving in its path hundreds of mangled dead and thousands of wrecked homes. The blast swept the broad acres as the fire swept Chicago, and seems to compel a like acknowledgement of Divine justice. The country devastated includes some of the worst Ku Klux sections of the State, and a deep impression is left that this visitation is of God because of barbarity and violence. It is according to Scripture that if the people do not punish wicked doers and avenge bloodshed, God will punish the people.

The municipal authorities of New York and Philadelphia are not without some regard for the Sabbath, frequent as have been the abuses of that day. The Catholic Irish in each of these cities appointed a procession in honor of John Mitchell, the Irish agitator, renegade and Fenian, to march on the Sabbath, but Mayors Wickham and Stokely respectively vetoed the proceeding as contrary to law and the good order of the day. The influence of the priests probably had some effect in New York. They have little friendship for the Fenian movement, and in their struggle for the school fund are not anxious to arouse needless opposition. Mitchell was banished from Great Britain years ago, and escaped to this country where he became a naturalized citizen and a hot rebel in the late war. Lately returning to Ireland he attempted to get into Parliament by election from county Tipperary; was elected, and refused a seat by special vote of Parliament. The stubborn Emeralders, however, elected him again, but at this juncture Mitchell died, and this strange dispute summarily ended.

The Lower House of the Illinois Legislature made a record last week that the State should repudiate with emphasis. Soon after the death of Stephen A. Douglas a proposition was made by individuals to erect a monument to his memory near the University in the south part of Chicago. The foundation was begun, and the corner-stone laid by Andrew Johnson, then accidentally President of the United States, but with ceremonies odious to American taste and simplicity, and as well to sincere piety. Whether or no these rites excited popular disgust against the work itself, it remains to-day about as the Masonic fiasco left it, and an effort to obtain a legislative appropriation has also failed. But so far as the Legislature is concerned the loyalty of Douglas himself has cost him a monument The negro-hating majority of that body painfully called to mind the noble stand of the Democratic leader, which carried that party with him heartily into the Union ranks. That action they refused to endorse, even by voting a monument. The memory of Douglas will not be greatly dishonored, however, if it fails to be perpetuated by such a rabble.

New York has a school-war; the Catholics as usual the attacking party. The trustees of their parochial schools have applied to the Board of Education for a portion of the public funds raised by general taxation. The application is based on the pretense that these schools are free to the public as any other. The papists no doubt expect a defeat this time, for both State and municipal law forbid such a use of public funds, and the citizens, more wary than in times of Tammany rule, are vigorously petitioning against the appropriation. Under Tweed the comprehensive city law did not exist and the more general terms of the State act were easily avoided and millions of property passed into the hands of the Jesuits. But neither success or defeat seems to effect these tireless janizaries, nor exhaust their resources of strategy. A significant fact for such people as are weak enough to think this Catholic demand a fair one, is that in Italy, where the priests have managed all the schools, more than seventy in every hundred in the twenty-six millions of inhabitants can neither read nor write.

A muddy stream, flowing into one clear and sparkling, for a time rolls along by itself. A little further down they unite and the whole is impure. So youth, untouched by sin, may for a short time keep its purity in foul company, but a little later and they mingle.

Manhood Pulverized.

BY J. W. HOTT.

In this age of wickedness, presenting so many thousands who are bowed down to the various forms of public vice, it is a grand sight that we behold when we look upon an individual standing erect, free from the entanglement of iniquity, in untrammeled freedom and purity of Christian manhood. To be a man is the highest aspiration of the human soul. The grandest development of the Divine being ever made to intellect was in the form of a perfect and fearless example of manhood, Jesus Christ the Son of God, and the Son of man.

Manhood itself must have been lost in the rubbish surrounding our race had not the power of the Christian religion come to its rescue, and timely saved it from everlasting oblivion. Today under the pure, Christian civilization of our own country, and countries in a kindred degree religious, there is no reason why injured manhood should not free itself from much of the imbecility heretofore attached to it and rise up to a grander, nobler life than ever before. Indeed the struggle is being made. All the force of devoted intellect is drawing the human soul with its various powers to an independence and beauty of exercise, such as shall ultimately sparkle in the zenith of a better and brighter day. Even now there are features to be observed in the character of the manhood of our country that show us, as never before, the nobleness of our race.

Yet there is a sad view for us to take of the condition of thousands of our people in this country of Christian freedom. Men who have spent years in disciplining their minds, and in controlling their lives with a view to rise, through the grace of God, to the possession of a Christian manhood, are to be seen, like Samson of old, blindly grinding at the mill; while every whirl is pulverizing one feature after another of that long cultivated manhood. In the lodges of the secret societies of this age, week after week, there is being ground to powder the last particle of manhood possessed by many, who are now to be seen in society chained down by oath linked in oath until freedom is a stranger to their thoughts.

This grinding commences with the conscience. Secretism asks the man to surrender his conscience to those who have entered the lodge before him. Men who are trammeled by oaths enough to cause fiends to shudder, come to the man and ask him to trust his convictions of right to them, and to venture forward into that which to him is dark as the grave, and the man solemnly lays the obligation upon his sworn lips, and the mill turns, grinding his manhood to very ashes. How dare a man so prostitute his own God-given powers of thought and reason? What does he seek who thus grinds at the mill? One asks to be shown the way in which he may gain an advantage over his fellow man. This he would have by entering a company of men sworn to protect each other against whatever there may be averse to their pursuits and plans of life. A compact so organized as to afford shelter for the vile, the rejecter of Jesus, for the hater of God, and for the villain of society, is sought by the man of pretended manhood, and from motives we cannot fathom he plunges into the throng, and claims that he has some mysterious advantage over his fellows, by means of his pulverized manhood.

Another puts on an air of intellectuality and pretends to be in search of some heathen rite which the lodge has garbled from mythology. Casting dishonor upon the Book of God the man contents his soul with brooding over a few rusty legends to gain a hearing of which he has cast down the freedom of his lips to holy utterance, at the shrine of an authority which asks of him that which all his manhood forbids his giving.

Think of a man turning from the open, noble, honest path of life to find help in the association of the lodge, and at its door plighting away his life for he knows not what! Think of a minister of the Gospel of Christ descending from the sacred place and for the favor of a few, bowing before a despiser of Christ to be initiated into the secrets of a popular order! What a shock the man must experience, or if passing without terror into the hidden chambers, how he must feel his nature hardened by such associations as meet him within! The strength, and beauty, and Christian power of hundreds of the ministers of our country to-day, are ground out of them in the lodge-room. Their mouths are hushed against sin. Their consciences are chained and led away from the right. They court intimacies which pervert them and drag them down. Their freedom and their Christ are crucified daily before their eyes, by those whose garments are guarded at their own feet. How many shapeless shadows of men may be seen here and there seeking to hold together the shattered elements of a manhood that by their own consent has long ago been crushed in the council-chambers of the unholy!

Dayton, Ohio.

Masonic Acquaintance.

BY D. B. TURNEY,
Pres. W. V. D. A. of the Methodist Church.

[CONCLUDED FROM LAST WEEK.]

4th. As for grandness and instructiveness in the ceremonies, I care nothing. They are at least indecent and revolting to every man of sense in the lodge or out of it. A primer is very instructive to a baby; and the young mother counts it a grand ceremony for the babe to wash his own face. Doubtless it is. And for a baby to wash its own face and find an "O" in the primer, is both grand and instructive.

5th. The lodge is a burlesque upon religion; but it fails to exhibit a single trait of pure and true morality, and in every respect exhibits only the traits of false religion. As—

1. It separates the husband's interests from the wife's, and gives him secrets to be guarded and kept from her, thus teaching him to refuse to pay to her the debt of manly confidence that is due. It thus puts in peril every sacred obligation of matrimony, and introduces reason for strife and discord at the home fireside. If any earth-bond should be kept sacred and unimpaired, it is that which unites husband and wife. If any earth-spot should be kept free from discord and strife, it is the fireside at home. If any earth-center should be a type of heaven, it is he home where husband and wife exhibit reciprocal love and confidence.

2. The lodge system creates and nurtures selfishness and evil in the soul; and with frivolous ceremonies and the pomp of display, cripples the energies of spirituality by the cultivation of pride, ostentation and low cunning under all the ordinary circumstances and connections of social life. It thus becomes a great source of wretchedness, and when the husband yields to the strange infatuation and curtains his heart from her "that lieth in his bosom," family happiness becomes, in a measure, an impossibility. The result of such conduct is often seen in the pale cheeks and wasting life of her whom the husband, in the sight of God and at the marriage altar, had sworn to cherish even as himself, and whose outraged nature sinks under the wreck of fond affection into the surges of a wild despair. Freemasonry has frequently encouraged a breach of the marriage vow, and has weighed down many a gentle wife's heart under the burden and anguish of a life-long grief. Where a husband harbors doubt and suspicion of his wife, and estranges her soul from his own, by locking up the secrets which she is entitled to in his own bosom, in solemn defiance of every implication in the covenant of matrimony, the most endearing and hallowed relationship of life is poisoned at the very fountain-head of its glory. A husband should have no secret from his wife, and the wife none from her husband; and no black fiend should creep into the home circle as the serpent did into the Garden of bliss, to awaken a longing curiosity for what God forbids. How lovely such a home would be! Like a softly floating concord of sweetest music, in richest strains of melody, without one jarring note to break and mar the harmony. Like heaven—where the angels of God, cherubs and seraphs, delight in the everlasting symphony and perpetual flow of mutual love, and are thrilled and filled with the wonderful happiness of affection for God and one another.

3. The lodge system often enables one man to successfully encroach upon the rights of another, and the very penalties of the lodge-oaths are designed to school men for the gratification of malignant feelings, teaching retaliation and revenge in the most emphatic lessons of the ritual. In every community in which Freemasonry flourishes, the cause of Christ suffers, piety is on the decline, and obstacles almost insurmountable are placed between the sinner and his salvation; for this dastard carnality has invaded the sanctuary and walked into the pulpit, and is there sowing the seeds of death among the professed heirs of a heavenly life.

4. The actual outlays of money for lodge-halls, regalia, initiations, dues, and expenses of keeping up the order, with the capital that the fraternity allows to lie idle and unimployed, will be found to far exceed the direct expenditures of the whole of Protestant Christianity for the spread of the Gospel. Last year's Freemasonry, or Freemasonry in 1874, thus wasted, in direct expenditures, $63,532,482, and I suppose the indirect expenses and outlays of the order would be almost incredible; and yet, there are less than six hundred thousand Freemasons in the whole nation of ours. Why, the money that this order has wasted, would give a free common school education to all the millions of children in our nation, and leave a sum sufficient to support every college and minister in the United States, and would suffice to erect churches in every hamlet and town.

5. Another evil of Freemasonry, and one more disasterous than its waste of wealth, is its reversal of all the principles of the law of God. It has a bad moral effect, both upon its votaries, and upon the community in general. It is a direct appeal to the most unworthy passions of human nature—pride, cunning, display, idle curiosity, vanity, vain-gloriousness, selfishness, and secretiveness of unmanly rivalry. It requires and applauds the administration of illegal and extra-judicial oaths, stained and baptized with threats and barbarous penalties; and he who is the most blinded by these corrupting and unauthorized oaths, is styled a good Mason and a light to the craft. The very mainspring of each oath is, in most instances, retaliation to the death, murderous revenge, and inhuman ferocity. It engenders disregard for civil law by assuming that its own oaths and obligations are just as binding, and often couples this crime against government with that of murder. By the crime first named, it impairs the security of life; and by the crime last mentioned, it merely illustrates the influence that the impairment of life's security must have. Hence, its extra-judicial oaths work a greater evil to its votaries than its murders do to society. It is utterly subversive of true religion.

6. Freemasonry has destroyed many, but it never saved a soul. It teaches the grossest Universalism. Its death-ritual transplants every dead Mason in the celestial lodge, however unholy his life on earth, and however fearful his death. Its greatest outrages lie hidden from public observation and comment; but the few glimpses that we can catch, show that these outrages are too terrible for protracted and regular contemplation; for soul-destruction is the most fearful sin in God's moral universe. The life of the soul is of more value than that of the body. Now, without pausing to note the barriers that Masonry places between the sinner and his salvation; without pointing out how it fosters licentiousness, and affords dissolute men the means to gratify their depraved lusts; without defining the general demoralizing influence of the system, I point to its deistic, universalistic and pantheistic theology, and bewail the sad fate of the souls it has sent to people hell.

But I must not allow my appended observations to my friend's five chief motives, to make me forget his minor observations:

"Now, Turney, Freemasonry is a big affair. You cannot fight it with success. The Masons are able to crush you, and if you stir them up, it may be to your own hurt. I would advise you to go slow. If you cannot endorse the order, say nothing about it and it will be better for you. Your opposition to it will destroy all your influence and ruin you in Paris; so beware! I speak this for your good."

"Well, sir, with your permission, I will say that no evil thing is very apt to be small. I can fight your fraternity with success, for I use Gospel weaponry. The Masons, unless God please, have no power to crush me. I will not consent to let any dangerous sin or evil pass without rebuke. And if it destroys my influence to do what I believe is right, I am willing to live a few years without any influence. But that is not the case. A man's influence does not altogether depend upon himself; but a great deal of it depends upon what God does for him. So, I expect to retain the whole of my influence in the very eyes and teeth of any Masonic opposition that may be raised; and I shall make no effort whatever to secure the conviction and imprisonment of my would-be assassin."

"Well," said my friend, "I see that it is of no use to counsel you. You will take your own course. But I would like to know briefly your objections to Freemasonry."

"Sir, I object——

1st. To its false pretensions of antiquity, respectability, religion and philosophy.

2nd. To its waste of money, time, energy and sleep.

3rd. To its dissoluteness, frivolity, ostentation and immoral practices.

4th. To its corrupt plottings and numerous violations of law.

5th. To its immoral bearings in society and evil influence in government.

6th. To its abrogation of the rights of conscience, and its disregard of the authority of God over the human soul.

7th. To its violations of the marriage vow and destruction, in so many instances, of domestic happiness and peace.

8th. To its inculcations of selfishness and endorsements of dangerous theology.

9th. To its corrupting effect in the church.

10th. To its illegality—the extra-judicial character and unlawfulness of its oaths, the barbarous and inhuman nature of its penalties, the unchristian and pagan-like ceremonies, and its abominable falsehoods.

11th. To its unnecessary, unreasonable, unjust, inhuman, inefficacious, inglorious system of persecution, slander and self-glorification.

12th. To its impracticability as a system of benevolence."

Before I have finished, my friend grew restive. He looked excited and fatigued. His face was as red as anger could make it, and he gave me to understand that I might henceforth credit myself with the forfeiture of his good-will and friendship. So I have put him down, in my Lewis-Berry book, as another crock of milk turned sour in a thunder-storm.

When he has the sorrow of reading this letter in the Cynosure, maybe he will love me less; although I expect that he already finds the argument on which I feasted him, about as indigestible as that strong-flavored conglomerate dish, so rough on the palate of a foreigner, which the Syrians call kibbeh and eat with a relish as if they had been weaned on it.

O learned man! the kibbeh is well cooked. I pray you take another small morsel and eat it for my sake!

George Trask.

A good man has recently gone to glory, an out-spoken and strong opponent of secret societies, a radical moral reformer, whose testimonies against slavery, war, intemperance and narcotism were always timely, pointed and forcible—Rev. George Trask of Fitchburg, "Anti-tobacco Reformer." The Worcester county (Mass.) Temperance Union at its last quarterly meeting adopted a suitable tribute to his memory offered by Rev. Henry T. Cheever as follows:

Resolved, That we take occasion of the first meeting of this Temperance Union since the death of our worthy confederate, Rev. George Trask of Fitchburg, to declare to the world our conviction of the great loss experienced by the cause of reform in his departure. As a reformer he was sternly true to his convictions, and was a consistent fighter with intemperance, slavery, and tobacco from the moment of his own abandonment of the "baleful narcotic." And we devoutly thank God that in the prosecution of his chosen life work as a Christian reformer he was able so long to "war a good warfare, holding faith and a good conscience," and dying felicitiously, just as he could have wished to die, while in the act of completing the last proof sheet of his 120th tract against tobacco, "Spurgeon and his Cigar," which tract closes with this honorable testimony, the last sentence not complete: "The project of converting the world by the Gospel of Christ, by the power of the Holy Ghost, and by man's free agency, is not a humbug, but a natural, Scriptural, glorious project, eclipsing every other. The idea of converting the world whilst rum, opium and tobacco are its masters. is a humbug"—.

Resolved, That while we extend to the widow of our departed brother the sympathy of friends, we offer also our congratulations upon her being left by her husband in charge of his rich legacy to humanity and moral reform, the stereotyped treasures of the "Anti-Tobacco Tract Depository, Fitchburg, Mass.;" and we recommend to the friends of moral reform in this State and throughout the country at large to send for and freely circulate those tracts as among the most efficient agencies in the warfare with intemperance.

Mr. Cheever said that although the earthly life of George Trask was ended, his character and influence were "marching on" and would live immortalized in his racy writings, which would be the arsenal of warfare in his specific reform for the use of the ages. Some of the best things ever said or written for intemperance were said by him. His indomitable pluck and perseverance, his force and foresight and unfailing good temper under obloquy and ridicule made his example an instructive one for all reformers. It is for his friends to see to it that his last testimonies are kept in circulation now that their author had crossed into the new Jerusalem.

The Jesuits.

It is a matter of notoriety that there are various grades in the order, and that the conditions surrounding the primary admission and the gradual advancement of the members constitute cardinal features in its organization. It would only bewilder the reader were we to give a catalogue (and within our space it could be but a catalogue) of the intricate series of subdivisions and removes which make up the gradations through which a Jesuit may be made to pass. To grasp the peculiar significance of these intermediate steps for the purpose of test or reward, would need an amount of explanation which we cannot here afford. It is enough for the general reader to hold fast the fact, that the vast organization known as the Society of Jesus, is composed of a body of men falling practically into three great divisions—first, the division of Probationers, comprising an infinity of various subgrades, to some of which are attached important trusts, but having this characteristic in common, that they are not connected as grades with any solemn profession of vows. Secondly, the division of Fathers, who have made profession of the three vows; and thirdly, the veterans of the order, the select Fathers, who have been proved worthy of admission to the innermost circle of the initiated, the Fathers who have made professions of the four vows. By the statutes no one under fourteen years of age can become a Novice. Once admitted as such, which depends on the absolute discretion of the Superiors, the Novice is systematically subjected to a most rigid probationship extending necessarily over a number of years, and in which advancement or non-advancement through the various stages is again wholly dependent on the opinion formed by the Superiors as to his qualifications. Assuming that he bears himself to their satisfaction, the aspirant will ultimately be permitted to make profession of the three vows, namely, of obedience, chastity and poverty. It is perplexing to meet with special mention of these vows at this point, as they have been apparently exacted at earlier stages. The explanation is that all previous vows constitute mere moral engagements taken towards God, which strictly bind the individual in foro conscientiæ, without, however, involving any contract that possesses a bilateral force. Thus, by his vows, the Probationer binds himself indeed to absolute obedience towards the General, for as long as the latter may see fit to command him (for the General can dismiss him at pleasure), without acquiring in return a particle of rights in the society.

To all intents and purposes the Probationer is no more than the bondsman of the order from the day he crossed its threshold; having renounced on his part every shred of individual liberty, while, on the other part, nothing whatsoever was guaranteed him beyond admission to a course of trial. The Jesuit who has made solemn profession of the three vows, is, however, in this improved position, that his expulsion can no longer happen at the mere individual whim of the General without the concurrence of the principal officers of the order, a proviso that is practically but of nominal value. If advancement up to this stage has been surrounded with arduous conditions, it is yet more difficult to obtain admission into that choice class which constitutes the core of the order. No Jesuit is to obtain this supreme degree under the age of forty-five; consequently, if he became a novice at the earliest legal period, he must perforce have passed thirty-one years in subordinate grades, however admirable his qualifications may be. The Father is required at this stage to renew the solemn profession of his former vows, to which is now added a vow imposed on no other order—the vow of special obedience to the Pope, at whose word the Jesuit binds himself instantly to go forth on whatsoever errand it may please the Holy Father to command. The Fathers who have sworn this oath compose what may be called the old guard of the order. It has been calculated that no more than two per cent. amongst the received members of the order come to be deemed worthy of admission to this supreme grade.—London Quarterly.

Masonic Conspiracy and Persecution in the U. B. Church.—V.

BY REV. W. W. KNIPPLE.

In November, 1872, the election of delegates to General Conference was held throughout the church. D. R. Miller, A. Rose and M. Bulger were elected in Sandusky conference, in which Rose had about fifty, and Bulger about thirty majority, as I have been informed.

In May, 1873, the General Conference met in session in Dayton, Ohio. And while there, Mr. Rose met with a prominent member of the church from Cardington circuit, and thought it a favorable opportunity to ascertain the facts relative to the above quoted paper (this brother being loyal to the church), and he accordingly interrogated him as to the real existence of the paper, when he was promptly informed that such was the case, and that his informant had headed the paper, and that a goodly number of the members (official and private) signed it, to which Mr. Rose replied, "That is a grand idea; there wasn't a man that I asked concerning Knipple, that wanted him back another year." When he was reminded that he had counseled none but those who were my enemies, which was the fact.

Mr. Rose was enabled to learn from this interview with Bro. Sellers (for that is the brother's name) that the state of feeling that existed on Cardington circuit toward him in regard to this matter, was not quite so pleasant as might be desired; from which he also inferred that there were breakers ahead, and that he would likely be brought to account for his unchristian conduct. And, Mason-like, his only hope seemed to anchor in the craft. Hence the aproned brethren from the Parkersburg conference, who were there as delegates, were taken into counsel, and they soon resolved upon a plan which, they supposed, would not only relieve Mr. Rose from his embarrassment, but that would also complete the work of destruction already inaugurated against me.

The plan adopted was quite Masonic. It was as follows, namely: The Parkersburg delegation in the persons of Warner, Slaughter and Harper (the two former of the apron brotherhood and the latter a "jack") were to return to their conference and put up a bill of charges against me, and forward it at once to the Sandusky brethren. And they did as they agreed, and in due time the charges were forthcoming. The following is a true copy:

The undersigned members of Parkersburg conference, church of the United Brethren in Christ, charge that W. W. Knipple, a former member of this body, but now transferred:

1st. With malicious falsehood.

2d. With having dealt dishonestly with his colleague in this: that he refused to pay said colleague with his proportionate share of salary, and afterwards affirmed that he had paid said amount when he had not done so, nor has he yet.

3d. With total neglect in the payment of honest debts, when it is confidently believed to be in his power to do so.

4th. With laboring since his transfer to form a secret conspiracy in this conference to the deep injury of reputable members thereof; also with a like conspiracy in Sandusky conference, as his letters here abundantly prove.

It is not affirmed that each of the undersigned can affirm to all of the particulars above charged, but each can affirm to one or more. Further, we state emphatically, that had the facts as here stated, been known to the conference, said Knipple could not have received a transfer.

Pennsboro, W. Va., June 13th, '73.

Signed, J. W. Miles,
E. Harper, P. E.
J. W. Perry, P. E.
G. W. Weekly.
W. H. Diddle, P. E.
S. G. Graham.
Z. Warner.
A. Orr.
E. Barnard.
J. L. Hensley.

The reader will perceive that three of the charges are based on circumstances which should have occurred prior to my transfer. And now what of the emphatic statement that had the facts been known I could not have gotten a transfer.

I have another paper in my possession from the pen of Z. Warner, stating that the first charge was endorsed by J. W. Miles, the second by E. Barnard, the third by himself and J. W. Perry, and the fourth, which occurred since my transfer, by A. Orr.

The above charges came against me—as was intended—without either specification or testimony. But the second charge specifies the first, which embodies both falsehood and dishonest dealing. E. Barnard was the colleague referred to. He traveled with me from March, 1869, to March, 1870, at which latter date we settled. He had not received his proportionate amount of the salary, we both having received less than $390, $83 of which he received and I $306; he being single and I married, and had six in family. On settlement I proposed to pay him as soon as I could, but he, as I thought, very generously declined the offer, saying that my afflicted wife and helpless children needed it worse than he did; and fortunately he made a statement of these facts to another member of the conference. Now this settlement occurred in March, 1870, and in April following Mr. Miles and I had some conversation concerning it, in which I stated that Barnard and I had settled the matter satisfactorily. This was the malicious falsehood. At the conference of March, 1871, I transferred in the presence of Messrs. Miles and Barnard, and they both voted for my transfer. As to the third charge, Warner and Perry constituted two of my creditors. They were both present, and I think Warner moved my transfer, and they both voted for it. Now what of the emphatic statement that these facts were not known to the conference. He that hath ears to hear let him hear. The fourth charge was based on that noted letter that I wrote to A. Orr, as already referred to.

The above charges were presented to Sandusky conference by A. Rose at its session in September, 1873, and were designed to defeat me in getting my transfer (which I had taken at the previous session of this conference) into the conference, with a view to disqualify me for prosecuting charges against him, he sustaining the relation of a full member, and I that of a transferred member. In proof of this, he sprung the issue on the presentation of my charges against him; but the ruling of the chair was in my favor. In further proof of the design of those charges, Mr. Rose said to me during the conference session, that had I taken my transfer and went off and let him alone, so far as he was concerned those charges would not have come against me, which language resolves itself into this concession: 1st, That he was concerned; and 2d, That it was at least in part through his concern that the charges came against me.

At this juncture of the conference session Mr. Rose and I were both under arrest before the conference, and our characters referred to the proper committee for investigation. I appeared first before a committee of three. The suit was opened by Rose, who was chief of the prosecution assisted by M. Bulger. To their utter astonishment I appeared in the court room with sufficient testimony to meet each charge. But fortunately, through perhaps a slip of the tongue of a jack Mason, I indirectly learned the fact of the existence of charges, and at once set about gathering testimony to meet them; and I did meet them in a manner that ought to have satisfied any judicious committee. But by ruling out the most important testimony for the defense, simply to gratify the prosecution, who had taken exception to said testimony, on the ground that it was addressed to the Sandusky conference. The committee decided that I should be held to further trial, and so reported to the conference.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Notices.

The National Christian Association.

PRESIDENT.—B. T. Roberts, Rochester, N. Y.

DIRECTORS.—Philo Carpenter, J. Blanchard, A. Wait, I. A. Hart, C. R. Hagerty, E. A. Cook, J. G. Terrill, O. F. Lumry. J. M. Wallace, Isaac Preston, Wm. Pinkney.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.—C. A. Blanchard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

RECORDING SECRETARY AND TREASURER.—H. L. Kellogg, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER.—J. P. Stoddard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

AUDITOR.—H. A. Fischer.

OBJECT.—"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved; to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

Life membership, $10.00; annual do, 25 cents. The names of members and general correspondence of the Association should be sent to the Corresponding Secretary. To carry on the increasing and successful lecture work by agents in different States and for promoting the general work of the Association donations of any amount are solicited from all friends of the reform. All donations or bequests should be sent to the Treasurer.

The Corresponding Secretary or his assistant may be seen at the Cynosure office from 9 to 11 A. M.

Address of Anti-masonic Lecturres.

General Agent and Lecturer, J. P. STODDARD, Christian Cynosure Office, Chicago.

State Lecturer for Indiana, J. T. Kiggins, Waterloo City, DeKalb county, Ind.

State Lecturer for Illinois, H. H. Hinman, Farm Ridge, LaSalle Co., Ill.

State Lecturer for Ohio, D. S. Caldwell, Nevada, Wyandot, Co., Ohio.

State Lecturers for New York, Z. Weaver, Esq., and J. L. Barlow, 89 Mulberry St., both Syracuse, N. Y.

State Lecturer for Pennsylvania, J. W. Raynor, Uniondale, Susquehanna Co., Pa.

I. A. Hart, Wheaton, Ill.
C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
P. Elzea, Wheaton, Ill.
W. A. Wallace, Bentonville, Ind.
J. B. Nessell, Ellington, N. Y.
John Levington, Detroit, Mich.
D. P. Rathbun, Lisbon Center, N. Y.
S. Smith, Ionia, Iowa.
R. B. Taylor, Summerfield, O.
L. N. Stratton, Syracuse, N. Y.
N. Callender, Green Grove, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
Linus Chittenden, Crystal Lake.
P. Hurless, Polo, Ill.
J. R. Baird, Royalton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
C. Wiggins, Angola, Ind.
E. Johnson, Bourbon, Ind.
Josiah McCaskey, Fancy Creek, Wis,
C. F. Hawley, Millbrook Pa.
W. M. Givens, Center Point, Ind.
J. L. Andrus, Mt. Vision, N. Y.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
Wm. Dillon, Dayton, O.
Samuel Hale, Mallet Creek, O.
A. Mayn, Promise City, Wayne Co, Ia.
A. H. Springstein, Yipsilanti, Mich.
R. Faurot, DuPlain, Mich.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, Ashland Co., O.

The Seventh Anniversary of the National Christian Association will be held in the City of Pittsburgh, Pa., June 8th to 10th, 1875.

Connecticut State Meeting.

The Connecticut Christian Association will hold a meeting in Hartford, commencing Wednesday, April 28th, 1875, to continue two days or more. Correspondence has been entered into with J. L. Barlow, L. N. Stratton, D. P. Rathbun and other speakers, and an effort will be made to secure a large attendance from the State.

TO ALL SECEDING MASONS.—By vote of the National Christian Association, all seceding Masons are requested to send their names to the Recording Secretary, with their endorsement of Bernard's Light on Masonry; they are also requested to send their post-office address, number of degrees taken, number of years connected with the lodge, the date of leaving it and where residing when they joined.

H. L. KELLOGG, Rec. Sec'y.
13 WABASH AVE.

The friends in St. Clair, Randolph and Washington counties, Ill., meet at Marissa, St. Clair county. on the afternoon of April 20th. Rev. P. P. Boyd will deliver the address on the occasion. Let arrangements be made in the churches and school districts for a full delegation to this important meeting.

Notice for Iowa.

DEAR BRO. KELLOGG:—I would like to say to the friends of the anti-secrecy movement in Iowa, inasmuch as there was a delegate elected at the late State Association to represent us at Pittsburgh in June it will be necessary to raise some money to defray his traveling expense. Those sending money for the object named can either send or pay it directly to me as treasurer of State Association, or to Louis Bookwalter, Cor. Secretary, and he will report to me, so that I can report. It will take between $50 and $60 to defray this expense, should more be raised it will be kept sacred to the cause and subject to the order of the Association. The address of Louis Bookwalter is Western College, Linn Co., Iowa. Don't fail to respond in time. JOHN DORCAS, Treasurer.

Shiloh, Cedar Co., Iowa.

TO FRIENDS WHO LIVE ON OR NEAR ANY ROUTE FROM CHICAGO TO PITTSBURGH, PA.—Rev. H. H. Hinman, the Illinois State agent, expects to start about May twenty fifth for Pittsburgh to attend the national meeting in June. He desires to stop at places along the route and lecture on secret societies, both on his way there and on his return after the meeting. Any friends living on or near either route who will provide a hall for the speaker, announce his lectures and raise ten dollars for one or two lectures from him on the subject of secret societies, can secure his services if they apply soon enough.

Mr. Hinman is a careful, clear thinker on this subject, and we believe gives general satisfaction wherever he lectures.

Address communications asking for his services to C. A. BLANCHARD, Cor. Secretary N. C. A., 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

A correspondent in Woodland City, Cal., sends a list of qualifications wanted in the pulpits of that place:—

WANTED—to labor as ministers for the cause of Christ in the United Brethren church three or more preachers who believe oath-bound secrecy to be a work of the devil; who can stand before a multitude and defend our church law; who can say, how hardly can a secrecy man enter the kingdom of heaven, i. e, who can say the lodge is destroying the vital power of religion in the churches; who can say it is damning souls every day.

Men of Pennsylvania, Help!

Our excellent brother, Rev. James W. Raynor, now of Uniondale, Pa., is arranging his affairs to go to work in this our great State as agent and lecturer, and will soon move to Montrose, Susquehanna Co., Pa., where he will have his head-quarters. All who have engaged in active efforts against the monster evil, secretism, know but too well the great sacrifice to be made in this cause. It is truly a God-send to Pennsylvanians, that we have a man like brother Raynor, who is willing to make the sacrifice.

Nearly $200 are yet to be raised to complete the lecture fund of $500. Who will help? Let men, and women too, in every part of the State who read the Cynosure make an effort at once to raise some part of this amount by reliable pledges and report to Rev. James W. Raynor, Montrose, Pa. Do NOT DELAY. Circulate a subscription and do it at once. Shall we, after the much hard work and heavy sacrifices in pushing the work forward thus far, now sacrifice all our toil for the want of a little more effort! This is a great and arduous work that we have entered on. Heaven alone knows how much good has already been effected by this movement. Light is penetrating many a dark den and flashing its unwelcome rays upon many an uneasy conscience. God sees and controls it. We cannot measure the good effects of our work any more than we can weigh or measure the progress of the morn-dawn. Little by little, as seems to us, it goes on till behold the glorious sun is up! So to them that look for him "shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his beams."

Notwithstanding all the adverse influences peculiar to this State with its legions of secret clans, much progress has been made in forming and moulding public sentiment aright. Now, a few earnest and wide-awake men, who have the strength and the means to go forward, would set the whole State in motion to shake off the hateful chains of these fiendish infidel clans of "the orders."

Men and brethren of the old Keystone State, come up to the work! This is the only alternative to a criminal and ignominious retreat. If we go back from this work after such a start on this enterprise, we shall deserve and receive the hearty contempt of all honest (?) Masons. These poor fettered souls have a demand on our energetic and self-sacrificing work, and thousands of them will rise up to bless us for helping to disentangle their souls from "Satan's cable-tow." If we push on the work with an invincible will and purpose we shall force the respect of all, even our enemies; but if we falter and vacillate we shall be despised by both enemies and friends. Reforms go somewhat upon the principle of a wedge, the better the instrument and the heavier the blows the greater the execution. Our very existence is secured and extended upon this principle; even in the elements around us. The infant pushes its way all the way up from helplessness to mature and defiant manhood, and the more he pushes, dares and defies danger and difficulty, as a rule, under God, the wider the place he secures. Associated and personally, men create their own history. The Pennsylvania Christian Association may, under God's blessing, make for itself a more glorious history than its most sanguine friends ever dreamed of. FORWARD, BRETHREN, FORWARD! NATHAN CALLENDER.

Reform News.

—The General Agent is again with us preparing for the National Anniversary. He will start for Pittsburgh next week.

—Notice is asked to Bro. Hinman's proposal to speak on the way to Pittsburgh. There are other speakers East and West whose services can be more easily secured as they go or return than at any other time. Begin correspondence at once and secure a lecture.

—The Corresponding Secretary attended the Michigan Convention and spoke at several points, Fenton, Brighton and Pleasant Valley. He was much encouraged with the success of the State meeting.

—Beside the report on this page from Bro. Kiggins, he has sent another letter of unusual interest showing how the weapons of the lodge rebound and slay the user. It has some connection with Cardington circuit, Ohio, and Rev. W. W. Knipple, whose statement is now appearing in our columns.

From the Indiana Agent—Through Wayne and Henry Counties.

NEW GARDEN, Ind., April 5, 1875.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Leaving home a little more than a week ago, I arrived at Richmond on Saturday, having stopped and arranged for future work at two points on my way. I stopped with brother Paxton, a good Wesleyan brother, over Saturday night. On Sabbath morning I attended meeting in the Friends' church on Fifth St. I had previously met with Mr. Nicholson, a prominent member of that society. But he is quite extensively engaged in business, and touches the subject of secrecy with a very great delicacy. I am told, by those who seem to know, that the three Friends' societies existing here are very badly mixed with secrecy. In the afternoon I attended the Wesleyan Sabbath-school, (colored) and preached in the chapel in the evening, to an interesting (and appearently interested) audience. Monday I spent in visiting the Public Library, and looking over rare volumes, copying for future use that which seemed to be of most importance. This Library is an institution of no small degree of repute, an honor to the city, and especially to the founder, in honor of whom it is named "the Morrison Library." The building was erected especially for this purpose, and is admirably arranged. The building alone is said to have cost some $17,000. A life-size portrait of Mr. Morrison hangs on the wall in the principal apartment.

The Young Men's Christian Association have a nicely furnished reading room, well supplied with books and periodical literature. It is free, and intended to furnish young men with a place to spend their evenings pleasantly and profitably, and keep them away from the haunts of vice. My visit to this institution was for the purpose of introducing to its superintendent the Cynosure. I found the room under the care of Mr. Gaylord, a very pleasant and kind gentleman upward of seventy, who is devoting most of his time to this enterprise. When I gave him a copy of the Cynosure, and explained its peculiar mission, he expressed great pleasure to know that anti-secrecy was being revived; and related his knowledge of the Morgan murder, having been a resident of New York at the time of that lodge tragedy. The result of my visit is, the Cynosure will be placed on their table weekly, to be read and discussed by the young men who visit this reading room, of whom there are twenty-five or thirty each evening, besides many through the day. May we not hope that hundreds of young men may thus be saved from the meshes of these enslaving and demoralizing "orders"?

On Monday evening I attended a temperance lecture by Mrs. Harper, a colored lady of Philadelphia, who evinced quite a degree of ability and culture. Here I met Howel Graves, an iron merchant and subscriber of the Cynosure, and a genuine reformer. One of "the old Abolitionists," a prohibitionist, and a woman suffragist, he stands by all his principles unflinchingly, and knows no such thing as compromise. May God multiply characters of this stamp in Richmond. I find here as elsewhere a great deal of wishy-washy, soft sentimentalism under the garb of Christianity and sanctification. When men get so "holy" that they can do as they like without sin, and dare not to call things by their right names, but "unite" with everything that comes along, they are just a little too good for practical purposes.

On Tuesday I went to Dublin, when I put up with my old friend, Milton Raines. On Wednesday he took me to Hopewell, a Friend's meeting, some four miles north-west of Dublin, where, at eleven o'clock I spoke to them a short time, and they gave me a hearty welcome, by inviting me to lecture, which I did to good audiences on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. I put up with Benjamin Butler while in this neighborhood. He is a son of Rev. A. Butler, the President of our State Society, and as "true as steel." This place is in the west end of Henry county. On Friday morning brother Butler sent his son to carry me to Cambridge in his buggy, when brother John Huddleston in the evening took me up, and drove to Milton to see our friend J. H. Frazee, a member of the M. E. church. He has paid me $20 to sustain the cause in this State, since the State Convention. Thus he, with a few others, is practically anti-secret, while thousands are only sentimentally so: I came back and stayed with brother Huddleston over night, and in the morning left for Newport, where I preached on Sunday morning, and on Sunday evening spoke on "the Religion of the Lodges." There is quite a society of Wesleyans here, but some are troubled with that terrible malady of which brother Barlow writes, from New York. Its symptoms are unmistakable; and in some respects it resembles a disease among cattle commonly termed "the trembles." At times, when the exigencies demand prompt and decisive action, they are seized by a kind of stupor which renders them unfit for service. When the hottest conflicts are waging with their well-known, and deadly foe, they shrink back into the "rear ranks," and with trembling, they—

"Whisper with white lips,"—
"The foe! they come! they come!"

Then, afterward, while nothing has been said or did by them to encourage the defenders of truth, they are visited by paroxisms of sympathy for the defeated votaries of lodgism, which lead them to go over and administer soothing syrup to quiet their distracted nerves. O for men who are not afraid of the face of man; but who, in the name of the Great Jehovah and American liberty will everywhere, and all the time demand the "unconditional surrender" of the hosts of hell!

JOHN T. KIGGINS.

The West Missouri Work.

The Osceola Sentinel, St. Clair Co., Mo., of March 13th, publishes the following of Bro. Love's lectures in the court-house at that place a few weeks since, an account of which appeared in the Cynosure two weeks ago. The editor evidently aims at a degree of fairness in his notice of the addresses, which is proof of their merit and force, otherwise the lodge pressure on the county paper would have crowded out the notice altogether. The platitudes might have been omitted as doubtful experiences. The Sentinel says:

The Rev. Wm. M. Love of this county delivered Anti masonic lectures at the court-house, on last Friday and Saturday evenings, to good audiences. The lectures were quite interesting and the manner in which the lecturer handled his subject, showed that he had bestowed upon it considerable study and research. He was well fortified with books, papers and other authorities, which he referred to and read from quite extensively. He denied the antiquity of the order, and attempted to show that it had its origin in modern times. He also professed to give the various grips and other modes of recognition resorted to by the craft, and also the manner in which members are initiated. To the uninitiated, some of his arguments were quite plausible and his authorities seemingly indisputable; but knowing nothing of the secret workings of the craft, of course we cannot say whether they are in reality so or not. This much we will say, however, we have seen the order bring relief to the unfortunate and distressed, hush the widow's groans, and dry the orphan's tears, and therefore do not care to inquire whether Solomon belonged to it or not. If good results from Masonry, it matters but little whether it originated before or after the Flood.

Correspondence.

Reforming the Churches.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—While I wish much that the reformation of the churches from all complicity with secret societies did proceed more rapidly, still it seems to me clear, from the information conveyed by your correspondents and lecturers, that very sensible progress is making in this direction. In the reform of the churches, all Christians of every name should make common cause; and every one should exert himself to reform his own church and denomination. Nor should any one be backward in publishing facts showing the state of his own church, and in endeavoring to urge through the Cynosure proper measures for its reformation.

Such has been my own course as a United Presbyterian. My very partial exposure of the condition in Philadelphia of the U. P. churches in regard to secret societies, has, I observe, called forth my Christian brother, Dr. David Thompson, who comments in your number of March 18th on my papers on the doings of the U. P. Philadelphia Presbytery. The burden of Mr. Thompson's article appears to me to be —Hush up!—Keep the doings of "your mother" church secret!—let charity cover the multitude of her sins! I interpret the rule of Christian duty, however, differently. "Thou shalt in any wise rebuke thy brother, and shalt not suffer sin upon him!" . . .

I observe that the editor of the Evangelical Repository tries to put a face upon the Presbytery's action in suppressing all mention of the Odd-fellow case, which is both curious and novel. He writes (April No., p. 506:) "The truth is, that it was thought that if the proceedings of the Presbytery were published, without a full explanation of the whole matter, the case of the appellants would be prejudiced in the public mind. In the interest of justice, therefore, and with the understanding that he was acting according to the wish of both sides in the premises, the clerk did not publish any part of the proceedings in the case."

Allow a word of comment on this, Mr. Editor. No one has blamed the clerk, so far as I know. On the contrary, I published in my report, how he nobly recorded his name with the reforming party of the Presbytery, on the vote being taken. And in regard to the reason now given by Dr. Barr for the suppression of the case in the presbyterial report, I think that if the ministers and elders who voted in that case to sustain the action of Mr. Kerr and the majority of his session in receiving the Odd-fellow into their church membership,—if they can stand the publication of their vote which appeared in the Cynosure, "the appellants" and their "case" can well stand the publication of their votes. Indeed, I have been informed that congratulatory letters have been pouring in upon Dr. Barr for his service in the case in Presbytery. But if the case had not been reported in the Cynosure, how would his Christian brethren ever have known how well he had done? . . .

The United Presbyterian General Assembly will meet in May next in annual session. I would respectfully suggest to my U. P. fellow-Christians who feel insulted like myself in being compelled to sit down at the Lord's table with Freemasons and Odd-fellows—whether we are not now called by God and our duty, to join in a vigorous memorial and remonstrance to the ensuing Assembly, against such a scandal, and to urge the most summary remedial action on the subject? The question is not (as the editor of the Pittsburgh United Presbyterian extenuates it,) whether the U. P. church lives up to its profession as well or better than other churches; but whether we are to go on as heretofore, falsifying our profession, and bringing a reproach upon ourselves for insincerity and double-dealing? Certain it is, that as things are, and are going on here and elsewhere in the United Presbyterian churches, the testimony of that church against secretism is in a great measure a nullity.

W. S. R.

Philadelphia, April 3, 1875.

Suggestions and Encouragement.

When I look back at the secret societies of the past and then at the hundreds of thousands in our own towns and villages that are sworn to "always hail ever conceal and never reveal," I feel constrained to say that for us there is but one hope and that is to make frequent appeals to the God of our fathers, and take an independent stand in political action.

And why not commence now? We have as mighty wrongs to oppose as ever lifted their wretched heads in the days of the Revolution or the Rebellion. While our forefathers were busily engaged fighting for liberty and human rights, they did not know that such a mighty enemy as secret rings was silently creeping into their homes and gathering the young into its pretended Christian embrace.

Some time ago H. H. Hinman gave a series of lectures in this county and got several to make a call for a county organization opposed to secret societies. How many signed that call I do not know. I believe that if Jo Daveiss county was organized we could do a noble work and occupy a proud position in the front rank of this contest. I have looked at the platform you published and think it is nearer right than any other I have seen.

Would it not be a good plan to divide this State into several lecture districts, and let the Association assign to each lecturer in this State a district to canvass next fall? This question must be discussed to a great extent before it can be settled. When we get strong enough to discuss this question in the country school-houses and villages and cities, and the people will jump off the fence and take sides, either for or against us. I think that time is near at hand.

We must cheer up. We have nothing to fear. We are right and the steps we take in the future, if so well done as the one taken at Chicago when your paper was started, and those taken since, will, I trust, be always sustained nobly, faithfully, and sincerely.

Your sincere friend,

JAMES H. BERRYMAN.

Not Fair on the Mason.

WELLINGTON, Ill., April 5, 1875.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

Last Sabbath I attended a church where a Methodist Episcopal minister conducted the services at the morning meeting. This preacher came instead of the Elder, being quarterly meeting occasion. He is known in all this section as a leading Mason, and not long since he acted (and may now) as chaplain of a Masonic lodge. Now while this preacher was trying to preach

Christ, he was at the same time preaching anti-Christ for the lodge. This he was doing by his example; for there was perhaps not a person present but knew of his lodge connections. Not far from here an M. E. preacher was deposed from preaching because he took a few water-mellons from a patch and did not see fit to make any special apologies for it. This occurred perhaps last fall. The fact that a Masonic preacher is in good standing and one dismissed or silenced for eating a water-mellon when he was dry, is much like gagging at a gnat and swallowing a campbell. We, however, make no apologies for raids on mellon patches, but certainly think that a minister who acts as chaplain for a Masonic lodge and prays for such sinners, not that they may leave off their Masonic wickedness, but that the Lord may prosper them in it. This Masonic chaplain sees his own church brethren denuded in the lodge and swindled out of say $25 for the "degrees," when the self-same "degrees" can be bought in the open market of responsible parties under a warranty for twenty-five cents. Not only this, but after getting the candidate's money, and to make sure of their ill-gotten gains from the poor, denuded, frightened victim, they swear him at the risk of having his "throat cut across," etc., not to tell it! J. S. Hickman.

From a Seceding M. E. Minister in Northern N. Y.

[By permission.]

Lisbon, N. Y., Feb. 23d, 1875.

Rev. W. Post,

Dear Brother:—Yours of the 13th inst. was duly and gladly received. And lest I make too long tarrying I improve the earliest convenience in answering. Like you, I can truly say, that "the more I study Masonry in connection with Masonic ministers and church-members, the more marvelous it seems." I have no doubt of its infidel character, and that "blasphemy" should be written upon the head of this beast of the sea.

As to persons who are Masons professing sanctification and yet seeing nothing incompatable with holiness in Masonry, I would say, that their view of holiness, and the Bible view must be very different; and, in my judgment, their sanctification is quite as wide the mark. Of course, it is not for us to judge; but we are taught that, "Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven." Again, "Many will say unto me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils, and in thy name done many wonderful works?" These are all represented as sincere, and as going to the very gate of heaven with their high professions and yet rejected.

Masonry is an abomination. I have seen its inside work, and can conceive of nothing more ridiculous, more secrilegious, neither more blasphemous; and when I find a minister trying to defend it, who is a Mason, I am sickened. What! a man once enlightened and having "tasted the heavenly gift" and been "made a partaker of the Holy Ghost," one who has "tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come." After all this, saying, that he sees nothing incompatable in Masonry with holiness? Yea, more, —as do all who adhere to Masonry, whether minister or otherwise,—we do not find our religious experience that which fully satisfies, but need this so-called "hand-maid of religion to complete the work?" But what astonishes me most is to see men professing godliness with all its attendant blessings, groping amid the mummeries of Masonry for enjoyment, or studying its symbolic lessons, so called, for instruction. It does seem to me, that had I been an infidel, when attending Masonic meetings, and then have seen a minister of the Gospel enter and seem to enjoy it, I should at once have believed him an imposter.

You will see by this that I have but little sympathy with adhering Masons who are professed Christians, be they members, preachers, or bishops. My feelings have undergone a great change within a few weeks. I find that to support and defend Masonry men will violate almost every principle of either justice or reason, and that they are ready to sacrifice, or at least silence the conscience of any man who dare so much as to say Masonry is wrong. Now that I have openly renounced Masonry and publicly spoken against it, though I have not attempted to discuss the merits of the question, men and ministers are trying to make it appear that I have done a great wrong. And I shall not be surprised if Masonry rises up against me, if I am spared until our next conference. But I fear not, only lest I get moved from the path of duty. Our conference, Northern New York, meets on the last of April, at Mexico, Oswego Co.

As to my experience as a Mason, to which you refer, you will do doubt see an answer to your inquiries in the Reformer and Free Press ere long. I have written out something of that sort which I shall send on at once.

As to what may be done, I would say, no effort can be made that will amount to anything without rousing the spirit and calling forth the vengeance of Masonry, but the point is to be lead by the Spirit, and not go upon a warfare at our own charges. If we do this we utterly fail. I say this because I find that with me the enemy attacks, or attempts to lead off in this direction fully as much as in any other. . . . I know of but one out-and-out Anti-mason in our Conference; there may be others. There are Anti-masons but they are not out-spoken, they say what they say on the sly,—whisper it. A memorial from a convention would weigh more perhaps than from any other available body, and this would give strength to others that might be presented.

I have never given an Anti-masonic lecture in my life, but feel the fire as it were shut up in my bones. . . .

As to success, I think that we have much to encourage us already. Bro. Guile of Ogdensburg, pastor there, was saved from Masonry I have no doubt by the reading of my "reasons for leaving the Masons." Sometime after coming out, I found several of the same lodge who felt as I did, but dare not openly say it. One, a Methodist and leading man, has since left. Several lectures have been given in our town within the past few weeks, one by Rev. D. P. Rathbun, and five by Rev. Mr. Barlow, State lecturer, and I am told by men who have been in conversation with young men that there are several who were intending to join the lodge who have abandoned the thought, since hearing these lectures. I thank you for your kind response and encouragement. May God bless you and open to you an effectual field of labor. Write often. Yours in the hope of the Gospel,

Ephraim W. Wheeler.

Open Benefit Societies.

West Belleville, St. Clair Co., Ill., Mar. 28, 1875.

Editor of the Christian Cynosure:

I promised you I would forward information respecting open benefit societies. I am glad to inform you we have started one in West Belleville, (I will send you a prospectus when printed), and it is bidding fair to do well. I invite the attention of Mr. A. S. Badgley, Belleville, who wrote you last issue, and of whom I have no personal knowledge. The society, if made a success, will be a counterblast against the fraternity of secret orders, and a great assistance to those who object to being connected with secretism. We have no pass-word, no door-rapping, no degrees with any of the tom-fooleries connected with secret societies. Officers are: president, secretary, treasurer, three stewards, and an examining committee consisting of three persons. The contribution, 50 cents a month, which provides $5.00 a week in sickness, and so much at death, in proportion to the numerical strength of the society. Initiation fee $2. (until about the 25th of April next, after which it will be $3) at 16 years of age, and 20 cents a year additional from 16 to 45 years of age. I believe the blessing of God can be invoked on such a society. Any information can be obtained from yours truly,

J. Hodder, Sec.

OUR MAIL.

A. C. Daugherty, New London, Wis., writes:

"I expect to be a regular subscriber for years."

We receive similar expressions from many of our readers and hope to merit them from all.

Rev. J. T. Kiggins, Portland, Ind., writes:

"Thousands of the quiet anti-secrecy men and women of this State would actively labor in support of our good cause, if we could get them to read the Cynosure."

We hope our Indiana friends, as well as as subscribers in other States,—for the same is true of other States as well as of Indiana—will realize this fact and circulate the Cynosure. Many are doing so now. May their numbers increase.

Chas. F. A. Gantzckow, Hartsville, Ind., writes:

"I am well pleased for the prospect of having a publishing house. Hope friends of the cause will send their thousands and hundreds and on down, whatever they have to give and wait not. I feel we need it."

He suits his action to his words by sending a cash remittance for the new publishing house. We hope these free-will offerings will more than make up the amount needed to secure the house.

Geo. Surface, North Union, Ind., writes:

"I would not give up the Cynosure for any paper I ever saw."

Rev. A. Musselman, Sacramento, Cal., writes:

"We purpose organizing here. . . As soon as we organize and secure funds we want an able and efficient lecturer. The best that can be secured."

This is encouraging news from the far West.

J. Miller, Wauseon, O., writes:

"We hope to secure a country library of cheap Anti-masonic literature for this (Fulton) county."

Laura L. Thompson, sends two new subscriptions and a renewal, desiring us to consider her a life subscriber. Her father was once a Mason, and she is doing what she can against secret societies. We especially notice this case because the infirmities of age are upon her. We hope those who enjoy full health will do as much in proportion to their opportunities.

P. Andreas, Canal Dover, O., writes:

"We need a lecturer here in this place, for I think it is one of the hot beds of secret, oath-bound societies. Men are afraid to express their opinions against the accursed thing, and the cause of God is languishing at every pore. May God speed the day when this abominable institution will be wiped out is the prayer of the writer"

John W. Knowles, Cynthiana, Ind., writes:

"There are a great many secret-society men here—Masons, Odd-fellows and grangers; and a worse feature still, they have a very large class of sympathizing friends who perhaps will never join any of the secret societies themselves, but are always ready to defend those who do. But I think the anti-secret men are gaining ground. I shall do all I can for the Cynosure and the cause of reform."

John Collins, Hicksville, O., writes:

"My zeal for the cause you advocate is not abated. . . . I have tried to get some subscribers for the Cynosure, but all with one consent make some excuse. But I will try and not weary in well doing. I expect to get some yet, for I verily believe it is one of the best papers printed in the United States."

Rev. J. W. Funk, Myersville, Md., writes:

"I am more than ever pleased with the paper, and pray that it may accomplish much in destroying the influence and power of oath-bound organizations, and of eventually uprooting every vestige of their existence."

J. W. Turner, Laclede, Mo., writes:

"I am determined to do all I can the present year and hope for the best results. The paper you have sent me, I am satisfied, has done enough good to pay for itself. It has brought the lodge into contempt with a number of the people in this vicinity."

We desire to call the especial attention to our sixteen subscribers in Hillsdale county, Mich., to the following from one of their fellow-citizens.

S. S. Carter, South Wright, Mich., writes:

"I think there is great need of somebody's doing something at this place. It seems as though the devil was let loose to prey on us. There is a grange here and I understand that they are gaining very fast here. Thirty persons have been taken in to the grange during the last six weeks. The next great monster is a Masonic hall. There is to be a chapter of Masons at this place as soon as they can get a charter. The grangers are running the thing strong throughout this whole town. Almost every officer is either a granger or a Mason. Our schools are not exempt. The man who is exposing the grange is doing a good thing for this community. Our church men here are anti-secret men. I heard this week that our presiding elder, of the Methodist Episcopal church, had joined the grange, but think it is a mistake."

Can D. P. Rathbun do something for this county?

The Sabbath School.

Lesson for April 25th, 1875.—Gideon's Army.

Judges vii. 1-8.

1 Then Jerubbaal, who is Gideon, and all the people that were with him, rose up early, and pitched beside the well of Harod: so that the host of the Midianites were on the north side of them, by the hill of Moreh, in the valley.

2 And the Lord said unto Gideon, The people that are with thee are too many for me to give the Midianites into their hands, lest Israel vaunt themselves against me, saying, Mine own hand hath saved me.

3 Now therefore go to, proclaim in the ears of the people, saying, Whosoever is fearful and afraid, let him return and depart early from mount Gilead. And there returned of the people twenty and two thousand; and there remained ten thousand.

4 And the Lord said unto Gideon, The people are yet too many; bring them down unto the water, and I will try them for thee there: and it shall be, that of whom I say unto thee, This shall go with thee, the same shall go with thee; and of whomsoever I say unto thee, This shall not go with thee, the same shall not go.

5 So he brought down the people unto the water: and the Lord said unto Gideon, Every one that lappeth of the water with his tongue, as a dog lappeth, him shalt thou set by himself; likewise every one that boweth down upon his knees to drink.

6 And the number of them that lapped, putting their hand to their mouth, were three hundred men: but all the rest of the people bowed down upon their knees to drink water.

7 And the Lord said unto Gideon, By the three hundred men that lapped will I save you, and deliver the Midianites into thine hand: and let all the other people go every man unto his place.

8 So the people took victuals in their hand, and their trumpets: and he sent all the rest of Israel every man unto his tent, and retained those three hundred men: and the host of Midian was beneath him in the valley.

int to

GOLDEN TEXT.—There is no restra w.—the Lord to save by many or by fe 1 Sam. xiv. 6. s by

CENTRAL TRUTH.—The Lord save many or by few.

COMMIT TO MEMORY, vrs. 2-4.

PARALLEL PASSAGE.—1 Cor. i. 27-30.

SCRIPTURE READINGS.—On Jerubbaal, see Judges vi. 32; on Harod (which means "trembling"), see 2 Sam. xxiii. 25.

With v. 2, read Deut. viii. 17,18; with v. 3, read Deut. xx. 8; with vs. 4 and 5, compare 2 Sam. xxiii. 16; with vs. 6,7, compare Acts xviii. 9,10; with v. 8, compare v. 16. S. S. World.

Side-light Topics.

1. Fret not, dear heart, if God's hand prunes your fair growth beyond what seemeth to be the power of endurance. So the gardner trims the plants he loves until nothing is left but a few roots of unsightly bulbs. But out of these spring the perfect flowers. While seeming to take away he has but added to their strength. So the refiner of silver tries his ores until he can see his face in the melted metal. He indeed takes away—but it is only the dross. Job, xxiii. 10; Dan. xii. 10; Zech. xiii. 9; Jas. i. 3, 4, 12; 1 Pet. i. 6,7.

2. It was a hard lesson for Gideon to learn as his army melted away, but, after the battle was over, then could he readily see that God's strength had been made perfect in his weakness. It is no less hard for us to learn, but if we do master it we shall have learned what faith is. 1 Cor. i. 23–25; 2 Cor. iii. 17; xii. 9,10; Luke xiv. 11; John iii. 30; Jas. iv. 6; Heb. xii. 11,

3. God has no use for cowards. "The fearful and unbelieving, etc., shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death." Therefore let those that are faint of heart strengthen themselves in the Lord. Cowardice is simply the lack of faith. Luke xii. 4,5; Acts xviii. 9,10; 2 Cor. iv. 16–18; 1 Pet. iii. 14,15; 1 Tim. iii. 13.

4. But how wonderfully he can work through men of faith. Heb. xi. 32-35; Jas. ii. 21,22; Matt. xvii. 20; 1 John v. 4, 5.

5. If the church would not put her trust in numbers, or in power, or in riches, but only in the Lord, how much stronger would she be to-day! 1 Sam. ii. 6,7; Ps. lxxv. 6,7; Is. xxxiii. 1, 2; lvii. 13; Eccl. ix. 11; Jer. ix. 23, 24; xvii. 5–7; 2 Cor, i. 9.

6. Perfect faith gives perfect victory—"according to your faith be it unto you." Matt. ix. 29.—Nat'l S. S. Teacher.

Forty Years Ago.

An Able Argument for Free Inquiry.

A disconrse at Woodstock, Conn., Sept. 11, 1829, by Daniel Dow, Pastor of the church in Thompson.

[CONTINUED.]

But perhaps, some will say, all those remarks might be pertinent, were the subject of such a nature as to admit of inquiry. But the subject is occult; so wrapped up in impenetrable darkness, that nothing can be known about it; all inquiry therefore ought to be suppressed, because it must be wholly fruitless. I would then observe,

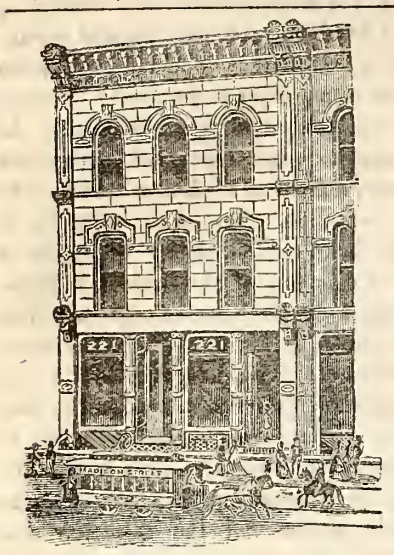
3. That this is a subject concerning which, inquiry may be made, and information obtained; at least, so far as is necessary to answer every practical purpose. Were the subject indeed so occult, that nothing could be known concerning its real merits, a very important inquiry would arise, even in that case, whether any person could be justified in uniting with an institution, of which it is impossible for him to obtain any previous knowledge. I should judge, that this inquiry ought to occupy the mind of every candidate, till, somehow or other, information could be obtained concerning the merits of what he was about to receive. But it is not a fact, that this is a subject concerning which no information can be obtained. Secret as the nature of this institution has been, it is now a secret no longer. More than a thousand, nay, I should not go beyond the probable truth, were I to say, more than two thousand seceding Masons have openly proclaimed it. They profess to have told us, for substance, all that could be either learnt or told. And who are these witnesses? They are persons of all classes; from the highest to the lowest grade. Many of them, men of unblemished character. Many of them, men of undoubted piety. Many of them, ministers of the Gospel; and of all the various denominations of Christian people, Presbyterians, Baptists, Methodists, Quakers, and others, in different sections of the country, who could have had no combination together, yet all agreeing in bearing the same testimony, in regard to the secrets and obligations of the Masonic institution. And this many of them have done, when they were thereby exposing themselves to reproaches, and perils, and privations, and mortifications, which they might have avoided by only remaining silent. These witnesses are neither incompetent nor incredible. Nor can their testimony be rejected, without rejecting all human testimony, whatever. Do you wish for names? I have not time to give you the whole catalogue, neither is it needful; but I will mention a few. I would refer you to the Rev. Mr. Thacher, pastor of a Congregational church in Wrentham, Massachusetts; the Rev. Mr. Jones, pastor of the Presbyterian church in Cabot, Vermont; the Rev. Mr. Sanborn, pastor of the Presbyterterian church, at Painted Post, Steuben county, State of New York; the Rev. Mr. Stearns, pastor of the Baptist church in Paris, State of New York; Mr. Henry Dana Ward, editor of the Anti-masonic Review, in the city of New York; the revelation made by a large number of seceders, convened at Le Roy, State of New York; the renunciation of Mr. Mulford, Morris county, New Jersey; together with the genuine edition of the Illustrations of Masonry, by Morgan. I might mention many more of equal credibility; but I forbear. If any one, therefore, would wish to obtain information on this subject, the door is open, opportunity is offered. "If ye will inquire, inquire ye." It is certainly practicable to inquire into the number and credibility of those witnesses. It is as practicable to inquire into the testimony which they bear. And it is as practicable to inquire, whether the institution, as developed by them, be consistent with the holy religion which we profess.

4. It would seem that the friends of the institution, themselves, can have no rational objection to a free and unembarrassed investigation of all the facts which relate to this subject. For no cause can be in worse plight than to be laboring under high charges and heavy suspicions, and when investigation is proposed, and proof offered, to shrink from the investigation and endeavor to suppress inquiry. To do this, is always construed into a consciousness of guilt, and operates more to the disadvantage of the accused than the proof of the fact; because it not only fastens the guilt, but leaves the imaginatian to go even beyond what could have been proved. So that even a guilty person has suffered more, in point of character, by avoiding a trial, than he possibly could have done, even had he been tried and condemned.

5. The inquiry should be made in order that either the institution itself, or the community, may be delivered from the imputation of blood guiltiness. Where murder has been committed, or where there is any ground for suspicion that it has been committed, it is always proper to inquire into the fact; and if a fact, to inquire who was the perpetrator, and who were the accomplices. Most deplorable, indeed, must be the state of society where crimes of this nature can be committed, and no inquiry excited. In such case the whole community must be involved in the guilt. But in this case, it is alleged, that human blood has wickedly been shed. It is alleged that it was done in strict accordance with the oaths and obligations of the Masonic institution. It is also alleged that lodges and encampments have been acting in concert, in perpetrating and concealing this crime. These are awful charges; and the more alarming on account of the number said to be combined together. And now is it not indispensable that some inquiry be made? Should it not at least be asked, whether it be a probable fact, that such a crime has been committed? And whether it be a fact, that there is an institution in our land, which claims the right of thus disposing of the lives of its members, and who have bound themselves together, by horrid oaths, to submit to such a claim, and if not to aid in the commission of such crimes, yet to conceal them when committed, and to use their utmost efforts to screen the guilty from justice? If there be the least ground for the suspicion that such are the facts, it is not to be wondered at, that all good men should feel alarmed; and it is certainly proper that the inquiry should proceed. For, without it, if the charges be untrue, the innocent must labor under an unjust and cruel aspersion. Or, if they be true, the whole community must be under a vast load of guilt in being silently accessory to the shedding of blood. Justice to the public, as well as to the individual sufferer, demands that the inquiry proceed. "If ye will inquire, inquire ye."

[CONTINUED NEXT WEEK.]

To Old?—No, You Ain't.



You are not too old to do good, to repent of your sins, put away your evil deeds, cut loose from your vicious habits and life.

"While the lamp holds ont to burn,
The vilest sinner may retnrn;"

says the beloved Watts. We know a man eighty winters on the stage of action, and during some fifty years of this time he had been a slave to the pipe or the quid. He became convinced of the evil, his conscience accused him. When told the money he lavished on this vile narcotic, to gratify a vitiated appetite, was God's money, that his example led others to the same evil, meanwhile he was injuring the vitality of his physical, intellectual and moral faculties,—when thus told, immediately he washed his hands clean from the filth, abandoned forever the dirty tyrant. What now? did he die, suffer loss? Nay, he gained everything by cutting off this right hand lust. Very soon he became another man, a new man; cheerful, happy; his health, bodily and spiritual, was vastly improved. He looked better, felt better, was better every way; far more decent, respectable. His soul caught new fire, new energy, new life. He could pray with renewed fervor, increased faith and holy zeal. O what a change, what a glorious change! Friends in the decline of life, are you addicted to this evil, this fleshly lust that wars against the soul? will you not cut loose from it, cost what it may? What an awful, fearful, horrible thing to die a slave, a tobacco sot! We are credibly informed that some persons become so saturated with this poisonous drug as to emit a stench when laid in their coffins! D. F. N.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 15, 1875.

THE CARPENTER DONATION.

The above is a front view of the fine stone-front building on Madison street, Chicago, which Mr. Carpenter proposes to give the National Christian Association for head-quarters and publishing house. Ten thousand dollars secures the occupation, and the Association hopes to raise this sum by June 10th next; and $20.000 as soon thereafter as possible to secure the ownership. Send on contributions.

EX-BISHOP KUMLER AND THE YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATIONS.

DAYTON, O., April 2, 1875.

J. BLANCHARD, Respected Brother in Christ—Greeting:—Having some business for the Cynosure, I also have a deep anxiety to know your convictions in reference to the "Young Men's Christian Associations." They are very popular, and are drawing our sons and ministers into their workings, and it seems that they are doing good. But here are my embarrassments in view of them: First, they are a separate and distinct society from the church, and consequently are only of human invention. Secondly, they are made up of Freemasons, Odd-fellows, Knight Templars, Sons of Temperance, etc. Can we be scripturally associated with such a conglomeration? Third, they have amusements (or play) connected with their assemblies. Can God's people harmessly endorse such an assembly? And fourthly, do such Associations deserve the name Christian? I stand almost entirely alone in my views about this Association, therefore I would love to have the views of older heads than mine by the Cynosure or in a private letter. Do not consider me troublesome, I am anxious to be right in all things. Yours respectfully,

HENRY KUMLER.

THE CYNOSURE'S ANSWER.

The charter of all Christian associations is given by Christ in these words: "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." Matt. xviii. 20.

Christ started no churches. He did not even baptize. But he recognized the Abrahamic church whose visibility expired with the ritual law, and left its spirit in a baptism and communion table, with a discipline to keep off "dogs, sorcerers, whoremongers, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie." A Christian association is not a church. It does not profess to take its members to the "lodge above," or to heaven. It is simply some Christians met in Christ's name to oppose evils and do good.

A sinful human invention is either a religious contrivance with Christ left out, like a lodge; or a human invention, like popery, claiming a sacred nature and divine authority. The sin begins when the human contrivance begins to claim to bind conscience and promise salvation. So the brazen serpent which was at first a mere help to faith, because an idol and a snare when made an object of faith.

The Young Men's Christian Associations will become sinful, human inventions when they begin to claim to be a substitute for a church of Christ. So will our National Christian Association. We must always keep a distinction between God's appointments and man's contrivances; even good contrivances.

Next, a human association must not be "partakers of men's sins." If, at this day, Abraham and Jacob were members of a Young Men's Christian Association, that Association would be guilty of polygamy, though once they would not when polygamy was not understood. So Young Men's Christian Associations are now becoming guilty of the hypocrisy, heathenism, blasphemy, idolatry, swindling, loafing, and general devilism of the secret orders; and they must and will cast them out or be ruined by them.

Moody's test of membership is twofold. His members must be "young men" and "Christians." They have defined a young man to be forty years and under; and Christians to be members of some "evangelical church." I do not like the last. Beecher's church is called evangelical. I incline to leave the matter where the Bible puts it, and call "Christians," all who believe Jesus Christ "has come in the flesh." This will include both church and state. Both must be Christian or infidel, and both must and will perish if they neglect Christ.

As to "plays, amusements," etc., T. K. Beecher, Henry Ward, and their followers were openly for putting cards, billiards, dancing, etc. into the social rooms of the Young Men's Christian Associations. If we profess and call ourselves Christians, that simple fact will warrant us in turning out every person and practice which a large and decided majority regard as plainly subversive of Christianity. This is our security. So the Massachusetts Bill of Rights was held by the judges to have abolished human slavery.

WHAT SHALL BE OUR NAME?

At Syracuse, after discussion, we voted, as simple citizens, to call ourselves "Americans." And Mr. Needles appropriately keeps at the head of his editorial column "The Platform of the American Party." And by our act of incorporation we are simply "The National Christian Association." That is to say, politically we are "Americans;" religiously we are "Christians."

The question was made at Syracuse, whether it is not arrogant in us to take the name of "Americans?" Are no others, it was asked, but a handful of Anti-masons entitled to be called "Americans?"

It was answered, "Yes, and all who are so entitled will be with us when they learn our principles and our objects." But a minion of popery who goes for the Pope's temporal power, is not an American, but an alien. So also is an adhering Freemason. He boasts his sworn allegiance to a power which reaches around the globe! Is he an American? Then our grand principle is precisely that on which America was peopled and started. "The austere principle was announced," says Bancroft, "that not even a ceremony was to be tolerated which was not required by the Word of God." This was what took the Puritans from Scrooby-manor to Holland, and from Delft-hhven to Plymouth. They might have stayed and flourished in their own country if they had been willing to practice the Masonic ceremonics, and worn the Masonic regalia required by Elizabeth and her Parliament. For this only were they branded and persecuted as Non-conformists. And events seemed to have proved their principles and justified their secession from the church and country of England. Mr. Bright's last great speech shows, as Hume, Brougham and Macauley had shown before him, that all the liberty there is in the British Constitution was put there by these same Non-conformists who "scrupled the vestments" and the ceremonies.

Now then we are Americans, and Freemasons are not: and persons and things should be called by their right names; nor are men "Christians" who worship at strange altars, whether those altars are pagan, Mormon, or Masonic. It would, perhaps, have been better if the Protestants had adhered to simple name of "Christians," and called the sect which they left, as they elect to be called, viz., "Roman Catholic." The name "Anti-mason" belies us. We are Anti-odd-fellow just as much, and anti-Jesuit more. The name "anti-secret' misstates us. We oppose Masonic fooleries at the funeral and out of the lodge, as much as we oppose Masonic secrets in the lodge. We oppose their worships more than their secrets; for the power of the system over mind is in its worships. Will the Religious Telescope and other prints consider and treat this subject or perhaps insert this article? Let us consider it at Pittsburgh and let us "all speak the same things."

WHAT ARE BISMARCK AND GLADSTONE AT?

The Papal Syllabus of modern errors condemned by the Pope in his allocutions and encyclicals, put forth in 1864, contains the following propositions which are condemned by papal authority as pestilent error. The numbers are prefixed to the propositions as they stand in the Syllabus which is a purely negative document. The church infallibly teaches the opposite affirmatives of the errors condemned.

"15. That every man is free to embrace and profess the religion he shall believe true, guided by the light of reason." Apostolic Letter, June, 1851, and Allocution, 1862

The wording is subtle. Protestants hold to, and Papists deny the right of private judgment, 'guided by the Bible.' But every man has to rely on his mind or reason to know there is any Bible.

"17. That we may entertain at least a well-founded hope for the eternal salvation of all those who are in no manner in the true church of Christ." Alloc., Dec., 1854.

False again. The Romish error is "extra excelsiam non salus est, none saved but Roman Catholics. Protestants hold that the penitent thief was saved.

"21. That the church has not the power of defining, dogmatically, that the religion of the Catholic church is the only true religion." Apos , Let., June, 1851.

That is, the church has that power.

"24. The church has not the power of availing herself of force or any direct or indirect temporal power." Aug , 1851.

This is explicit. Rome may use force!

"The church ought to be separated from the state and the state from the church." Sept., 1852.

That is, it is error not to advocate 'church and state.'

"73. A merely civil contract may, among Christians, constitute a true marriage; and it is false either that the marriage contract between Christians, is always sacrament, or that the contract is null if the sacrament be excluded" Apos., Let , Aug., 1851.

This means that all married people are living in adultery who were not united by a Catholic priest.

"78. It has been wisely provided by law in some countries called Catholic, that persons coming to reside therein shall enjoy the public exercise of their own worship." Alloc., Sept., 1852.

This too is explicit. Rome ought to suppress by force in all Catholic countries, all worships but her own.

Gladstone shows by quotations and dates given that, while himself and the English Liberals were advocating Catholic emancipation, Bishop Doyle and the other Irish Bishops declare positively against the Pope's infallibility, and against the idea that their civil allegiance was first to the Pope and afterwards to England. And that this their declaration has been reversed by "infallibility" and that the above and other horrible claims are now made part and parcel of Romanism itself!

Bismarck and Gladstone are therefore contending for the right of private judgment; for Protestant marriage; for salvation out of Rome; in short, for all that is worth living or dying for. And through the mist and craft of Popish negatives, we see Rome, with the forehead of an harlot and the wiliness of a serpent, denying to Protestants all rights which she is bound to respect; and her right to crush by "force" all opposition to her dark and terrible will.

AN INFIDEL CHRISTIAN.—H. W. Beecher's and Oliver Johnson's organ thus notices the objections of the press to the latter's editing a "Christian" paper:—

"The Christian Statesman appears to think that a man who sincerely believes that he has received communications from friends in the spirit world is, for that reason, unfit to be the editor of a Christian journal, or even to call himself a Christian. Certainly, such a belie is no proof of a Christian character, nor on the contrary, do we see that it is in any way incompatible with it. In every Christian sect, probably, in our country, there are men and women of devoted piety who hold this belief and find comfort in it. They may be mistaken, but to deny them, on that account, the name and character of Christians looks to us like bigotry of the narrowest type."

This is precious. There is no "bigotry" of narrow or broad type in popery. The same number of the Johnson and Beecher organ speaks of the "accomplished and eloquent (Catholic) Bishop McQuaid" of Rochester, and lauds ritualism as a useful "drill." Only think of a professed Protestant swallowing without a grimace the Pope's declaration that nobody can be saved out of his church, and condemning the Christian Statesman as bigoted for saying a spirit-worshiper is not a Christian!

THE BIBLE CAST OUT OF SCHOOLS.

It seems the Rochester Democrat has interviewed the pastors of that city on the Bible-in-the-schools question and finds the majority for putting it out. "Rev. Mr. Morehouse, Baptist, declared that he thought it wrong in principle to have the Bible read in schools. The only true course is to throw it out altogether. I am willing to concede to others the same rights and privileges I would claim for myself. I would not like to have a Catholic or Mormon Bible thrust upon me."

This ignorant Protestant who puts the Douay Bible on a level with the Book of Mormon, probably never looked into a "Catholic Bible." If he did he knows or should know that the Douay translation is a very fair one, and with a few exceptions and "notes" would be good enough to read in a Protestant school or family. The Catholics are as much opposed, or nearly so, to having their own Bible read as ours. Their object being to take away the Word of God from men and put the word of a priest in its place. Another of these Rochester Protestants (Rev. C. J. Baldwin) lauded and endorsed by Beecher, said, "I do not regard the present use of the Bible in schools as anything but a mere form, and I don't consider its removal would have any irreligious effect."

If Bible-reading in schools is "mere form" it is pity. But to forbid its use in schools, even in that case, seems to us like an insult put on its Author, and on this Protestant country. Your neighbor's visits may be few and formal, but to forbid him you house is to insult and defy him. You loose God and do not gain the Catholics by it.

NOTES.

—The column of notices reminds us that it is high time to be stirring up the Pittsburgh delegations, and Bro. Dorcas is none too soon in reminding the Iowa friends of their part in providing a representative. Word comes also from York county in south-eastern Pennsylvania that the numerous friendly churches in that region will send one (Let it be several.) to hear and speak for them.

—The fare to Pittsburgh is a matter for some time under consideration. In the midst of the general confusion of the great railroad war between lines from Chicago to the seaboard nothing definite has yet been reached. But it is certain that rates will be from 20 to 30 per cent. lower than six weeks ago. Our readers shall be informed of every movement in this direction. Meantime let every person who expects to reach the National Convention by way of Chicago, New York or Philadelphia send word as soon as possible to the Corresponding Secretary of the N. C. A. at this office.

—Another very urgent business is opened by Bro. Callender to the Pennsylvania brethren. Let his stirring appeal be heard across State lines; especially friends in Ohio and Indiana, remember the exigences of the work with you and be not like the Reubenites when Deborah and Balak arose for the relief of God's people of Israel. The report of the treasury receipts last week shows the need of definite and immediate action.

—The Trinity Methodist Episcopal church of this city lately received Dr. O. H. Tiffany from Washington city, to be their pastor. This will be another considerable addition to the Masonic order here, and Collyer (Unitarian) and Forrester (Universalist) will have to stand aside for the party who officiated with Johnson, then President, over the Douglas Monument.

—It is said that the Roman Catholic Bishops of England have agreed together to forbid English Roman Catholics joining the association known as "The Independent Order of Good Templars." The sacraments are not to be administered to any Catholic who, after being warned, continues a member of it.

—On the 24th of March the dwelling of Mr. Samuel Hale of Mallet Creek, Ohio, took fire during his absence and in a high wind, and was soon entirely destroyed with most of its contents, including a valuable library. The loss will be $1,000 above the insurance. Mr. Hale will have the sincere sympathy of the friends of the reform of whom he has been among the most earnest. During the past year he has given some fifty lectures against the lodge mainly in north-eastern Ohio, and has circulated a large amount of literature on the same subject. We hope the late severe loss will be only a brief hindrance to his useful labors in this direction.

—The public exposition of the first three degrees of Masonry by Edmund Ronayne (our "Royal Arch") at the Hall of Bremer Street School last Sunday evening was not so fully attended as it deserved, about a hundred being present. The regular initiation of a candidate in proper costume was gone through in proper form. Mr. Ronayne having been Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, in Chicago and thoroughly understanding the business. Of course the lodge will ignore this spirited attack on the "order" as long as possible, and prevent any notice of the press that would arouse public interest; but their game will soon be played out. Chicago is Masonic headquarters for the North-west, and the seat of the Grand Lodge of the State. The fifty-one lodges here cannot long stand so thorough an exposition of their shameful "work," and the public will no doubt hear something more on this case ere long.

—In the Masonic sketch of the Morgan excitement published last week mention was made of a missing man named Munro, whose likeness to the murdered Morgan gave the lodge as pretext, as drowning men catch at straws, to deny its guilt. A correspondent in Castle Grove, Iowa, who was made an Anti-mason in those days, lived in the same township with Munro and knew the miserable woman, his wife, was bribed to swear that the recovered body of Morgan was that of her husband.

—A Virginia grange lately buried a female member with its peculiar ceremonies, and some of the Southern papers are honestly shocked in finding what they regard as sacrilege. The Chicago Tribune regards it, however, as "a singularly beautiful and impressive ceremony" with a "touching and appropriate" ritual marred only by the final salute of the Master: "In the name of Fisherville Grange, I pronounce the words, Sister Calbreath, farewell," which it thinks was not an "absolutely awe-inspiring invocation." The Tribune might have another opinion after reading the aforesaid ritual, which is drawn up with one part for a character called the "Chaplain." Whether a person of proper moral qualities can be found in the grange or not, this part must be filled by a member; and the ritual says that and no more. Suppose "Long John" Wentworth elected to the chaplaincy of a grange, the Tribune can see what sort of a religious abortion he would make of the prayer, prescribed for the funeral occasions: "And we beseech thee, that we, with all those who are now departed in the true faith of thy holy name, may have our perfect consummation and bliss, both in body and soul, in thy eternal and everlasting glory; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen." And how the religious sensibilities would be touched by this benediction from such a chaplain: "May the grace of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ be with us all now and evermore!"

—Bro. N. Wardner, of the Wesleyan church of northeastern New York, and an earnest opponent of the "orders" was an army chaplain, and seems not to have forgotten his warlike experiences. The temperance vigilance committee of West Chazy of which he is a member lately took some damaging testimony against a liquor dealer of the place, who retaliated by causing the arrest of a witness on some trumped-up charge, and was taking him to Plattsburgh, a dozen miles away, to jail. Pastor Wardner "got wind" of the matter and determined that the witness should not suffer for anything he had done in behalf of law and order, if it could be prevented. Hastily he harnessed his old war horse, said to be the first horse entering Richmond after the surrender, and now about 24 years of age, but full of fire, and the race for Plattsburgh commenced. Burns, the liquor-dealer, had considerable the start with his prisoner, and it was evening; but at Beekmantown, half way, he stopped to get a drink, and Wardner passed him. But the old horse did not slacken his speed.

"Hill rose and fell, but his heart was gay;
For Plattsburgh was only five miles away!"

The rescuer arrived in Plattsburgh some time in advance of Burns and arranged matters so that his witness was saved from a night behind the bars and was released on bail. Though not likely to become as historic, Bro. Wardner's ride deserves to stand beside Sheridan's at Winchester, so far as motives and interests are concerned.

Religious Intelligence.

—The labors of A. B. Earle, the evangelist, in the Second Baptist Church of Chicago have been greatly blessed. On a recent Sabbath 250 expressed the determination to live the Christian life; 100 of these were from the Sabbath-school. Mr. Earle will continue these meetings in the other Baptist churches of the city. The effort to secure a general revival lately discussed by Chicago clergymen has been given up.

—The work of Messrs. Whittle and Bliss in Cincinnati has been very successful. They have engaged to conduct a series of meetings at Nashville, Tenn.

—Rev. Nathan Brown, who will be remembered as the former editor of the American Baptist, now missionary in Yokohama, Japan, writes that the new chapel of the mission was lately destroyed in a conflagration which raged before a furious cyclone and burned over a large district in that part of the city.

—A good work was begun some years ago by the pastor of the German Presbyterian church of Dubuque, Iowa, in the education of young men for the ministry. The result is a German Presbyterian Seminary, fifty churches, thirty-five ordained ministers and twenty-three students.

—In 1850 the Presbyterian church of England contained about seventy-eight congregations; in 1860 it had risen to ninety-five; in 1870 it had reached one hundred and seventeen; and in 1874 it had increased to one hundred and forty-seven congregations.

—The Unitarians have three hundred and forty-eight churches and societies in the United States and Canada. Ninety-three are without ministers, some have ministers who are not Unitarians and some pulpits are supplied by men who do not even profess to be Christians.

—At Rome, for two or three years, a very interesting military church has been gathered, from among Italian evangelical soldiers, by the evangelist Capellini. The constant change of Italian regiments, of course, causes considerable fluctuation in the membership, yet about one hundred soldiers join in each celebration of the Lord's Supper. As tracts and Bibles are distributed among these soldiers, it may be truly said that five hundred families of the one hundred cities of Italy last year recieved the Word of Eternal Life, on the return of these conscripts to their parental homes.

—The Chicago Bible Society lately held its 38th anniversary. From the reports it appears that during the year five hotels were furnished with 902 Bibles; fifty-five vessels were visited and supplied with 144 Bibles. There were given to 41 missions and church schools 624 Bibles and 603 Testaments. Nearly 500 depot passenger stations connected with the rail-roads have been supplied with one or more Bibles each the past year. About 40 stations in this county were furnished by this society with 45 Bibles. About 250 families and persons of the destitute poor with 235 Bibles and Testaments. The jail, poor-house, orphan asylum, and seamen's home were furnished with 284 Bibles and Testaments, and a special grant of 366 was made to the bridewell.

—As a result of meetings for one week in Indianapolis, the Young Men's Christian Association reports fifty conversions.

The Home Circle.

Cross Wearing.

I am crucified with Christ—
With him nailed upon the tree;
Not the cross, then, do I bear,
But the cross it beareth me.
Solemn cross on which I died,
One with him, the Crucified.

Shall I take that blood-stained cross,
Cross of agony and shame,
Cross of him who fought my fight,
Cross of him who overcame?
Shall I deck myself with thee?
Awful cross of Calvary?

Shall I drag thee through the crowd,
'Mid the slaughter that is there;
Whirl thee through the giddy waltz,
Bound upon my neck or hair?
Awful cross of Calvary,
Shall I deck myself with thee,

Shall I make that lowly cross
Minister of woman's pride,
Drawing eyes to me that should
Fix upon the Crucified?
Awful cross of Calvary,
Shall I deck myself with thee?

Shall I call this glittering gem,
Made for show and vanity—
Shall I call this gaud a cross,
Cross of him who died for me?
Shall I deck myself with thee,
Awful cross of Calvary?

—Horatius Bonar.

"It Won't Do to Die By."

A TRUE HISTORY.

John Bryson and his wife were both members of the church, what church it dosen't matter. Everybody thought that John would soon do for an officer, and as for Susan, his wife, she was an earnest, pious, lovely little woman.

Dr. Samuel Westmoreland was John's next door neighbor, and he and John soon became very intimate. They were not at all alike, either. John was a young, thrifty, well-to-do farmer, and a Christian. Dr. Westmoreland was a physician, seemingly well advanced in years, much the superior of John mentally, but, alas! an infidel; of that mild type of infidelity that contents itself with being called Universalism.

They used to go hunting, fishing, and boating together, and, at last, carousing together. Susan noticed a great change in her husband. He did not try to make arrangements for their church-going as formerly. He gave up family worship. One night he came home, certainly not sober, and cursed her when she wept. At last he openly renounced religion, and ridiculed it on all occasions.

"O John!" cried Susan, "do give up that Dr. Westmoreland's company." She plead, she entreated.

"You stop your snivelling!" was his answer, and with that he cursed her bitterly and went out. He was more ready to give up her company than the doctor's.

That night he came home beastly drunk. It was a cold, gusty night. The ground was white with snow. Susan, knowing her husband's habits, was grieved sore, lest he might be lying in some fence-corner, or in some ditch, freezing—frozen—dead. She could bear the agony of a true wife's heart no longer—had already thrown a shawl around her shoulders and was starting after him, when open flew the door and in stumbled John. With a stifled cry she was about to throw her arms around him, when he struck her back from him. The blow did not hurt her, but her heart was bleeding. She sunk back into a chair, and the pent-up sorrow of years—such years—such long, long, weary years—broke forth into a wail that might have stirred the heart of the dead.

"Woman!" cried John, now somewhat sobered, but none the less brutal, "what do you mean by this? Ho!" and his eyes lit upon the open family Bible, "it is this, is it? This is what put these notions into your head?"

She sprang forward too late. The precious book, with the lock of hair of her precious little dead baby—her only child—in it, with the precious pages that she had kissed and wept over, was in the flames, and her own husband stood grim sentinel over it, poked it with the tongs, spit on it, cursed it, gathered up the stray leaves that flew out, and threw them in, and when the last shred was burned, threw himself down upon the bed in a drunken sleep. Susan watched and wept.

There was one little Testament left. But, alas! John came across it the very next day; he turned to the fireplace to throw it in, but the fire was out. So to the door he went, and threw the little book with all his might out into the road, and slammed the door to. "Woman!" he said, so addressing her that he had once called "Susie, darling," "never do you let any such trash come into this house again. I tell you I won't have it! Do you hear? If you don't you and I will fight; that's all."

And then, with the air of a man that had conquered a woman, he marched out and went to his accustomed haunts at the tavern.

I have heard one of the neighbors say that she saw Susie watch the form of her husband go down the road toward Dr. Westmoreland's. Then she went out weeping, picked up the little, soiled, torn book, kissed it, hid it in her bosom, looked up weeping, and then threading her way through a narrow thicket, down to an old-oak tree, hid the little book under one of its gnarled branches. Often would she go down to this trysting-place with her God, and weep as she read in her book of that home "where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest."

Of course, such a life as John was leading must have an end, and so the time came for him to die. He lay sick two weeks, and they were weeks that sorely fretted his untamed spirit. Never wife waited on husband more tenderly, than that broken-hearted woman did on him. But her words, her every step across the floor, at length her every presence, seemed to pain him, and his mind was wrapped in thought, the only expressions of which were curses against God. At last he sent for Dr. Westmoreland. As soon as the doctor entered he broke out,

"O doctor, I want you to comfort me. I feel that I must die. I see it. You know it. You told Susan so. My God, doctor! what must I do? I have suffered hell these past two weeks. Help me!"

"Ah, John!" answered the doctor, with a helpless sort of look in his face, "our religion is a first-rate one to live by. It dosen't suit so well to die by."

Had a thunder-clap come out of a clear sky, it would not have astonished John more than this answer. It was the smiting down of his last hope. "Then," cried he, "that cursed book is true, and I am lost!" He never heard nor uttered a word more after that.

Reader, I have given you a page out of a true history. I have not altered even the names of the parties. They are all dead now, so it does not matter. Dr. Westmoreland died last of all, and on his dying bed sent for a poor, old, blind negro-slave to pray for him. He saw that his religion "wouldn't do to die by," and so he yearned after the crumbs of comfort this poor slave could give him.

Have you ever heard of any religion but the religion of Jesus that will do to die by?—Am. Messenger.

Christian Sensitiveness.

The church of God seems to have lost her delicacy of touch and sensation. There are some members of Christ's body who do things in business they ought not to do, and they are not conscious of doing wrong, because they have not got enough life in them to be delicately sensitive of the approach of sin. Some good people neglect their Christian duty, and they are scarcely aware of it; they do not attach any importance to it, because they have not life enough to make them sensitive. If we are ever to do anything for God, we must get back the delicate touch of abundant life. There are some persons who may lose an arm and scarcely suffer so much as another having an ordinary wound, because these are constituted with abundance of life. There is something in the constitution of the brain that makes them sensitive all over, and they will have greater pain. Do not try to escape from spiritual pain. I would like to feel the burden of the Lord pressing upon me day and night, till the thought of a soul being lost will not let me rest. There is not the feeling that there ought to be; and till God gives us life which will make us feel for sinners so as to weep over cities as Christ did, we will not see any great work done. The Lord make us ministers, especially, to be delicately sensitive against everything that is wrong and would lead us to neglect the souls of others! We want to have more and more of that delicacy and quickness of apprehension. We read of our Lord that he was quick of understanding. We want to be just like that.

You who employ servants know the difference between those who must be told every time there is a thing to be done, and those others whose eye is on their mistress; just a look from you, and that is enough. You need not speak at all; they know what they shall do, and do it with alacrity. We want that kind of delicacy restored to us, that we shall know the Lord's will quickly, and not be as the horse or the mule, but ready to be moved at once by the will of God. We should not be like the 'Great Eastern,' that wants a huge wave to move it, but like the feather on the lake, that is driven along by the softest breath of the gale. Oh, to be delicately apprehensive of the mind of God, to know it; and to follow it! Sometimes life in certain parts of the body has been cultivated to such a high degree, that our bodily system is capable of much more than it has ever displayed. Look at the red Indian, as he puts his ear to the ground and listens, and he says, 'They come!' Just so, if our ears get quickened, we shall hear the footsteps of the coming Lord, and say, when others hear it not, 'He comes!' We shall be like the Highland woman at Lucknow, who cried, 'They are coming, they are coming!' She could hear the music of the Highlanders. Oh, to be able to hear the music of heaven, and to say—

'Home of my soul, how near at times
Thy golden gates appear!'

to get sensitive to unseen things, and realize and see the things that are yet to be revealed to us!—Spurgeon.

True Politeness.

This crowning grace of character cannot be learned or acquired by the study of etiquette books. They indeed are useful as manuals of social intercourse, and may help one in the observance of conventional rules, but they cannot make the true lady or the true gentleman. Genuine politeness strikes its roots far below the surface, deep in the heart, and blossoms out in all the little acts of life.

He whose pulse beats in time with the great pulse of humanity, who feels that "every human heart is human," bears about within him the very elemental soil from which true courtesy spontaneously springs. This large affinity characterizes all truly great souls and constitutes an essential part of their greatness. Some of the manifestations of its presence are perfect simplicity of manner, entire absence of all acting for effect, total unconsciousness of self. We see these in persons who have traveled extensively in our own and other countries, and who have thus been so thrown into sympathetic relations with people of various nationalities and civilizations that their citizenship is consciously cosmopolitan. We see it in philanthropists who may all their lives have lived in the narrow precincts of a single township, yet whose benevolent activities have brought them in direct personal contact with the poor, the ignorant, the degraded, the unfortunate, no less than with the happy, the wealthy, the prosperous, the intelligent. There is no need of circumnavigating the earth to acquire this largeness of heart whence true politeness springs, since nearly every neighborhood furnishes fitting representatives of all conditions of the race, and at our very doors we may communicate, if we will, with China, with Ethiopia, with almost every type of humanity.

In a great many neighborhoods there is found a certain class that pride themselves on their blood, or their correctness of deportment, or their discrimination of character, and think the best way of asserting themselves is to pass those socially beneath them without recognition. This spirit once manifested in a commnnity is as contagious as small pox or scarlet fever, and almost as mischievous, and soon infects all save the truly healthful souls in the place.

These, breathing the high atmosphere of universal sympathy, untainted by the narrow prejudices that torment and gangrene lean and meager souls, can afford a kind word or glance to all they meet, giving the faithful laborer due recognition on account of the manhood that is in him and the substantial good he renders society, lightening the heart of the humble servant girl who honestly tries to do her duty and who in her sphere is as indispensable as the sun in his, giving the meed of just appreciation and due respect to all, however high or low their station or calling.

Politeness has been called "benevolence in little things." From the very nature of this definition it appears that this benevolence in little things can only come from a large, a universal benevolence of heart from which all smaller streams flow as rivulets from a common fountain.

Instead, then, of placing great stress on the mere outside show, poring over books on how to behave, practising poses before the mirror, let the weightier matters of the law—real kindliness of feeling toward everybody, broad and catholic sympathies with all classes of people—let these be cultivated, and all little matters of etiquette will take care of themselves.—N. Y. Tribune.

Human Sacrifices in Orissa.

If you will look on the map of Hindustan, you will see a strip of country bordering on the Bay of Bengal, and called Orissa. In the hill districts of Orissa there live some wild tribes called Khunds. Among them female infanticide and the offering up of human sacrifices prevails to a fearful extent. The British government are doing all in their power to suppress these cruel rites and put a stop to this awful waste of human life. Since 1836 they have rescued 2,000 victims, men, women and children.

Of the children rescued, many have been sent by the British government to missionary schools, and some of them, after having grown up in the knowledge and the love of the Savior, have returned to their native hills to assist in establishing and carrying on schools and mission work among their barbarous countrymen.

I will tell you about two boys who were rescued by British officers from the hands of the cruel Khunds. One of them after having grown up, married a girl, who, like himself, had been delivered from an awful death, and brought through the missionaries into the knowledge and love of the Lord Jesus, and they both have gone to carry the message of life and love to their native hills. The name of the lad was Joy Sing. He had once witnessed a human sacrifice by stealth. He had seen the Khunds assembled at the place of sacrifice, arrayed in gala dress, some with bear-skins and peacock tails hanging from their shoulders; others with the graceful plumes of the jungle-cock waving over their heads. He watched their frenzied dances to the music of rude pipes and kettle-drums, and saw the priest and his assistants putting a living child in the cleft of a small tree, split for the purpose, the parts of the tree closing upon its body and holding it fast. At the appointed signal he saw the crowd rush forward with savage cries and cut the flesh from the bones of their writhing victim. When he himself was afterwards made prisoner and learned that he was to be the next sacrifice, can you wonder at the horror with which he looked forward at the awful death that awaited him? Can you wonder at the eagerness with which he seized every opportunity of escape, or at the determination with which he strained every nerve to obtain his freedom? His first effort was unsuccessful. After traveling two days through the jungles, he was recaptured and put in irons. The second time, heavily fettered though he was, he traveled for two days and nights, but on reaching the foot of the mountains, to his great dismay, he saw his relentless pursuers behind him. But through the watchful Providence whose tender mercies fail not, it so happened that an English officer was encamped not far off. To this encampment the poor fellow hastened with all possible speed, and reaching the officer's tent, made known his thrilling tale with signs and tears, and looks of unspeakable despair and agony. His irons were struck off, and he was made over to the missionaries at Basore, who would care not only for his temporal, but spiritual welfare.

The other boy, whose story I am sure will interest you, was called David. David was a clumsy, awkward lad, so dull and stupid, that the most painstaking efforts to teach him seemed to be utterly useless, and he was thought fit only to be employed as sweeper for the mission premises. About that time God's spirit seemed to be poured out upon the school, and many of the boys and girls received the waiting Saviour into their hearts. All at once a ray of heavenly light seemed to pierce poor David's darkened mind. He began to search the Scriptures most eagerly, and all were astonished at his questions and answers. After suitable instruction and examination he was received into the church. As he seemed to have wakened up into new life, and to have received new powers of body and mind, he was permitted to enter the printing-office. Here his proficiency amazed every one, and he made rapid advances in his new business. But soon after being promoted to the rank of compositor, alarming white spots were seen on his skin, and before long it was but too evident that David had that most dreadful of Eastern diseases—leprosy. It was in a rapid form, and soon his limbs were much eaten away. So, to keep the disease from spreading in the school, he was given a tent for his own use. On Sabbath days he would crawl to the door of the church and listen to the services, and Mr. Sutton, the missionary in charge, said he had never beheld a more interested listener.

One day Mr. and Mrs. Sutton went to pay him a visit, they found him lying on his mat with an open hymn-book in his hand, and his eyes fixed on the following verses:

Of all that decks the field or bower,
Thou art the fairest, sweetest flower;
Then, blessed Jesus, let not me
In Thy kind heart forgotten be.

Day after day youth's joys decay,
Death waits to seize the trembling prey;
Then, blessed Jesus, let not me
In Thy kind heart forgotten be.

When they left the tent, Mrs. Sutton, with much emotion, remarked to her husband, "There lies an heir of glory, for though, like Lazarus, he is full of sores, like Lazarus, also, he is rich in assured hope."

Soon after the angels carried him to the Saviour's bosom, the Saviour who had been offered in his stead, that he should not see death, but have life everlasting.—Interior.

Children's Corner.

Little Children.

BY ALICE CARY.

Blessings, blessings on the beds,
Whose white pillows softly bear
Rows of little shining heads,
That have never known a care.

Pity for the heart that bleeds
In the homestead desolate,
Where no little troubling needs
Make the weary working wait.

Safely, safely, to the fold,
Bring them, wheresoe'er they be;
Thou, who said'st to them of old:
"Suffer them to come to me."

How Father Cured his Horse.

Well, said Reuben, the story-teller, father always wanted a horse, because the folks in Greenville lived scattered, and he had so far to go to attend funerals and weddings, and visit schools, you know; but he never felt as if he could afford to buy one. But one day he was coming afoot from Hildreth, and a stranger asked him to ride.

Father said: "That's a handsome horse you're driving. I should like to own such a horse myself."

"What will you give for him?" said the man.

"Do you want to sell?" says father.

"Yes, I do, and I'll sell cheep, too," says he.

"O, well," says father, "it's no use talking, for I haven't the money to buy with."

"Make me an offer," said he.

"Well, just to put an end to the talk," father says, "I'll give you seventy-five dollars for the horse."

"You may have him," says the man, as quick as a flash, "but you'll repent of your bargain in a week."

"Why, what ails the horse?" says father.

"Ails him? He's got the 'Old Nick' in him; that's what ails him," says he. "If he has a will to go, he'll go; but if he takes a notion to stop, all creation can't start him. I've stood and beat that horse till the sweat ran off me in streams; I've fired a gun close to his ears; I've burnt shavings under him. I might have beat him to death or roasted him alive, before he'd have budged an inch."

"I'll take the horse," says father. "What is his name?"

"George," says the man.

"I shall call him Georgie," said father.

Well, father brought him home, and we boys were pleased, and we fixed a place for him in the barn, and curried him down and fed him well, and father said, "Talk to him, boys, and let him know you feel friendly."

So we coaxed and petted him, and the next morning father harnessed him, and got into the wagon to go. But George wouldn't stir a step. Father got out and patted him, and we boys brought him apples and clover-tops, and once in a while father would say, "Get up, Georgie," but he didn't strike the horse a blow. By and by he says: "This is going to take time. Well, Georgie, we'll see who has got the most patience, you or I." So he sat in the wagon and took out his skeletons—

"Skeletons?" said Poppet inquiringly.

Of sermons, you know. Ministers always carry around a little book to put things into that they think of when they are out walking, or driving, or hoeing in the garden.

Well, father sat there two full hours before the horse was ready to start; but when he did there was no more trouble for that day. The next morning 'twas the same thing over again, only Georgie gave in a little sooner. All the while it seemed as if father couldn't do enough for the horse. He was round the stable, feeding him and fussing over him, and talking to him in his pleasant, gentle way; and the third morning, when he had fed and curried and harnessed him with his own hands, somehow there was a very different look in his eyes. But when father was ready to go, Georgie put his feet together, laid his ears back, and wouldn't stir. Well, Dove was playing about the yard, and she brought her stool and climbed up by the horse's head.

"Dove, tell what you said to Georgie this morning."

"I gave him an awful talking to," said the little girl. "I told him it was perfectly 'ediculous for him to act so, that he'd come to real good place to live, where everybody helped everybody; that he was a minister's horse and ought to set a good 'sample to all the other horses, and God would not love him if he wasn't a good horse. That's what I told him. Then I kissed him on the nose."

"And what did Georgie do?"

"Why, he heard every word I said, and when I got through he felt so 'shamed of himself, he couldn't hold up his head; so he just dropped it till it 'most touched the ground, and he looked as sheepish as if he'd been stealing a hundred sheep."

Yes, said Reuben, and when father told him to go he was off like a shot. He has never made any trouble since. That's the way father cured a balky horse. And that night when he was unharnessing, he rubbed his nose against father's shoulder, and told him, as plain as a horse could speak, that he was sorry. He's tried to make it up with father ever since for the trouble he made him. When he's loose in the pasture, father has only to stand at the bars and call his name, and he walks up as quiet as an old sheep. Why, I've seen him back himself between the shafts of the wagon many a time to save father trouble. Father wouldn't take two hundred dollars for the horse to-day. He eats anything you give him. Sis often brings out some of her dinner to him.

"He likes to eat out of a plate," said Dove, "it makes him think he's folks."
—Evangelist.

News of the Week.

The City.

The general revival of business as Spring opens is encouraging to all classes. The prices of produce have been high for months and trade has been generally in favor of the country. The effect of the panic will probably have been obliterated by fall.——The 'town' elections were held as usual in the three Divisions of the city last week, run by roughs, who voted $88,000 of tax-payer's money into their own pockets. The officers of these town organizations do nothing but collect their salary. There is opposition to this rascality which will probably throw off this needless burden from the shoulders of taxpayers.

The Country.

The Illinois Legislature on Saturday broke up in a row which was almost tragic. Haines, the speaker, who is always the centerpiece of difficulties roused the factions of the House by his ruling and they began to pelt each other with law books. Haines declared an adjournment and ran like a coward. A chairman pro tem was chosen but the Democrats armed with clubs and ink-bottles threatened distruction to any one who should take the chair. The city police attempted to arrest some of the most riotous of the honorable assembly without success.——Reynolds, the Mormon, convicted of bigamy at Salt Lake a few days ago, has been senteneed to a year in the penetentiary and $300 fine. He appealed his case. Brigham Young was re-elected prophet, seer, revelator and President of the Mormon church on the annual conference on Saturday.——Property worth $500,000 was destroyed by the explosion of giant powder and fire at a bonded warehouse at San Fransisco last week. Eleven bodies have thus far been taken from the ruins, and are now in the hospital.——A fearful tornado swept over the town of Clinton, De Witt Co., Ill. last Thursday demolishing a church and several dwellings. One person was killed and a large number wounded. ——The Connecticut election last week was a complete Democratic victory; the vote for Governor being 44,301 Republican, 53,785 Democratic and 2,809 Prohibition. Three out of four Democratic Congressmen were elected. The Republicans attribute the defeat to lack of organization, though the best men in the party stumped the State. It is said that more Irishmen were naturalized than the Democratic majority who voted solidly for that party.

Foreign.

It is confidently predicted that the Republic will be formally decreed at no distant day in France.——Advices rom Rome say that the Papal nuncio to Spain has left the Vatican for Madrid, bearing instructions to the Spanish clergy to strive for the restoration of peace under King Alfonso.——Dispatches from Constantinople state that the famine in Asia Minor continues, having been greatly aggravated by the late disastrous floods. The Relief Committee is unable to meet the increasing demands. It is estimated that over forty thousand persons are receiving aid. Many families driven to distraction by hunger, have sold their children into slavery for food.——Professor Pirer, of the Madrid University, because he had the audacity to petition the throne against the late shameful educational decrees, was lately arrested, and though in ill health, was carried to Cadiz, preparatory to being shipped for a penal settlement. If Alfonso undertakes in this manner while he has a war on hand, what may be expected of his intolerance when Spain is at peace?

EXPOSITION

—:OF:—

THE GRANGE.

Illustrated with Engravings, showing the Lodge Room, Signals, Grips, etc.

EDITED BY REV. A. W. GEESLIN.

Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 1875,
BY EZRA A. COOK & CO.,
In the office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, D. C.

CULTIVATOR DEGREE CONTINUED.

Assistant Steward to Candidates:—I will now conduct you to the Master.

Master to Assistant Steward:—Whom bring you here?

Assistant Steward to Master:—Brothers, seeking instruction.

Master to Assistant Steward:—Have they been obligated?

Assistant Steward to Master:—They have not in this degree.

Master to Candidates:—Before you go further, it is neeessary that you give us your pledge of seerecy and fidelity, whieh, however, will not conflict with your moral, social, religious or eivil duties. With this assuranee are you willing to proceed?

Candidates to Master:—I am.

Master to Assistant Steward:—Worthy Assistaut Steward, you will please place the Candidates at the altar with the right hand over the heart. (Calls up.)

Master to Caudidates:—You will repeat after me this

OBLIGATION:

I hereby solemnly renew my obligation of sceresy aud fidelity, taken in the first degree of this Order; and further promise, upon my sacred honor, to keep the secrets, fulfil the obligations, and obey the injunctions of the seeond degree, and aid my brothers and sisters in doing the same. (Calls down.)

Assistant Steward places a box of dry sand and a small dish of shelled eorn on the altar for the Master who takes a few kernels in the palm of the left hand and exhibits them to the candidates and says: "Brothers, we are now to teaeh you how to plant the seed. Behold it; inanimate kernels of corn, but the germ has life, the future plant is there. We loosen the soil, we bury the sced; and in so doing let us impress upon our minds the truth of the immortality of the soul. There is no other object found in nature, in which, to appearance, life aud death border so closely together as in the grains of seed buried in the earth, but when life seems extinet, a fuller and rieher existence begins anew. From this little seed, we have first the blade, then the ear, then the full eorn in the ear. So with the mind, which is the soil wherein we plant the seed of knowledge. As we sow, in like manner shall we reap. Let us also fertilize our minds with the virtues of Love, Truth, and Charity that never fail to add vigor and happiness to life, so that at our final harvest, when our Heavenly Father shall garner the ripened grain in the Paradise above, it may be worthy of his care.

SONG.

"Are we sowing seeds of kindness?
They shall blossom bright ere long,
Are we sowing seeds of discord?
They shall ripen into wrong.
Are we sowing seeds of honor?
They shall bring forth golden grain.
Are we sowing seeds of falsehood?
We shall yet reap bitter pain."

Assistant Steward to Candidates:—I now introduce you to our worthy Patroness, Ceres.

Ceres to Candidates:—As we look around us on this earth and see the beautiful transformations of seeds into attractive plants, or majestie trees, we have but another lesson taught us of the wondrous works of God. And if the beauties of this world, when rightly viewed, offer so much of the magnificence of the Creator to charm us here, what must be the sublime grandeur of that Paradise above, not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

Assistant Steward to Candidates:—Next listen to Flora.

Flora to Candidates:—In exhibiting to you these flowers, symbols of the poetry of nature, let me entreat you to encourage their culture, as well as study their forms aud beauty; endeavor to surround your dwelling with the twining vine, or graceful, climbing plants, remembering always there is no spot on earth so rude as not to be refined by their presence, and noue so adorned as not to be graced by their beauty and fragrance. Flowers are ever welcome; in the hour of sadness we turn to them for comfort, and in the hour of joy the boquet is a fitting companion to the festal gathering, and the rose, with its associations of purity, never looks so enchanting as when it decks the brow of beauty, or the breast of innocence and peace. Above all remember amid all that is bright and beautiful in nature, there is nothing that blooms with such unfading colors—there is no perfume on earth fraught with such fragrance as the flowers of good works, and the sweet-smelling savor of that pity which feels for the wants and relieves the distress of our sisters and brothers.

Assistant Steward to Candidates:—And now listen to Pomona.

Pomona to Candidates:—Brothers, of all the varied productions of the soil, fruits, in their almost endless variety, are the only portion of our food which nature furnishes ready for our immediate use, and by this we are admonished that fruit should form a large portion of our daily nourishment. But to secure such supply in pleasing and wholesome variety, we must plant and cultivate. It is enjoined particularly upon you, to allow no returning Spring to pass, without planting one fruit-tree and one vine, hoping thereby that your labor will help hasten the advent of that glorious time, when every one may sit under his own vine and fruit-tree, and every heart be made glad by the yield thereof.

Assistant Steward to Candidates:—We will now proceed to the Lecturer.

Assistant Steward to Lecturer:—Worthy Lecturer, we come to you for instruction.

Lecturer to Candidates:—My friends, of all the instrumentalities for smoothing the wrinkled brow of care, tranquilizing the mind of the suffering invalid, for elevating the mind to higher and nobler purposes aud for making life happy, there is nothing more powerful than a home surrounded with the wealth of nature displayed in trees, fruits and flowers. Plant them, not for the present only, but for the future; while you enjoy life erect your own monument. Plant an orchard, and when your children and children's children, or the stranger, shall rest beneath its shade and eat the fruit thereof, your name will be spoken with praise. If he that causes two blades of grass to grow where but one grew before is greater than he who conquers an empire, how much greater is one that leaves for his descendants a bountiful supply of fruit?

Assistant Steward to Candidates:—I will now conduct you to our Worthy Master, that you may receive the implements used in this degree.

While going to Master's Desk the following song is sung.

SONG.

We can never be too careful,
What the seed our hands shall sow;
Love from love is sure to ripen,
Hate from hate is sure to grow.
Seeds of good or ill we scatter
Heedlessly along our way;
But a glad or grievious fruitage
Waits us at the harvest day.

Master to Candidates:—The tools used by us in this degree are the hoe and pruning knife. Where we cultivate the soil and eradicate the weeds. The hoe is emblematical of that cultivation of the mind furnished by study, keeping our thoughts quickened and ready to apprehend, or apply new facts as they appear, to eradicate error, and promote the growth of knowledge and wisdom. The pruning knife is used by us to remove useless, and injurious growth from our trees, plants, and vines, and should remind you of that proper degree of restraint, so necessary to improve yourself, to keep your passions within due bounds, and prevent your fancy from leading you astray after the vanities and vices of the world; ever bearing in mind that as Laborer's and Cultivator's in field, orchard, and vineyard, mental worth ranks before worldly wealth or honors, and that as a cultivator, you, in our glorious fraternity, can justly claim to belong to the only true nobility of the land. I will now instruct you in the signal, pass-word, sign, and salutation of this degree.

Sign Cultivator Degree.

SIGNAL AT OUTER DOOR: Three raps, (same as in "Laborer.")

SIGNAL AT INNER GATE: Three raps.

PASSWORD AT OUTER GATE: Adam, (same as in "Laborer.")

PASSWORD AT INNER GATE: Cultivator.

SIGN FIRST POSITION: Conceal the thumb in palm of right hand, by passing it forward in the hand, to the junction of the third and fourth fingers with the hand, (same as in "Laborer"), arm hanging by the side, throw palm of hand outward.

SECOND POSITION: Bring forearm up to a horizontal position. The palm will now be upward, the thumb still lying in palm, fingers pointing straight outward, then let the arm fall again to side. The sign of this degree signifies that a good Cultivator nurtures hope.

Second Position.

I now greet you as a Cultivator, and our worthy Steward will see that work is assigned you.

REMARKS ON CULTIVATOR DEGREE.

Those who seek iuitiation in this degree seek instruction in "planting and cultivating" not their fields particularly, but their minds. You will notiee this in sueh statements as the following: "Their CONDUCT is fenced with circumspection." "Their heaviest blows fall on Ignorance and Superstition." "In deep study they seek the truth, and by straightforward conduct they secure esteem." By careful inquiry they find prejudice removed," aud also in the following address of the Chaplain to Candidates:—Brothers, the springing seed teaches us benevolence; the growing trees teach kindness, and all the labors of the Husbandman and his surroundings beget refinement of feelings and kindly sentiments. In no occupation does a man's daily labor bring him in such close companionship with the Great Creator as in the cultivation of the soil. Be therefore free from selfishness. If thine enemy hunger feed him. Do good, hoping for nothing again and your reward shall be great. Love one another. Be charitable and impress on your heart the teachings of Paul, who said, "Though I speak with the tongues of men aud of angels and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of propheey, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge, and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. And though I give my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity it profiteth me nothing."

The obligation of the first degree imposing upon candidates the bond of honesty and charity towards all Patrons of Husbandry and leaving their conduct towards people in general to be good or bad according to their own pleasure, in the Cultivator degree is reaffirmed. A further obligation to obey the injunctions of the second degree is also taken. The first part of the obligation binds those who take it to keep the ceremony secret under pain of being forever disgraced. The injunction of the Chaplain is, to be free from selfishness. Hence if a candidate finds any good thing in the secret work of the Grange, his obligation, enforced by a fearful penalty, binds him selfishly to conceal it, while his injuction, with no penalty attached, binds him to reveal it. In this confusion and conflict of obligation and injunction the injunction is entirely neutralized and simply shines like brazen jewelry, to beguile the innocent and enrich the knaves who vend it for gold. The master desires candidates to learn from seed buried in the earth that the soul is immortal and that at death a fuller and richer existence begins. Thus fragments of truth, or half-truths (which in effect are usually falsehoods), are arranged so as to confuse any clear impressions of the atonement and salvation through Christ and Christian integrity in general.

In publishing this ritual we have not only the satisfation that we are exposing a fraud, but also that, in a measure, we are separating the elements of the Grange mixture and are giving to the real patrons of husbandry good suggestions about diligence, mercy to the animals, keeping tools in order, keeping fences well repaired, cultivating flowers and fruit, without the poison of bondage to selfish and malignant obligations, the disgrace of blind submission to men and their arbitrary, sinful rules, and the sin of receiving a religion which "abideth not in thedoctrine of Christ."

SHEPHERDESS, OR SECOND DEGREE FOR LADIES.

Lady Assistant Steward with Lady Candidates retires to Anteroom where they are clothed with white veils, covering head and face. She then gives the signal and Steward says:

Worthy Overseer, an alarm.

The Overseer inquires:—Is the signal correct?

Steward to Overseer:—I so consider it.

Overseer to Steward:—Satisfy yourself that those seeking admittance are duly qualified, and, if so, admit them.

Steward opens door and says:—What brings you here at this hour?

Lady Assistant Steward:—I come with my companions to assist them in securing the promotion which they seek.

Steward:—Your attention is worthy of commendation; enter and pass to our worthy Overseer.

SONG.

Sow in the morn thy seed,
At eve hold not thy hand;
To doubt and fear give thou no heed,
Broadcast it o'er the land.

And duly shall appear,
In verdure, beauty, strength,
The tender blade, the stalk, the ear,
And the full corn at length.

Lady Assistant Steward to Overseer:—Worthy Overseer our sisters desire to be advanced to the second degree.

Overseer to Candidates:—Sisters, it is well. The duty is emblematical and will be fully explained. It will be necessary for you to place a tribute upon our altar; I therefore give each of you a rose. (Either real or artificial is given; real, if obtainable, is preferred.) You will now be conducted to our worthy Chaplain.

Lady Assistant Steward to Chaplain:—Worthy Chaplain, our sisters desire instruction from you as they advance.

Chaplain to Candidates:—My worthy sisters, the care of the flocks is one of the most ancient on record, and history tells us that Abel, in the simplicity of a shepherd's life, took a pleasure in practising all the social virtues. The first oblation made to God and which met his favor, was that of Abel's, which consisted of the milk of his herds and the firstlings of his flocks. It was to the shepherds abiding in the fields and keeping watch over their flocks at night, that the angel of the Lord came with the glad tidings of great joy, that the Saviour was born; and and to them the heavenly host sang, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." Our Saviour symbolized the flocks in his parable of the Good Shepherd, and the lamb has ever been held emblematical of purity and innocence. It is in this light we, in this fraternity, desire to look upon woman, and in our teachings we aim to inculcate all these virtues, which will make her noble and beloved. Wherever you go, whatever your calling, aim to do good. Good deeds are ever fruitful.

SONG AFTER CHAPLAIN'S CHARGE.

Nay, speak no ill! a kindly word
Can never leave a sting behind;
Then let us reach a higher mood,
The noblest summit of the mind;
For life is but a passing day,
To the oldest how brief its span;
Then in the little time we stay,
Let's speak of all the best we can.

They are now led to the altar where each lays her rose on the open Bible.

Lady Assistant Steward to Master who meets them at the altar:—Worthy Master, our sisters have brought their tributes to our altar.

Master to Candidates:—Worthy sisters, your tribute is accepted. This is God's Holy Word, and thereon fair hands, prompted by pure hearts, have dropped roses, emblems of everlasting love. As their fragrance claims our admiration, so may the teachings of this book inspire you with hope. Nevertheless let no hope allure or fear deter thee from doing that which is right, so shalt thou be prepared to meet all events with an equal mind. To entitle you to further privileges in our Order, you will be required to give a pledge of fidelity. (Calls up and gives same obligation as Cultivator. See the obligation of that degree page 33).

Lady Assistant Steward to Lecturer:—Worthy Lecturer, our sisters desire further instruction.

Lecturer to Candidates:—Sisters, it is a noble employment, and well worthy of woman, to constantly study the book of nature, to learn in it the truths which may remind us of the immense greatness of God, and our own littleness of his blessings and the obligations which they impose upon us. Nature is in small objects what she is in great ones. There is no less harmony in the construction of the mite than in the elephant. Every grain of sand is filled with cavities and these are the homes of insects. The mold on decayed substances presents a thick forest of trees and plants. When we consider that nature never repeats, that of everything that exists, from the smallest to the greatest, no two are alike, we are filled with awe and amazement. Let your minds be nurtured to study these wonders of the Great Creator, and, as you advance in our Order still further truths will be taught you.

SONG.

"Thou canst not toil in vain,
Cold, heat, and moist, and dry,
Shall foster and mature the grain,
For garners in the sky."

Lady Assistant Steward to Master:—Worthy Master, we now come for your welcome.

Master to Candidates:—My worthy sisters, may the simple lessons you have received, be engrafted upon your minds, cultivate the seed thus planted, that it may yield a hundred fold, and let me, in extending the right hand of fellowship urge you to know thyself. Remember thine own dignity, nor dare to descend to evil or meanness. Be generous. Whilst the poor groaneth on the bed of sickness, whilst the unfortunate languish in the horrors of a dungeon, or the hoary head of age lifts up a feeble eye to thee for pity, aid them to the extent of thy ability. When the fatherless call upon thee, when the widow's heart is sunk and she implorcth thine assistance, remember and pity her affliction and extend thy hand to those who have none to help them. I will now give you the sign, signal, password and salutation of this degree. The sign of this degree signifies that a good shepherdess nurtures hope. The sign, signal and salutation (which is the sign) is the same as Cultivator Degree.

PASS-WORD AT OUTER GATE:—Ceres.

PASS WORD AT INNER GATE:—Shepherdess.

And now accept the right hand of fellowship and the congratulations of your associates.

SONG.

"Go gladly, with true sympathy,
Where want's pale victims pine,
And bid life's sweetest smiles again
Along their pathway shine."

HARVESTER, OR THIRD DEGREE FOR MEN.

Assistant Steward signals at the door.

Steward to Overseer:—Worthy Overseer, an alarm.

Overseer to Steward;—You will see who gives it.

Steward:—Who gives the alarm?

Assistant Steward to Steward:—Brothers who, having served faithfully as Laborers and Cultivators, desire to be instructed and receive employment as Harvesters.

Steward:—Tarry until I make their request known to the Overseer.

Steward to Overseer:—Worthy Overseer, brothers seek employment in the harvest field.

Overseer to Steward:—Let them be admitted that we may learn their qualifications.

Steward to Candidates:—Brothers, you will be conducted to our worthy Overseer.

Assistant Steward to Overseer:—Worthy Overseer, I bring brothers for the harvest-field.

Overseer to Candidates:—Brothers, is it of your own free will that you desire to enter the harvest-field?

Candidates to Overseer:—It is.

Overseer to Assistant Steward:—Worthy Assistant, have they been duly examined?

Assistant Steward to Overseer:—They have.

Overseer to Assistant Steward:—Have they been duly taught how to select good seed and how to plant it?

Assistant Steward to Overseer:—They have.

Overseer to Assistant Steward:—You will conduct them to our Worthy Master and secure his approval.

Assistant Steward to Master:—By direction of our Worthy Overseer I bring brothers to join in the labors of the harvest.

Master to Assistant Steward:—What are their qualifications?

Assistant Steward to Master:—As Laborers, diligence; as Cultivators, faithfulness; as men, honesty and uprightness.

Master to Assistant Steward:—Your recommendation is sufficient to insure them favor. More assistance is needed in the fields; the grain is ripe and ready for the harvest. It is, however, important that none but intelligent and skillful laborers be employed. Before they enter upon their labors it will be necessary for them to receive instructions and, first of all to give us a pledge of secrecy and fidelity. Brothers, this will not not conflict with your moral, social, religious or political views. With this assurance are you willing to proceed?

Candidates to Master:—I am.

Master to Candidates:—You will be conducted to the altar and there renew your obligations. (Calls up.)

OBLIGATION HARVESTER'S DEGREE.

You will repeat after me:—I solemnly renew my promise to keep sacred the pledges of the previous degrees of this Order, and hereby pledge my sacred honor that I will faithfully observe the precepts and injunctions of this degree, reveal none of its secrets, and assist in promoting the welfare of the Order according to my ability. (Calls down.)

Master to Assistant Steward:—Worthy Assistant, having given their pledge, you will conduct them to the Lecturer.

Assistant Steward to Lecturer:—Worthy Lecturer, our brothers come for instruction to enable them to become Harvesters.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

ANTI-MASONIC BOOKS,

(Not our own Publications.)

For Sale by EZRA A. COOK & CO

13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

[FOR CATALOGUE OF PUBLICATIONS OF EZRA A. COOK & CO., See page 15.]

All books sent post paid, on receipt of retail price, but BOOKS SENT BY MAIL ARE NOT AT OUR RISK.

Books ordered by express are sold at 10 per cent. discount and SENT AT OUR RISK. Party ordering must pay express charges.

Elder Stearns' Books.

Stearns' Inquiry Into the Nature and Tendency of Masonry

With an Appendix.

SEVENTH EDITION.

338 Pages, in Cloth.....60 cents.
" " " Paper.....40 "

Stearns' Letters on Masonry.

Showing the antagonism between Freemasonry and the Christian Religion.
Price, 30 cents.

Stearns' Review of Two Masonic Addresses.

In this scathing review the lying pretentions of the order are clearly shown.
Price, 10 cents.

Levington's Key to Masonry.

This is Rev. Mr. Levington's last, and in the judgment of its author, best work on Masonry. The contents of the first chapter are as follows: "Commencement and growth of Speculative or Symbolic Freemasonry—A table showing the thing at a glance—The use that the Atheists made of it—Identical with Illuminism—Its connection with the French Revolution, and with the Irish Rebellion—The action of the British Parliament with regard to it—Proofs of its diabolical purposes—Its Introduction, doings, progress and designs in the United States."

The contents of the Eleventh chapter are thus startling:

"Knights of the Golden Circle—Graphic account of them by a seceding Knight, and remarks thereon, showing the identity of the order with Masonry—Quotations from Sir Walter Scott."

This work is thrilling in statement, and powerful in argument. 425 pages,
Price. $1.35.

Light on Freemasonry,

BY ELDER D. BERNARD,

TO WHICH IS APPENDED A

Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship by a Member of the Craft.

The whole containing over five hundred pages lately revised and republished. Price $2,00

The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages in paper cover, will be sent post paid on receipt of $1.

MASONRY A WORK OF DARKNESS

ADVERSE TO CHRISTIANITY,

And Inimical to a Republican Government
By REV. LEBBEUS ARMSTRONG,
(Presbyterian.)

A Seceding Mason of 21 degrees.

This is a very telling work and no honest man that reads it will think of joining the lodge.
PRICE, 20 cents each; $1.75 per doz., post paid

Walsh's Review of Freemasonry

REVISED EDITION,

Is a Scholarly Review of the Institution, by Rev JNO. T. WALSH.

Price 25 cts.

Finney on Masonry.

BOUND IN CLOTH, PRICE $1.00.

CHEAP EDITION,

Twenty-five dollars per hundred, by express and not less than 25 copies at that rate.

BY MAIL, POST-PAID:

Per doz.....$3 75.
Single copy,..... 35 c.

THIRTEEN REASONS
Why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

BY

REV. ROBERT ARMSTRONG.

The author states his reason clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the Lodge.

Single copy, by mail post paid..... 05
Per doz., " " " 50
" 100, express charges extra.....3 50

Act of Incorporation of the National Christian Association.

STATE OF ILLINOIS, DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

George H. Harlow, Secretary of State.

To All to whom these presents shall come—Greeting.

Whereas, a CERTIFICATE, duly signed and acknowledged, having been Filed in the Office of the Secretary of State, on the 17th day of April, A. D. 1874, for the organization of the under and in accordance with the provisions of "An Act Concerning Corporations," approved April 18, 1872, and in force July 1, 1872, a copy of which certificate is hereto attached?

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

Now, therefore, I, GEORGE H. HARLOW, Secretary of State of the State of Illinois, by virtue of the powers and duties vested in me by law, do hereby certify that the said, is a legally organized corporation under the laws of this State.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

{ SEAL. } In testimony whereof, I hereto set my hand and cause to be affixed the Great Seal of State.

Done at the city of Springfield, this 17th day of April in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, and of the Independence of the United States the ninety eighth.

GEORGE H. HARLOW,
Secretary of State.

By-laws prepared for the Nat'l Christian Association.

PREAMBLE.

WHEREAS, The undersigned citizens of the United States, Philo Carpenter, J. Blanchard, Archibald Wait, I. A. Hart, C. R. Hagerty, E. A. Cook, J. G. Terrill, O. F. Lumry, J. P. Stoddard, H. L. Kellogg, E. S. Cook and J. B. Blank, have formed themselves into a corporation, not for pecuniary profit, to be known as the National Christian Association and incorporated under an act of the General Assembly of the State of Illinois, entitled an act concerning corporations approved Apr., 1872. And

WHEREAS, The forms of law made and provided in such cases have been duly complied with and properly recorded. And

WHEREAS, The thirty-first section of said act, empowers such corporate bodies to "make by-laws, not inconsistent with the constitution of the United States, in which by-laws shall be described the duties of all officers of the corporation, society, or association, and the qualifications of the members thereof.

THEREFORE, we, the corporate members of the National Christian Association make and adopt the following

BY-LAWS.

ART. I. Any person recommended by two members of this Association, who is in sympathy with the objects of this Association and co-operating in its work may become a member on the payment of twenty-five dollars into its treasury and by receiving a two-thirds vote of all the members present at any regularly called meeting of the Association, provided, that in case any member shall object action shall be deferred until a subsequent meeting. Active connection with any of the orders which this Association is organized to oppose shall be a disqualification for membership, and any member of this Association forming such connection with a secret order or guilty of any other conduct plainly destructive of the objects and business of the Association, and which two-thirds of its members shall hold and declare to be such, shall thereby forfeit all right of membership in this Association.

ART. II. This Association shall meet annually on the third Wednesday in June at their principal place of business for the election of officers and other necessary business, but the Board of Directors shall have power to change the time and place of meeting for sufficient cause and special meetings may be called by the President with the concurrence of three members.

ART. III. Sec. 1. The officers of this Association shall be a President, Vice-president, Corresponding Secretary, Recording Secretary, Treasurer, Auditor, General Agent and Lecturer, and a Board of Eleven Directors, of whom the Corresponding Secretary shall be one, elected for a term of one year or until their successors are chosen—of whom shall constitute a quorum.

ART. IV. It shall be the duty of the President to preside at the meetings of the Association. The Vice-president shall aid the President in his official duties, and preside during his absence, and in the absence of both President and Vice-president, the Association shall choose a chairman pro tem.

ART. V. The Recording Secretary shall make a correct record of the proceedings and business transacted at the annual or other meetings of the Association, and shall keep the same in a convenient place for the use of the members.

ART. VI. The General Agent and Lecturer shall act under the instructions of the Board of Directors in carrying out the business and objects of this Association.

ART. VII. The Corresponding Secretary shall conduct the correspondence of the Association, and keep a correct record of all matters of interest and importance relating to its condition and work and with the General Agent shall submit to the Board of Directors from time to time, such business as may require their attention. He shall sign all certificates of membership, keep a correct list of the same, and perform such other duties as would naturally pertain to his office.

ART. VIII. The Treasurer's duty shall be to receive all monies and other valuables donated to the Association and receipt for the same. He shall keep a correct record of all funds received and pay them out as instructed by the Board of Directors. He shall be required to give security for the faithful performance of his duties in such sum and manner as shall by the Board of Directors be deemed sufficient to guarantee the Association against loss.

ART. IX. It shall be the duty of the Auditor to examine the financial accounts of the Association and report at each annual meeting.

ART. X. The Board of Directors shall meet soon after their election and proceed to elect their officers and organize in due form. They shall duly consider and attend to all matters referred to them by the Association, and transact such other business as the interests of the Association may require. Said Directors shall have a general supervision of the affairs of the society during the recess of the National Association. They shall have authority to act in all matters of interest to the society when the National Association is not in session, but shall not in any case divert the funds of the Association from the "business and objects" of the Association as set forth in its act of incorporation. They shall have authority to fill vacancies in any of the offices of the Association until the next regular meeting of the National Association, and may make for themselves such by-laws, rules and regulations as they may deem necessary, Provided, however, that by-laws, rules or regulations contain nothing in conflict with the act of incorporation or by-laws of the National Association. Said Board of Directors shall keep a record of all their proceedings and report their acts in detail to the National Association. They shall at the expiration of their term of office deliver to their successors all books, documents, and valuables in their possession belonging to the Association.

ART XI. The proceedings of the preceding year shall be reported in the several departments by the proper officer at each annual meeting of the National Association, and a summary of such reports shall be published in the organ of the Association.

ART. XII. All meetings of the Association and of the Board of Directors shall be opened by prayer, and the following order of Business observed as far as practicable: 1st, Call to order; 2nd, Prayer; 3rd, Reading Minutes of last meetng; 4th, Reports from Corresponding Secretary, General Agent, Treasurer, Auditor, and Directors; 5th, Reports of Committees; 6th, Reception of members; 7th, Election of officers; 8th, Miscellaneous business; 9th, Adjourn with prayer.

ART. XIII. These By-laws may be altered at any annual meeting of the Association by a two-thirds vote of the members present, provided notice with the proposed amendment shall have been published in the organ of the Association one month previous.

Home and Health Hints.

TO CLEAN CARPETS.—One teaspoonful of ammonia in one gallon of warm water, will often restore the color of carpets, even if spots have been produced by acid or alkali. If a ceiling has been whitewashed with the carpet on the floor, and a few drops are visible, this will remove it. Or, after the carpet is well beaten and brushed, scoured with ox gall, which will not only extract grease but freshen the colors—one pint of gall in three gallons of warm water, will cleanse a large carpet. Table floor-cloths may be thus washed. The suds left from a wash, where ammonia is used, even if almost cold, cleanses these floor-cloths well.

TO CLEAN PAINT.—Use but little water at once; keep it warm and clean by changing it often. A flannel cloth takes off fly specks better than cotton. Soap will remove the paint; so use but little of it. Cold tea is the best liquid for cleaning varnished paint, window-panes and mirrors. A sharp piece of wood is indispensable for cleaning corners. A saucer of sifted ashes should always be at hand to clean unvarnished paint that has become badly smoked; it is better than soap. Never put soap upon glass unless it can be thoroughly rinsed off. Wash off the specks with warm tea, and rub the panes dry; then make a paste of whitening and water, and put a little in the centre of each pane. Take a dry cloth and rub it off with a chamois skin or flannel and your windows will shine like crystals.

Those who have bad success with the ivy as a houseplant, should bear in mind that its native clime is better than ours. It cannot be expected, therefore, that the plant will so far change its habit as to thrive in a room where all the moisture is dried up by a coal-fire. Keep a basin of water on the stove to preserve the air moist; wash the leaves thoroughly with clear water once a week, and your ivies will be thrifty and beautiful the year round.

Farm and Garden.

TESTING SEEDS.—Now that spring and the planting season are approaching, it is often important to test the vitality of seeds before sowing them. Fill a box, pan or flower-pot partly with rich, mellow earth, making the upper surface perfectly smooth, and on this surface draw straight cross lines, and drop a seed at each intersection, so that they may be easily counted. Then take a wide hoop or frame, and make a bottom to it with cloth stretched across, so as to resemble a sieve. Place this upon the seed, and fill it with enough fine mould to form a sufficient covering for the seed, which should generally be four or five times the diameter of the seed for the depth. Keep the soil sufficiently moist and in a warm place. The sieve can be lifted easily and the seeds examined without disturbing them. In this way corn, wheat, clover seed, turnip seed and many other kinds can be easily tested, which may be of considerable importance where the age or freshness of the seed is not certainly known.—Country Gentleman.

STRAIGHT FURROWS.—I lay out all of my garden that I can, so as to be worked with a horse. Cabbage, cucumbers, melons, beets, turnips, and the like are in rows, and I can skim within an inch of them without breaking a leaf. Nothing is more useful to a farmer, than a handy horse who will stop exactly when directed, and who will pull steady among fruit trees and fruit bushes. The amount of work he will do in comparison with what one can do with a hoe is astonishing, and the soil is stirred to some purpose.—Dr. Cross.

ASPARAGUS.—Asparagus is easily cultivated, and a most delicious vegetable. Every farmer who has not a good thrifty bed of it should plant one this spring. Soak the seeds in tepid water twenty-four hours. Sow in rows a foot apart. Keep clean of weeds by frequent hoeing. At one or two year old transplant into permanent beds. Prepare the bed by trenching two feet deep, and mixing decayed leaves, manure and muck or leaf mould with the earth as it is returned to the pit. A good quantity of old brine or waste salt is a good addition to the mass. Lay off the bed four and a half feet wide, and draw three drills fourteen inches apart and six inches deep, lengthwise of the bed. Place the roots in the drills a foot apart taking care to spread out the roots naturally. Cover four inches deep. A sandy loam is the most suitable soil, but any well drained soil will answer. A new bed should not be cut over before the third year. Every fall a heavy mulching of good manure should be applied, which may be carefully raked off in the spring, or dug in, as the past condition of the bed may make desirable. A light dressing of salt every spring is believed to be advantageous. A well tended bed will never need replenishing.

Descriptive Catalogue of Publications of Ezra A. Cook & Co.

13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

BOOKS.

FREEMASONRY EXPOSED,

by CAP'T. WILLIAM MORGAN.

THE GENUINE OLD MORGAN BOOK:—repnhlished with engravings showing the Lodge Room, Dress of candidates, Signs, Due Gnards, Grips, Etc.

This revelation is so accnrate that Freemasons mnrdered the anthor for writing it. Thousands have testified to the correctness of the revelation and this book therefore sells very rapidly.

Price 25 cents.

Per Doz. Post Paid..... $2.00
Per hundred hy express, (express charges extra.).....$10.00

ODD FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

A complete exposition of the Lodge Encampment and Rehecca (Ladies') Degree. The Signs, Grips, &c., shown by engravings.

Single copy, post paid,.....$ 25
Per Doz., " " 2 00
Per Hnndred, Express charges extra,..... 10 00

EXPOSITION OF THE GRANGE.

EDITED BY REV. A. W. GREESLIN.

Illustrated with Engravings showing Lodge Room, Signs, Signals, etc, NOW IN PRESS; will be completed about June 1st.

All orders for 10 or more copies, with Cash, received before Jnne 1st, will be filled at 100 rates.

Single Copy, post paid..... $ 25
Per Doz., " " 2 00
Per 100 Express charges extra..... 10 00

Judge Whitney's Defense Before the Grand Lodge of Ill.

Jndge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the Lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, bronght on himself the vengeance of the Lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry.

Single Copy, post paid..... $ 20
Per Doz. " " 1 50
Per 100, Express charges extra..... 8 00

THE BROKEN SEAL.

OR PERSONAL REMINISCENCES OF THE ABDUCTION AND MURDER OF Wm. MORGAN,

By SAMUEL D. GREENE,

Price in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.
In Paper Covers per Doz. Post paid.....$4 50
" per hundred hy express (ex. charges extra $25.00

That the book is one of great interest and valne is shown by the following

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"A MASONIC REVELATION.—Mr. Samnel D. Greene is a venerable gentleman of the highest pechahility, whose statements seem to be worthy of full credence. The Broken Seal: or, Personal Reminisoences of the Morgan Abduction and Murder, is the title of a book of some three hnndred pages jnst issned by him, pnrporting to give a fnll and accnrate acconnt, from personal knowledge, of the Morgan 'abdnction,' and other masonic matters which made such an excitement in this country, now almost half a century ago."—Congregationalist and Recorder, Boston.

"We are acqnainted with Mr. Greene, and have no donht that his account is entirely reliable, and of great historic and moral interest. Capt. Wm. Morgan was Mr. Greene's neighbor in Batavia, N. Y.,, and a member of the same lodge with him at the time of the great excitement in 1826. The titles to these chapters are sufficiently exciting to give the book a large sale:—"The Storm Gathering;" "Abdnction of Morgan;" "Attempted Abdnction of Miller and his Rescne;" "What became of Morgan;" "What Morgan Actnally Revealed;" "Confession of the Murderer;" "Allegations against Freemasonry, etc."—Boston Daily News.

History of The Abduction and Murder of Cap't. Wm. Morgan,

As prepared hy Seven Committees of Citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan.

This book contains indispntahle, legal evidence that Freemasons, abdncted and Mnrdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offence than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, inclnding Morgan's wife, and no candid person after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable FREEMASONS. in the Empire State, with others were concerned in this crime.

Single Copy, post Paid,... ..... 25 cents.
Per doz. " ..... $2,00.
Per 100, Express Chargcs Extra,..... 10.00.

Valance's Confession of The Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.

This confession of Henry L. Valance, one of the three Freemasons who drowned Morgan, in the Niagara Rivcr, was taken from the lips of the dying man by Dr. John C. Emery, of Racine Connty, Wisconsin in 1848; The confession hears clear evidenco of trnthfnlness.

Single copy, post paid,..... 20 cents.
Per doz. " ..... $1.50.
Per 100 Express Chargcs Extra,..... 8.00.

The Mystic Tie or Freemasonry a League with the Devil.

This is an accornt of the Chnrch Trial of Peter Cook, and wife of Elkhart, Indian, for refnsing to support a Reverend Freemason; and their very able defence presented hy Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry, is antagonistic to the Christian Religion. Single Copy, post paid,..... 20 cents
Per dozen, post paid..... $1 50
Per hundred Express charges Extra, ... 9 00

NARRATIVESIAND ARGUMENTS,

showing the Conflict of Secret Societies with the Constitntion and Laws, of the Union and of the States.

by FRANCIS SEMPLE of Dover, Iowa.

The fact that Secret Societies, interfere with the execntion and pervert the administration of Law is here clearly proved. price 20c.

Per dozen, post paid..... $1 75
Per hnndred Express charges Extra..... 9 00

The Antimason's Scrap Book,

CONSISTING OF

21 CYNOSURE TRACTS.

In this book are the views of more than a Score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the snbject of Secret Societies.

The dangerons tendency and positive evil of organized Secrecy is here shown by the most varied and powerfnl argnments and illnstrations that have ever been given to the pnhlic.

Lecturers and others who wish to find the best arguments against the Lodge, should send for this book.

Those who wish to circulate Antimasonic Tracts onght to have the book to select from.

Single Copy, post paid, ...20 cents.
Per Doz. " $1.75
Per 100, Express charges Extra,.....$10.00

PHELPS' SECRET SOCIETIES Ancient and Modern.

A NEW BOOK OF GREAT INTEREST.

This work is particnlarly commended to the attention of Officers of The Army and Navy, The Bench and The Clergy.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

"THE ANTIQUITY OF SECRET SOCIETIES, THE LIFE OF JULIAN, THE ELEUSINIAN MYSTERIES, THE ORIGIN OF MASONRY, WAS WASHINGTON A MASON? FILMORE'S AND WEBSTER'S DEFERENCE TO MASONRY, A BRIEF OUTLINE OF THE PROGRESS OF MASONRY IN THE UNITED STATES, THE TAMMANY RING, MASONIC BENEVOLENCE, THE USES OF MASONRY, AN ILLUSTRATION, THE CONCLUSION."

Single Copy, Post Paid..... 5c
Per Doz " " " $4 75
Per Hundred, Express Charges Extra.....$33 00

MINUTES OF THESYRACUSE CONVENTION,

Containing addresses hy Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. D. Greene, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbnn, Rev. S. D. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. Unpnhlished Reminiscences of the Morgan Times, by Elder David Bernard; Recollections of the Morgan Trials, as related by Victory Birdseye, Esq., and presented by his danghter, Mrs. C. B. Miller; Secretary's report; roll of delegates; songs of Mr. G. A. Clark; paper hy Enoch Honeywell; Constitntion N. C. A.; reports of committees, and a report of the political meeting.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion.

A clear cntting argument against the Lodge, from a Christian stand point.

Single Copy.....$ 05
Per 100..... 3 00

SERMON ON MASONRY,

BY REV. W. P. M'NARY,

Pastor United Presbyterian Church, Bloomington, Ind.

This is a very clear, thorongh, candid and remarkably consice Scriptnral argnment on the character of Freemasonry.

Single Copy, Post Paid,..... 5
Per Doz,..... 50
Per Hnndred, Express Charges Extra.....$3 00

COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES.

Their Customs, Character and the Efforts for their Suppression.

BY H. L. KELLOGG.

Containing the opinion of many rominent College Presidents, and. others, and a FULL ACCOUNT OF THE MURDER OF MORTIMER LEGGETT

Single Copy, post paid.....$ 35
per Doz " " 2 50
per 100Express charges extra..... 15 00

ANTIMASONIC TRACTS.

WE NOW HAVE 22 ENGLISH TRACTS, ONE GERMAN, AND ONE SWEEDISH These tracts are sold at the rate of $1.00 per 1000 pages.

A Tract Fund for the Free Distribution of Tracts,

HAS BEEN SECURED AND WE HOPE WILL NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fnnd a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE.

Many of onr most ea rnest workers in this canse of God are poor men, who wonld be glad to circnlate thonsands of pages of Antimasonic literatnre if they could have them free.

SHALL WE NOT HAVE AN INEXHAUSTIBLE TRACT FUND?

"THE ANTI-MASONS SCRAP BOOK."

Contains onr 21 Cynosnre Tracts, bonnd together, price 20 cents. See advertisement.

Address EZRA A. COOK & Co.,
13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

TRACT NO. 1:

HISTORY OF MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT J. BLANCHARD, OF WHEATON COLLEGE.

This is now pnblished in three tracts of four pages each. Price of each, 50 cents per 100; $4 per 1000.

TRACT No. 1, PART FIRST—Shows the origin of Speculative Freemasonry, and is entiled "HISTORY OF MASONRY."

TRACT No. 1, PART SECOND—Is entitled "DESPOTIC CHARACTER OF FREEMASONRY"

TRACT No. 1, PART THIRD—Is entitled "FREEMASONRY A CHRIST-EXCLUDING RELIGION."

TRACT NO. 1, IN SWEDISH;

translated hy Prof. A. R. CERVIN. A 15-page tract at $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 2:

MASONIC MURDER,

By REV. J, R. BAIRD, of Pleasantville, Pa., a seceding Mason who has taken 17 degrees. A 2-page tract at 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 3:

SECRETS OF MASONRY,

BY ELI TAPLEY.

This is a 4-page Illnstrated Tract, showing the signs, grips and pass-words, of the first three degrees. 50 cents per 100, or $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 4:

GRAND! GREAT GRAND!!

BY PHILO CARPENTER.

This is a 2-page tract, calling the attention of the pnblic to the despotic and ridicnlons titles of Freemasonry. Price 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1,000.

TRACT. NO, 5:

Extracts From Masonic Oaths and Penalties, as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.

This tract is a reprint of a tract pnblished in 1834, and is a very weighty docnment. A 4-page tract at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 6:

Hon. John Quincy Adams' Letter.

Giving His and His Father's Opinion of Freemasonry (1831.);

AND

Hon. James Madison's Letter,

Giving His Opinion of Freemasonry (1832).

Both of these letters, in one 4-page tract, at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 7:

SATAN'S CABLE-TOW.

A 4-page tract. This is a careful analysis of the character of Masonic oaths, and shows them to be most blasphemous and nnchristian; and the Masonic Cable Tow is clearly shown to be the Cable Tow by which Satan is leading thousands to eternal death. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 8:

Is a 2-page donble tract, "ILLUSTRATED." The first page represents a Mason proclaimimg the wonderful wisdom and benevolenco of the order, with an article below, entitled "Freemasonry is only 152 Years Old," and gives the time and place of its birth.

The second side is entitled, "Murder and Treason not Exempted," and shows that the Masonic order is treasonable in its constitntion, and is both anti-Republican and anti-Christian. Price 25 cents per 100; $2 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 9, ILLUSTRATED:

FREEMASONRY IN THE CHURCH.

Copy of a petition for the higher degrees of Freemasonry, in which Blasphemous and Despotic Titles are enumerated and prayed for. The Copy was printed for the use of "Occidental Sovereign Consistory S. P. R. S.," 32d degree—a Chicago Lodge—and was ordered by a deacon of a Christian Church who is Grand Orator of the Grand Lodge of Ill.

TRACT NO. 10:

CHARACTER AND SYMBOLS OF FREEMASONRY.

A 2-page tract, (ILLUSTRATED) hy its "Grand Secretaries, Grand Lecturers, Perfect Prince Freemasons, Grand Inspector, Inquisitor Commanders, Grand High Priests," etc. The wonderful symbolical meaning of "the Cable Tow," "the Square and Compass," "the Lamh Skin, or white Apron,'' and "the Common Gavel," are given in the exact words of the highest Masonic authority. 25 cents per 100 or $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 11;

Address of Niagara County Association, New York.

TO THE PUBLIC;

Concerning the Morgan Murder, and the character of Freemasonry, as shown by this and other Masonic mnrders. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 12:

JUDGE WHITNEY AND MASONRY.

This tract contains a condensed account of Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois, on charge of unmasonic conduct in bringing Samuel L. Keith the murderer of Ellen Slade, and a member of his Lodge, to justice, with Jndge Whitney's snbsequent rennnciation of Masonry,

An 8-page tract, $1.00 per 100; $8.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 13:

DR. NATHANIEL COLVER ON MASONRY,

and

HOWARD CROSBY, D. D.,

Chancellor of the University of New York, on SECRET SOCIETIES. A donble 2-page tract 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 14:

GRAND LODGE MASONRY.

ITS RELATION TO CIVIL GOVERNMENT AND THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION.

Opening address hefore the Monmonth Convention, by PRES. J. BLANCHARD of WHEATON COLLEGE. This is a 16-page tract at $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 15:

MASONIC OATHS NULL AND VOID.

A clear and conclnsive argnment proving the invalidity of any oath or obligation to do evil. By REV. I. A. HART, Secretary National Christian Association. Pnblished hy special order of the Association. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 16:

HON. SETH M. GATES ON FREEMASONRY.

PROOF THAT THE INSTITUTION THAT MURDERED MORGAN IS UNCHANGED IN CHARACTER

This is a letter to the Monmouth Convention by Hon. Seth M. Gates who was Depnty Sheriff of Genesee County, and also Secretary of the Leroy Lodge at the time of Morgan's Abdnction. A 4-page tract, 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 17:

Origin, Obligations and Expenses of The Grange.

WITH A CONSTITUTION OF A FARMERS' CLUB.

This little tract ought to be put into the hands of every Farmer in the United States. Four-page tract, 50 cents per 100; $4 00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 18:

HON. WM. H. SEWARD ON SECRET SOCIETIES.

Extracts from a Speech on Know-Nothingism in the U. S. Senate in 1855. The testimony of JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, MILLARD FILLMORE, CHIEF JUSTIC MARSHALL and others, is added.

A 2-page tract, 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO, 19.

BRICKS FOR MASONS TO LAY.

WASHINGTON, MADISON, MARSHALL, RUSH, HANCOCK, ADAMS AND WEBSTER, give brief clear testimony against the Lodge A 2-page tract 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 20:

OBJECTIONS TO MASONRY.

By A SECEDING MASON, of Cornton, Vermont.

This tract contains many strong argnments against the Lodge drawn from personal experience, observation and stndy of its character. A 4-page tract at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

TRACT NO. 21:

MASONIC CHASTITY.

BY EMMA A. WALLACE,

The author, hy wonderfully clear illustration and argument, shows the terribly corrnpt nature of Freemasonry. No true woman who reads this will ever speak with approhation of this institution A 4-page tract 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

GERMAN CYNOSURE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason

By REV. A. GROLE, Pastor, German M. E. Chur ,

WORCESTER, MASS.

This is our first German tract, and it is a good one; it onght to have a large circnlation. Price 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

ENOCH HONEYWELL'S TRACT

TO THE YOUNG MEN OE AMERICA. Postage, 3 cents per 100. Tracts. Tracts Free.

Publishers' Department.

The settled spring weather is now here. We hope that the great multitudes of anti-secrecy soldiers who have been shut up in winter quarters will commence active movements all along the line. Tracts should be circulated, books put where they are needed, and thousands of persons who would take the Cynosure if solicited, should be visited, their subscriptions obtained and forwarded. Some of our subscribers are much in arrears on their own subscriptions; please notice your label and keep the date of your paper ahead.

The middle of April is here. Is your account settled at the Cynosure office?

The grangers profess to have one valuable method which is to buy and sell for cash. They seem to consider it original with them, but eighteen hundred years ago the Bible said "Owe no man anything."

A New Book of Importance.

Frequently we meet people who seem to be in sympathy with the reform against secret societies and who ask, What has the National Christian Association done? What does it propose to do?

A BRIEF HISTORY of the work of this Association has been prepared, and five thousand copies will soon be issued. These ought to be sent out immediately to all parts of the country. The price of this pamphlet is: Single copies, post paid, 25 cents; per dozen copies, post paid, $2.00; per hundred, expressage extra, $10.00.

Postage on the Cynosure.

THE POSTAGE ON THE CYNOSURE MUST BE PAID AT CHICAGO. It is twenty cents a year.

The cost of postage now depends entirely on the size and weight, and therefore some smaller papers charge but fifteen cents; and others about the size of the Cynosure charge twenty-five cents a year for postage.

If the subscription price of the CYNOSURE was $2.50 or $3.00 a year, the price of many religious papers containing no more reading matter, we might afford to pay the postage ourselves, but at $2.00 a year we cannot do this with our present Subscription list.

Therefore let all send the postage, 20 cents a year, 10 cents for half a year with their renewals.

The commission on one new subscription for a year will pay the postage on your own and the new subscriber's paper. We would rather have the postage paid by commissions than in any other way.

When postage is not paid we shall have to shorten the time of subscription sufficiently to pay it.

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED DURING WEEK ENDING APRIL 10, FROM—B M Amsden, R Aiton, N W Allen, M A Butts, W E Bay, B Baldwin, C A Blanchard, A Bailey, W Bridgman, S P Booher, J Croker, P Carpenter, E Chittenden, J Dappert, J Dodson. R J Day, D J Ellsworth, A J Ford, D Felt, J Finney, J Fetterhoff, F Gay, I Gable, C Gray, R Gardiner, J Gordon, D D Hayden, D M Harvey, H H Hinman Fred Hyde, I Jackson, W M Jordan, Mrs A E Jenks, H Kumler, A Kingsley, A Kinney, H S Limbocker, W D Lowrey, T J McLouth, A Mayn, W Miller, E Miller, G W Matthews, F McReynolds, G P Miller, L Moore, G G Nickey, J T Parker, W Pontius, T Palmeter, S Robson, A Rust, R S Reed, Mrs. I Ruch, J Sherk, L Skinner, J W Stetson, J B Slocum, W Sanders, A Simpson, A C Staples, A F Stoner, D Sheppard, C Teter, J Whittaker, J L Wilson, B W Weaver, T B Wilson, J Wymond, W R Wadsworth, R G Wood.

TERMS FOR THE CYNOSURE.

$2.00 per annum, in advance.
20c " " " " for postage.

All who canvass for the CYNOSURE are allowed a cash commission of twenty per cent. or twenty-five per cent in books at retail prices, one-half this percentage on renewals, and any one sending $100. for the CYNOSURE during three months, will be entitled to an extra five per cent.

All responsible persons who desire to promote this reform are authorized to act as agents.

CLUB RATES.

No commission is allowed on club rates. Club rates are intended for those who wish to give the commission to subscribers.

Subscriptions may all besent at one time, or at different times, and in all cases the sender should keep an account of the names and amounts sent.

CLUB RATES, INCLUDING POSTAGE.

Two new subscriptions, one year	$3.90
One new subscription and one renewal, sent ten days before expiration of subscription,	3.90
4 new subs., 1 year., 1 copy free to sender,	8.75
5 " " 1 " 1 " "	10.50
6 " " " " " "	12.25
7 " " " " " "	14.00
8 " " " " " "	15.75
10 " " " " " "	19.50
20 " " " " " "	36 00
10 Renewals " " " "	22.00
50 " " " " " "	95,00

Twenty subscriptions for six months count the same as ten for a year.

How to Send Money.

Post office orders, checks or drafts on Chicago or towns east of Chicago, and currency by express may be sent at our risk. If it is not possible to send by either of the four ways named, money in a registered letter may be sent at our risk, but it is not as safe.

The date at which subscriptions expire is with each subscriber's name on the address label. Send renewals before this date occurs. Notice if this date is changed to correspond; if not or if the paper fails to come, write without delay.

We discontinue during the first part of each month all subscriptions which expire during the preceding one except such as are ordered continued with a promise to forward the money soon. We do not like to lose a single subscriber and will not remove names simply because the cash is not received promptly, if we understand that the paper is wanted. Address all letters with subscriptions or orders for Books, Tracts and donations to the Tract Fund to EZRA A. COOK & Co., 13 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1	square,	1 insertion,			$2.00
1	square	(1 inch deep)	one	month	7.00
1	"	"	2	"	10.00
1	"	"	3	"	15.00
1	"	"	6	"	25.00
1	"	"	12	"	40.00

Discount for Space.

On 2 squares 5 per cent, On 3 squares 10 per cent
On 4 " 15 " " On 5 " 20 "
On ½ col. 25 per cent On one col. 30 per cent

Excelsior Marriage Certificate.

It is decidedly the most BEAUTIFUL, TASTEFUL and SENSIBLE thing of the kind I have ever seen."—Rev. F. G. Hibbard, D. D.

"The most SCRIPTURAL, BEAUTIFUL and APPROPRIATE Marriage Certificate I have ever seen."—Late Rev. H. Mattison, D. D.

"SOMETHING NEW AND BEAUTIFUL, which we pronounce the handsomest thing of the kind we ever laid eyes on."—Meth. Home Journal, Phila. Contains two Ornamental Ovals, for Photographs

A BEAUTIFUL LITHOGRAPH 14 1-4 by 18 1-4 inches. 25 cts each, $2.25 per doz- $15 per 100.

For Sale by Ezra A. Cook & Co.. CHICAGO.

Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill.

The Spring term opens April 8th. It is the term for the study of Botany. There are some beautiful rooms for young ladies yet unoccupied. The Winter term has been very pleasant, and very successful. Write for Catalogue to J. BLANCHARD.
Wheaton, Ill.

MARKET REPORTS

CHICAGO, April 12, 1875

The following are the latest advices:

Grain Wheat—Spring, No. 1..	$1 07	1 08
" No. 2	1 02	1 05
" No. 3		96
" Rejected	91½	92
Corn—No. 2		73½
Rejected		71
Oats—No. 2	58	61¼
Rejected	54	54½
Rye—No. 2	1 15
Flour—Winter	5 00	7 00
Spring	3 75	5 25
Hay—Timothy	15 00	19 00
Prairie, "	9 50	14 00
Lard		15¼
Mess pork, per bbl		21 75
Butter	17	33
Cheese	10	18
Eggs	15	16
Potatoes, per bus	95	1 15
Broom corn	06	14
Seeds—Timothy	2 15	2 45
Clover	6 60	6 85
Flax	1 85	1 90
Chickens, per doz	4 50	5 00
Turkeys, dressed per lb	12	15
HIDES green to dry salted	07	15
Lumber—Clear	37 00	55 00
Common	11 00	12 00
Lath		2 25
Shingles	1 50	3 25
WOOL—Washed	40	58
Unwashed	27	37
LIVE STOCK Cattle, extra	6 40	6 90
Good to choice	5 50	6 25
Medium	5 00	5 50
Common	3 50	4 75
Hogs	7 00	9 35
Sheep	4 00	6 75

New York Market.

Flour	$ 4 70	8 25
Wheat	1 17	1 41
Corn	92	95
Oats	73	76¼
Rye	96
Lard		15½
Mess pork		22 50
Butter	12	20
Cheese	12	16
Eggs	25	27

Masonic Books,

FOR SALE AT THE CYNOSURE OFFICE.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and blisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

Allyn's Ritual of Masonry,

Illustrated by a large number of engravings, and ontaining a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, Orange nd Odd-fellows' societies. Price, $5.00.

Mackey's Masonic Ritualist;

OR

MONITORIAL INSTRUCTION BOOK.

BY ALBERT G. MACKEY,

Past General High Priest of the General Grand Chapter of the United States, Knight of the Eagle and Pelican, Prince of Mercy," Etc. Etc. Price, $1 75

Mackey's Lexicon of Freemasonry,

Containing a Definition of Terms, Notices of its History, Traditions and Antiquities, and an account of all the Rites and Mysteries of the Ancient World. 12 mo. 526 pages, $3 00.

MACKEY'S MANUAL OF THE LODGE;

OR

Monitorial Instructions in the Degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft, and Master Mason; with Ceremonies relating to Installations, Dedications, Consecrations, Laying of Corner-stones &c. Price, $2 00,
Paper Covers 2.00.

MACKEY'S TEXT BOOK

OF

MASONIC JURISPRUDENCE.

Illustrating the Laws of Freemasonry, both written and unwritten.
This is the Great Law Book of Freemasonry 570 pages. Price, $2.50

Webb's Monitor of Freemasonry,

LARGE EDITION, WITH NOTES

By ROB. HORRIS, Price, $1.50.
Pocket Edition, 75 cts.

SICKELS' FREEMASON'S MONITOR.

Containing the Degrees of Freemasonry embraced in the Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery, embellished with nearly 300 symbolic Illustrations. Together with Tactics and drill of Masonic Knighthood. Also, forms of Masonic Documents, Notes, Songs, Masonic dates, installations, etc. By D. Sickels, 32 mo uck. Price $1.50.

ESTABLISHED 1868.

EZRA A. COOK & CO.,

STEAM PRINTERS,

Lithographers,

STATIONERS

—AND—

Book Binders.

NOS. 7, 9, 11 & 13

Wabash Avenue, Chicago.

We were in the Stationery, Printing and Lithographing business before the Cynosure was started.

WE LITHOGRAPH

Business Cards, Letter Heads, Note Heads, Bill Heads, Circulars, Checks, Drafts. Certificates of Stock, Certificates of Deposit, Plats and Charts; also elegant Diplomas for Colleges, Literary Societies, and Agricultural Societies, in one, two or three Colors. Samples and Prices sent on Application.

WE PRINT

Books,
Pamphlets,
Catalogues, Business Cards, Show Cards, Letter Heads, Bill Heads, Note Heads, Circulars, Hand Bills, Posters, Checks, Drafts Notes, Certificates of Deposit, Certificates of Stock, Diplomas, etc.,

IN THE BEST STYLE,

at the

LOWEST MARKET RATES.

WE FILL ORDERS PROMPTLY, and

GUARANTEE GOOD WORK.

SPECIAL ATTENTION GIVEN TO ORDERS

BY MAIL.

Samples and prices sent promptly when desired.

Address:

EZRA A. COOK & CO.,

7, 9, 11 & 13 Wabash Avenue,

CHICAGO

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

"In Secret Have I Said Nothing."—Jesus Christ.

EZRA A. COOK & CO., PUBLISHERS, NO 13 WABASH AVENUE.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 22, 1875.

VOL. VII., NO. 28.—WHOLE NO. 268. WEEKLY, $2 00 A YEAR.

Contents.

	Page
TOPICS OF THE TIME	1
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
Mr. Beecher	8
Mr. Needel's Letter	8
Temperance and the Lodge	8
Notes	8
CONTRIBUTED AND SELECT ARTICLES:
The Bible in Public Schools	1
The "Orders" and Temperance	1
Sticking to a Lie	2
Gambling Outside the Den	3
Masonic Conspiracy—VI	3
REFORM NEWS and NOTICES:	4
CORRESPONDENCE:
Caught in their Craft at last; From Rev. Cogswell; Field-Notes from a Zealous Co-worker; By their Fruits ye shall Know them; A Needed Reform; Our Mail	4, 5, 6
"Nearer Hell than anything Earthly"	8
The Christian Heart	9
Political	9
FORTY YEARS AGO; An Able Argument for Free Inquiry	7
Exposition of the Grange (Continued)	12
THE HOME CIRCLE	10
CHILDREN'S CORNER	11
The Sabbath School	6
Home and Health Hints	14
Farm and Garden	14
Religious Intelligence	12
News of the Week	16
Publishers' Department	16

Topics of the Time.

Postmaster General Jewell, on his return from defeat in the Connecticut election laid the results to disorganization in the Republican ranks. This was a humiliating confession to be sure, of the weakness of the Republican leaders who "stumped" the State, but cannot well explain the result. The effect of the fall elections is still a power in politics, but a stronger influence is found in the character of the population in the manufacturing districts and large towns, where Irish and German, have, to a great extent, replaced the emigrant Puritan element. For some reason, Romanism and free liquor find their way without exception into the Democratic ranks and the votes of these two nationalities follow the lead of their superstitions and appetites. New England, faithful mother, has given her strength to the growing West, and has not looked in vain for the effect of her sacrifice; and never should while liberty is threatened by license or by priestly despotism.

"And still they come." Tweed Ring frauds; Credit Mobiler; Jayne & Co., the moietymen; Pacific Mail; Erie Canal ring; and now Postal contract swindles. While the late Postmaster General Creswell was gaining encomiums for activity in his department in reducing postal rates, internal and foreign, overthrowing the franking abuse and setting up government telegraphy, extensive frauds crept into the postal contracts which the usual care of an officer in his position should prevent. Mr. Jewell has uncapped the nest of conspirators managing the swindle and is attacking them with an energy which promises an utter rout and a saving of hundreds of thousands annually to the department. While we as a people are becoming sadly familiar with these public thieves, we cannot be indifferent or ungrateful to officials who have the honesty and courage to rout them. There are motives of selfish and party interest in clearing up these frauds, as well as of official duty and honor. They have all occurred under the rule of the Republican party. If that organization has hope of other results in next year's elections than those of last fall, it needs a clean balance sheet.

One feature of this mail contract conspiracy is decidedly Masonic. During a considerable vacancy in the office of second assistant Postmaster General, chief clerk French performed its duties. His experience in these contracts was found to be in the way of the thieves, who attempted his destruction. Kettles, a contractor, and an ex-Congressman, made repeated communications to the press correspondents that French was levying blackmail on the contractors, and used bad faith with them in favor of friends. These fellows went up and down "Newspaper Row" begging a publisher for their lies, which never secured any notice until now. They even placed anonymous circulars on the desks of Congressmen, but failed to get any attention. Whether or no these plotters were Freemasons, their action was entirely consistent with the lessons generally inculcated by the lodge.

We have entered on an era of centennials. The churches began it a few years since in honor of the work of Asbury in Methodism. The United Brethren in Christ have just closed the first century since Otterbein began his wonderful labors in Maryland and Pennsylvania. Some of the memorable events just preceding the Revolution have already had their one hundredth birth day, the most noteworthy being on Monday, the 19th, in memory of the sturdy farmers and awkward flintlocks of Concord and Lexington. While the preparations at Philadelphia for the peaceful entertainment of the nations are proceeding to a vast fulfilment, the wide interest in "superior things" must awaken grateful hope among the churches. The situation of the country has little to cheer a true patriot, in spite of all the progress made by the providence of war. A gentleman of profound legal attainments, who has served the Government in that capacity, lately wrote that there were not probably one hundred men in the nation who realize how near we have approached the dreaded embrace of monarchy. But the church has more encouragement. The scandal brought on the Christian pulpit, and Christian name even, in Brooklyn, cannot conceal the fact of a "feeling after" God among the masses. Evangelists and faithful preachers are developing and guiding it, and what waits but that Christians be, as well as seem witnesses for Christ?

The Bible in Public Schools.

The positions so ably defended in the Christian Union by Lyman Abbott, that no system of public instruction can be maintained which does not afford moral and religious instruction; that morality cannot be taught without teaching religion; that neither morality nor religion can be taught without the use of the Bible—find a powerful support in the autobiography of Dr. Guthrie, and the experience of the people of Scotland, as given in the instructive volume lately republished in this country by the Carters. As another contribution to one of the most important discussions that can occupy public attention, I copy a significant passage; it is from the recollections of Dr. Guthrie's childhood: "Having learned our letters and some small syllables printed on a fly-leaf of the Shorter Catechism, we were at once passed into the Book of Proverbs. In the olden time this was the universal custom in all the common schools of Scotland, a custom that should never have been abandoned. That book is without a rival for beginners, containing quite a repretory of monosyllables and pure Saxon—"English undefiled." Take this passage for example, where, with one exception, every word is formed of a single syllable and belongs to the Saxon tongue: "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it." What a contrast to the silly trash of modern school-books for beginners, with such sentences as, 'Tom has a dog.' 'The cat is good.' 'The cow has a calf.'

While learning the art of reading by the Book of Proverbs, we had our minds stored with the highest moral truths, and, by sage advices applicable to all the ages and departments of life, the branch, while it was supple, received a bend in a direction highly favorable to future well-doing and success in life. The patience, prudence, foresight and economy which used to characterize Scotchmen—giving occasion to the saying "a canny Scot," and by which they are so often able to rise in the world and distance all competitors in the race of life, was to a large extent due to their being thus engrained in youth and childhood with the practical wisdom enshrined in the Book of Proverbs."

The Roman Catholics are right in their position that the education of youth must be a Christian, not godless education, and there cannot be peace until Protestants shall take the same position; that it is the indispensable duty of the State to educate her children; that that education must embrace every department of knowledge necessary to make wise and good citizens, and that there is no text-book so valuable for this purpose as the Bible. The study of moral and religious truths in their practical application to daily life and duty, is a part of the American youth's education which cannot be dispensed with. H. T. C.

[From the Temperance Visitor.]

The "Orders" and Temperance.

BY M. AUGE.

In your notice of the Christian Cynosure and its objection, that "the banishment of intemperance by an intemperate zeal for secret orders is futile," you say: "If our cotemporary will point out a better way, we shall be glad to hear his theory."

Now, without intending to anticipate the Cynosure's answer, or to endorse its objection against secret societies in general, permit me through your columns to enlarge briefly upon the topic raised by that paper, and your very pertinent reply.

About the commencement of the last century (1700 to 1712), Addison and Steele, who published the Spectator, in London, gave a long list of names of guilds, clubs and convivial associations of that city, with many of the ceremonials of initiation, &c., but among them all, there was no mention of any (other than trade societies) of the name of those existing amongst us. I conclude, therefore, (notwithstanding the claims of some), that most if not all our societies are of recent origin. The question raised by your cotemporary is, Will the secret form of temperance banish intemperance? This is a social or philosophical inquiry, and as such I desire to discuss it.

In order to do this, I will rapidly sketch the rise and progress of these societies for the past fifty years, since they came under my observation. Freemasonry, and perhaps a few other societies, date back to the Revolution, Odd-fellowship having been brought from England and founded here about sixty years ago. About 1826 the alleged murder of Morgan in New York State, and the trials that grew out of it, produced a strong feeling of distrust of secret societies, in many parts of the United States. This continued till the organization of the Sons and Daughters of Temperance, which grew out of the Washingtonian movement, 1840–42. At the organization of our order (the Sons) the common distaste to society oaths, signs, grips, names and titles, was so prevalent that we organized what was regarded as a "secret society" only in name, the "word of honor" being the only basis of obligation, and with no "private work" except the ceremonials of initiation and installation, and a quarterly pass-word. Not only this, but the words "lodge," and "master," were substituted by "division," and "patriarch." I state these things to show that what were called secret societies were not popular, at least among religious classes; and because I desire to show that non-temperance orders have grown into popularity on the prestige of those which are organized for the promotion of our blessed cause. To illustrate this, I beg to state what occurred in the town where I reside.

On the flood-tide of Washingtonianism we organized two divisions inside of a year. Five years previously, a lodge of Odd-fellows had also been instituted which held its meetings in the rear of a tavern, and maintained a sickly life till the date of the establishment of the order of the Sons, when that order took a rapid start, and within three or four years, increased to three very large lodges; while during the very same three or four years, both the divisions went to decay, and surrendered their charters. Of my own knowledge, I am certain that a very large part of the membership of the divisions went into the lodges, and remained with them. And this process went on, too, during a period of great activity among the people, looking toward the procurement of a vote of the people, which was to settle the question of licenses for the whole State. The foregoing facts I leave with the reader to draw his own inferences, proceeding the task of showing that organization constitutes the basis of the moral, social, and political progress.

A shrewd English writer says that if he be allowed the right and privilege of writing the songs of a people, he cared not who made their laws, for he would govern them, and frame the laws by and through the sentiments thus inculcated. So whatever rules prevail in our social institutions will determine the character of the people. Now, your list of societies exhibits the following facts:

Non-abstinence orders and societies,	345
Freemasons and other orders not given, probably	150
	495
Total abstinence organizations of all kinds,	150
	345

The above figures show a preponderance in favor of the non-abstinence orders, of three to one—that is, supposing that the membership of all are alike numerous; though the probability is that the violation of the pledge continually depletes the latter, and keeps the lodges few and weak.

Of all these non-abstaining orders, there is hardly one that does not supervise the moral "walk and conversation" of its members, and yet three-fourths of them have no laws against drinking, which is the sole cause of intemperance. Accordingly it is fair and logical to conclude, that any society that does not prohibit the practice of drinking alcoholic liquors, approves it. Thus we see that three-fourths of the secret societies, and many of the churches, have no instituted bulwark against the growth of intemperance.

Now the further practical question is, How far do the non-abstinence orders bank on the moral capital, furnished by those which make teetotalism fundamental? This, doubtless, is the point of inquiry of your Chicago cotemporary. It is conceded that the charity or combined help afforded by these non pledged societies is abounding, but will the members thereof ever rise to the platform of total abstinence?

And, without people organize in sufficient numbers on the wiser ground, shall we ever secure prohibition? And if we seek not prohibition as our objective point, are we to rest satisfied with mitigating excess, by having our temperance lodges and divisions to be mere hospitals for the reclamation of inebriates?

While I confess to a serious doubt, that if we were not combined as we are, in "close societies," possibly no organizations equally efficient would exist, outside; still, when I see the non-abstinence orders outnumbering us so greatly, I feel like the Cynosure man, discouraged at the prospect; further, I cannot resist the conviction, that just so far as our initiatory and installation ceremonies, and our other "work" relates to temperance, they would not be one whit less effective if our doors were thrown open to the public.

Norristown, Pa.

Sticking to a Lie.

When a witness tells the truth, the law of God, conscience and consistency demand that he should ever stand by that truth, yea, persistently testify to it unto the end, and the benediction of heaven and the praise of all good men will rest upon him. But the longer a man sticks to a lie, the worse he is off, his crime daily grows blacker and the lower he sinks in moral debasement. This we believe to be true of all who cling to falsehood in any form; the longer they are under its power, the more degraded they become. Hence the demoralizing effect of false religions. All false religions are a lie. The heathen exchanged the truth of God for a lie when they adopted idolatrous worship. This departure from the truth was followed by the vilest deeds of immorality.

History and revelation show us that the farther men get from God in their principles and religion, the farther they get from virtue. "The tree is known by its fruit." "A corrupt tree cannot bring forth good fruit." Plant an evil tree and in the process of time it will be hung all over with evil fruit. All falsehood in religion is by its very nature opposed to virtue. When men or communities embrace errors, or adopt false religion, corresponding vice and crime soon appear. Let false teaching, corrupt principles, go to seed and you will have a terrible harvest. Error breeds crime and crime breeds error; for men who have become immoral readily embrace false doctrine to cover their practice. So on the other hand truth and virtue are allies.

May we not justly conclude that it is this leaven of falsehood and error which have so much weakened and marred Protestant churches for the last thirty years? And especially the entanglement of the church with secret societies. In this way many churches have lost their liberty and in a great measure their power for good. I believe that if the church would cast off the world, cut loose from all secret orders, cliques and rings, cease "to teach for doctrines the commandments of men," and come boldly to the front in all matters of reform, relying on the truth and efficacy of the Spirit for success, she would become "terrible as an army with banners." But alas! the visible church is far from this position now. What a sad spectacle to the eye of faith and piety does a large portion of the church present. In some evangelicel truth is not known; in others it is ridiculed. The teachings of the Cynosure would not be tolerated; in some churches the pulpit and pew would be thrown into a spasm over a copy of it. How many church-doors are shut against Anti-masonic lecturers! Would this be the case if the churches were not corrupted by the lodge? Would not a pure church always be ready to hear the truth and condemn false religion? O how long shall it be before the church will learn that she cannot fight the devil with lies! The devil is not afraid of the logic of false religion, it is the very element in which he lives. His kingdom is built upon falsehood and nurtured with lies, so when you teach men errors or keep back the truth from them, you build up Satan's kingdom. How absurd to think to reform men or scare the devil by telling them lies. The advancement of Christ's kingdom involves the destruction of all that is false and unholy. Destroy error in the minds of men, and you are pulling down the strongholds of Satan, checking vice and strengthening virtue. This arch enemy of souls will quail when met with a "Thus saith the Lord," but he smiles at all false instruction, for it strengthens his kingdom. Every error imbibed weakens the moral sense and leads to immorality in the life. We must stand by the truth, if we have to stand alone. The world must come to it or perish. The doctrine of modern charity, that "it is no matter what you believe if you are only sincere," will not do. To sincerely believe a lie can never make it a truth. The farther a man travels the wrong road, the farther he is getting from home.

One reason why I like the Cynosure is because it fearlessly tells the truth. An independent press and pulpit are what we want now. While the press and pulpit are gagged by that hidden, devilish power of secretism, reform must move slowly. In every great reformation, the truth comes to the surface. Reformers begin their work by presenting the truth. We would never have had the great reformation if Luther and others had set themselves to plastering and whitewashing over all the abominations of Rome with a false charity. That will not do. The truth must be told. Luther told it. Rome trembled. To expel the darkness you light a candle. To displace error in the minds of men, you must teach them the truth and when that truth is seen and believed, the opposite error is overthrown. To overthrow Freemasonry it will be necessary to show the world what it is. When they know that, Freemasonry is dead. Its security is in its power to hide itself and veil its hideous character. Though Masonry has all been revealed, yet it succeeds in blinding the masses by lies and dust so that they do not believe the testimony of seceding Masons. They believe that the Mason who has come out lies and the Mason inside tells the truth. But we are glad that the number of thinking and reading people who cannot be deceived by Masonic tricks are increasing daily. The bubble will burst ere long.

There is some show of consistency when men believe the errors they advocate, but what a humiliating spectacle when they cling to what they know is false! All falsehood is demoralizing, but what depravity is evinced by pertinaciously uttering known falsehood. How I have been filled with chagrin and sadness, to hear adhering Masons persistently deny the fact that ever Masonry was revealed. Several of my neighbors, adhering Masons, have told me and continue to tell it, that Finney's book, Bernard's, and others, are all lies! How can a Christian thus perpetuate a lie? These men know that Masonry has been all revealed. Every intelligent Anti-mason knows it too. How low a man sinks in the scale of morals, when you know that he knows that he is lying! I have wondered how Masonic preachers could stand under such falsehood. Their intercourse with the lodge repeats the lie. People say that Masonry cannot be as bad as Morgan and other seceding Masons say it is, or these Christian ministers could not remain in the lodge. This is natural reasoning to the untutored and simple, and thus multitudes are deceived. Hence the fact that ministers remain in the lodge is a virtual declaration that Masonry never has been revealed and so is a species of persistent lying. Thousands say that if Christ's ministers may fellowship the lodge, so may they. So all adhering Masons are helping to perpetuate the falsehood, that Masonry has never been revealed. Such double dealing cannot long stand against the tide. God-speed to the Cynosure and the cause it advocates.

KIMBOLTON.

Masonry is finely illustrated by the following story. Two gentlemen met at a time, and one of them had a beautiful trunk which excited the curiosity of the other. He became very anxious to know what was in it, so after a time, the owner of the trunk told him for so much money he might see; he paid it over and the trunk was opened, but to his surprise in that was another still smaller and more curious withal, so, with increased interest, and excitement doubled, the duped man wanted to know what was in that. For so much more he could see. He paid it over, and it was opened, and behold, in that was another still smaller, but exquisitly fine and attractive. Deeply chagrined and woefully disappointed, the deceived gentleman demanded to know what that contained. For an increased sum of hard cash, he might see. He had paid so much, which he should loose if he did not proceed, and being quite well assured by hints and talk that the valuable object of his search must be in that nice little trunk, and it was next to certain, the price was paid, and that was opened; and to the great astonishment of the duped, deceived, defrauded man, in that there was not anything, and he could only turn away with disgust and scorn at his own duplicity.—Wesleyan.

Gambling Outside the Den.

The vice of gambling seems to have fastened itself upon almost all kinds of business. The transaction of all our gold, stock, and produce exchanges are to a great extent nothing more nor less than gambling schemes. Take for an example our own Board of Trade. If its business were narrowed down to regular and legitimate purchases and sales of produce, the majority of those who operate there daily would find their occupation gone. It is probably no exaggeration to say that nine-tenths of the transactions neither involve nor contemplate any transfer of property between those who are by courtesy styled buyers and sellers, and are simply and only bets that corn, wheat, oats, flour, lard, pork, or some other products will be higher or lower thirty, sixty, or ninety days hence. A margin is put up, and at the expiratian of the stipulated time the loser pays the winner the difference. The seller had nothing to sell and the buyer had no intention of purchasing. The same is true in regard to stocks, gold, and bonds. All such transactions are only a species of gambling, and there is a good reason for the Hankinses, McDonalds, Morriseys, and other confessed gamblers to claim that their business is just as reputable as the merchants who operate on, Change. When Vanderbilt, pious Daniel Drew, or Jay Gould make a cool million by a "corner" on some stock they are called great financiers, but I think in the great book of final account their names will be found on that page of the index appropriated to gamblers, and that large donations to churches and theological seminaries will not change their record.

The mania for betting has become almost universal. All our national games and sports are avenues for gambling. Horse-racing, base-ball, billiards, pedestrianism, the falsely termed manly art of self-defense, are one and all gambling schemes. Indeed, there seems to be a wide-spreading and universal tendency to get something for nothing. One would suppose that our churches would be free from the demoralizing vice, but instead of this our church fairs get up their raffles and Sunday-school children take their first lesson in games of chance. There is no doubt but that the mania for gambling which has resulted in the ruin of hundreds of young men can be traced to the appetite formed in church raffles. The steps are very easy and natural; prize packages of candy, prize concerts, grand distributions, opera-house drawings, great public library schemes are successfully patronized, and thus a habit is formed that ends in regular out-and-out gambling. The good Christian women who get up church fairs, and introduces raffling to swell their receipts, would be shocked to know that their sons were "bucking the tiger," or their daughters were secretly investing in lottery tickets, and yet these are in the name of religion teaching them to do just these very things. Doing evil that good may come is very questionable morality; the motive may be good, but the result is sure to be disastrous, and it is the duty of all good men and women to discountenance any and every scheme that is tainted with this terrible vice, no matter what the object may be.

There seems to be an infatuation about gambling which, when it once takes possession of a person, stultifies all moral perceptions, and the victim is soon prepared for any degree of crime. . . . Nine-tenths of the defalcations, embezzlements, and irregularities which occur among those to whom are intrusted the funds of others can be traced directly to gambling in some form. The evil is a growing one, and, if not checked, we shall soon deserve the appellation of "A nation of gamblers."—Chicago Tribune.

Masonic Conspiracy and Persecution in the U. B. Church.—VI.

BY REV. W. W. KNIPPLE.

The following is the report of said committee: We your committee on grievance, would report that the case of W. W. Knipple came before us, and we think in justice to himself and the church, that he should have a trial according to the rules of the church.

Signed, J. A. Crayton,
L. J. Osborn,
D. W. Downey.

The reader will observe that this committee makes no reference in this report, to an investigation of the charges. The reason is obvious. The counsel for the prosecution labored hard to, and finally succeeded in making the impression on the minds of at least two of the committee, that the business of the committee was, not to try the case, but merely to examine the charges, and consider the endorsement of the same, namely, by ten preachers, including three presiding elders, of the Parkersburg conference (all of whom were either Masons, or jack Masons,) and then decide whether the charges in themselves, they having no proof for, and admitting none against, are of such a character as to require a trial of the accused. And the above report is the result.

I asked the right of appeal from this report, which was readily granted by the chair, after he had mildly rebuked the committee for their ignorance in ruling out testimony because it was addressed to the conference. And a committee of five was then appointed to investigate the charges, and decide according to the testimony at hand. I felt thankful that I was under the administration of Bishop Weaver.

The case was now investigated, and the committee made the following report:

Your committee to investigate a summary of charges by members of the Parkersburg conference against W. W. Knipple, respectfully submit the following report. After a thorough investigation into the matter we found the following difficulties in our way: 1. The charges were almost wholly without specifications and without any accompanying testimony, so that the defendant, as well as your committee, were left to conjecture mainly the import of said charges. 2. To such charges as seemed sufficiently clear, the answer and testimony offered by the defense were satisfactory. 3. There seemed by implication allegations made yet without specifications or proof, reflecting on the moral character of the said Knipple, which would seem to demand a further investigation into the matter.

Your committee would therefore recommend the following: 1. That we receive the transfer of brother Knipple. 2. That as soon as charges are presented with definite specifications, and accompanied by the testimony in each charge and specification, then the presiding elder on the district where the accused resides shall recommend a trial of the case as per discipline.

Signed, J. Bever,
J. B. Resler,
M. Long,
A. Biddle.

The report was adopted and I received into the conference on my transfer.

By this report, I stood virtually acquitted before the Sandusky conference, and the charges, with the responsibility were thrown back on the parties that sent them, but left the way open for another Masonic assault.

Notwithstanding A. Rose's assertion in a private letter to Bro. Levington, which was published in the Free Press of July 2d, 1874, that no presiding elder or preacher was tried at this session of conference, for any cause, to his knowledge. I certainly consider this a trial to all intents and purposes. Indeed, it was a persistent trial on the part of the apron brotherhood, to destroy the character of Aan nti-mason. With reference to the result of this trial, Mr. Ross says, in a private letter to Rev. J. Levington, under date of March 2d, 1874, which letter was also published in the same number of the Free Press, that I came near losing my ministerial head, and I may do so yet. Intimating that the contest for my head was not yet settled. And then he sanctimoniously said, "though I have not pursued him, nor will I if he will quit his misrepresentations of me." I will leave the candid reader to decide for himself from which side the misrepresentations come in. Mr. Rose further states, in his letter of March 2d, 1874: "The conference unanimously exhonorated him from all imputations of guilt in his treatment toward me. True, the conference did adopt such a resolution. But my attention having been drawn elsewhere at the time, I did not understand the import of the resolution, consequently I did not vote either pro or con, neither did I give it any further thought until I saw it in the so-called U. B. Tribune. (Pirate). But what of the vote. Can an annual conference, by even a unanimous vote, cancel the guilt of a presiding elder, who had maliciously attempted, by a base misrepresentation and false pretense, to slander the character of a minister under his jurisdiction, and throw him out of the work of the ministry, thereby inflicting injuries upon him and his family. It might appease the lashings of an unsanctified conscience, by covering up the crime, but cannot change the facts in the case. But the reader may be anxious to know what became of my bill of charges against A. Rose. I will not tax the patience of my readers with the list of charges and specifications in detail, but give it a abridged.

1st Charge. Gross maltreatment by throwing me, a member of conference; out of the ministerial work through false pretense, and a base misrepresentation of my official character.

2d Charge. With knowing positively in part, and having at hand the facility of knowing in the main, the statements made by him in this matter to be incorrect.

3d Charge. With practicing a base deception on the stationing committee, with reference to my official character, thereby taking an undue advantage of my limited acquaintance in the conference.

The reader may judge from the revelations already made concerning this matter, as to the extent to which the above charges might have been sustained. My reason for dropping the charges was not in the way of a compromise, though a proposition to that effect was made to me, not directly from Rose, but I learned that it was by his consent, from which he afterward recanted, through the influence of Bulger, his counsel. Neither was it through fear of Ross, or his emissaries. But it was alone through the importunate entreaties of Father Biddle, one of the oldest men in the conference, who professedly advised me for my own good, now as to his real motive in this. I will let the following narrative solve the problem.

Mr. Biddle had preached the following year at Galion Station, where he resides, as a supply. But now, in the revision of the itinerant list Mr. B. declined to take work, as did another minister of the conference, both of whom were on the committee of five, before whom I had my second trial, and both of whom were elected on the stationing committee, a position to which they could not have been elected had they not declined the itinerancy. When the list was revised, both of them were prominent members of the conference, and each of them told me that there was nothing new in this trouble that would in any way debar me from receiving an appointment, and Mr. Biddle had commended me in the highest terms for ceasing the prosecution of Mr. Rose. The stationing committee went into session, and in due time the report was read, and I was again left without an appointment. It is a little remarkable, that both Mr. Biddle and the other brother referred to, received appointments on stations, and both at their own places of residence. I leave the reader to draw his own conclusion as to whether it was for mine, or Mr. Rose's benefit, that I was thus persuaded to suspend the prosecution. I soon regretted that I had done so, and feel yet, that I did an injustice to myself, to A. Rose, and to the church in so doing.

(To be continued.)

Notices.

The National Christian Association.

PRESIDENT.—B. T. Roberts, Rochester, N. Y.

DIRECTORS.—Philo Carpenter, J. Blanchard, A. Wait, I. A. Hart, C. R. Hagerty, E. A. Cook, J. G. Terrill, O. F. Lumry. J. M. Wallace, Isaac Preston, Wm. Pinkney.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.—C. A. Blanchard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

RECORDING SECRETARY AND TREASURER.—H. L. Kellogg, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER.—J. P. Stoddard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

AUDITOR.—H. A. Fischer.

OBJECT.—"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, andother anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved; to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

Life membership, $10.00; annual do, 25 cents. The names of members and general correspondence of the Association should be sent to the Corresponding Secretary. To carry on the increasing and successful lecture work by agents in different States and for promoting the general work of the Association donations of any amount are solicited from all friends of the reform. All donations or bequests should be sent to the Treasurer.

The Corresponding Secretary or his assistant may be seen at the Cynosure office from 9 to 11 A. M.

The Seventh Anniversary of the National Christian Association will be held in the City of Pittsburgh, Pa., June 8th to 10th, 1875.

Connecticut State Meeting.

The Connecticut Christian Association will hold a meeting in Hartford, commencing Wednesday, April 28th, 1875, to continue two days or more. Correspondence has been entered into with J. L. Barlow, L. N. Stratton, D. P. Rathbun and other speakers, and an effort will be made to secure a large attendance from the State.

TO ALL SECEDING MASONS.—By vote of the National Christian Association, all seceding Masons are requested to send their names to the Recording Secretary, with their endorsement of Bernard's Light on Masonry; they are also requested to send their post-office address, number of degrees taken, number of years connected with the lodge, the date of leaving it and where residing when they joined.

H. L. KELLOGG, Rec. Sec'y.
13 WABASH AVE.

Notice for Iowa.

DEAR BRO. KELLOGG:—I would like to say to the friends of the anti-secrecy movement in Iowa, inasmuch as there was a delegate elected at the late State Association to represent us at Pittsburgh in June it will be necessary to raise some money to defray his traveling expense. Those sending money for the object named can either send or pay it directly to me as treasurer of State Association, or to Louis Bookwalter, Cor. Secretary, and he will report to me, so that I can report. It will ake between $50 and $60 to defray this expense, should more be raised it will be kept sacred to the cause and subject to the order of the Association. The address of Louis Bookwalter is Western College, Linn Co., Iowa. Don't fail to respond in time. JOHN DORCAS, Treasurer.

Shiloh, Cedar Co., Iowa.

TO FRIENDS WHO LIVE ON OR NEAR ANY ROUTE FROM CHICAGO TO PITTSBURGH, PA.—Rev. H. H. Hinman, the Illinois State agent, expects to start about May twenty-fifth for Pittsburgh to attend the national meeting in June. He desires to stop at places along the route and lecture on secret societies, both on his way there and on his return after the meeting. Any friends living on or near either route who will provide a hall for the speaker, announce his lectures and raise ten dollars for one or two lectures from him on the subject of secret societies, can secure his services if they apply soon enough.

Mr. Hinman is a careful, clear thinker on this subject, and we believe gives general satisfaction wherever he lectures.

Address communications asking for his services to C. A. BLANCHARD, Cor. Secretary N. C. A., 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Address of Anti-masonic Lecturres.

General Agent and Lecturer, J. P. STODDARD, Christian Cynosure Office, Chicago.

State Lecturers:

Indiana, J. T. Kiggins, Waterloo City, DeKalb county, Ind.

Illinois, H. H. Hinman, Wheaton, Ill.

Ohio, D. S. Caldwell, Nevada, Wyandot Co., Ohio.

New York, Z. Weaver, Esq., and J. L. Barlow, 89 Mulberry St., both Syracuse, N. Y.

Pennsylvania, J. W. Raynor, Montrose, Susquehanna Co., Pa.

Wisconsin, Philo Elzea, Delevan, Wis.

Michigan, D. P. Rathbun, (present address) Lisbon Center, N. Y.

Iowa (nominated by State Convention) James Hawkins, Mason City, Iowa.

Lecturers at Large:

I. A. Hart, Woodstok, Ill.
C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
W. A. Wallace, Bentonville, Ind.
J. B. Nessell, Ellington, N. Y.
John Levington, Detroit, Mich.
S. Smith, Ionia, Iowa.
R. B. Taylor, Summerfield, O.
L. N. Stratton, Syracuse, N. Y.
N. Callender, Green Grove, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
Linus Chittenden, Crystal Lake, Ill.
P. Hurless, Polo, Ill.
J. R. Baird, Royalton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
C. Wiggins, Angola, Ind.
E. Johnson, Bourbon, Ind.
Josiah McCaskey, Fancy Creek, Wis.
C. F. Hawley, Millbrook Pa.
W. M. Givens, Center Point, Ind.
J. L. Andrus, Mt. Vision, N. Y.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
Wm. Dillon, Dayton. O.
Samuel Hale, Mallet Creek, O.
A. Mayn, Promise City, Wayne Co, Ia.
A. H. Springstein, Yipsilanti, Mich.
R. Faurot, DuPlain, Mich.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, Ashland Co., O.

Reform News.

—Elder Barlow has been on another tour in New York organizing and encouraging the ranks of the reform. He is expected at the Connecticut State meeting, at Hartford, April 28th. The Wesleyan notices that pledges made for his support should be paid. He may be addressed at the Wesleyan office, Syracuse.

—Elder Rathbun spoke at Saranac, Mich., and several places in the vicinity, March 18th, 19th and 20th and during the week following. On the 26th, at Lowell, the Masons were in force and desperate to the verge of violence. Stout-hearted friends were at hand and no personal injury beside epithets was offered.

—Our Illinois State Lecturer has removed to Wheaton and wishes all communications addressed to him at that place.

—He will be engaged at Amboy, in Lee county, and vicinity from the 22d to 26th instant. From the 27th to 30th he will speak in Paxton, Ford county and other points in that neighborhood. The first week in May is to be given to the work in Crawford county. Friends in these several localities will please notice and extend the notice. Let nothing be left undone to give success to the work.

—Rev. John Levington lately visited Youngsville, Pa., and obtained permission to speak in the Methodist Episcopal church. The lodge was present in force and with evident determination to disturb the meeting and prevent any revelation of their enormities. The speaker was proceeding with such a revelation when he was interrupted, time and again, until in their rage the Masons surrounded the pulpit; the preacher of the church in front vociferating and ordering the speaker from the sacred (?) desk; a justice of the peace and two constables, all Masons, surrounding him with threats of the law. It being plain that the law itself was prostituted to the purpose of the mob which would use personal violence rather than submit to free speech, the lecture was abruptly concluded. The friends of truth and free speech were ready in defense of their principles but were overborne by the lodge roughs. Such proceedings show that decay has struck to the heart of the lodge.

—A letter from the Wisconsin Agent giving an account of late lectures and experiences has been received too late for this week.

—The promised report from the Michigan Convention also came too late. Rev's R. Faurot of DuPlain and A. H. Springstein of Yipsilanti delivered interesting addresses on the occasion.

Correspondence.

The Crafty "Crafts" Caught in their Craft at Last.

Slander is naturally the defense of wicked systems, as truth and logic are the bulwarks of right principles and good systems. To illustrate this truth let me give a little of my personal experience in relation to modern secret orders.

While engaged in lecturing in Jay county, Indiana, more than a year since, I was one evening in Portland, after speaking, assailed in the most virulent and bitter way by a number of lodge men; among them a drunken Masonic doctor, a lawyer of the Odd-fellow persuasion and a wishy-washy Presbyterian preacher, who trained with the aforesaid doctor as a Mason. I withhold their names, knowing that those outside of their particular locality are not interested to know them; and those anywhere near know them already. Besides, I have no spite to vent upon them as individuals, believing that the wicked systems with which they are identified is largely the cause of their conduct; and that, as individuals, they would have been far from doing what, as Masons and Odd-fellows they found themselves bound to do. One of them held in his hand a copy of the Cardington Independent, published in Ohio, containing, as he said, an article very derogatory to my moral character, which he desired to read. To this I consented, and after it was read, only said a few words in reply, branding the whole thing as a Masonic lie and slander; which is a very weak name for what it contained. Some days after, a meeting was held at Miller's Hall in Portland, to organize an anti-secrecy association, which was effected. While there I was told that the Odd-fellows were holding a special meeting in their hall to consider the propriety of having the article published in the county papers; as the article alluded to my relations to that fraternity, in particular. The result was the publication of the article, with comments by the editor as follows:

"A man styling himself Rev. T. Kiggins, has been traveling over Jay county for some weeks past blasting secret societies wherever he can gather a crowd to listen to wise and wholesome argument. He spoke in Portland on Tuesday night, and Wednesday forenoon. The Masons, Odd-fellows, Good Templars, and grangers, all received their share of abuse. He may be a good man, and he may be a very bad one, but the following article taken from the Cardington (Ohio) Independent is more than likely a correct statement of this man:"

"We notice an article in the Religious Telescope of July 30th, announcing a call to the ministry of the United Brethren church to be held somewhere, for the purpose of building themselves up in their holy faith against all secret organizations. Among the names to that call, we find the name of the Rev. T. Kiggins, a member of the Sandusky conference, who was kicked out of a lodge of the I. O O F. sometime since, for slanderous and obscene language, and for not paying his honest debts while living in the Bucyrus circuit, when he could have paid as well as not. This Rev. gentleman has since taken a decided stand against all secret societies, and is now joining such of them as he can get into and then leaving them for the purpose of being better prepared to abuse the organization. We warn all secret organizations against him as a vile impostor; such a villain would not tell the truth about the order, after he had left it. We also notice the name of W. W. Knipple, (a man with whom many of our readers are acquainted,) in the call, and in all, twelve names out of one hundred and two ministers belonging to the conference, the others we venture to say are all soreheads in the church, and probably could not join secret societies if they wanted to. We refer the reader to the minutes of the Sandusky annual conference of Sept. 4th. in reference to this man Kiggins. We are glad to say that the better portion of the clergy of the United Brethren church are in favor of allowing their members the right of being free moral agents, so long as they do nothing in the cause of Christ. We would say in conclusion that if no one of the United Brethren church ever goes to hell for any other crime than belonging to a secret society of Masons or Odd-fellows, there will never one be found there. Persons who are harping about these societies, are persons of doubtful character, or those who know nothing about them."

To this slanderous document I made no immediate reply, but bided my time, knowing that God would vindicate my cause, and that unprejudiced minds would see the malicious and wicked spirit of the assault. But finally these tools of the devil have unintentionally taken the lie upon themselves, while I was busily engaged in "blasting secret societies wherever I could get a crowd to listen to wholesome argument." And it came about in this way. When last December I lectured in Newport, Wayne Co., Ind., I gave the manner in which I was initiated into the Odd-fellows, and the name and number of the lodge, and stated the fact that I had never gone into the lodge after the night I was "taken in," and my name was, I suppose, dropped for the non-payment of dues. Now hoping some wonderful developments might be made, the lodge at this place (New Garden Lodge, No. 337,) wrote to the secretary of the lodge of which I had been a member, and here is the answer, which I hope you will read with care, and compare with the article originating at Cardington, and published in Jay county, as above. Here it is:—

"McCOMB, Ohio, January 2d, 1875.
—Officers and members of New Garden Lodge, No. 337, I. O. O F: You wright to enquire of a one-armed man in your parts exposing the work of Odd-fellowship. And you further state that he is a member of our lodge. He was initiated in our lodge some years ago, he is no longer a member and never had taken any degrees, and is a dropped member for several years past. He taught school in Mc Comb some years ago. This same Kiggins has been lecturing against secret organizations of all kinds. He is canvassing for a paper printed in Chicago, Illinois. that exposes secret organizations. He has been lecturing in North-western Ohio, and Indiana the past fall. We had a communication from Paris Lodge, Preble Co., Ohio, some time ago, which was answered, provided it be the same man. He is a bad man and SHOULD BE MOBBED AND EGGED, wherever he attempts to vilify the order in this way, for he is a base liar, fiend, and persecutor of the righteous. I have written to Columbus, and he will be published in the Companion of December, 1874. If you wish, you can read this letter to him. I will not put the seal to this as you did not, which you should have done. Yours Fraternally,

WM. PENDLETON, Sec'y."

You observe at once what havoc this zealous Secretary Pendleton makes of the story published in the Cardington paper. The first story says I was "kicked out of a lodge, for slanderous and obscene language," etc. The secretary says I am "a dropped member for several years," which is true. And, that he should regard me as a base liar, fiend, and persecutor of the righteous, (?) is only what is to be expected from a zealous Odd-fellow, who has been honored by the order, towards one who has violated the (un-)holy obligations of the system, and, as they acknowledge in this letter, is actually engaged in "exposing the works of Odd-fellowship." But one item in this letter furnishes an ample demonstration of the charitable spirit (?) of the order. "He is a bad man," says Mr. Secretary, therefore he "should be MOBBED AND EGGED" whenever he engages in "vilifying the order, in this way." Ah! Mr. Secretary Pendleton, had you known that this same "bad man" was to have a copy of your letter to let the world read, and thus continue to "expose the works of Odd-fellowship," I suspect you would have been more guarded in your language.

"In this way"! What does the man mean by this expression? Does he mean to assert that I slander the lodge and thus vilify it? Not by any means. He is writing to an Odd-fellow's lodge, and speaking confidentially to them he says he is exposing Odd-fellowship, "lecturing against all secret organizations," etc.; now consequently he is a "bad man," and as this is true of him, and as our order is intended to make bad men better (?) therefore "mob and egg" "the base liar, the fiend, and persecutor of the righteous." Now let my Odd-fellow brethren (?) remember that this man writes as secretary of McComb Lodge, No. 354, and that what he says is said for the whole lodge, and to a whole lodge.

There is something a little interesting in the manner in which I got a copy of this letter. The intention was not on the part of the writer or the receivers of it that I should have it. They intended to satisfy me by "reading to me" those flattering and soothing epithets with which it abounds; and insinuate to outsiders that they had found out all about my former character, and "that (all this with knowing 'winks' and 'nods,') I had a very bad reputation, etc." Hearing they had a letter of some kind, I went to Mr. Curtis, one of the secretaries of New Garden Lodge, and asked for a copy of it. He in a very gentlemanly way promised to furnish me a copy, saying if I came down in an hour or so he would have it copied for me. That it was up in his desk and he would go right up to the lodge and get it. In the course of two or three hours I started down for it, and meeting him on the street, was informed that he was mistaken about the letter being in his desk; that he could not find it there, but thought it must be in the other secretary's desk. The next day, however, he came to me saying that he had found it, and the Vice-Grand had told him to read it to me, but not to let me have a copy of it; and he proposed to read it to me. Extending my hand, I said, "Let me read it," and he handed it to me. I read it over, and determined, that God helping me I would have a copy of it. I told the young man he had promised me a copy and he knew I had a right to it, and had better let me copy it at once. He said if I would see the Vice-Grand and get his consent it would be all right. I told him to tell them that I had the letter and would not give it up till I had it copied. He exhibited signs of anger, but started off and I walked up stairs to my room and copied it, then enclosing the original in an envelope addressed it to the secretary, and dropped it in the post-office. And now I propose using it to their own discomfiture. With strengthened faith, I am yours in the Gospel,

JOHN T. KIGGINS.

April 7, 1874.

Rev. H. Coggswell.

MANSFIELD, Richland Co., Ohio, 9th April, 1875.

Editor Christian Cynosure:

With this communication to you, I have likewise inclosed the treasurer my donation for the great and good cause; and trust the brethren will come up promptly to all engagements made, as well as all other duties incumbent upon them as stewards of Christ's kingdom.

I thought the many friends I made during the convention held here in February would be glad to hear if I still survived the terrible ordeal of placing myself right, toward God, his word, his church, the world, and my own conscience. In the face of all this, I have steered a steady course, though things looked threatening for a time, yet all appears to have passed off calmly and quietly. I have been informed that all was done that could be to ascertain my standing in the lodge, with the view (of course) of making capital for the fraternity. I have no doubt they found out too much for their satisfaction. All has been quiet; nothing more has been said publicly.

I have faced the Masonic fraternity twice in considerable numbers since the convention; once at a large funeral where I preached a most earnest sermon, and once at Bible Society meeting held in Mansfield, when I tried as best I could to extol the word of the living God. They could see, as I was in earnest in the renunciation of Masonry in the one instance, I was no less earnest in preaching and advocating truth in the other.

I am almost tempted to give you some little incidents that have transpired from time to time since the convention, but will refrain at present; probably hereafter I may do so. I find you have so many good and able correspondents in your valuable paper that is shedding light from week to week upon the moral darkness of secret societies.

I am impressed more and more that to do right should be the unchanging desire and principle of all God's professed people. The time appears to me to be not far distant when all Christian professors shall have to stand on the side of right or wrong, and the sooner such put themselves right on secret societies, as well as all other moral and political reforms, the better.

There seem to me to be issues not yet developed, but which are being revealed from year to year, which are destined to try the stamina of the half-hearted professors and preachers of the Gospel, as well as the whole church of God. Christian brethren, let us all buckle on the armor of righteousness and truth; strengthen each other's hands, pull manfully in one united effort, strengthen the hands of the executive officers in every department. Labor, plan, purpose, and above all, "do." Then shall secret societies soon totter and shake to its very foundation; and the world itself shall feel the moral good that a well organized, earnest and united band of Christians can do or effect.

Yours in labor and work,

HENRY COGSWELL.

Field Notes from a Zealous Co-worker.

Editor of the Cynosure:

During the year I have given some fifty lectures on Freemasonry. Judging from the attention and uplifted hands when an opportunity is given for voting, my propositions, arguments, and illustrations are convincing to all candid, intelligent minds. Had I the pen of a ready writer they might be profitable to your readers. As time permits I will send short articles containing some arguments and incidents.

I start out with this proposition: that previous to the Morgan revelation Freemasonry was generally supposed to be just what it claimed to be—ancient, honorable, patriotic, benevolent, Christian and moral; consequently large numbers of good men belonged to the institution. But when it was proved to be a conspiracy against Jesus Christ, the church, the government and the people, those good men renounced it and published it to the world. Thus giving the best possible testimony concerning the institution that can be produced. First, because they testify to facts within their knowledge; second, because in their testimony they renounce their errors and testify against themselves. I know Masons and their "jacks" will talk about perjured testimony, but such talk amounts to nothing with an intelligent audience, as one incident will show,

At the close of one of my lectures a clergyman was called out. After "beating around the bush" some time, attempting to throw dust in the eyes of the people, prating about good Masons such as Washington, etc., he come to this conclusion: that the speaker never having been in the lodge, of course know nothing about it; and the testimony of those who had been in and violated their obligations by renouncing it, thereby could not be believed.

I said in reply, "You are a minister of the Gospel, are you?" He was silent. I then said, "I mean no disrespect to the ministry, only wish to make an application. You preach a hell in reserve for the finally impenitent. What do you know about hell? Have you ever been there? If not, you of course know nothing about it. If you have been there and left for more congenial climes and company, you are not to be believed because you are a traitor to the devil. You preach a hell for the wicked and a heaven for the righteous from a revelation come down to you through fifty-six generations of men, and call us infidels if we reject your testimony. And yet you require us to reject the revelations of the present age, that of living witnesses like Elder Bernard, Rev. C. G. Finney and others whom God has blessed, as few men have been blessed, with long, peaceful lives."

That minister left a much wiser man and will never again make a like blunder. He has since attended one of my lectures and behaved like a gentleman. This same class of ministers has been throwing dust in our eyes all through the long, fearful and bloody battle with American slavery. If the professed ministers of Jesus Christ cannot help us in reforming the world, the very work for which the church and ministry were established, then let them stand from under. Since the days of slavery a generation has come up with less respect for station and I hope more for principle, and aside from this we know better how to deal with clerical robes put on to serve the devil in. None have more respect for the clergy than I have when they represent Christ and his cause. None have more disrespect when they represent the devil and his cause.

Yours truly, SAMUEL HALE.

"By their Fruits ye may Know them."

LEONI, Jackson Co., Mich.

I have lived in Leoni some thirty years, when I first came here there were four churches, small it is true, but they were alive trying to excel each other in doing good. There were no secret societies near here then, and the churches seemed to prosper, but soon there were Freemasons and Odd-fellow lodges formed in Jackson city eight miles from here, and at Grass Lake three miles away. It was a new thing and they went with a rush, many of the church members in good standing joined them. The churches began to decline, one after another disbanded; and now there is only one feeble and sickly church in Leoni village; that is a small branch of the M. E. church of whose ministers a good share of them are Freemasons or Odd-fellows. Those who joined these two societies without a single exception seem to have lost all the true religion they ever had; some can scoff at religion, others curse and swear and profane the Sabbath without a blush.

I know a man that served as magistrate eight years to the perfect satisfaction of the people; his only fault is he does not like secrecy and takes the Cynosure and distributes it among the people, and talks sometimes about those societies not being what they pretend to be. For those reasons that upright man was defeated last spring, and a shoemaker, spiritualist and an Odd-fellow, was elected in his place Justice of the Peace. So much for those two societies in our vicinity. Truly by their fruits we do know them. God bless the Cynosure, I love it. Yours for the right.

HIRAM GARDNER.

A Needed Reform.

BAY CITY, Bay Co., Mich.

I have read much of reforms and reformers, and am yet in favor of pure, genuine reforms, at any age and in any country where it becomes evident that the good of our race and the best interests of society demand them. Even in matters which may seem small and trivial in themselves, much good may be effected by a change in the habits, manners and customs, of the age in which we live.

Now I wish to suggest to the numerous writers and correspondents of religious and reform journals, and especially to the writers for the Christian Cynosure the importance of giving the reader an intelligent location of every writer whose articles are designed for the public eyes. I will explain by giving a few examples: If Mr. Honeywell should write an article for the Cynosure and begin by saying: Altay, N. Y., April 1st, etc., not one reader in a hundred could tell in what part of the State to locate Mr. Honeywell. But if he should say, Altay, Schuyler Co., N. Y., then most of the readers could know where to place him. Again, if Hon. George Kipp should commence an article and say, Goodrich, Mich., not one in a thousand could tell where he was located, from the fact that this is but a small village and not known far away; but if he should add, Genesee Co., then almost every reader could tell where Mr. Kipp resides.

Now there are many excellent articles published in the Cynosure, which lo e much of their value to me by not knowing where to locate the writer. Those short articles in the Cynosure written under the heading "Our Mail" might be made much more valuable by adhering to these suggestions. A few moments reflection will convince any one that the faculty of memory in men is almost entirely dependent on location and association. Now it is easy for me to associate my Anti-masonic friends with the great principles of truth and righteousness, but if I cannot locate them, there is a link missing out of that chain of friendship which ought to bind together all the lovers of truth. First then, my brethren, your names in full; second, an intelligent location, and an association which will naturally result in a warm-hearted friendship. Remember me in your prayers.

A. OLDFIELD.

OUR MAIL.

Rev. A. Rust, Lincolnville, Ind., writes:

"Secrecy corrupts religion or teaches false religion."

Seward Robson, Hamilton, N. Y., writes:

"Secret societies do not flourish as much here in college as they used to, but are rather on the wane. Independent and anti-secret societies are in full tide of prosperity."

Thos. J. McLouth, Manchester, N. Y., writes:

"I live in the county of Ontario, State of New York, where Morgan was brought and lodged in the jail at the county seat Canandaigua, whence he was taken to Orford's landing thence to Fort Niagara."

Rev. B. M. Amsden, Manchester, Ia., writes:

"I think our cause is growing in the estimation of the people at large. Yesterday my text was 'How long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God serve him; and if Baal, serve him.' A fine opportunity was given me to say something in regard to secret societies and I improved it. May Deacon Sylvanus Town's address stir up all the ministers to break silence on the subject of secret organizations."

Wm. E. Bay, Moulton, O., writes:

"I intend to send you one hundred subscribers within three months."

He sends seven this time.

Israel Gable, Stewardstown, Pa., writes:

"Do not fail to send every number of the Cynosure. . It is just the paper for me."

P. Taylor, Freedom, Ill., writes:

"Soon after the murder of Morgan I entered into the conflict with Masonry, fearless of threats, and continued the war till it was generally supposed the victory was won and Masonry was dead. But the same old harlot, with all her lying pretensions and shameless audacity, claims the respect and confidence of society now. With me it has just as much and no more respect than any other God-defying, Christ-rejecting organization."

D. D. Hayden, Colo, Ia., writes:

"In the year 1846 I offered in the Christian conference, of which I was a member, the following resolution: 'Resolved, That this conference disapprove of its ministers or members joining or belonging to secret societies; inasmuch as we are commanded to have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them.' After some warm discussion the resolution was tabled."

Joseph Sherk, Sherkston, Ont., writes:

"I hope and pray all secrecy may take a downfall."

Rev. H. S. Limbocker, Litchfield, Mich., sends a request that others will join in as follows:

"Will the Rev. H. Coggswell of Ohio, and Rev. Hankins of Iowa, both of whom I see by the Christian Cynosure have recently left the Masonic fraternity, state over their own signatures and from their own knowledge, if the penalty for the violation of the first three degrees of Masonry as the oaths are now administered, are correctly stated in Morgan and other Anti-masonic books? As I am circulating such documents, and occasionally speaking on the subject, I find some who flatly deny the truth of those statements; and among others one minister of my own denomination (Free Baptist)—I am sorry to say it—but more sorry that it is true."

Will these brethren and any others who have recently left the lodge make statements over their own names on this subject, telling us where and what their lodge standing has been?

John Fetterhoff, Chambersburg, Pa., writes:

"I have now sent you eleven subscribers and take pleasure in getting all I can. . . I wish the Christian Cynosure had a pleasant home in every family in our land, for it is worthy."

O. Stewart, Springwater, N. Y., writes:

"I am just as much Anti-masonic as ever, and have been ever since Morgan was killed. I am utterly opposed to Masonry and all secret combinations connected with it."

John Finney, Mansfield, O., writes:

"I have just read John Miller's remarks. He claims that one thousand more families in the United Brethren church ought to take the Cynosure. Fifteen hundred more of the United Presbyterian church ought to take it. It would do them good."

Allan Simpson, Lapeer, Mich., writes:

"This place is full of the strongholds of Satan. Two lodges of Masons and one of Odd-fellows. There is but one minister here that pretends to be anti-secret; and he has Masons in his society. We want a few good lectures here."

R. G. Wood, Brattleboro, Vt., writes:

"I have a very high estimation of the Cynosure; it seems to be just such a paper as the times require. It comes to us fresh and strong, and seems to give one new courage. I am in the habit of passing it around among the craft after reading it myself, and I believe that it has given them that very light that they profess to be seeking for; and I believe furthermore, that many of the lodge men wish they could be emancipated from their Masonic bondage. But, like Samson among the Philistines, shorn of his locks, they are powerless and most likely they will always grind in the Masonic prison-house."

Amos Kingsley, Lansing, Mich., writes:

"I am now in my eighty-third year. I was one of the oldest anti-slavery men in the State of New York. I have always hated slavery ever since I was capable of reasoning, and my hatred of all secret clans, especially Freemasonry, is equally intense. I lived many years in the town of Batavia, from whence Morgan was taken and murdered by Masons. I knew scores of guilty wretches that had a hand in the awful tragedy. I knew D. C. Miller who printed Morgan's book and S. D. Greene. We took sweet counsel together and walked to the house of God in company. I was acquainted with Elder Bernard and heard him preach more than forty years ago. I have been spared to see the death of slavery, and could I live to see the death and burial of Freemasonry and all her satilites, I do not know but I should be almost ready to say, 'Now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace for my eyes have seen thy salvation.'"

A. C Staples, West Branch, Ia., writes:

"The friends of light in Cedar county, Ia., held a meeting in the court-house at their county seat (Tipton) and voted $100 for the support of a State lecturer. I think we will try and be better represented at the next State meeting at Clear Lake, Ia., in June next."

We hope the Iowa friends generally will arrange to attend that meeting on the twenty-ninth day of next June.

Franklin McReynolds, Fennimore, Wis., writes:

"I have opposed secret societies ever since God converted my soul. I think secret societies belong to this world are the works of the devil, therefore I want nothing to do with them."

E. Darling, Paint Creek, Mich., writes:

"I had made but a poor effort to get signers to the petition. The tracts came to hand. I took them and a goodly number of the Cynosure; took my back track and distributed them and a tedious time I had of it. It is uphill work. With all my good wishes, I shall have to give over for I am now in my eighty fifth year. Last evening I heard brother Levington lecture on the beauties of Masonry. He is a host. It is sad to think that we have in our midst such a vast number of grand and great grand high priests and grand kings all claiming to belong to the royal family, and many of them ministering at our religious altars on the holy Sabbath, and then attending the tomfoolery of the lodge."

Isaac H. Brown, Bethel, O., writes:

"I keep my paper going until some copies are worn out. Men did not like to touch them some time ago. Now Masons and Odd-fellows all read them."

Wm. H. Linam, Pine Apple, Ala., writes:

"The Cynosure has a good many friends here. I read it and hand it around among my neighbors."

D. J. Harris, York Center, O., writes:

"I am eager to know how our reform movement succeeds. To gain this information I must have the Cynosure. The Lord grant us a speedy triumph for victory will be on the side of Israel."

A. N. Boardman, Plainfield, Ia., writes:

"I cannot say as one said 'that he was taking four papers and that he would have all four stopped before the Cynosure;' but of the four papers I take I acknowledge it would be hard to determine which should be stopped first. So come along, dear Cynosure, and if the old monster should receive his death-wound please bring notice of his obituary."

Temperance.

The womans' daily temperance prayer-meeting held from three to four o'clock, except on Sabbath, is a meeting which is well worth attending.

One fine looking man said, I had become such a drunkard that I was a disgrace and curse to all who knew me, and at last I came to Chicago. Here the spirit of God has led me into a better path. I have just received word that one of my associates has just died at the hospital of delirium tremens. Why was it not me? Another said, I tried again and again in my own strength to reform, but as often I failed; but at last I came to Christ and through his grace I made thorough work of it. I gave up tobacco and liquor together. I gave up my will entirely to God and he took the desire for liquor away from me. I have not tasted liquor for more than twelve months.

Another said he had guarded a man who had $500,000 of United States money subject to his order, who was so crazy for liquor that he would beg for rum, and cry like a child. He said no drunkard was fit to be entrusted with public funds. He said further that from a child he had been accustomed to get drunk with his father; that his father never seemed ashamed of drinking; that intoxicating liquor took away all sense of shame from those who partook of them. He testified that the blood of Christ cleanseth from all sin.

The Sabbath School.

Lesson for May 2d, 1875.—The Death of Samson.

Judges xvi. 25-31.

25 And it came to pass when their hearts were merry, that they said, Call for Samson, that he may make us sport. And they called for Samson out of the prison-house; and they set him between the pillars.

26 And Samson said unto the lad that led him by the hand, Suffer me that I may feel the pillars whereupon the house standeth, that I may lean upon them.

27 Now the house was full of men and women; and all the lords of the Philistines were there, and there were upon the roof about three thousand men and women that beheld while Samson made sport.

28 And Samson called upon the Lord, and said, O Lord God, remember me, I pray thee, only this once, O God, that I may be at once avenged of the Philistines for my two eyes

29 And Samson took hold of the two middle pillars upon which the house stood, and on which it was borne up, of the one with his right hand, and of the other with his left.

30 And Samson said, Let me die with the Philistines. And he bowed himself with all his might; and the house fell upon the lords, and upon all the people that were therein: so the dead which he slew at his death were more than they which he slew in his life.

31 Then his brethren, and all the house of his father, came down, and took him, and brought him up, and buried him between Zorah and Eshtaol, in the burying-place of Manoah his father; and he judged Israel twenty years.

GOLDEN TEXT.—He that walketh with wise men shall be wise; but a companion of fools shall be destroyed.—Prov. xiii. 20.

SCRIPTURE HELPS.—Sampson was a child of faith. His birth, his parent's trust in the Lord, and the source of his marvelous strength are told in Judges xiii. There are ten instances recorded in the xiv., xv. xvi chapters wherein this strength is shown; God also wrought a special miracle for him xv. 19. Although the strongest of men he was one of the weakest, and his powerful body was subject to passion. The consequence of bad company, Prov. i. 10; v. 3-13; vii. 21-27. 1 Cor. xv. 33; see also Ps. i. 1. These seem to have been things of special temptation, for he judged the people twenty years and the Spirit of God did not altogether desert him v. 28; Heb. xi. 32. "Slew in his life Ju. xiv. 19; xv. 8, 15. The spirit of a defender of the true church and an appointed avenger of the enemies of her God came on him at last. Ps. lxxiv. 18 23; lxxxix. 50, 51; Jer. xv. 15. His life a warning 2 Ps. iii. 17; 1 Cor. x. 6-13.

Christ in all Teaching.

We have known teachers who are always attentive to the class; they never miss a Sabbath, save for sickness; they prepare their lessons so as to attract the attention of the class; they are regarded as model teachers in almost every respect, and yet there are never any conversions in their classes—not even in revivals of religion. Why this strange thing? Just because they never talk about Christ to the class, only in a most general way. They never interest themselves in the spiritual welfare of one of the scholars. They seem to be of the impression that such an important matter as the conversion of the soul must be left almost exclusively to some other agency. They have not aimed at this, and, of course, have not accomplished it. Now, it seems very evident that while the "lighter matters" are not to be neglected, yet the "weightier matters" should ever occupy a most prominent place in the thought of the teacher. Teach everything that may be helpful to the class, but be careful that Christ is included in the everything. Keep constantly in mind that duty demands that you should teach for eternity. Never forget that you meet your class to talk to the members of it concerning the personal soul and the personal Christ. Better, far better, to teach less of some things and more of Christ. Is it not wrong to leave your class without having endeavored directly or indirectly, to leave Christ with it? Teachers, aim right—aim at the soul with Christ, and you shall strike the soul with Christ.—Journal and Messenger.

Forty Years Ago.

An Able Argument for Free Inquiry.

A discourse at Woodstock, Conn., Sept. 11, 1829, by Danniel Dow, Paetor of the church in Thompson.

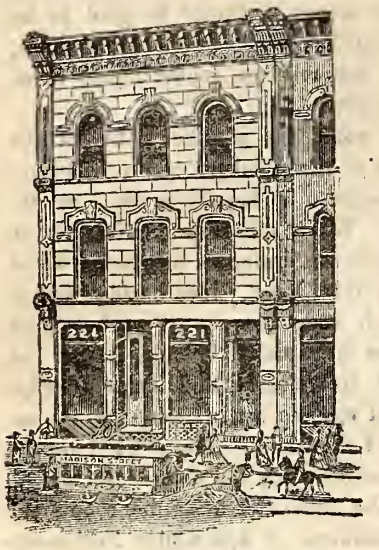
[CONTINUED]

6. There are some things upon the very face of the institution; some effects which it has produced; and some things which have been done with respect to it, which do most imperiously demand inquiry. The propriety of an oath, administered to the young, and to the unwary, when he who takes it knows neither the form nor the subject of it, justly demands inquiry. When men are made to swear to obey all orders which may be handed, sent, or thrown to them, and to keep all secrets which may be committed to them, murder and treason excepted, and in some instances, murder and treason not accepted, it is certainly time to inquire, whether such oaths are consistent, either with the love of God, or of man. Again, Masonry is either a religious institution, or it is not. If it is not a religious institution, how comes it to pass that such intelligent men as Mr. Town, Mr. Preston, Mr. Webb, and others, so confidently assert that it is? How comes it to pass that grand lodges, chapters and encampments, have recommended these writers as giving a just account of the institution? How comes it to pass that this sentiment has either been openly avowed or passed over without remonstrance, by all the members of the fraternity, with scarce a single exception, till within a few years past? How comes it to pass that such orders are formed in the institution, as deacons and priests, and grand high priests, and grand prelates? How comes it to pass that so many religious emblems are made use of, and such as are borrowed from the most sacred ordinances of our holy religion? Why is the Lord's Supper mimicked? And why is there an exhibition of the most solemn scenes, described in the Word of God, not only on earth, but also in heaven? How comes it to pass that we sometimes see, inscribed in large letters upon the scarf of a Masonic High Priest, HOLINESS UNTO THE LORD? And how comes it to pass that even professed ministers of the Gospel, whose praise is in all the lodges, have publicly declared that the Masonic secret is nothing less than the manna which came down from heaven, and the white stone and the new name which no man knoweth, saving he that receiveth it? If it be not a religious institution, it is not needful to inquire whether a most wicked imposture hath not been practiced, and the sacred institutions of religion caricatured? It would seem that they who now tell us that Masonry is not a religious institution, are speaking very reproachfully of the ceremonies, the emblems, and the practices of the order, and are, in fact, impeaching the whole fraternity, as a body, of acting the part of hypocrisy, from the very commencement of the order down to the present time. You will observe that it is not I who assert that Masonry does not claim to be a religious institution. But surely, those gentlemen who do make the assertion, (unless they are willing to give up the institution as altogether indefensible), ought to consider well what they say. If it be not a religious institution, why has it always made such claims and pretentions, and why are religious emblems made use of? But if it be a religious institution, the inquiry certainly ought to be made, what sort of religion is it? The constitution of Freemasonry takes the broad ground that persons of all religions, whether they be Christians, or Jews, or Mohammedans, or pagans, may be admitted as members of the fraternity; and he that believes in the existence of any God, whether one or a thousand, or whatever the character of his gods may be, may have a right, so far as religion is concerned, to all the peculiar and distinguishing immunities, and blessings, and privileges of Freemasonry. The question then very naturally arises, (and who will say it is not an important question?) What religion does Freemasonry teach? Is it Christianity? Is it Judaism? Is it Mohammedanism? Is it paganism? Or does it place them all upon a common level? Surely, if religion is professedly taught in this institution, it cannot be considered as impertinent or uncivil to inquire what sort of religion it teaches, that we all may determine whether it be such a religion as we would wish to be taught, and that the pupils may supply themselves with suitable books and implements, and be prepared to receive the instruction which it gives. And if it be only the hand-maid of religion as some say, it is certainly desirable, in order that both the hand-maid and the mistress may perform their appropriate duties, that it may be well understood what this hand-maid has to do, and what may be reasonably expected of her. And would it not, sometimes, be proper to inquire whether she has in fact, done the service assigned her? It does seem that there are some things here, in the very claims and pretentions of the institution, which do especially demand inquiry.

Again, it does appear, that great evils have resulted from secret societies, and sometimes have grown out of the lodge; as Professor Robison and Abbe Barruel abundantly testify. It is not needful, then, to inquire what these secret societies have actually done? What have they done in France? What have they done in Germany? What have they done in Russia, in Prussia, in Spain, in Portugal and in England? What have they done in Mexico? And especially, what have they done, and what are they doing in the United States? If they have done nothing but what is salutary, let it be recorded to their honor. But if it be found to be a fact that revolutions have been meditated, and plans to effect them concerted and matured in the lodge-room, the inquiry ought to be made, in what way such evils may be avoided.

More than all this, what has been done by others in relation to this subject, who are not members of the institution, renders inquiry peculiarly needful. Whether at the first there was any necessity for the inquiry or not, inquiry has not only commenced, but there are many who have gone so far as to give their verdict. We have documents presented to the public of most weighty import, from very respectable sources. We have not only the confessions of Christian brethren and pious clergymen who have seceded from the institution, but we have also the doings of churches, and conventions of churches, and associations, and consociations, and assemblies of very respectable civilians, who have passed their acts and resolves, declaring that they have examined this subject with much prayerfulness and deliberation, and that they do find it to be an institution both corrupt and dangerous, inconsistent with morality, with liberty, with religion, and with law. They say so. Now the public acts of such respectable bodies certainly demand a respectful attention. If they have acted right, and in the view of evidence, we ought to concur with them. If they were mistaken, and their acts improper, we are not bound, indeed, by their decisions, but we have no right to say they have done wrong, until we have made the inquiry ourselves, and can give a good and substantial reason why their decisions should not be affirmed. To set aside their decision without inquiry, would be judging the case without hearing the evidence. And if any one can tell how Christians can do their duty to their brethren, with whom they are in covenant, and pay no respect to their doings, I should be glad to be informed. Such public declarations, acts, and resolves render inquiry indispensable.

I would ask whether it be not the duty of the members of the fraternity themselves to inquire as well as others? Would it be improper for them to inquire concerning an institution which they may have joined hastily, and of which they frequently confess they know but little? Would it not be well to examine still more deeply, what was the origin? what is the nature? what is the design? what are the secret doctrines and obligations, as well as the open and ostensible claims and pretentions of speculative Freemasonry. Such things as once were never written, nor printed, nor cut, nor carved, nor stamped, nor engraved, and which, therefore, could not be so well understood and remembered, are now printed in a fair type, and you may read them at your leisure, and reflect upon them deliberately. And is it not possible, that upon further investigation, you may discover some things which you had overlooked? Or, if you should not be convinced that it had an evil design at its commencement, may it not still be a subject of inquiry, whether it has not been so much corrupted as greatly to mar, if not to spoil the institution?



Would it not be well to inquire most seriously, whether the principles of illuminism have not been introduced into the lodges of the United States and spread to such extent as to be greatly alarming? And would it not be well to inquire, what is the propriety of all those higher orders in Masonry, which are confessedly of a very recent origin, and which claim supremacy, not only over all the lodges in this county, but in both hemispheres? Would it not be well to inquire, who gave them authority, before you submit to it? And would it be improper for you to inquire with respect to the bloody deeds, said to have been committed by Masons in the State of New York, and countenaced by lodges and encampments, and whether you are in reality (however ignorantly and unintentionally) in alliance with, if not in subjection to a body of men who are disposed either to perpetrate, or conceal such crimes? Or, if the institution be only what the Rev. Joseph Emerson says it is; who admits that it has done all the good it ever will do; would it not be well for you to inquire whether you might not, even out of condescension to your brethren, to allay this unhappy excitement, to make so small a sacrifice as to give up an institution, which, even its learned advocate acknowledges, has done all the good that can be expected from it, and which, consequently can be of no farther value, either to yourselves or others.

Whether my hearers be Masons or Anti-masons, or neither, it cannot be improper for them to inquire, so far as to be able to give a reason for all they do or say in relation to this subject.

(TO BE CONTINUED)

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 22, 1875.

THE CARPENTER DONATION.

The above is a front view of the fine stone-front building on Madison street, Chicago, which Mr. Carpenter proposes to give the National Christian Association for head quarters and publishing house. Ten thousand dollars secures the occupation, and the Association hopes to raise this sum by June 10th next; and $20.000 as soon thereafter as possible to secure the ownership. Send on contributions.

MR. BEECHER.—We admit in this number an article entitled "THE CHRISTIAN HEART," in which the case of Mr. Beecher is stated with fearful clearness by a popular writer. In the verdict of the Brooklyn jury we feel little interest, especially since the laudation of ritualism, and hailing the appointment of an American Cardinal by Mr. Beecher and his brother, will doubtless secure through the influence of priests a favorable verdict from the two Roman Catholic jurymen.

And since we find good men and reformers, who are earnest friends and profound believers in the innocence of Mr. Beecher, we are simply aghast and know not what to look for or expect. To us, the simple naked fact that Oliver Johnson, who says under oath, that he is a Universalist and Unitarian, and receiver of messages from familiar spirits, is kept as associate editor of an "evangelical" (?) church paper by Mr. Beecher, condemns him past hope as an unscrupulous, shameless person. If professed abolitionists had set an avowed and earnest slaveholder to edit their paper, would not that fact brand them as hypocrites and wholly insincere? How much worse to employ a denier of the Bible to edit the Christian Union?

MR. NEEDEL'S LETTER.—The article headed "Political" is by far the best and ablest presentation of our political wisdom and duty during the coming canvass for Federal officers. It will be read with interest. The trouble is that two branches of the reform, political and religious, cannot well be carried forward at the same time by the same persons. And we are not numerous enough to give good politicians any hope of success. The only thing we can hope to do by nominating in the next canvass, will be as John VanBuren said of Free Soil Party in 1848 "to make a naked operation of principle." Mr. Needels ably advocates making that "operation." We incline to agree with him, and yet see many difficulties in the way, and some dangers of division among ourselves. King David in such cases used to pray, "cause me to know the way in which I should walk. Teach me to do thy will."

Temperance and the Lodge.

In the article from the Temperance Visitor on our first page friend Auge of Norristown, Pa., presents, as few could, a view of the secret order temperance work. The desire of the Visitor had escaped us, and our readers must thank him for the able presentation of one evil connected with pledged lodges. Others might be named, which are generally applicable to the lodges: a ritual of worship to be paid ostensibly to God, but which is often from necessity bald blasphemy, because prepared with indifference to the character of the person using it; it is also an almost universal testimony that "temperance" lodges are run by Masons and in the interest of that order, and that the "good of the order" is put before the cause it purports to advance. These are, however, objections only. It is superfluous to point out a "better way." The testimony of Dr. Charles Jewett, himself a "Son of Temperance," on the work of open and secret societies, and the great revival in the temperance work during the past three years is answer. The liquor law of Illinois and the "Baxter" law of Indiana were far from any connection with the "orders." For the repeal of the latter the lodge under some name probably has something to answer. The women's movement, the grandest if not most successful of any ever begun against the rum power, has nothing to do with the orders, nor does it need them; and the compromise they have patched up in the Temperance Alliance of this city, and in the national convention to be held here in June, with churches and open temperance workers, is not in its nature likely to give any permanent advantage to temperance. Let the lodges give up their rituals, regalias and senseless grips, and join hearts, hands and pockets with our noble women and we have no doubt the result will prove it a "better way."

NOTES.

—A correspondent of the Western Rural describes a Farmer's Club at Rosendale, Wis., which is carried on in a practical manner. The crops in that neighborhood are twenty-five per cent. better than the average in the State, as a result, it is believed, of the information gained and impressed in the discussions of the Club. This is more farmer-like than night after night spent in senseless grange rites.

—The wild, unreasonable conduct of miners in Pennsylvania, pushed on by their secret trade unions, has brought them into conflict with the military force of the State and greatly subdued their hostile operations. Beside risking their lives in a fruitless rebellion against authority these unions have brought upon the mining population and indeed on the whole business interests of the country enormous loss, as the New York Bulletin shows in a careful calculation. It shows that $500,000,000 of capital and 100,000 persons are now idle in this one State, simply on account of the strikes. The loss in wages is $200.000, and on capital (at six per cent.) $75,000 a day. This is an aggregate loss of $1,650,000 a week, without taking any account of the profit of production to the capitalist and the world. These figures show that, if the profit is excluded, there is a dead loss of $8.00 by the workingmen to every $3.00 lost by the employers. There can be only one issue to such a strife. Sooner or later the strikers must yield. The money lost by the 100 000 strikers, every day, would make 500 or 1,000 of them part-proprietors of the mines in which they work. Such a waste is a disgrace to civilization. It has ten thousand ramifications, and will make the wheels of trade turn more slowly for months. The industries of a nation are taxed to support a stubborn array of mine-owners and diggers (trades-unions), and neither party to the foolish contest is willing to submit the destructive quarrel to arbitration, or to take any steps towards the industrial partnerships which are the only cure for periodical strife between masters and men."

—We have again to make an entry on the death-record of patrons of our reform. On the 1st inst. Wm. S. Young of Philadelphia, publisher of the Evangelical Repository. He was born in that city and never removed from it, and was always engaged in publishing for the United Presbyterian church. A notice in the Christian Instructor says, "More than any other man, perhaps, he was identified with the publications of our church, issuing various editions of the Psalms, Catechisms, Bibles, Confession of Faith, and valuable reading books, while for a long time he was the publisher of the Evangelical Repository and Christian Instructor. In his printing-office and under his care many young men that have since made their mark in the world had their special training."

—An exchange says, "The Prince of Wales, whose accession to the throne is looked forward to by the great mass of the people of Great Britain with such mingled or sad feelings in view of his character and habits, is about to be installed Grand Master of the Freemasons with the most splendid and imposing ceremony in the history of English Masonry."

—The late Moses Stuart, Professor at Andover Theological Seminary was for thirty-five years addicted to the use of tobacco, but broke off the vile habit and like Bunyan's Pilgrim set up a waymark to warn future travelers. He wrote of the evil thus:

"I do not place the use of tobacco in the same scale with that of ardent spirits. It does not make men maniacs and demons. But that it does undermine the health of thousands; that it creates a nervous irritability, and thus operates on the temper and moral character of men; that it often creates a thirst for spiritous liquors; that it allures to clubs and grog-shops and taverns, and thus helps to make idlers and spendthrifts, and, finally, that it is a very serious and needless expense; are things which cannot be denied by any observant and considerate person. And if all this be true, how can the habitual use of tobacco as a mere luxury, be defended by any one who wishes well to his fellow-men, or has a proper regard to his own usefulness?"

"Nearer a Hell than Anything Earthly."

Under the heading "SHARP CRITICISM," the April number of the Voice of Masonry, published in this city, gives the following most remarkable view of the inside workings of the lodge. Until we read this Anti-masonic story we did not believe it possible that any amount of pressure could force Albert G. Mackey, "Past General Grand High Priest and Secretary General of the Supreme Council 33d Degree for the Southern Jurisdiction U. S. A., to publish such facts to the world. Can it be possible that this editor is the same great Masonic author who says a Masonic apron is "More ancient than the Golden Fleece or Roman Eagle; more honorable than the Star and Garter or any other order?" Verily it is the same. It is evident from the remarks of the editor that a very great pressure was brought to bear in order to get these facts published and THE WORST OF THEM ARE UNDOUBTEDLY SUPPRESSED as the editor says: "This is not the whole of his picture of the conduct of Masons where he resides." Yet the editor sharply repremands the narrator for saying that, "until there is a radical change he proposes to stand aside," and with almost unparalleled effrontery declares that "the moral record of Masonry will not suffer in comparison with that of any other society, not excepting the church." Surely Elder Baird is not far out of the way when he says, "Masonic statements are to be understood exactly the opposite." We were so forcibly reminded of Judge Whitney's letter to the Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Illinois in 1851, where he says: "This lodge has been nearer a hell than anything earthly," that we have chosen part of it for the heading. E. A. C.

Years ago I came here and joined the several bodies by demits, and, on the first meeting of the lodge, after I had been elected to membership therein, I attended, and the third degree was conferred, after which I was treated to a scene never before witnessed. A keg of beer was set on the pillar in the South and the lodge proceeded to refreshment. I denounced the proceeding strongly, and told them openly that from that time on I should fight to overthrow such practices, and should ask for the arrest of the charter on a recurrence of the event. With a large number of the lodge it outlawed me for a time. But patient labor achieved much, and after seeing drunkenness and profanity permitted, unrebuked, for a long time in open lodge, two trials for un-Masonic conduct were reached, and after positive proof of the charges, the lodge refused to purge itself, but voted to reprimand, which the Master did, about in these words: 'Bro———, you have been a bad boy, but in the words of Christ to the woman accused of adultery, I say, 'go and sin no more.'" Renewed license was given, and the election of a Master followed who was sometimes too drunk to do the work. And so for years the struggle went on. Now and then a good man was elected, but, in the main, any good man was at once rejected.

On one occasion, when a candidate had been several times rejected, his petition was held until such time as there were only friends present, and then, half an hour before the time for meeting, the lodge was opened, the ballot passed, the candidate elected, and, when the members began to collect, at the regular time, they found the obnoxious person already obligated. To the brother remonstrating, the Master said: "Go home and take some soothing syrup."

In the course of time I became Master of the lodge, and during one year, only good men were accepted, and a host of saloonists, roustabouts, raftsmen and barbarians, were rejected. For this, I was again outlawed.

To the Editor of the Cynosure.

DEAR SIR —I see some of your readers doubt about the expediency of your assuming the guilt of Beecher in the scandal case. I should myself, if your views were predicated upon the merely legal aspects of the case. Even the crime of perjury in this case is condoned in advance, by Thomas K Beecher, who writes to his sister Mrs. Hooker, that perjury in some cases is allowable. But as a Christian editor, who owes a duty to Christ, above the influence of men or denominations, I think the Cynosure has been true, while many have been fearful and false, sympathizing with impiety.

I send you the following article written by one known to some of your readers. There is no appeal from its conclusion—a conclusion which reaches by an infallible Scripture principle not only the principal in this case but those who knowingly sympathize with him.

The Christian Heart.

If the New Testament be true; if Christian experience has heart and conscience in it; if like tastes, like characters and aims produce heart-fellowship, then there is an aspect of this Beecher scandal about which Christian people cannot be mistaken. Some good people may not have examined the subject matter in the case, and hence in their ignorance their sympathy may mislead them; but we hold that no Christian, knowing the facts in the case, as gathered from Mr. Beecher's letters, can be for a moment in doubt in regard to the character of all the three men especially involved in this scandal.

That Tilton and Moulton are treacherous, even impious men in the Christian sense, no one doubts; the only question is whether Beecher is a third person in this unholy trinity of hypocrisy and impurity. Are these three one in heart; while selfishness, not holiness, being the element of their union, they may become the most deadly enemies when their lusts or personal interests come in collision.

Let us see. Is there heart-union between Beecher and Moulton? Beecher stands before the world as the pastor of Plymouth Church—which, if he be a Christian, he must be supposed to love and respect sincerely, especially the true men and women of his charge. But how is his heart, as between them and Moulton, whom he knew, while he accepted him as his bosom friend, to be an unbeliever, an associate of Mrs. Woodhull, a sporting man, a Sabbath-breaker and a profane swearer. Hear what he says to Moulton: "To feel remorse, fear, desperation and yet put on the appearance of serenity and happiness cannot be endured much longer." "If you cease to trust me, to love me, I am alone. I have no other person in the world to whom I could go"—Could not go to his wife, nor his deacons, nor any Christian in the world; but to an avowed infidel, knowing him to be the friend of lewd women and loose men. And this pastor tells this "heathen" that he puts on an appearance of serenity before his people while he feels remorse, fear and desperation.

Again, writing from his own home to this man who rejected Christ and Christianity, he says, "I only need some one to talk to and that one is you." In his next letter he says of Moulton's wife, whose testimony (although she is a member of his own church) they are trying to impeach: "her great-hearted kindness and trust have lifted me out of dispondence often; though sometimes her clear truthfulness has laid me pretty flat." In a succeeding letter he addresses Moulton in the language used by the most intimate sporting men to each other. He says, "I want to send my love to you and yours. God bless you, my dear old fellow." In another letter, alluding to the methods by which they had endeavored to conciliate Tilton, he says, "They render me liable at any hour to be obliged to stultify all the devices by which we saved ourselves." This Plymouth pastor then had been engaged according to his own words with one whom he knew to be an associate of the Woodhull in "devices to save themselves; and there was danger that he might have to stultify his own devices, which he is now doing under oath. And when the time actually came that he had to stultify his past devices he felt that he would rather die than make the effort, and writes as follows: "The span of life is but a moment, the glory of the everlasting emancipation is worldless, inconceivable and full of glory. Oh my dear Frank, I shall know you then forever and hold fellowship with you, and look back and smile at the past." Not only in this life, but forever, Beecher expected to hold fellowship with one whom he knew to be an infidel, a companion of lechers and a liar. If there can be any more perfect or stronger or longer heart-fellowship than this, the world has never known it; and yet the apostle asks—as a thing impossible, "what fellowship hath light with darkness, and what part hath he that believeth with an infidel."

But the heart of this pastor of Plymouth is revealed very distinctly in another aspect. Mrs. Tilton did not like Moulton. But her pastor is determined that she too shall have fellowship with him; so he writes her a letter in which he says, "His hand it was that tied up the storm ready to burst upon our heads," "I have put myself wholly and gladly into Moulton's hand;" and then he tells her they must "meet in Moulton." What a terrible revealment of heart in the shepherd of the Plymouth flock. One of the dearest of the flock to the pastor is not to meet him in any of the officers or members or Christian ladies of the church, but in his bosom friend Moulton. And so this woman, whom he speaks of as a Christian lady, agrees to his proposition and adopts Moulton as their mutual friend. It is not possible for a Christian heart to feel any sentiment but that of condemnation towards a shepherd who leads one of his flock to the wolf's fold.

But it may be said this is only two persons of the vicious trio—what of the third? If Beecher was guilty of all that Tilton alleges, Tilton had no right to complain. The pastor only acted on his (Tilton's) principles; and hence the struggle of the prosecutor to condone both the fault of his wife and her parmour. Beecher understood this perfectly, and sympathized with Tilton. Before his people, who condemn Tilton, he had to assume a position consistent with his action in condemning Tilton's principles as immoral; but in his letters to Moulton he continues up to the last act in the drama in sympathy with Tilton; and although he says he advised his dismission from the Independent because of his opinions in connection with Woodhull and other immoral matters, yet he gives five thousand dollars through Moulton secretly to sustain Tilton in a paper that maintained the same principles only more earnestly and openly than he had avowed in the Independent. Five thousand dollars to support an open, confessed, free-marriage paper! Which is the true heart, Beecher condemning Tilton's principles before the public, or secretly giving five thousand dollars to sustain them?

The quality of the Plymouth pastor's heart is likewise revealed with striking distinctness not only in the character of Wilkeson, his partner, in publishing the Life of Christ whose profanity is repulsive, and Johnson, a spiritualist and a Universalist, his associate editor in a religious newspaper, but clearly in his letter to his boon companion Moulton, showing indignity to his neighbor, Dr. Storrs, whom he professed before the world and his church to regard with Christian affection. To the infidel Moulton he thus writes under the designation, "Confidential;" that is, the confidential revelation of the pastor of Plymouth to a man who professed to be a heathen in regard to religion, he writes thus: "After the pretended sympathy and friendship for Theodore he has turned against him in the most venemous manner; and it is not sincere. His profession of faith and affection for me are hollow and faithless." "Such a speech ought to damn Storrs."

Now, if these heart revelations to Mr. Moulton do not reveal the true character of the man there is no meaning in the New Testament. "Like loves like forever," and the secret life reveals the true character. The secular press can take no cognizance of Christian criteria in this case; nor can the jury, or the judge; but a Christian cannot avoid doing so. Whatever may be the decision of the twelve jurors, to the Christian the decision of the twelve apostles is conclusive. X. Y.

Married.

TURNEY—OGLESBY.—April 14th, 1875, at the residence of the bride's father, in Richview, Washington county, Illinois, by J. O. Finley, ex-President of the Lebanon University, Rev. D. B. Turney, pastor of the Methodist church, Paris, Edgar county, Illinois, and Miss Emma Virginia Oglesby, daughter of Rev. D. Oglesby, of the Southern Ill. Conference M. E. church.

Political.

ALBANY, Gentry Co., Mo.

PRESIDENT BLANCHARD —When it was announced that the committee that was to have met at Indianapolis, Ind., last August, would meet at Pittsburgh at our next annual Convention, I was in hopes there would be something done worthy of the cause we are advocating. I had supposed that Mr. Green and other men of ability would come to the front and propose measures commensurate with the wants of our nation. But we have heard very little or nothing from them and now it is being advocated that we lay low and keep dark till we see what the two great parties will do. I had supposed that every man who was in for reformation was satisfied that both parties were failures so far as our movement was concerned. The Bourbon Masonic Democratic party plundered our nation in war and increased secret societies all over the land, and anything that looks towards the suppression of the liquor traffic is spurned and hooted down by them. If they should nominate a man for President who did not belong to secret societies, and he was elected, the secret conclaves would rule him, and if we gave him our support it would set us back at least four years in our movement and may be disorganize us, as some other movement would be sure to be put forward by the secret-society men, and so managed as to control our strength. There is now a great quaking among secret-society men throughout our land. I have talked with our friends who travel and they all say the question is being discussed everywhere; and shall we by our action throw a damper on this reformation by neglecting to thoroughly complete our organization and put a platform before the people so liberal and just that all will have to acknowledge its merits? The time has come when every citizen should be equal before the law; and we should insist that all class legislation should cease, whether made or enacted in the public halls or in the secret chambers of the secret empire that exists in our midst. One is just as dangerous as the other and no doubt exists in my mind but what they are working to build each other up until the auspicous hour arrives when they can unite their destinies and crush out the liberties of the American people. I know that men will say that we are croakers, and do all in their power to disorganize us. But when we read the history of the downfall of all republics we see that they all fell by the means now destroying us. And shall we follow in their wake! Let us avoid it if possible though we meet the scorn and gears of the rabble, and future generations will arise and bless our names. But this cannot be done by acting with either of the two great parties. We hear the same plea from each of the parties that the other cannot be trusted, and I believe both, and have so little choice that I cannot choose between them. Secretism is a ruling power with them both. Neither of them dare to make an issue on the temperance question while drunkenness is sinking our people (backed up by secretism) into barbarism. I hope we shall hear at once from all quarters that we will have a political convention immediately after the adjournment of the Christian Association, to take into consideration the propriety of making nominations for President and Vice-president. I hope every one of the platform Committee will be present, so that our amended platform may be the pride of our party and every one do all in his power to make it a success.

Yours, etc., G. W. NEEDELS.

The Home Circle.

Home.

It is not by walls, be they humble or grand,
That the dearest of words in our tongue we define—
No measure, or lesser or larger of land,
Can hold by its firman a thing so divine.
Home! sweetest of places beneath the broad sun,
Who is it thy sweetest of sweetness has won?

Nay—the lord in his palace, though smooth acres sweep
To the verge of his vision, his own—all his own—
Though sunshine his senses delightsomely steep—
Thy beautiful grace he may never have known.
Home! the brightest of places beneath the broad sun,
Who is it thy brightest of brightness has won?

And the cotter who rests him on Saturday night,
When the snow-sheeted world wins a glow from the fire,
When thrift all about him is smiling and bright—
Not always for him is there crowned his desire.
Home! rarest of places beneath the broad sun.
Who is it thy rarest of rareness has won?

Ah! the hamlet or hall may be equally blest,
With comfort and welcomes, with welcomes that cheer,
And better than any may each be confest,
Yet home that is home finds no anchorage here,
Home! subtlest of places beneath the broad sun,
Who is it thy subtleness truly has won?

They only have won thee—they only have known
Why thy four little letters express of pure bliss,
That dwell amid sweetness whose seed has been sown
In a region above, ere transplanted to this!
Home! Eden that blesses, though veiled be the sun,
It is love and love only thy essence has won.

The flowers of the garden may all fade away;
Through exile, love's landmarks be mistily lost;
But the spirit of home is not mortal as they,
And it lives howe'er sadly our longing is crossed.
Home! rest of the soul under shadow or sun,
Whoever has won thee, forever has won!

—Aldine.

Preaching to Sinners.

BY D. F. NEWTON.

Preach to sinners over a dead church—cold, formal, fashionable, covetous, money-loving? Ministers, why spend your strength for naught? Why wear out your lungs for naught, and worse than naught?

Preachers preach and exhort enough to rend the heavens, cause mountains to melt and flow down, while sinners stand like brazen pillars, unmoved, harder than the nether millstone! Truth enough is advanced at protracted efforts, on camp grounds, in churches, in sacred desks, to save a whole city, a State, a nation, but the truth falls powerless, useless, like water spilt on the earth.

What's the matter? where the failure? why so little effect produced under these divine ministrations? There are Achans in the camp by the hundreds and thousands, dead weights, clogs to the wheels of salvation, rumsellers, wine-bibbers, tobacco-chewers and smokers, idolaters in dress, covetous persons, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, secret, oath-bound societies, Odd-fellowship and Freemasonry, the curse of curses. "The children of Israel could not stand before their enemies, but turned their backs." Wherefore? Israel had sinned, transgressed the covenant, taken of the "accursed thing." "Rise," said the Lord, "sanctify the people, ... for there is an accursed thing in the midst of thee, O Israel." See Josh. vii. 12, 13. If one Achan in the camp prevented Israel to stand before their enemies, or moving onward in conquest, what can we do with scores of Achans in every tent, every church organization? Friends, why spend your strength for naught? why begin at the wrong end? Why not do as God commanded Joshua to do, "up, sanctify the people? I will be with you no more, except ye destroy the accursed among you." When our Saviour entered the temple of God, he cast out all that sold and bought in the temple, overthrew the tables of the money-changers and the seats of them that sold doves, saying. "It is written, my house shall be called a house of prayer, but ye have made it a den of thieves."

The command is, "Come out from among them, be separate and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receieve you." "Blow the trumpet in Zion, sanctify a fast, call a solemn assembly: gather the people, sanctify the congregation, assemble the elders: . , . Let the priests, the ministers of the Lord, weep between the porch and the altar; and let them say, Spare the people, O Lord, and give not thy heritage to reproach, that the heathen should rule over them: why should they say among the people, where is their God?" "Rend your heart and not your garments, and turn to the Lord your God, . . . who knoweth if he will return and repent, and leave a blessing behind him, even a meat offering and a drink offering to the Lord your God." See Joel ii. 19.

"Awake to righteousness and sin not." "Repent, do your first works." "I council thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white rayment that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness appear not." "Preach faith and repentence to the church—restitution and holiness of the Lord," entire sanctification; cleanse the senctuary. One special object in Christ's ministrations was to do away the traditions of men, the abominations that had crept into the church, the sanctuary of God, by a corrupting, time-serving priesthood. The apostles of Jesus Christ laboring intensely and continually to keep the church pure, holy, harmless, undefiled, that it might be "a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing, but that it should be holy and without blemish." Eph. v. 27—"fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners." "Then, one will chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight."

Commence at the house of God, purify the church, prepare the people. "Wash you, make you clean, put away the evil of your doings." Before preaching to sinners, preach to the church—faith, repentance, holy living, entire conseoration. Israel could not move a step in conquest till Achan was searched out and destroyed. If we expect God to bless the preached word, hear our prayers for the conversion of sinners, the sanctification of believers, we must search out the Achans and destroy them. We must prepare ourselves duly for the work, repent, put away our sins, make restitution, wash ourselves, make ourselves clean, and God will bow the listening ear, receive us graciously.

Jacob said to his household and to all that were with him, "Put away the strange gods that are among you and be clean; and change your garments. . . . . And they gave to Jacob all the strange gods which were in their hands and the ear-rings which were in their ears; and Jacob hid them under the oak which was by Sechem." Gen. xxxv. 4.

Mark well—among other strange gods, the ear-rings are mentioned. The Lord blessed Jacob in his consecration. God cannot look complacently on his people, and bless their labors, while clinging to idols. It is our sins that hides God's face—pride, covetousness, oppression. "Seek judgment," saith the Lord, "relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widow." What next? Hark! "Come, now, let us reason together, saith the Lord: though your sins be as scarlet they shall be white as snow," Take another case God hid his face from his ancient people the Jews, for their oppression and neglect of the poor. See Isaiah lviii.—the whole chapter. We quote a single verse: "Is not this the fast I have chosen? to loose the bands of wickedness, to undo the heavy burdens and to let the oppressed go free, and that ye break every yoke? . . . Then shall their light break forth as the morning, and thy health shall spring forth speedily, and thy righteousness shall go before thee: the glory of the Lord shall be thy reward."

"'Tis sin that grieves his holy mind,
And makes his anger rise;
And sinners, old or young, shall find
No favor in his eyes.

But when the broken spirit burns
And would from sin depart,
The God of mercy never spurns
That broken, bumble heart."

—303 W. 29th St. New York.

The Providence of God.

In the number of providential interpositions in answer to prayer, says Le Clerc, may be seen by what happened on the coast of Holland in the year 1672. The Dutch expected an attack from their enemies by sea, and public prayers were ordered for their deliverance. It came to pass that when their enemies waited only for the tide, in order to land, the tide was retarded, contrary to its usual course, for twelve hours, so their enemies were obliged to defer the attempt to another opportunity; which they never found, because a storm arose afterwards, and drove them from the coast.

It is well known that many of the good men who were driven from England to America by persecution in the seventeenth century, had to endure great privations. In the spring of 1623 they planted more corn than ever before; but by the time they had done planting their food was spent. They daily prayed, 'Give us this day our daily bread;' and in some way or other the prayer was always answered. With a single boat and a net they caught some fish, and when these failed they dug in the sand for shell-fish. In the month of June their hopes of a harvest were nearly blasted by a drought which withered up their corn and made the grass look like hay. All expected to perish with hunger.

In their distress the pilgrims set apart a day of humiliation and prayer, and continued their worship for eight or nine hours. God heard their prayers, and answered them in a way which excited universal admiration. Although the morning of that day was clear, and the weather very hot and dry during the whole forenoon, yet before night it began to rain, and gentle showers continued to fall for many days, so that the ground became thoroughly soaked, and the drooping corn revived.

It is well known that in the year 1686, the Duke of Savoy was prevailed on by Louis the XIV, to repel the Waldensian Christians from their native valleys. In 1689, eight or nine hundred of these persons, through great difficulties returned. Dr. Calamy, in his 'Life and Times' relates that Dr. Arnauld, their minister and leader, told him that when they had nearly reached their homes, pursued by a number of enemies, they were in great danger of dying from want of provisions. Such, however, was the kindness of God to them, that a sudden thaw removed in one night a mass of snow from the fields where they discovered a considerable quantity of wheat standing in earth, ready for the sickle, that had been covered with snow, and which now was unexpectedly exposed. On this grain they lived until other sources supplied them with food.

God's hand still guides his trusting saints;
God's ear still hears their sad complaints;
His shadowing wings will us defend,
His arm uphold us to the end.
And in his steadfast promise we
Repose, from care and danger free.

—Selected.

Dr. Whately as a Preacher.

Dr. Whately was not, as has been said, a popular man with the "dons" of the university; and especially he was not admired by them in the university pulpit. His bearing was certainly not calculated to conciliate the good opinion or good graces of those who are as great admirers of dignity, decorum, and gravity of demeanor as the average Oxford don. We have looked at Dr. Newman on his passage from the vestry to the pulpit; let us now take a peep at his antithesis, Dr. Whately, on the same occasion.

The verger, doing his part of the business in the most admirable manner, precedes the preacher, holding his mace with an inflexibility of uprightness only to be equalled by the pokerlike rigidity of his own person. Pity that such a contrast should be afforded to the reverend figure that follows him! Behind him walks, or rather shuffles, up the aisle with a quick, brisk pace, indicating a repressed capability of proceeding at much greater speed, a figure somewhat above the ordinary hight and strongly framed, though rather loosely put together. The features of the face have certainly escaped the "fatal gift of beauty." It is essentially a hard-featured face, with but small amount of color to aid its expressiveness. The eyes are of a pale grayish blue; the hair is rather sparse and of a pale, sandy tint. The forehead is large and square, and the chin has the pronounced development which indicates abundance of what the French call caractere. The tout ensemble of face, figure, manner, and movement is as wholly devoid of graciousness and gracefulness as can easily be imagined. The outward wrappages and integuments which so frequently furnish a key to the character of the human being that is inside correspond with very complete accuracy to that of the man in question. His black waistcoat bears the marks of having been copiously besprinkled with snuff. His academic gown hangs from his shoulders all awry. His hands are probably not in their proper place in front of his neck. His doctor's hood hangs similarly out of its due position behind it. And all these trappings, instead of being borne along with the pompous elegance which would befit the time and place, are worn with an air that seems to say unmistakably that in the wearer's opinion they are stupid incumbrances and annoyances, which he would fain get rid of if it were possible. But, withal, there is that about the head and face which to any competent observer would give the unmistakable assurance that there walked a man of no ordinary power and energy of intellect; and the springy activity of gait apparently repressed with difficulty to the sober pace befitting the occasion, and the superfluous amount of motion with which every part of the person seems to be instinct, give an equal impression of vigor and force.

Somehow or other he tumbles up the stairs to the pulpit, and, shuffling down on his knees, is silent in prayer for a very short space. Then, rising, he proceeds to recite, as he needs must, the old "bidding prayer" with a manner that, to those who have the gift of hearing more in a man's utterances than in the words he speaks, seems very unmistakably to say, "What confounded nonsense all this old-world stuff is! There! let us get through with it as soon as may be, and get to our real work." Then "all conditions of men," and "as he is particularly bound to pray for" the founder of Oriel College, having been duly prayed for, the preacher prepares for the task before him by tossing up the vigorous-looking, sandy-haired head with a brusque, violent action very much like that of an angry bull meditating mischief with his horns. Those who knew Whately were aware that this was an habitual action with him; but the irreverend youths in the undergraduates' gallery used to say that Whately, when he was brought to bay in the pulpit, always wanted to gore the congregation.

But then followed a sermon that, let the dons frown and the undergraduates smile as they pleased, kept the close attention of every man there, old and young, on the stretch from the first word to the last; a sermon close-reasoned as a syllogism, stirring the intellect and challenging from point to point the reasoning powers of any mind that should venture to try conclusions with the arguments enforced. Nevertheless there was sure to be something or other in the discourse which did not altogether commend itself to the donnish nature. And the general mind of the man, so little attuned to be in accord with the prejudices of the world around him, was deemed by it to be as far out of the safe and beaten track as was his outward manner.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Froude's History of Ireland.

In speaking of our Revolution, by which America became a free republic, and in whose success, it might have been supposed, "the wrongs of Ireland" should have led especially the Romanists to deeply sympathize, Froude says: "Of them (the Catholics) few or none had as yet gone to America, which was the chosen home of principles which they held most in abhorrence;" "when they emigrated it was to France, or Austria, or Spain."

Under these circumstances, how did the Irish papists feel and act toward the patriots who in America were resisting even unto blood the tyrannical government of Great Britain? "The wrongs," says Froude, "which America had taken arms to redress were trivial compared to the wrongs of Ireland. The Presbyterians looked on the revolt in America as a struggle in which many of their own kindred (emigrants) were engaged. Hence they watched the contest with increasing eagerness."

But what were the views and conduct of the papists? "Their gentry and clergy," says Froude, "came forward with an offer of a subscription; and when their money was declined, they expressed the earnest desire 'of two million faithful Irish hearts' to be allowed a chance of showing their devotion to their sovereign (Geo. III) by taking arms in his cause. Hence Ireland was complimented from the throne on her good behavior while America was in rebellion." Such was Irish popery. But we are assured "that the Presbyterians of the North were in their hearts Americans;" in other words, they sympathized with the defenders of liberty in America.

In a note the historian quotes "the petition of the Catholics of Ireland in 1775," in which they call themselves "his majesty's affectionate, loyal and dutiful Roman Catholic subjects," and express their "sincere, affectionate and grateful attachment to the most sacred person and government of the best of kings, and their just abhorrence of the unnatural rebellion which had broken out among some of his American subjects." "We humbly presume to lay at your majesty's feet two millions of loyal, faithful and affectionate hearts and hands."

Now, if these "two million" Irish papists could have been landed on our shores, as they desired, Washington and his little army would have been in a very unequal contest for freedom. To the papists, as Froude truly observes, "it mattered little, in itself, whether England got the better of her colonies or the colonies of England." They would have liked to get a dash at the Protestants who had emigrated to America!

In illustration of this savage nature, Froude publishes the oath of the papists in 1798, when they had risen in rebellion against "the best of kings:' "I swear by our Lord Jesus Christ, who suffered for us on the cross, and by the blessed Virgin Mary, that I will burn, destroy and murder all heretics up to my knees in blood." So Froude proves that some of the most cruel and blood-thirsty of all the leaders in rebellion were Romish priests.—United Presbyterian.

Children's Corner.

Little Ones.

Only beginning the journey,
Many a mile to go;
Little feet, how they patter,
Wandering to and fro!
Trying again so bravely,
Laughing in baby glee;
Hiding its face in mother's lap,
Proud as a baby can be.

Talking the oddest language
Ever before was heard;
But mother—you'd hardly think so—
Understands every word,
Tottering now and falling,
Eyes are going to cry;
Kisses and plenty of love-words,
Willing again to try.

Father of all, O, guide them,
The pattering little feet,
While they are treading the uphill road,
Braving the dust and heat!
Aid them when they grow weary,
Keep them in pathways blest;
And when the journey is ended,
Saviour, O, give them rest!

The Boyhood of Jesus.

His outward life was the life of all those of his age and station, and place of birth. He lived as lived the other children of peasant parents in that quiet town, and in a great measure as they live now. He who has seen the children of Nazareth in their red caftans and bright tunics of silk or cloth, girded with a many-colored sash, and sometimes covered with a loose outer jacket of white or blue—he who has watched their games, and heard their ringing laughter as they wander about the hills of their little, native vale, or play in bands on the hillside beside their sweet and abundant fountain,—may perhaps form some conception of how Jesus looked and played when he too was a child. And the traveler who has followed any of those children—as I have done—to their simple homes, and seen the scanty furniture, the plain, but sweet and wholesome food, the uneventful, happy, patriarchal life may form a vivid conception of the manner in which Jesus lived. Nothing can be plainer than those houses, with the doves sunning themselves on the white roofs, and the vines wreathing about them. The mats, or carpets, are laid loose along the walls; shoes and sandals are taken off at the threshold; from the center hangs a lamp, which forms the only ornament of the room; in some recess in the wall is placed the wooden chest, painted with bright colors, which contains the books or other possessions of the family; on a ledge that runs around the wall, within easy reach, are neatly rolled up the gay-colored quilts which serve as beds, and on the same ledge are ranged the earthen vessels for daily use; near the door stand the large common water-jars of red clay, with a few twigs and green leaves—often of aromatic shrubs—thrust into their orifices to keep the water cool. At meal-time a painted wooden stool is placed in the center of the apartment, a large tray is put upon it, and in the middle of the tray stands the dish of rice or meat, or libban, or stewed fruits, from which all help themselves in common. Both before and after the meal the servant, or the youngest member of the family, pours water over the hands from a brazen ewer into a brazen bowl. So quiet, so simple, so humble, so uneventful, was the outward life of the family of Nazareth.—Farrar's Life of Christ.

A little girl, about five years old, living with her parents, who were very poor, in a small cottage in a village in Prussia. One day, when her father went out, little Rosa was sitting by her mother, who was just recovering from an attack of fever, which had weakened her very much. She was singing a little hymn, when the door opened suddenly, and six soldiers walked into the room. The poor child was so terrified at first she fell from the bench on which she had been sitting. A few moments afterwards, however, she rose to her knees, and in her own simple, childlike words, while the big tears trembled in her eyes, she prayed that God would pity them and help them; that he would make the soldiers kind to her mother, and tell them to go away to some other house where they might get something to eat and drink, and ending with these words, "For thou knowest, Lord, that we are very poor." One of the soldiers patted the child's head kindly, and said, "Who taught you to pray so nicely, little one?" "Jesus and mother," was her simple reply. The soldier, a tall, strong, rough looking man, turned aside his head, and brushed a tear from his cheek, then putting a piece of money in her lap, he kisse the little girl, and said to her kindly, "There is something for your mother, my child. Pray for us soldiers also sometimes, like a good little girl, for we need prayer very much."

Some Poker Experiments.

1. If a little thread be well soaked in a strong solution of salt and water, and then dried and tied to a ring, not much larger than a wedding-ring; you may apply the flame of a candle to the thread, which will burn it to ashes, and yet it will sustain the ring. The cohesion of the fibrous particles of thread having been destroyed by the action of the flame, the ring is now suspended by the cohesion of the particles of salt.

2. Wrap a piece of clean writing paper tightly about the cylindrical handle of the poker, and the paper may be held over the flame of a lamp or candle for some time without being in the slightest degree injured or burnt; now wrap a similar piece of paper around a cylinder of wood, and hold it over the flame, which will burn it almost immediately. This experiment shows the difference between the conducting powers of metal and wood, the heat being conducted away from the paper by the iron almost as rapidly as communicated, whilst wood, being a bad conductor of heat, takes fire almost immediately.

3. Suspend a poker by two strings, and insert the extremities of them into the ears. A blow given to the poker will now produce, through the medium of the strings, a sound equal to that of a great bell. This shows that the vibrations given to the metallic mass of the poker by the blow are much more readily communicated to the ear by the strings than through the air. Thus, on the same principle, the boiling of a kettle, inaudible in the air, may be distinctly heard, even from the beginning by resting one end of the poker on the vessel, and applying the other to the ear. So also the ticking of a watch placed at one extremity of a long beam of timber may be heard through the timber at the other end of the beam by a person who holds his ear to the wood, although it is totally inaudible in the air.—Advance.

Religious Intelligence.

—The Methodist Episcopal church has 27 universities and colleges, and 60 academies and seminaries. The estimated value of the property of these institutions is $7,000,000, exclusive of the three theological seminaries at Boston, Mass., Madison, N. J., and Evanston, Ill. The property in schools under the supervision of the church is $2,000,000.

—The Wesleyan church at Pomeroy, Ohio, has been experiencing a powerful revival which has reached some of the most abandoned cases in the community.

—The General Conference of the Methodist church (not M. E.) takes place this year at Princeton, Ill., May 19th. Twenty-one districts are to be represented by 106 pastors and lay delegates, an equal number of each.

—The denomination of believers known as "Christians" formerly as "Campbellites" is much more numerous in this country than is commonly supposed, being about the same as that of Congregationalists. They are Congregational in their church polity. It has been supposed by some that there is among them a prevailing element of Unitarianism, this is a mistake, as they are, it is believed, as thoroughly evangelical as other denominations. They differ but slightly from the Free-will Baptists and a proposition for organic union with that body has been favorably received.

—The Evangelical Association of America is planning to celebrate the centennial year, '76, by paying $1.00 per member to their principal educational institution, Northwestern College, at Naperville, Ill.

—J. P. Schuatz, missionary agent of the same denomination has raised over $21,000 for the mission churches in Germany and Switzerland.

—The revival work in San Francisco keeps on with great interest. More than 1,500 names have been subscribed to the covenant, many of them young men just entering life. At a recent convert's meeting 500 were present and took part. Outdoor meetings are held frequently, jails and other public institutions visited, and the whole city seems moved with one spirit. It is hoped that the gracious work may spread throughout the State.

—Rev. Dr. M'Cosh lately said in reference to the great responsibility resting upon Sabbath-school teachers and the necessity of their being properly trained for their work, that every theological seminary ought to have a simple course of practical lectures on the organization and management of Sabbath-schools and methods of teaching, so as to have the future pastors be prepared to become teachers of teachers.

—J. W. Scoville, a banker of Chicago, has offered a suit of rooms for five years, rent, heating and janitor's services free, to the Congregational Home and Foreign missionary secretaries and the secretary of the American Missionary Association.

—The union of the United Presbyterian Theological Seminary recently located at Monmouth, Ill., with that at Xenia, Ohio, was consumated last week at Xenia, and a constitution and plans were prepared and adopted for carrying into operation this consolidated and now oldest theological seminary in America. Rev. J. G. Carson, a former president of the National Christian Association, is one of the professors.

—It is reported that one hundred and seventy-six Lutheran churches have been dedicated during the past year.

—A statue of Richard Baxter, the celebrated Nonconformist clergyman, and author of the "Saint's Rest," was recently unvailed at Kidderminster, England where he was for many years a minister. The subscription for the statue was raised by churchmen and Nonconforists, the Bishop of Worcester giving a liberal sum. Dean Stanley was expected to deliver the address. Baxter was born in 1615 and died in London in 1691.

—The General Assembly of the Presbyterian church of the United States will be held in St. Louis during the month of May. Many questions of importance are to come before this body; questions of correspondence with other bodies; transfer of committes, questions of discipline, are among the topics named.

—It is said to be nearly half a century since Dartmouth College has been blessed with a revival so deep and extensive as that lately in progress there.

EXPOSITION
—:OF:—
THE GRANGE.

Illustrated with Engravings, showing the Lodge Room, Signals, Grips, etc.

EDITED BY REV. A. W. GEESLIN.

—:o:—

Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 1875,
BY EZRA A. COOK & CO.,
In the office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, D. C.

—:o:—

HARVESTER DEGREE CONTINUED.

Lecturer to Candidates:—Brothers, as harvesters, reap for the mind as well as for the body. Natural history is replete with both the wonderful and the beautiful, and its study enables us the better to carry out the noble principles we inculcate of Friendship, Truth and Charity. In the field of nature, earth, air and vegetation are replete with life. Naturc has made nothing in vain. Wherever she has created a habitation, she has filled it with inhabitants. On the leaves of plants animals feed, like cattle in our meadows, to whom the dewdrop is an ocean without a shore; the flowers are their elysian fields, decorated with cascades and flowing with ambrosial fluids. Every plant has its inhabitants, and every clime its plants. A hasty glance at the soil or plants would lead one to presume there existed but little variety, but a carcful study and observation show an infinitude of forms, and all for some wise purpose Cultivate an observing mind. It is delightful to acquire knowledge, and much more so to diffuse it. The noblest reward of science is the pleasure of instructing the ignorant. Everything in nature that arrests our attention by the grandeur of its greatness, charms us with the simplicity of its operations when once clearly understood.

Master to Assistant Steward:—You will now conduct them to the Overseer.

Assistant Steward to Overseer:—Worthy Overseer, our brothers come for further instruction.

Overseer to Candidates:—My brothers, all honest labor is honorable. God made the earth. He set the example of labor. and sanctified it, and made it the necessity of his creatures; inasmuch as it is God's example and design, it is a part of our duty to honor and dignify it, and make it conducive to the advancement and happiness of God's creatures. You arc now about to enter the harvest. Labor with cheerfulness. Cultivate the habit of looking for better and brighter days, instead of mourning over the past. While you strive to make labor honorable, so exert yourself to make it pleasant and cheerful for all around you. Worthy Assistant, you will now conduct our brothers to the Chaplain.

Assistant Steward to Chaplain:—Worthy Chaplain, I present our brothers for instruction.

Chaplain to Candidates:—Brethren, the fields of our chief labor are ever "white unto the harvest," and in them "he that reapeth receiveth wages; and gathereth fruit unto life eternal; that both he that soweth and he that rcapeth may rejoice together." "Take heed therefore, and bewarc of covetousness; for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of things he possesseth, but in the right use of God's blessings. Say not, therefore, "Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years, take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry," for our heavenly Father placed us here to be laborers together with him, and raises up the ever whitening harvest, that we may be the Stewards of his bounty, and so partake of his blessedness in being benficent. Therefore, be ye helpers, one of another; and be not proud, for pride gocth before destruction, aud a haughty spirit before a fall. Mind not high things, but condescend to men of low estate, for ye are all brethren. Be patient and contcnted in your labor, and in the use of their fruits, for godliness with contentment is great gain. Such are the great aims, labors, and rewards of the Harvester, and to these I bid you welcomc. Be faithful in gathering that you may be liberal in dispcnsing.

Assistant Steward to Candidates:—I will now present you to our Worthy Master.

Assistant Steward to Master:—Worthy Master, our brothers have received their instructions.

Master to Assistant Steward:—As the day is far spent, you will conduct them to the gate of the harvest-field, and there join the Harvesters as they return from their labors. They retire to the ante-room and sign the roll-book for this degree. Meanwhile each sister, with a wisp of thirty or forty spears of grain in her hand to represent gleanings, selects a brother for her partner and they form on the right of the room facing Overseer's desk.

They now represent the Harvester's coming in from the field at the close of the day. They then march around the room, two and two, singing the Harvest song. On passing the ante-room door the first time around the door is opened and the candidates join in the rear of the procession. The third time around each lady deposits her gleanings in front of Ceres; passing on to Overseer's desk come up the centre of the room and open to the right and left—gentlemen on one side and ladies on the other. The candidates are then conducted between the lines to the Master. (The Master, Chaplain, Lecturer, Ceres, Pomona and Flora do not join in the procession around the room.)

SONG.

"Come autumn, crowned with ripened grain
And fruits of richest flavors,
With notes of joy we hail again
The season of thy favors.
‖:Our hearts and voices strike the chime,
The harvest time, the harvest time!:‖

The harvest sun, how bright at noon,
His richest radiance throwing!
And, oh, how bright the harvest moon,
As she with joy is glowing!
‖:And fain with us would strike the chime
The harvest time, the harvest time.:‖

Our land is broad we've every clime,
And all some gift possessing;
And all enjoy the harvest time,
That makes each gift a blessing;
‖:Then let our hearts and voices chime,
The harvest time, the harvest time:‖

I now exhibit to you the sickle. Like all the tools we use, it is ancient and honorable. As an emblem of our Order there is none more so. It speaks of peace and prosperity, and is the harbinger of joy.

CHORUS OF SONG BY ALL.

"Then glory to the steel
That shines in the reaper's hand,
And thanks to God, who has blessed the sod
And crowns the harvest land."

I now give you the sign in this degree; also the signal, password and salutation.

Sign Harvester Degree.

The Sign of this degree signifies that a good Harvester dispenses charity.

SIGN: Stand erect, both forearms brought up to a level, or horizontal position, the hands in front of the body; left hand open palm upward, right hand laid over and upon the left hand, palm downward, the thumb of the left hand, over, and across the second joints of the right hand. the thumb of the right hand under and across the knuckles of the left hand.

SIGNAL AT OUTER GATE: Same as in Laborer and Cultivator degrees.

SIGNAL AT INNER GATE: Four raps.

PASSWORD: At outer gate same as Laborer and Cultivator degrees.

PASSWORD AT INNER GATE: Harvester.

SALUTATION; Same as sign.

Master continues:—Brothers and sisters, your task for the day is over; you have labored diligently, and now receive my commendation for faithfulness. Let me urge you to continue with the same diligence till the harvest is finished. Brothers, I now greet you as Harvesters and trust you will prove yourself competent workmen.

Assistant Steward to Candidates:—Let our worthy Patroness, Ceres, greet you.

Ceres to Candidates:—Brothers, happy are they who see charms in the harvest, may you appreciate them all and prove worthy of your trust.

Flora then offers congratulations thus:—Brothers, the charms of flowers to the cultivated mind are never ending; let your life be as pure as flowers, and your conduct as perfect.

Assistant Steward to Candidates:—And last listen to Pomona.

Pomona to Candidates:—The harvest of fruits will soon claim your toil, and may you realize it as a true harvest of bright hopes.

Master to Candidates:—You will now be conducted to the Steward and there await our pleasure.

The Master now conducts Ceres to the head of the lines, the Chaplain with Pomona and the Lecturer with Flora follow. It is now considered to be the hour of sunset (it may be midnight); the Harvester's assemble after the day's work on the lawn in front of the Master's office. The Steward now calls off the *Harvest dance.

REMARKS ON HARVESTER DEGREE.

When some member of your family is out until midnight or after, and, on returning to the bolted door, signals for admittance, it is quite common for the watcher in the house to say, "Who is there?" for fear of admitting some desperadoe rather than the returning loved one. The more corrupt public morals the greater this vigilance becomes, until people keep their doors locked all day and then suffer much inconvenience and perhaps well grounded fear. In ancient times the progress of civilization was much hindered by this morbid distrust. People spent time in surrounding their cities with massive walls and in guarding strong gates. Christian civilization with her enlarged views and charity which thinketh no evil, has done much to break down these walls built by prejudice, ignorance and superstition. But what must be the effect on the susceptible minds of the young Patrons of Husbandry, of the mode of admitting candidates into the Grange. The theory is that the virtuous, honest Grangers are shut up in their lodge, attending peacefully to the laudable efforts for education, cultivation, and social, intellectual, moral and financial advancement. Shut in like sheep from outside wolves. There is a signal at the door. Instead of opening the door in a courteous, candid manner, the Steward obtains an order from the Overseer to investigate and without opening the door he inquires, "Who gives the alarm?" and before any courteous admission is permitted the outside strangers have to give assurance that they are "brothers seeking employment." Instead of conducting their exercises on the charitable, generous supposition that all men are innocent until proved guilty, they regard all as subjects of suspicion, as enemies to their welfare until proved innocent. In this way the Grange is insidiously training a large class of citizens to a narrow, prejudiced suspicion of the principles and purposes of fellow-citizens and withdrawing from our Christian civilization that trust which makes society desirable, separating men from each other into heathenish castes. After satisfactory examination the candidates renew their previous obligations which they are falsely told will not conflict with their "moral, social, religious or political views." Every obligation, sincerely taken, widens the breach between the Grang-

*O. H. Kelley, Secretary of the National Grange, says in a circular headed "Private Instructions to Deputies, Masters and Assistant Stewards:" "The dance may be omitted if a majority of the members desire; yet we hope this social feature of two minutes' time, once a month, will find favor among all good Patrons."

ers and society at large. If the Candidate is a Christian he cannot harmonize his vows to the church and to the Grange. There is an irrepressible conflict between them and one or the other will certainly suffer defeat.

The candidates are informed by the Lecturer, after taking their obligations, that Granges inculcate "Friendship, Truth and Charity." After having exercised even toward them, when they were seeking admission, an uncharitable want of confidence; after making untruthful statements to them about the nature of their obligations, and after hedging about that sacred trust of Friendship with unfriendly pledges and clannish favoritism, none but those who cannot distinguish the difference between assertion and fact, will believe that the Grange is an honorable institution.

The most poisonous and fatal element in these ceremonies after all is the attempt to teach a religion which requires no regeneration, a religion which will satisfy the carnal heart with its beguiling promises while at the same time it blinds and soothes a Christian who has unwarily entered into fellowship with this work of darkness. Notice the instruction from the Chaplain, "Brethren, the fields of our chief labor are ever 'white unto the harvest,' and in them he that reapeth receiveth wages and gathereth fruit unto life eternal.' "

GLEANER, OR THIRD DEGREE FOR LADIES.

The Master calls to order with one rap of the gavel and says:—Worthy Steward, it is reported to me by our Worthy Overseer that certain persons have been gleaning in the fields to-day, who have not been duly instructed. Is he correct.

Steward to Master:—He is, worthy Master.

Master to Steward:—By what authority were they there?

Steward to Master:—By precident, worthy Master. I was satisfied they were qualified for the duties, and the harvest required attention that nothing be lost.

Master to Steward:—Your reasons are good, and as our time will now permit, you will please summon them that they may receive instructions necessary to fit them more perfectly for their duties.

Lady Assistant Steward summons the ladies who are to receive this degree, and places them at Overseer's desk.

Overseer to Candidates:—Worthy sisters, that you may appear before our Worthy Master in a proper manner, let me crown you with these wreaths (places wreaths of flowers upon their heads.) You will now be conducted to our Worthy Master.

SONG.

"To praise the bounteous Lord of all,
Wake all your thankful powers,
He calls and at his call come forth
The smiling harvest hours.

Lady Assistant Steward to Master:—Worthy Master, in compliance with your command, I present our sisters to be qualified as Gleaners.

Master to Candidates:—Worthy sisters, as gleaners in our Order, gather only the good seed. Our associations in life are the fields in which we reap. Use judgment, and while you glean, let your example be correct that others may profit by it. Be ever ready to forgive. Remember, she who refuses forgiveness, breaks the bridge over which she must pass, for all need forgiveness. In your intercourse with your fellow-beings, you cannot fail of profiting by this advice, and I trust in your duties; it may prove to be one of the good injunctions you have gleaned from our fraternity. You will now be conducted to our Worthy Lecturer.

Lady Assistant Steward to Lecturer:—Worthy Lecturer, our sisters come to glean words of wisdom from you.

Lecturer to Candidates:—Worthy sisters, remember when storms lower and wintry winds oppress you, that nature is beautiful, always beautiful. Even the snow-flakes fall as if fairies of the air caught water-drops and made them into flowers to garland the wings of the wind. It is sad to think that even one human soul should dimly perceive the beauty that is ever around us. Nature preaches to us forever in tones of love, and writes truth in all colors on manuscripts illuminated with stars and flowers. Sisters, be trustful, be free, and thus be individuate is the constant song that nature sings, through warbling birds and whispering pines, and roaring waves, and screeching winds, how beautiful, how angelic, seems every fragment of life which is earnest and true. (The following is sung as candidates pass from Lecturer to Chaplain.)

SONG.

Oh! not in the outward world alone
May the beautiful be to the soul made known;
In its far depths, in its inner life
Silent and pure in its spirit rife.

Lady Assistant Steward to Chaplain:—Worthy Chaplain, our sisters come for instruction.

Chaplain to Candidates:—As gleaners, are you not reminded of the fidelity of Ruth to Naomi? But let me urge you to be faithful to yourselves; in doing so be ever guarded against anger. It has been said by them of old time "He that is angry with his brother without cause shall be in danger of the judgment." But have we not a better law, which knoweth no cause for anger? Are we not all brethren? Bear we not God's image? Canst thou not endure with each others small offences for a brief time when our Father above has endured our many, and often flagrant sins through our whole life? My sisters, put away far from you all anger, contempt, evil speaking, evil suggestions, all that savors not of humility, for all else are but the soul snares of the tempter. Let me entreat you, as sisters in our Order, to be ever lenient toward others faults. The tears of the compassionate are sweeter than dewdrops, falling from roses on the bosom of the earth.

Lady Assistant Steward to Master:—Worthy Master, the Gleaners have labored faithfully and now come to receive at your hands the signs by which they may enter the fields.

Master the sign of this degree signifies that a good Gleaner dispenses charity. I will also give you the salutation, signal, and password.

SIGN:—same as "Harvester."

SALUTATION:—Same as sign.

SIGNALS:—Same as "Harvester."

PASS-WORD AT OUTER GATE:—Ceres.

PASS-WORD AT INNER GATE:—Gleaner.

(Master continues) Worthy sisters, that you may prepare for the feast, our Worthy Stewardess will attend you.

SONG.

"Heartily let us join in singing,
Heartily O! Heartily O!
Nature e'er with joy is ringing,
Merrily, O! Merrily, O!
Heart a free domain ever craveth,
Where the golden grain Ceres waveth,
Joy and blessing ever flinging,
Plentifully, O! plentifully, O!

Beautiful fruit Pomona groweth,
Beautiful, O! Beautiful, O!
And her varied bounty showeth
Merrily, O! Merrily, O!
In the orchard fine she delighteth,
And to the bush and vine, taste inviteth,
While the song of joy there floweth,
Merrily, O! Merrily, O!

Towering trees in wood were o'er us
Towering, O! Towering, O!
Flowers springing up before us,
Merrily, O! Merrily, O!
Everywhere are found happy voices,
Garden, lawn or wood, earth rejoices,
We will join creation's chorus,
Merrily, O! Merrily O!
Joyfully—gratefully—happily—heartily—cheerily,
Merrily, O! Cheerily, O! Merrily, O!

Singing and music last while the table is being prepared.

HUSBANDMAN, OR FOURTH DEGREE FOR MEN.

(The table is prepared before work in this degree commences. The feast consists of a picnic each one bringing what they please.)

Assistant Steward signals.

Steward:—Who comes?

Assistant Steward to Steward:—Brothers, who, having finished their labor in the harvest-field, seek advancement.

Steward to Assistant Steward:—Do you vouch for them?

Assistant Steward to Steward:—I do.

Steward to Candidates:—(opens the door and admits them) Brothers, I welcome you on your way; proceed to our worthy Overseer.

SONG.

"The breezes that blow o'er the broad fields of corn
Are music to them who of Spirit are born;
The blossoms that blow on the tree and the vine,
Direct, by their beauty, to wisdom divine;
The voices unite, unite to impart
A lesson of trust to the lovely of heart,
And sounding from earth to the kingdom above,
Is heard the high anthem of gladness, of love.

Assistant Steward to Overseer:—Worthy Overseer, brothers who have served faithfully, desire to become Husbandmen.

Overseer to Candidates:—Brothers, your industry, zeal and efficiency have gained you the approbation of your companions in our Order, and the uprightness of your conduct and your fidelity to your pledges, are received as evidences of your moral worth and fitness to be received among honorable patrons. The position of Husbandman further confers upon you great privileges, and binds you in a closer tie of brotherhood. Is it your earnest desire to proceed?

Candidates to Overseer:—It is.

Overseer to Candidates:—It will first be necessary that you give a pledge of honor to secrecy and fidelity as a Patron, which will not interfere with your duty to God, to your country, or yourself. With this assurance will you go on?

Candidates:—I will.

Master calls up and proceeds with the

OBLIGATION.

I hereby renew and confirm the obligations I have heretofore taken in this Order; hereby solemnly declare and say that I will never communicate the secrets of this Order to any one, unless legally authorized to do so; that I will endeavor to be a true and faithful Patron of Husbandry, perform the duties enjoined in this Order, and aid others in the performance of the same.

Master to Candidates:—Brothers, you will now be conducted to the Lecturer for further instruction.

Assistant Steward to Lecturer:—Worthy Lecturer, our worthy Master desires you to instruct the Candidates.

Lecturer to Candidates:—Brothers, to live in the country and enjoy all its pleasures, we should love the country. To love the country is to take interest in all that belongs to the country—its occupations, its sports, its culture, its improvement; to gather the flocks around us and feed them from our own hands; to make the birds our friends, and call them all by their names; to rove over the verdant fields with a higher pleasure than we should tread the carpeted halls of regal courts; to inhale the fresh air of the morning, as if it were the sweet breath of infi ancy (?); to brush the dew from the glittering fields, as if our path were strewed with diamonds, to perceive this glorious temple, all instinct with the presence of the Divinity, and to feel amidst all this the heart swelling with an adoration and a holy joy absolutely incapable of utterance—this it is to love the country and to make it not the home of the person only, but of the soul.

[TO BE CONTINUED.

ESTABLISHED 1868.

EZRA A. COOK & CO.,

STEAM

PRINTERS,

Lithographers,

STATIONERS

—AND—

Book Binders.

NOS. 7, 9, 11 & 13

Wabash Avenue, Chicago.

We were in the Stationery, Printing and Lithographing business before the Cynosure was started.

WE LITHOGRAPH

Business Cards, Letter Heads, Note Heads, Bill Heads, Circulars, Checks, Drafts, Certificates of Stock, Certificates of Deposit, Plats and Charts; also elegant Diplomas for Colleges, Literary Societies, and Agricultural Societies, in one, two or three Colors. Samples and Prices sent on Application.

WE PRINT

Books,
Pamphlets,
Catalogues, Business Cards, Show Cards, Letter Heads, Bill Heads, Note Heads, Circulars, Hand Bills, Posters, Checks, Drafts Notes, Certificates of Deposit, Certificates of Stock, Diplomas, etc.,

IN THE BEST STYLE,

at the

LOWEST MARKET RATES.

WE FILL ORDERS PROMPTLY, and

GUARANTEE GOOD WORK.

SPECIAL ATTENTION GIVEN TO ORDERS

BY MAIL.

Samples and prices sent promptly

when desired.

Address:

EZRA A. COOK & CO.,
7, 9, 11 & 13 Wabash Avenue,
CHICAGO

Home and Health Hints.

For Hanging Baskets.—Line the baskets with moss, with a little soil attached. Place in the center a small pot, containing a showy plant of upright habit; fill up the surrounding space with rich wood and old hot-bed soil; fill in with plants of a climbing or traveling habit; when the center fades you can replace it by a fresh plant. In filling the basket, select a similar nature—such as like shade and moisture—the Fuschia, Lobelia, Ivy Geraniums, Ivies, Linaria, Panicum, Balms, gold and silver Vinca, Ferns. A basket for a hot, sunny situation should be filled with Coleus for the center; also, Petunia (double), Sedums, Convolvulus minor, Nasturciums, Begonia, Mignonette, for training. A carnation will make a complete blooming center—a Coleus a brilliant one.—American Farmer.

The London Furniture Gazette gives this receipt for a glue to resist fire: Mix a handful of quick-lime in four ounces of linseed oil; boil to a good thickness, then spread on plates in the shade and it will become exceedingly hard, but may be easily dissolved over the fire, and used as ordinary glue. It resists fire after being used for gluing substances together.

A little alum was dissolved in hot water, and thrown into a tub of thick soapsuds. In a moment the soap curdled, and accompanied by the muddy particles, sank to the bottom, leaving the water perfectly clear, pure, and devoid of smell. This water was found very useful for washing clothing again, when poured off the sediment. A similar result was attained in a quick manner by filling a boiler with soapsuds, placing it on a fire, and throwing a bit of alum into it. When the suds boiled, the scum went over and left the water clear, and as useful for washing clothes as it had originally been.

Hot water is the best thing to kill insects on house plants. It is almost certain that 120 deg. of heat will destroy aphides and all other insects that infest shrubs, without hurting the plant. The way to use it is to invert the pot and hold the earth so that it will not fall out; and then dip the plant into water, heated to 120 deg. Fah. and instantly withdraw it. By doing so, every insect will perish.—Young Folk's Monthly.

Farm and Garden.

Culture of Potatoes.—Potatoes require dry land. A rich clover sod is excellent. But if the land is rich enough, potatoes can be successfully grown after any crop. If manure is used, it should be well rotted and fine, and the more thoroughly it is mixed and incorporated with the soil, the less likely it is to injure the quality of the potatoes. Peruvian guano is one of the best auxiliary manures for potatoes—say 203 pounds per acre sown broadcast, or a tablespoonful dropped in the hill and mixed with the soil before dropping the potatoes. The latter is the better way to apply it, provided the work is done carefully. Peruvian guano, if a good article, will burn the potatoes if they come in direct contact with it. On the sod land it is far more convenient to plant potatoes in hills, three feet apart, than in drills. On mellow, rich land, where furrows can be opened with a plough, it is a good plan to make the furrows three feet apart and drop the sets in the furrows every fifteen or eighteen inches and cover with the plough. If the land is rich enough a larger crop can be obtained in this way than by planting in hills. Harrowing the potatoes with a light harrow, just as soon as they begin to break the ground, will kill millions of young weeds and favor the growth of the potatoes. On our own farm we use a Thomas harrow for this purpose, and go over the ground three or four times. We have frequently used an ordinary harrow. It pulls up a few hills, but not enough to do serious damage to the crop.—American Agriculturist.

Proper Distance for Root-Planting.—Distance between rows and plants in the row must depend on the variety. The large growing beets and mangles should have at least four square feet to each plant. I would have the distance between the rows 2 1-2 feet; this is a sufficient space to run the culvator. When the rows are 2 1-2 feet apart, I would let the plants stand 18 inches in the row. These distances, 18x30, will give 11,616 plants per acre.

In the summer of 1872, I tried an experiment as to the distance between three varities, one of beets and two of wurtzels. The result was nearly the same with the first two varieties, and I will therefore give the facts of the beets. Plots of land sowed April 23, rows 30 inches apart, plants at different distances in the rows, gave the following results: Plants 6 inches apart in the rows, produced at the rate of 37 3-4 tons per acre, 9 inches apart, 38 3-4 tons; 13 inches, 41 1-2 tons; 15 inches, 44 tons; 18 inches, 44 1-2 tons. Two plants together, 18 inches between bunches, produced at the rate of 40 1-2 tons per acre; 3 plants together, 39 1-2 tons.

In this experiment I was exact in the distances between rows and plants. I used sufficient seed to insure at least one plant in each hill. This experiment proves that the plants 18 inches apart in the row produced more than any distance less, and that single plants will yield better than two or more in each hill. The Yellow Globe mangle produced the greatest yield at 12 inches apart in the row.

A crop of beets can be raised at very much less expense when single plants are 18 inches apart than at distances less than that. When the plants are but six inches in the row, the labor is nearly or quite double. Beets 18 inches by 30 will give the following result: Beets weighing 3 pounds would give to the acre 17 1-2 tons; 4 pounds, 23 1-4 tons; 5 pounds, 29 tons; 6 pounds, 34 3-4 tons; 7 pounds, 40 1-2 tons; 8 pounds, 46 1-2 tons.

On good land well manured, and the crop well cared for, it is not difficult to raise beets averaging 8 pounds each by the acre. It is always better that the crop should be made up of large, sound roots than that it should consist of a greater number of smaller ones, even though the weight be the same per acre. The large roots require less labor from the singling out to the final harvesting of the crop, and indeed till they are fed out.—N. Y. Tribune.

Weaning Calves on Gruel.—Calves may be weaned expensively upon gruel, and healthy, well-grown beasts may be thus obtained. Farmers should not attempt it unless they give it their personal supervision, or can insure its being promptly carried out. The calves are fed upon new milk for the first week or ten days and then gradually changed to gruel composed as follows: Seven pounds of linseed cake is crushed and dissolved in two gallons of hot water; two of hay tea and two gallons of water are next added; finally, seven pounds of mixed meal, formed of equal portions of oat, wheat, barley and bean meal, are then stirred in. Of this gruel, two quarts of water are sufficient for one meal and the calves should be fed at six A. M. and six P. M.

ANTI-MASONIC BOOKS,

(Not our own Publications.)

For Sale by EZRA A. COOK & CO

13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

[FOR CATALOGUE OF PUBLICATIONS OF EZRA A. COOK & CO., See page 15.]

All books sent post paid, on receipt of retail price, but BOOKS SENT BY MAIL ARE NOT AT OUR RISK.

Books ordered by express are sold at 10 per cent. discount and SENT AT OUR RISK. Party ordering must pay express charges.

Elder Stearns' Books.

Stearns' Inquiry Into the Nature and Tendency of Masonry

With an Appendix.

SEVENTH EDITION.

338 Pages, in Cloth.....60 cents.
" " " Paper.....40 "

Stearns' Letters on Masonry.

Showing the antagonism between Freemasonry and the Christian Religion.
Price, 30 cents.

Stearns' Review of Two Masonic Addresses.

In this scathing review the lying pretentions of the order are clearly shown.
Price, 10 cents.

Levington's Key to Masonry.

This is Rev. Mr. Levington's last, and in the judgment of its author, best work on Masonry. The contents of the first chapter are as follows:

"Commencement and growth of Speculative or Symbolic Freemasonry—A table showing the thing at a glance—The use that the Atheists made of it—Identical with Illuminism—Its connection with the French Revolution, and with the Irish Rebellion—The action of the British Parliament with regard to it—Proofs of its diabolical purposes—Its Introduction, doings, progress and designs in the United States."

The contents of the Eleventh chapter are thus startling:

"Knights of the Golden Circle—Graphic account of them by a seceding Knight, and remarks thereon, showing the identity of the order with Masonry—Quotations from Sir Walter Scott."

This work is thrilling in statement, and powerful in argument. 425 pages.
Price $1.35.

Light on Freemasonry,

BY ELDER D. BERNARD,

TO WHICH IS APPENDED A

Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship by a Member of the Craft.

The whole containing over five hundred pages lately revised and republished. Price $2.00

The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages in paper cover, will be sent post paid on receipt of $1.

MASONRY A WORK OF DARKNESS

ADVERSE TO CHRISTIANITY,

And Inimical to a Republican Government
By REV. LEBBEUS ARMSTRONG,
(Presbyterian.)

A Seceding Mason of 21 degrees.

This is a very telling work and no honest man that reads it will think of joining the lodge.
PRICE, 20 cents each; $1.75 per doz., post paid

Walsh's Review of Freemasonry

REVISED EDITION,

Is a Scholarly Review of the Institution, by Rev Jno. T. Walsh.

Price 25 cts.

Finney on Masonry.

BOUND IN CLOTH, PRICE $1.00,
CHEAP EDITION,

Twenty-five dollars per hundred, by express and not less than 25 copies at that rate.

BY MAIL, POST-PAID:

Per doz.....$3 75.
Single copy,..... 35 c.

THIRTEEN REASONS
Why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

BY
REV. ROBERT ARMSTRONG.

The author states his reason clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the Lodge.

Single copy, by mail post paid..... 05
Per doz., " " 50
" 100, express charges extra.....3 50

Masonic Books,

FOR SALE AT THE CYNOSURE OFFICE.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and blisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

Allyn's Ritual of Massonry,

Illustrated by a large number of engravings, and ontaining a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, Orange nd Odd-fellows' societies. Price, $5.00.

Mackey's Masonic Ritualist;

OR

MONITORIAL INSTRUCTION BOOK

BY ALBERT G. MACKEY,

'Past General High Priest of the General Grand Chapter of the United States, Knight of the Eagle and Pelican, Prince of Mercy," Etc. Etc. Price, $1 75

Mackey's Lexicon of Freemasonry,

Containing a Definition of Terms, Notices of its History, Traditions and Antiquities, and an account of all the Rites and Mysteries of the Ancient World. 12 mo. 526 pages, $3 00.

MACKEY'S MANUAL OF THE LODGE,

OR

Monitorial Instructions in the Degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft, and Master Mason; with Ceremonies relating to Installations, Dedications, Consecrations, Laying of Corner-stones &c. Price, $2 00,
Paper Covers 2.00.

MACKEY'S TEXT BOOK

OF

MASONIC JURISPRUDENCE.

Illustrating the Laws of Freemasonry, both written and unwritten.

This is the Great Law Book of Freemasonry 570 pages. Price, $2.50

Webb's Monitor of Freemasonry,

LARGE EDITION, WITH NOTES

By ROB. HORRIS, Price, $1.50.
Pocket Edition, 75 cts.

SICKELS' FREEMASON'S MONITOR.

Containing the Degrees of Freemasonry embraced in the Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery, embellished with nearly 300 symbolic Illustrations. Together with Tactics and drill of Masonic Knighthood. Also, forms of Masonic Documents, Notes, Songs, Masonic dates, installations, etc. By D. Sickels, 32 mo uck. Price $1.50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry,

A Practical Guide to the Ceremonies in the Degrees conferred in Masonic Lodge Chapter, Encampments, etc. Illustrated Edition. In cloth, $1 25; paper, 75 cts.

Chase's Digest of Masonic Law.

Comprises a Complete Code of Regulations, Decisions and Opinions upon Questions of Masonic Jurisprudence. Price, $2 25.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor

Illustrated with Explanatory Engravings Price $2.50.

Books on Odd Fellowship.

Donaldson's Odd Fellow's Text Book,
By Pascual Donaldson, D. D.,

GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF NORTHERN N. Y.,

Illustrated with numerous engravings, showing the emblems of the order. A detailed account of the Forms, Ceremonies, Funeral Services and Odes with music, and a complete manual for the guidance of Officers and Lodges. Pocket edition Tuck, $1.50.

Grosh's Manual of Odd Fellowship

BY REV. A. B. GROSH.

Containing the history, defence, principles and government of the order; the instructions of arch degree and duties of every station and office with engravings of the emblems of the orders, etc
Price in Cloth,.....$2 00
" Tuck, abridged edition, 1 50

Descriptive Catalogue of Publications of Ezra A. Cook & Co.

13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

BOOKS.

FREEMASONRY EXPOSED,

by CAP'T. WILLIAM MORGAN.

THE GENUINE OLD MORGAN BOOK:—republished with engravings showing the Lodge Room, Dress of candidates, Signs, Due Guards, Grips, Etc.

This revelation is so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. Thousands have testified to the correctness of the revelation and this book therefore sells very rapidly.

Price 25 cents.

Per Doz. Post Paid..... $2.00
Per hundred by express, (express charges extra.).....$10.00

ODD FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

A complete exposition of the Lodge Encampment and Rebecca (Ladies') Degree. The Signs, Grips, &c., shown by engravings.

Single copy, post paid,.....$ 25
Per Doz., " 2 00
Per Hundred, Express charges extra,..... 10 00

EXPOSITION OF THE GRANGE.

EDITED BY REV. A. W. GEESLIN.

Illustrated with Engravings showing Lodge Room, Signs, Signals, etc, NOW IN PRESS; will be completed about June 1st.

All orders for 10 or more copies, with Cash, received before June 1st, will be filled at 100 rates.

Single Copy, post paid.....$ 25
Per Doz., " " 2 00
Per 100 Express charges extra..... 10 00

Judge Whitney's Defense Before the Grand Lodge of Ill.

Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the Lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the Lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry.

Single Copy, post paid.....$ 20
Per Doz. " " 1 50
Per 100, Express charges extra..... 8 00

THE BROKEN SEAL.

OR PERSONAL REMINISCENCES OF THE ABDUCTION AND MURDER OF Wm. MORGAN,

By SAMUEL D. GREENE,

Price in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

In Paper Covers per Doz. Post paid.....$4 50
" per hundred by express (ex. charges extra $25.00

That the book is one of great interest and value is shown by the following

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"A MASONIC REVELATION.—Mr. Samuel D. Greene is a venerable gentleman of the highest respectability, whose statements seem to be worthy of full credence. The Broken Seal: or, Personal Reminiscences of the Morgan Abduction and Murder, is the title of a book of some three hundred pages just issued by him, purporting to give a full and accurate account, from personal knowledge, of the Morgan 'abduction,' and other masonic matters which made such an excitement in this country, now almost half a century ago."—Congregationalist and Recorder, Boston.

"We are acquainted with Mr. Greene, and have no doubt that his account is entirely reliable, and of great historic and moral interest. Capt. Wm. Morgan was Mr. Greene's neighbor in Batavia, N. Y., and a member of the same lodge with him at the time of the great excitement in 1826. The titles to these chapters are sufficiently exciting to give the book a large sale:—'The Storm Gathering;' "Abduction of Morgan;" "Attempted Abduction of Miller and his Rescue;" "What became of Morgan;" "What Morgan Actually Revealed;" "Confession of the Murderer;" "Allegations against Freemasonry, etc."—Boston Daily News.

History of The Abduction and Murder of Cap't. Wm. Morgan,

As prepared by Seven Committees of Citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan.

This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons, abducted and Murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offence than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife, and no candid person after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable FREEMASONS, in the Empire State, with others were concerned in this crime.

Single Copy, post Paid,... 25 cents.
Per doz. " ..... $2,00.
Per 100, Express Charges Extra,..... 10.00.

Valance's Confession of The Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.

This confession of Henry L. Valance, one of the three Freemasons who drowned Morgan in the Niagara River, was taken from the lips of the dying man by Dr. John C. Emery, of Racine County, Wisconsin in 1848; The confession bears clear evidence of truthfulness.

Single copy, post paid,..... 20 cents.
Per doz. " ..... $1.50.
Per 100 Express Charges Extra,..... 8.00.

The Mystic Tie or Freemasonry a League with the Devil.

This is an account of the Church Trial of Peter Cook, and wife of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a Reverend Freemason; and their very noble defence presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry, is antagonistic to the Christian Religion. Single Copy, post paid,..... 20 cents

Per dozen, post paid.....$1 50
Per hundred Express charges Extra,..... 9 00

NARRATIVES AND ARGUMENTS,

showing the Conflict of Secret Societies with the Constitution and Laws, of the Union and of the States.

by FRANCIS SEMPLE of Dover, Iowa.

The fact that Secret Societies, interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of Law is here clearly proved. price 20c.

Per dozen, post paid.....$1 75
Per hundred Express charges Extra..... 9 00

The Antimason's Scrap Book,

CONSISTING OF

21 CYNOSURE TRACTS.

In this book are the views of more than a Score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of Secret Societies.

The dangerous tendency and positive evil of organized Secrecy is here shown by the most varied and powerful arguments and illustrations that have ever been given to the public.

Lecturers and others who wish to find the best arguments against the Lodge, should send for this book.

Those who wish to circulate Antimasonic Tracts ought to have the book to select from.

Single Copy, post paid, ...20 cents.
Per Doz. " $1.75
Per 100, Express charges Extra,.....$10.00

PHELPS' SECRET SOCIETIES Ancient and Modern.

A NEW BOOK OF GREAT INTEREST.

This work is particularly commended to the attention of Officers of The Army and Navy, The Bench and The Clergy.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

"THE ANTIQUITY OF SECRET SOCIETIES, THE LIFE OF JULIAN, THE ELEUSINIAN MYSTERIES, THE ORIGIN OF MASONRY, WAS WASHINGTON A MASON? FILMORE'S AND WEBSTER'S DEFERENCE TO MASONRY. A BRIEF OUTLINE OF THE PROGRESS OF MASONRY IN THE UNITED STATES, THE TAMMANY RING, MASONIC BENEVOLENCE, THE USES OF MASONRY, AN ILLUSTRATION, THE CONCLUSION."

Single Copy, Post Paid..... 50
Per Doz " " $4 75
Per Hundred, Express Charges Extra.....$33 00

MINUTES OF THE SYRACUSE CONVENTION,

Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. D. Greene, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. S. D. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. Unpublished Reminiscences of the Morgan Times, by Elder David Bernard; Recollections of the Morgan Trials, as related by Victory Birdseye, Esq., and presented by his daughter, Mrs. C. B. Miller; Secretary's report; roll of delegates; songs of Mr. G. A. Clark, paper by Enoch Honeywell; Constitution N. C. A.; reports of committees, and a report of the political meeting.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion.

A clear cutting argument against the Lodge, from a Christian stand point.

Single Copy.....$ 05
Per 100..... 3 00

SERMON ON MASONRY,

BY REV. W. P. M'NARY,

Pastor United Presbyterian Church, Bloomington, Ind.

This is a very clear, thorough, candid and remarkably concise Scriptural argument on the character of Freemasonry.

Single Copy, Post Paid,..... 5
Per Doz,..... 50
Per Hundred, Express Charges Extra.....$3 00

COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES.

Their Customs, Character and the Efforts for their Suppression.

BY H. L. KELLOGG.

Containing the opinion of many rominent College Presidents, and others, and a FULL ACCOUNT OF THE MURDER OF MORTIMER LEGGETT

Single Copy, post paid.....$ 35
per Doz " " 2 50
per 100 Express charges extra..... 15 00

ANTIMASONIC TRACTS.

WE NOW HAVE 22 ENGLISH TRACTS. ONE GERMAN, AND ONE SWEEDISH

These tracts are sold at the rate of $1.00 per 1000 pages.

A Tract Fund for the Free Distribution of Tracts.

HAS BEEN SECURED AND WE HOPE WILL NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fund a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE.

Many of our most earnest workers in this cause of God are poor men, who would be glad to circulate thousands of pages of Antimasonic literature if they could have them free.

SHALL WE NOT HAVE AN INEXHAUSTIBLE TRACT FUND?

"THE ANTI-MASONS SCRAP BOOK."

Contains our 21 Cynosure Tracts, bound together, price 20 cents. See advertisement.

Address EZRA A. COOK & Co.,

13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

TRACT NO. 1:

HISTORY OF MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT J. BLANCHARD, OF WHEATON COLLEGE.

This is now published in three tracts of four pages each. Price of each, 50 cents per 100; $4 per 1000.

TRACT No. 1, PART FIRST—Shows the origin of Speculative Freemasonry, and is entiled "HISTORY OF MASONRY."

TRACT No. 1, PART SECOND—Is entitled "DESPOTIC CHARACTER OF FREEMASONRY"

TRACT No. 1, PART THIRD—Is entitled "FREEMASONRY A CHRIST-EXCLUDING RELIGION."

TRACT NO. 1, IN SWEDISH;

translated by Prof. A. R. CERVIN. A 15-page tract at $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 2:

MASONIC MURDER,

By REV. J. R. BAIRD, of Pleasantville, Pa., a seceding Mason who has taken 17 degrees. A 2-page tract at 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 3:

SECRETS OF MASONRY,

BY ELI TAPLEY.

This is a 4-page Illustrated Tract, showing the signs, grips and pass-words, of the first three degrees. 50 cents per 100, or $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 4:

GRAND! GREAT GRAND!!

BY PHILO CARPENTER.

This is a 2-page tract, calling the attention of the public to the despotic and ridiculous titles of Freemasonry. Price 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1,000.

TRACT. NO. 5:

Extracts From Masonic Oaths and Penalties, as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.

This tract is a reprint of a tract published in 1834, and is a very weighty document. A 4-page tract at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 6:

Hon. John Quincy Adams' Letter.

Giving His and His Father's Opinion of Freemasonry (1831.);

AND

Hon. James Madison's Letter,

Giving His Opinion of Freemasonry (1832).

Both of these letters, in one 4-page tract, at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 7:

SATAN'S CABLE-TOW.

A 4-page tract. This is a careful analysis of the character of Masonic oaths, and shows them to be most blasphemous and unchristian; and the Masonic Cable Tow is clearly shown to be the Cable Tow by which Satan is leading thousands to eternal death. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 8:

Is a 2-page double tract, "ILLUSTRATED." The first page represents a Mason proclaiming the wonderful wisdom and benevolence of the order, with an article below, entitled "Freemasonry is only 152 Years Old," and gives the time and place of its birth.

The second side is entitled, "Murder and Treason not Exempted," and shows that the Masonic order is treasonable in its constitution, and is both anti-Republican and anti-Christian. Price 25 cents per 100; $2 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 9, ILLUSTRATED:

FREEMASONRY IN THE CHURCH.

Copy of a petition for the higher degrees of Freemasonry, in which Blasphemous and Despotic Titles are enumerated and prayed for. The Copy was printed for the use of "Occidental Sovereign Consistory S. P. R. S." 32d degree—a Chicago Lodge—and was ordered by a deacon of a Christian Church who is Grand Orator of the Grand Lodge of Ill.

TRACT NO. 10:

CHARACTER AND SYMBOLS OF FREEMASONRY.

A 2-page tract, (ILLUSTRATED) by its "Grand Secretaries, Grand Lecturers, Perfect Prince Freemasons, Grand Inspector, Inquisitor Commanders, Grand High Priests," etc. The wonderful symbolical meaning of "the Cable Tow," "the Square and Compass," "the Lamb Skin, or white Apron," and "the Common Gavel," are given in the exact words of the highest Masonic authority. 25 cents per 100 or $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 11;

Address of Niagara County Association, New York,

TO THE PUBLIC;

Concerning the Morgan Murder, and the character of Freemasonry, as shown by this and other Masonic murders. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 12:

JUDGE WHITNEY AND MASONRY.

This tract contains a condensed account of Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois, on charge of unmasonic conduct in bringing Samuel L. Keith the murderer of Ellen Slade, and a member of his Lodge, to justice, with Judge Whitney's subsequent renunciation of Masonry,

An 8-page tract, $1.00 per 100; $8.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 13:

DR. NATHANIEL COLVER ON MASONRY,

and

HOWARD CROSBY, D. D.,

Chancellor of the University of New York, on SECRET SOCIETIES. A double 2-page tract 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 14:

GRAND LODGE MASONRY.

ITS RELATION TO CIVIL GOVERNMENT AND THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION.

Opening address before the Monmouth Convention, by PRES. J. BLANCHARD of WHEATON COLLEGE. This is a 16-page tract at $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 15:

MASONIC OATHS NULL AND VOID.

A clear and conclusive argument proving the invalidity of any oath or obligation to do evil. By REV. I. A. HART, Secretary National Christian Association. Published by special order of the Association. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 16:

HON. SETH M. GATES ON FREEMASONRY.

PROOF THAT THE INSTITUTION THAT MURDERED MORGAN IS UNCHANGED IN CHARACTER

This is a letter to the Monmouth Convention by Hon. Seth M. Gates who was Deputy Sheriff of Genesee County, and also Secretary of the Leroy Lodge at the time of Morgan's Abduction. A 4-page tract, 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 17:

Origin, Obligations and Expenses of The Grange,

WITH A CONSTITUTION OF A FARMERS' CLUB.

This little tract ought to be put into the hands of every Farmer in the United States. Four-page tract, 50 cents per 100; $4 00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 18:

HON. WM. H. SEWARD ON SECRET SOCIETIES.

Extracts from a Speech on Know-Nothingism in the U. S. Senate in 1855. The testimony of JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, MILLARD FILLMORE, CHIEF JUSTIC MARSHALL and others, is added.

A 2-page tract, 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 19.

BRICKS FOR MASONS TO LAY.

WASHINGTON, MADISON, MARSHALL, RUSH, HANCOCK, ADAMS AND WEBSTER, give brief clear testimony against the Lodge A 2-page tract 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 20:

OBJECTIONS TO MASONRY.

By A SECEDING MASON, of Cornton, Vermont.

This tract contains many strong arguments against the Lodge drawn from personal experience, observation and study of its character. A 4-page tract at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

TRACT NO. 21:

MASONIC CHASTITY.

BY EMMA A. WALLACE.

The author, by wonderfully clear illustration and argument, shows the terribly corrupt nature of Freemasonry. No true woman who reads this will ever speak with approbation of this institution A 4-page tract 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

GERMAN CYNOSURE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason

By REV. A. GROLE, Pastor, German M. E. Church,

WORCESTER, MASS.

This is our first German tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. Price 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

ENOCH HONEYWELL'S TRACT

TO THE YOUNG MEN OF AMERICA. Postage, 3 cents per 100. Tracts. Tracts Free.

News of the Week.

The City.

Some alarm was occasioned among the city officials at the passage by the Legislature of a bill giving large power of removal to the Mayor.——A remarkable forgery case was discovered here lately in which it is found that a few adroit rascals have forged deeds for several millions worth of real estate in Illinois and Missouri. They have already realized considerable sums from forced settlements. The principal in the case has fled to Mexico.——A small society of Millerites or Adventists have been preaching that Monday the 19th would certainly be the end of mortal things, and prepared accordingly. After a while they will explain the failure of their prophecies.

The Country.

The compromise recommended by the congressional Committee for Louisiana has been adopted by the Legislature. It was resisted by the White Leaguers, whose power sensibly declined after Sheridan's visit. It continues the executive department without change, one branch of the Legislature is Democratic the other Republican. The State Constitution is amended limiting tax rates.——A tremendous flood occurred on Saturday evening, in the towns of Norfolk and Westham, twenty-five miles from Boston, by the bursting of a dam. Mill property, bridges, dams and roads were swept away involving a loss of from $100,000 to $200,000. No lives were lost so far as known.——Since April 7th, over 300 men, 40 wagons and 13 pack animals have left Sioux City for the Black Hills. Small parties continue to arrive daily and push forward to join the main body. Several other parties have gone from Yankton and Springfield. It is estimated that at least 5 000 men are now on the way to the Hills. They generally express contempt for the government order forbidding them the district, and it is feared will not be restrained by the troops now on the way to intercept them ——President Grant and party left Washington last Thursday for Boston. They attended the Centennial celebration at Concord on Monday.——Prof. S. R. Wells the well-known phrenological lecturer and publisher died at his residence in New York Tuesday last ——Base-ball has opened in the South with a game at Savannah, Ga., which was given up when one player had his leg broken and another his nose split and one eye nearly put out.——Henry Varley, the English evangelist, who has been preaching to unprecedented crowds in New York for several weeks has gone to Boston.

Foreign.

The Emperor William has signed the bill withdrawing State grants to the Catholic church.——Capt. Paul Boyton, an American, lately attempted to cross the English channel at Dover in his life-saving dress. The night coming on early he was against his will taken on board the steamer accompanying him, when five miles from France.——In confirmation of the late rumors of war in Europe the French government has ordered the enrollment of all its subjects abroad liable to service. It is thought that France can bring 1.500,000 men into the field.——Prohibition is making vast progress throughout the Dominion of Canada. At Ottawa numerous petitions have been received in favor of a prohibitory liquor law. So generally is the public sentiment enlisted on the side of temperance that the people of the most remote districts are found to have raised their voices urging the total suppression of the sale of intoxicating liquors.

—A terrible slaughter of Christians was reported at Constantinople last week from Roumalia. The Turks in large numbers made an attack upon the portion of the town occupied by the Christians, and a desperate encounter resulted. Two hundred and seventy Christians, many of them being women and children, were massacred. There is a great excitement among the Europeans here over the outrage, and a united effort will be made by Christian power to demand punishment of the murderers by the Turkish government.——The Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria, and King Victor Emmanuel exchanged fraternal greetings at Venice last week. The conference is supposed to refer to a movement for uniting their governments with Germany and Russia to prevent an election of an Infallibilist Pope on the death of Pious IX.——While the bill withdrawing the State grants from the Roman Catholic clergy was under debate in the Prussian Diet, Prince Bismarck made a speech in which he declared that since the Vatican Council Catholic Bishops were merely "the Pope's prefects." He said he "was not an enemy of the Catholic church. He warred only against the papacy, which had adopted the principle of the extermination of heretics. and which was in enmity with the Gospel as well as with the Prussian State."

Publishers' Department.

The Brief History of the work of our Association is nearly ready. We hope all of our friends and co-workers will do what they can to circulate it among clergymen and others and, endeavor to secure their aid in advancing this reform. The book is published in an attractive style, and contains tabular views of our National and State meetings up to date, a list of auxiliary societies, the testimonies of religious bodies opposed to Freemasonry, and much other important and interesting information. Single copies, post paid, 25 cents, per doz. " " " . . $2.00 " 100 " expressage extra, 10.00 Send orders.

A REQUEST TO ALL WHO DESIRE TO CIRCULATE THE CYNOSURE.—Can you set apart one-half day this week to solicit subscriptions for the paper? You never can tell before hand what judicious, persevering effort will accomplish.

The seed-sowing time is here. Sow good seed if you want a good crop. We are weekly sending out in the Cynosure good seed for the minds of the old and young. Will you have it abundantly sown in your locality? You are, to some extent, responsible for public morals.

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED DURING WEEK ENDING APRIL 17th, 1875.—J W Allen, R T Allison, F W Arndt, A Birchard, H F Buffam, Z Bishop, A N Boardman, I H Brown, I Bunting, K Bjorgo, S C Buck, J C Bartholomew, N B Blanton, G Bunting. Mrs M Coffman, S F Clark, D W Cunningham, G Cutler, D S Caldwell, J Clayton, M J Cole, J Chadwick, A Cowley, E Darling, O N Durant, C F Danby, J Fordice, J Falde, S Gorton, D Goodwillie, D J Harris, O Hanson, N W Harrow, H Jenness, L C Koeler, J W Kendall, D Kelley, Joel Langton, W H Linam, A W Laflen. J McKelvey, W B Milligan, J W G McCormick, H S Riegel, A Robinson, O J Rose, J B Stinespring, W Slossen, J Stuart, Mrs J Smith, G Swanson Sr, J H Snyder, W O Small, A Stevens, J Smith, E P Townsley, W Talbert, G Thompson, J Weidler, B J Wise.

MARKET REPORTS

CHICAGO, April 19, 1875.

The following are the latest advices:

Grain Wheat—Spring, No. 1..	$1 06	1 07
" No. 2.....	1 01¼	1 03
" No. 3.....	96½	99¾
" Rejected.....		91
Corn—No. 2.....	71½	73
Rejected.....		71
Oats—No. 2.....		59½
Rejected.....	57½	58
Rye—No. 2.....	1 03	1 04
Flour—Winter.....	5 00	7 00
Spring.....	3 75	5 25
Hay—Timothy.....	15 00	19 00
Prairie, "	9 50	14 00
Lard.....		15½
Mess pork, per bbl.....		22 10
Butter.....	17	33
Cheese.....	10	18
Eggs.....	13	13½
Potatoes, per bus.....	75	15
Broom corn.....	04	14
Seeds—Timothy.....	2 30	2 45
Clover.....	6 61	6 75
Flax.....	1 85	1 90
Hides green to dry salted.....	07	15
Lumber—Clear.....	37 00	55 00
Common.....	11 00	12 00
Lath.....		2 25
Shingles.....	1 50	3 25
WOOL—Washed.....	40	58
Unwashed.....	27	37
LIVE STOCK Cattle, extra....	6 60	7 15
Good to choice.....	5 75	6 50
Medium.....	5 50	5 75
Common.....	4 00	5 00
Hogs.....	7 40	9 50
Sheep.....	5 00	7 00

New York Market.

Flour.....	$ 4 70	8 35
Wheat.....	1 17	1 41½
Corn.....	91½	92½
Oats.....	73	77
Rye.....		1 00
Lard.....		15½
Mess pork.....		22 50
Butter.....	12	18
Cheese.....	12	16
Eggs.....	17	18

Agents Wanted!

TO SELL THE PUBLICATIONS OF

EZRA A. COOK & CO.

Liberal Terms Offered.

Capable persons who are in need of pecuniary aid may clear

Handsome Profits,

While at the same time aiding the cause of Reform. Apply to EZRA A. COOK & CO., No. 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

SOMETHING NEW.

A CHART OF MASONRY

Showing the degrees from the first to the thirty-third, entitled

Degrees of Ancient Accepted Scottish Freemasonry,

According to a Mannal by Wm. M. Cunningham 33d Degree.

Designed by Rev. P. Stoddard, to explain Freemasonry, as shown by Morgan's Exposition and Richardson's Monitor.

A Neat Lithograph 22x28 Inches.

Single copies finely colored, post paid.....	$ 75
Per dozen " " " "	5 00
Per 100 " " " " Express charges extra.....	35 00
Single copy, colored, varnished and mounted postpaid.....	1 00
Per dozen colored, varnished and mounted, post paid.....	7 50
Per 100, colored, varnished and mounted, express charges extra.....	50 00

25 COPIES OR MORE SENT AT THE 100 RATES.

Excelsior Marriage Certificate.

It is decidedly the most BEAUTIFUL, TASTEFUL and SENSIBLE thing of the kind I have ever seen."—Rev. F. G. Hibbard, D. D.

"The most SCRIPTURAL, BEAUTIFUL and APPROPRIATE Marriage Certificate I have ever seen."—Late Rev. H. Mattison, D. D.

"SOMETHING NEW AND BEAUTIFUL, which we pronounce the handsomest thing of the kind we ever laid eyes on."—Meth. Home Journal, Phila. Contains two Ornamental Ovals, for Photographs

A BEAUTIFUL LITHOGRAPH 14 1-4 by 18 1-4 inches. 25 cts each, $2.25 per doz- $15 per 100.

For Sale by Ezra A. Cook & Co.. CHICAGO.

Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill.

The Spring term opens April 8th. It is the term for the study of Botany. There are some beautiful rooms for young ladies yet unoccupied. The Winter term has been very pleasant, and very successful. Write for Catalogue to

J. BLANCHARD, Wheaton, Ill.

TERMS FOR THE CYNOSURE.

$2.00 per annum, in advance.
20c " " " " for postage.

All who canvass for the CYNOSURE are allowed a cash commission of twenty per cent. or twenty-five per cent in books at retail prices, one-half this percentage on renewals, and any one sending $100. for the CYNOSURE during three months, will be entitled to an extra five per cent.

All responsible persons who desire to promote this reform are authorized to act as agents.

CLUB RATES.

No commission is allowed on club rates. Club rates are intended for those who wish to give the commission to subscribers.

Subscriptions may all be sent at one time, or at different times, and in all cases the sender should keep an account of the names and amounts sent.

CLUB RATES, INCLUDING POSTAGE.

Two new subscriptions, one year.....	$3.90
One new subscription and one renewal, sent ten days before expiration of subscription,	3.90
4 new subs., 1 year., 1 copy free to sender,.....	8.75
5 " " 1 " 1 " "	10.50
6 " " " " "	12.25
7 " " " " "	14.00
8 " " " " "	15.75
10 " " " " "	19.50
20 " " " " "	36 00
10 Renewals " " " "	22.00
50 " " " " "	95,00

Twenty subscriptions for six months count the same as ten for a year.

How to Send Money.

Post office orders, checks or drafts on Chicago or towns east of Chicago, and currency by express may be sent at our risk. If it is not possible to send by either of the four ways named, money in a registered letter may be sent at our risk, but it is not as safe.

The date at which subscriptions expire is with each subscriber's name on the address label. Send renewals before this date occurs. Notice if this date is changed to correspond; if not or if the paper fails to come, write without delay.

We discontinue, during the first part of each month all subscriptions which expire during the preceding one except such as are ordered continued with a promise to forward the money soon. We do not like to lose a single subscriber and will not remove names simply because the cash is not received promptly, if we understand that the paper is wanted. Address all letters with subscriptions or orders for Books, Tracts and donations to the Tract Fund to EZRA A. COOK & Co., 13 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1	square, 1 insertion,	$3.00
1	square (1 inch deep) one month	7.00
1	" " 2 "	10.00
1	" " 3 "	15.00
1	" " 6 "	25.00
1	" " 12 "	40.00

Discount for Space.

On 2 squares 5 per cent, On 3 squares 10 per cent
On 4 " 15 " " On 5 " 20 "
On ¼ col. 25 per cent On one col. 30 per cent

Postage on the Cynosure.

THE POSTAGE ON THE CYNOSURE MUST BE PAID AT CHICAGO. It is twenty cents a year.

The cost of postage now depends entirely on the size and weight, and therefore some smaller papers charge but fifteen cents; and others about the size of the Cynosure charge twenty-five cents a year for postage.

If the subscription price of the CYNOSURE was $2.50 or $3.00 a year, the price of many religious papers containing no more reading matter, we might afford to pay the postage ourselves, but at $2.00 a year we cannot do this with our present Subscription list.

Therefore let all send the postage, 20 cents a year, 10 cents for half a year with their renewals.

The commission on one new subscription for a year will pay the postage on your own and the new subscriber's paper. We would rather have the postage paid by commissions than in any other way.

When postage is not paid we shall have to shorten the time of subscription sufficiently to pay it.

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

"In Secret Have I Said Nothing."—Jesus Christ.

EZRA A. COOK & CO., PUBLISHERS, NO 13 WABASH AVENUE.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 29, 1875.

VOL. VII., NO. 29.—WHOLE NO. 264. WEEKLY, $2 00 A YEAR.

Contents.

	Page
TOPICS OF THE TIME	1
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
Sectarianism	8
The Matter with Italy	6
Evangelists and Penny-a-liners	8
Notes	9
CONTRIBUTED AND SELECT ARTICLES:
Lexington—1775 (Poetry)	1
Masonic Equality	1
Denominational Testimony	2
Masonic Conspiracy and Persecution—VII	2
Church Tests	3
Bishop Brown on Romanism	3
The Pope	3
REFORM NEWS and NOTICES: Report of the Michigan Convention; From the Indiana Agent; Northwestern Ohio; From Wisconsin; Southern Illinois	4, 5
CORRESPONDENCE: Masonry in the U. B. church of York Co., Pa.; How Secrecy is Estimated in the Monntains; Sonnd Advice; Corruption of Freemasonry; The Triumph of Christianity; Our Mail	5, 6
Quarterly Report of Agents	9
Open Letter to Men of Means	12
FORTY YEARS AGO; An Able Argument for Free Inquiry (Concluded)	7
Exposition of the Grange (Continued)	12
THE HOME CIRCLE	10
CHILDREN'S CORNER	11
The Sabbath School	7
Home and Health Hints	14
Farm and Garden	14
Religious Intelligence	9
News of the Week	13
Publishers' Department	16

Topics of the Time.

It has been lately published that two of our Presidents desired a Cardinal of Rome. The official announcement that President Grant is expected to attend the inauguration of Cardinal McCloskey with his Cabinet, gives color of truth to this doubtful report. This announcement, to be sure, is from Romish officials who may not be particular as to the ground of their expectation; but if, in the midst of the nation's rejoicing over the early victories which established American principles, General Grant has the effrontery to officially recognize the appointment of an American citizen, on American soil and under American laws, as prince of a foreign power, he will draw the just suspicion of every patriot that he is not only willing to be his own successor as President, but to perpetuate his power under some title unfamiliar to the ears and loathed in the hearts of his countrymen.

The President may not meet the expectations of the Jesuits, he has, however, grieved many a loyal soul—as did Lincoln on the memorable night of his death—by attending a New York theatre, and on the same evening when the most finished orator of the metropolitan pulpit gave an address in the Academy of Music on the timely topic, "The Early American Spirit and its Genesis." What plea can absolve him from the guilt of giving his high santion to an institution as hostile to common morality as it is to true religion? The Witness justly says: "We know not that the British people have anything to do with the private life of their Queen or of the Prince of Wales, but if they have, much more have we to do with the private life of our President, seeing that they cannot change their chief ruler, but we can change ours. It is surely right to condemn the private life of their Queen or of the Prince of Wales, but if they have, much more have we to do with the private life of our President, seeing that they cannot change their chief ruler, but we can change ours. It is surely right to commend the private virtues and character of public men, and it is a poor rule that does not work both ways."

The centennial season opened with becoming pageantry at Concord and Lexington last week, the prelude of a seven year's drama. Before we reach Yorktown the nation will have read again in the historical panorama the story of its birth, and the time will be long enough for reasonable reflection and a study of American principles just from the forge of the Revolution. The Fourth of July as a teaching day for the nation is pretty generally demoralized. Country dances, drunks, fights and rowdyism take the place of a sober, patriotic enjoyment of the day and recollection of its proper use, and we may be thankful that the state of the nation is more hopeful than its anniversary. But we shall now be long enough before the mirror of history to have a fair view of the national character and conscience; long enough to make an effort to return to the first principles of Americanism which we cannot outgrow if we do trample them underfoot.

Two decapitations last week point a moral. "Cousin" Columbus Delano, Secretary of the Interior, has given up his portfolio, some say because the President found him overloaded with an unscrupulous son John and bad Indian management, and asked him to do it; others that the resignation is voluntary. But none deny the fraudulent dealing with the Indians to which the Secretary was party; and which forced the Indian Commissioners, Farwell, Brunot and others, men of unquestioned honesty and patriotism, to resign when they could not break the ring. Another case is the Superintending architect of the new Custom-House and Post Office in Chicago, Mr. Rankin, private partner with P. G. Master Cregier in the flatulent Masonic show of last 24th of June. Mr. Rankin has been the subject of long and severe complaints by the press for the bad stone and shabby work allowed about the building. Mr. Potter, the government architect, came, and saw, and sent Mr. Rankin a letter of dismission. Now neither of these gentlemen may be dishonest, unofficially; but having bound themselves to the Masonic ring, fidelity to its obligations has probably been at the bottom of their troubles. They must "conceal," when concealment was dishonesty to the government. They are, in this view, Masonic martyrs; and this kind of martyrs is all Masonry ever had.

Lexington—1775.

Whittier's poem for the Centennial.

No maddening thirst for blood had they,
No battle joy was theirs who set
Against the alien bayonet
Their homespun breasts in that old day.

Their feet had trodden peaceful ways,
They loved not strife, they dreaded pain;
They saw not, what to us is plain,
That God would make man's wrath his praise.

No seers were they, but simple men;
Its vast results the future hid;
The meaning of the work they did
Was strange and dark and doubtful then.

Swift as the summons came they left
The plow, mid-furrow, standing still,
The half-ground corn-grist in the mill,
The spade in earth, the ax in cleft.

They went where duty seemed to call;
They scarcely asked the reason why;
They only knew they could but die,
And death was not the worst of all.

Of man for man the sacrifice,
Unstained by blood, save theirs, they gave.
The flowers that blossomed from their grave
Have sown themselves beneath all skies.

Their death-shot shook the feudal tower,
And shattered slavery's chain as well;
On the sky's dome, as on a bell,
Its echo struck the world's great hour

That fateful echo is not dumb;
The nations, listening to the sound,
Wait, from a century's vantage ground,
The holier triumphs yet to come—

The bridal time of Law and Love,
The gladness of the world's release,
When, war-sick, at the feet of Peace
The hawk shall nestle with the dove—

The golden age of brotherhood,
Unknown to other rivalries
Than of the mild humanities,
And gracious interchange of good,

When closer strand shall lean to strand,
Till meet, beneath saluting flags,
The eagle of our mountain crags,
The lion of our Motherland.

Masonic Equality.

BY J. H. H. WOODWARD.

Under the head of "Ancient Constitutions," on page 183, of Gray's Mystic Circle (a Masonic publication) occurs the following article approved by the Grand Lodge of England. It speaks for itself, and is so direct that it cannot be misunderstood:

"ART. 12. At the Grand Lodge on June 8, 1732, Viscount Montague being Grand Master, and in his absence, Deputy Grand Master Batson in the chair, having signified, that notwithstanding the general charity, some poor brothers had molested noblemen and others (being Masons) with private applications for charity; it was resolved, that any brother who makes such private applications for the future, shall be forever debarred from any relief from the Committee of Charity, the Grand Lodge, or any assemblies of Masons."

It would seem to be very plainly indicated by the above article that Masonry in so far from "not regarding any person from his worldly wealth or honors," did by the adoption of such an article, pay the most abject homage to the nobility of England, and thereby clearly demonstrated that "it was the external and not the internal qualifications of the man" that caused the engrafting of the article cited as a fundamental part of the Masonic law within the English jurisdiction. Furthermore, that the boasted equality which is said to pervade the Masonic system has no place in the spirit, letter, intent, or purpose of this article, and that the endearing title of "brother" was not at all suited to the taste of the English nobility when approached by a Masonic mendicant, though a brother in distress, notwithstanding the solemn and binding vows of Masonic brotherly love.

The Masonic brethren who were the innocent cause of the severe article of proscription above quoted, were no doubt misled in their course of conduct in applying for relief to their brother Masons of noble extraction, through the Masonic doctrine of equality, coupled with the presumption that those noblemen had been effectively taught how to lay the chief corner-stone of the (so-called) beautiful fabric of Masonic charity when they were initiated in the first degree of symbolic Blue Lodge Masonry; but alas! which principle, when touched by the practical test of human need, faded like the baseless fabric of a vision, and showed to those Masonic mendicants that their noble brethren instead of making a home application of the doctrine of Masonry as laid down by Dr. Oliver in his Theocratic Philosophy, page 193, that "a king in the lodge is reminded that although a crown may adorn the head, or a sceptre the hand, the blood in his veins is derived from the common parent of mankind, and is no better than that of the meanest subject," reversed this philosophy most effectually in securing the adoption of the article quoted, thereby warning all mendicant brethren ever after to keep at a respectful distance and carefully to note the actual inequality that ever obtains between noble and plebian blood, and thus to govern themselves accordingly. It is presumed that after the adoption of the article quoted, those noblemen Masons were not again molested by any of their mendicant brethren, and that the Grand Lodge of England also breathed much more freely and felt a sense of happy relief in the promulgation of this pronuncia mento in favor of royalty and against poverty, thus cementing the living but incongruous blocks of Masonic perfection into that harmonious and indivisible whole which unrestrained and despotic power exercised against the weak and in favor of the strong may ever securely accomplish. Those noblemen Masons, after such a ready compliance with their designs on the part of the Grand Lodge of England, must have felt a sense of renewed obligations of love and fidelity towards an order that on the slightest intimation stood ready to subserve their interests and demands with such freedom, fervency and zeal, though the service rendered were at the sacrifice of a fundamental principle.

The Masonic mendicants referred to, had surely not have made their application for brotherly relief to their brother noblemen, had they not been overshadowed and enthused with the spirit depicted by Robison in his "Proofs of a Conspiracy" pages 32 and 33, wherein he observed that "familiar name of brother could not but tickle the fancy of those (Masons) of inferior rank, when they found themselves set cheek by jowl with persons whom they cannot approach out of doors but with cautious respect; and while these men of rank have their pride lulled a little, and perhaps their hearts a little softened by the slang of sentimental declamation on the topic of brotherly love and Utopian felicity, the others (of inferior rank) begin to fancy the happy days arrived, and the light of philanthrophy beaming from the East and illuminating the lodge. The garret pamphleteer enjoys his fancied authority as Senior Warden and conducts with affectionate solemnity the young nobleman who pants for the honor of Mastership, and he praises the 'trusty brother' who has guarded him in his perilous journeys round the room. What topic of declamation can be more agreeable than the equality of the worthy brethren? and how naturally will the brother orator, in support of this favorite topic, slide into all the common-place pictures of human society, freed from all the anxieties attending civil distinction, and passing their days in happy simplicity and equality!" Yet, "in spite of this, in erring reason's spite," what a vain, delusive hope and what a piece of presumption in those Masonic mendicants, who without doubt would have been glad to have shared the enjoyments of their wealthy aristocratic brethren, barring the trouble of laboring therefor, it was to have sought, as they did seek, under the Shibboleth and with the talismanic grip of Masonry, that charity at the hands of the purse-proud aristocracy of England, from the bestowal of which they did, as they ever will, recoil with holy horror and withering contempt! O man! Canst thou not learn wisdom from the history of the past? Know then, that the crafty and powerful stoop to conquer, not to be conquered; and Masonry, stand thou aghast,—for with all thy glittering show, and pompous pretensions, thou art in many respects the prince of humbugs! yea, the devil incarnate!

Cincinnati, O,

Denominational Testimony.

BRO. BLANCHARD:—In your list of different religious bodies which have testified against Freemasonry and kindred secret societies, I notice that the Baptist denomination is not represented. The reason of this omission I am at a loss to understand; for a volume, instead of a newspaper article, might be filled with such testimony from churches, associations, State conventions, etc., etc.; especially if the entire history of this question among these organizations should be traced through the Morgan excitement. I will not, however, enter upon this history here. I will only ask attention to an item or two, of a much earlier date, in the history of a single organization.

The Shaftsbury Baptist Association was organized in the year 1780. It was originally one of the first, and (territorially, at least,) one of the largest organizations of the kind in the United States, embracing larger portions of Massachusetts and New York than even of Vermont, where it had its birth-place. The minutes of its eighteenth anniversary, which occurred in 1798, contain this entry:

"Item 14.—Several queries from churches occasioned the following advice: DEAR BRETHREN: As a number of our churches are greatly distressed by their members joining with the Freemasons, for the peace of the churches we pray such to desist. If there is no moral evil in joining with the Masons, yet it is sinning against the weak brethren, and he that sins against his weak brother, sins against Christ. But as this Association claims no jurisdiction over the members of churches, each church must judge for itself, according to fact and circumstance."

In 1802, the church in Providence addressed the following query to the Association: "Is honor done to the public cause of religion, where an association has published advice, in their minutes to the churches, not to allow their members to associate with Freemason lodges, and have declared against it, and yet give fellowship to brethren of other associations, who do the same, and call on them to take a seat in the association?"

This query was referred to a committee with instructions to report at the next session. The report came in 1804, was "unanimously accepted" and read as follows: "In answer to the query from the church at Providence at our last session, we think it proper to insert in our minutes that there are numbers of our brethren, and some of our churches, who cannot walk in fellowship with those brethren who join with and frequent the Masonic society, when they know it is a grief to their brethren; and that some have joined with that society, to the grief of others, which has been, and still is, the cause of much difficulty in many of our churches, and has repeatedly occasioned trouble in this Association. This has given rise to the remarks published in the 14th section of our minutes for 1798, on that subject. In order to prevent any further difficulty of that nature, we wish now to be fairly and fully understood: That, as to the propriety or impropriety of Freemasonry, we do not, as an Association, undertake to determine. Yet, we freely say, that inasmuch as our brethren do not pretend they are bound in conscience by any rule in the Word of God to unite with that fraternity, for them to form a connection with them, or frequent their lodges, when they know it is a grief to their Christian brethren and makes disturbance in the churches; it (in our opinion) gives sufficient reason for others to conclude they are not such as follow after the things that make for peace, and things whereby one may edify another; (Rom. xiv. 19) but rather are such as cause divisions and contentions contrary to the teachings we have learned (Rom. xiv. 19), and, of course, if they continue obstinately in such practices, ought to be rejected from fellowship, and, consequently, it is not reasonable for us to invite them to a seat in our Association. We therefore answer the query from the church at Providence in the negative."

I forbear comment upon this testimony, lest I should weaken its force. I commend it to the prayerful consideration of my Baptist brethren in particular and of Christians in general. And I would say especially to the lodge-goers among them: Whatever may be the character of secret societies, you know that God does not require you to adhere to them; and you know equally well that your adherence to them is a source of grief to many of your brethren. How then can you avoid the conclusion that so long as you continue that adherence you are actually sinning against Christ?—1 Cor. viii. 12.

A. D. LOW.

Evansville, Wis.

Masonic Conspiracy and Persecution in the U. B. Church.—VII.

BY REV. W. W. KNIPPLE.

It was confidently believed by all, from whom I had an expression at all, on the subject, that this was the end of the conspiracy. But I entertained a different opinion. I knew the men who stood at the helm. The object was, as already stated, not only to deliver Mr. Rose, but to behead an Antimason; and in this they had signally failed. There was yet left them a glimmering hope of success, strengthened by a letter which I wrote to Mr. Warner immediately after the session of Sandusky conference of 1873; in which I clearly portrayed the whole procedure of the conspiracy. In this letter I made some pointed approaches on the character of Mr. Warner and his accomplices, which I considered deserving a cutting rebuke. To which Mr. W. replied by demanding a retraction in toto, of every insinuation upon his character as a man and a minister, or he would feel it his duty to base several charges on my letter. Of course I could not, and did not retract one single insinuation, as I knew it all to be true, and could establish the whole if necessary. I wrote him accordingly; and consequently he at once set about preparing another bill of particulars, which in addition to the original, comprised the following charges based on said letter, under date of Oct. 14th, 1873; from which charges, the reader may draw an inference of the sentiment of my letter. After specifying the original charges Mr Warner says:

I now complain that he has charged me falsely:

1st. That I was engaged in a secret conspiracy to ruin him, (see his letter dated Sept. 12th, 1873). This I deny, as the preparation of the complaints was public in our conference.

2d. In charging by implication that I assisted in this matter through false pretense, (see same letter). This I deny.

3d. In charging by implication that I am influenced by the spirit of Freemasonry in this matter (see same letter). This I deny.

4th. In charging that this whole thing originated at Dayton, Ohio, and was intended to save the head of a man. &c. (see same letter). This I deny.

5th. In charging that I am disloyal to the church, and opposed to its laws and institutions, (see same letter). This I deny, and demand his proof of these charges, or if he fail to do this, that he be dealt with under the law of the church. I claim that under these statements by him, I am slandered and wronged, and therefore entitled to redress. The single rule on secrecy I have voted against, but as to the laws and institutions of the church, I have spent twenty years in advocating and defending them; and whosoever charges the contrary to this statement lies in his throat.

Signed, Z. WARNER.

This bill of charges was sent to Rev. A. W. Holden, presiding elder of the Sandusky District, Sandusky conference. In the meantime I saw an opening in the Central Illinois conference, made application for work, and was appointed to Pleasant Grove circuit; and proceeded at once to move to this place, where I have traveled since October, 1873. Soon after my arrival here, I wrote Rev. A. W. Holden that, in case those charges should be renewed, I wished a change of venue, to be tried in this conference. I was not definitely apprised before leaving Ohio that the case would be renewed; but it was, and was, at my request, sent to Rev. I. Kretzinger, my presiding elder, to be tried as per Discipline; and the case was tried on the 6th and 7th of May, 1874, at Pleasant Grove Chapel, Logan Co., Ill.

Notwithstanding the five new charges, it was evident that the prosecution was seriously damaged in the former contest, for I readily perceived that the most serious charge in the former bill, namely, that of laboring to create a secret conspiracy in the Parkersburg and Sandusky conferences, to the deep injury of reputable members thereof, was now withdrawn; although they asserted in the former bill that my letters already in their own hands would abundantly prove it.

I will not attempt a report in detail of the trial. Suffice it to say that in every particular, I was fully sustained by the Committee. But for the satisfaction of my readers, I give a few proofs of my last charge against Mr. Warner, namely, of disloyalty. His own defense as offered in connection with the charge, will convict him, namely: "the single rule on secrecy I have voted against, but as to the laws and institutions of the church," etc. This is conclusive evidence that Mr. W. ignores the rule on secrecy, as having no connection with the laws and institutions of the church.

I will now give a few extracts which I have clipped from Mr. Warner's letters to a friend of mine living in this State:

1st. "Whenever a church seeks in its law-making to override private judgment, and personal conviction, as well as trample down the consciences of 50,000 of its people, it deserves to die, just as any other criminal.

2d. It is this spirit of hate, cherished, and manifested by the friends of the "law" that constrains me to regard them as dangerous men in the church. They will yet tear it asunder, unless God interpose.

3d. If I wished to unite with a secret society "the law" would not prevent me at all. If it were based on the Word of God, it would, but being a purely human enactment, and based on the belief of men no more intelligent nor pious than those on our side, I have no more respect for it than any other bad "law." Then the manner in which the constitution was adopted, the advantage taken of the people in putting it out of their power to alter it, and thrusting into it that odious, and fraudulent plan of representation, awakens in me all the contempt I can have for anything."

The above is taken from letters now in my possession, and though Mr. Warner is alone responsible for the treasonable language, it simply expresses the sentiment of the entire secrecy element in the church.

A report in detail, of the trial here, was sent to Rev. A. W. Holden, P. E. of Sandusky District, Sandusky conference, (of which conference I was still a member, and consequently amenable) who presented the case to the conference in a light quite different from that desired, and no doubt expected by the lamb-skin brethren, but, satisfactory to a large majority of the conference, which, save a half dozen members, voted for the passage of my character, and for a transfer to Central Illinois conference, at my request.

Church Tests.

As to the right of a church to establish a test of membership by which she may exclude from her number those whom she recognizes as Christians, I have no doubt. A church composed of Baptists, Calvinists, and Methodists could not work well together. Each may believe that the other is a Christian, and yet, because they represent those different views and opinions it would not be wise for them to attempt to live together in one church. If a close-communion Baptist or Calvinist, as such, should offer himself to a Methodist congregation for membership, he would most likely be rejected. Not because he is not a Christian, but because he is not in harmony with the established views of that church on certain points of doctrine. For aught I know, a man holding and advocating restorationism may be a Christian, but it certainly would not add to the strength and harmony of an orthodox church to receive him into its communion, knowing him to be such.

It has been asserted a thousand times that the only test a church has a right to set up is a profession of faith in the Lord Jesus. It is claimed that this, and this only, was the apostolic test. But was there nothing more implied than a mere profession of faith in Christ? Christ taught the people that they must believe in him; but was this all? By no means. He said, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me." Here is faith, self-denial, and obedience, all included in the conditions of discipleship. Was there anything less than this implied in the apostolic test? Peter in his first sermon told the people that they must believe in the Lord Jesus and be baptized in order to be saved. Not a word is said about repentance. In his second sermon, delivered to another congregation, he told them that they must repent and be converted. Not a word is said about faith. But why? Simply because faith and repentance mutually imply each other. So when the apostles required faith in Jesus as a condition of membership they also (impliedly) required repentance: and repentance not only implies a godly sorrow for sin, but a turning away from all sin. Faith alone justies, but not that faith that is alone. If a mere profession of faith in Jesus Christ is the only scriptural test of membership, then a Roman Catholic, a Universalist, or a Unitarian may be received into any orthodox church; for they all profess to believe in Jesus Christ. Now I conceive that while the apostles made faith prominent in their test of membership, they included repentance and all the conditions of discipline laid down by the Master himself. Does any one say that their test included less than this?

The oft repeated declaration that a mere profession of faith in Christ is all that was implied and included in the apostolic test of membership, is well calculated to lead persons astray. Some modern divines put it in this way, "Are you a Christian?" If this question is answered affirmatively, that is all we have a right to know or ask. Now suppose we submit this to a practical test. A Roman Catholic presents himself for membership. You ask the questions, "Do you believe in the Lord Jesus Christ? Are you a Christian?" He answers affirmatively. Then you must take him into the church. A distiller, a saloon-keeper, a slave-dealer, a man with a dozen wives, each presents himself and answers the questions affirmatively; then you must take them into the church. If not, why not? Do they not all say that they believe in Jesus Christ? Do they not all say they are Christians? Was there anything more than this in the apostolic test? If not, then we are bound to take anybody and everybody into the church who says he is a Christian, no matter what his practices are.

There is a growing tendency toward liberalism, an inkling toward widening the church doors, all for the purpose of increasing the number and wealth of the church. Now, while it is not my purpose in this article to advocate any one test in particular, I do most earnestly protest against widening the door so as to receive into church fellowship those who persist in practices that are not in harmony with the word and the spirit of the Gospel of Christ. We are living in perilous times. The church and the world are seeking to make friends with each other. Compromise seems to be the watch-word n both sides. The church says to the world, "We will widen the door a little, so that you can come in. We will ask no questions about your practices; if you believe in Christ and say you are a Christian, that is all we want to know. We set up no test except one: the apostolic test—a profession of faith in Jesus Christ. You may be a Universalist, a Restorationist, a Unitarian,—no matter what your faith is, only so that you profess to believe in Jesus Christ. Come and join us; our door is wide enough to take you all in. You may be a distiller of liquor, a rum seller, a dancing-master, a slave-dealer; no matter, come and join us. All we ask is a profession of faith in Jesus Christt. This, and this only, is the apostolic test." Does any one say that this is an extravagant way of putting the question? I answer that it is not. It simply shows its practical workings; for any of the above named characters could say that they believed in Jesus Christ. And just such persons have been received into church-fellowship. There are churches now whose doors are wide enough to take them all in; and if the apostolic test implied nothing more than a profession of faith in Jesus Christ, we have no right to exclude any of them from church fellowship.—Bishop Weaver.

Bishop Brown on Romanism in America.

Remember that this church played its part in the commencement and during the continuance of our own Rebellion; that those who were immediately connected with the assassination of Lincoln were communicants of that church; that the pope was among the first to manifest sympathy with the rebel cause; that when the Confederate army invaded Pennsylvania and threatened the city of New York, a frenzied and brutal combination, seemingly of a sectarian character, reared itself in that city to prepare for and to welcome the anticipated entry of the rebel forces; that this combination bore all the marks of its Catholic paternity, and its demonstration signalized its Catholic inspiration; think of the possibility of Catholic Europe pouring its funds into the country to stir up discord and fan the flames of a new rebellion; of the fact that the South hates the North with an unquenchable hatred; that it also fraternizes with Catholicism, which finds there strong root; think of a war say with Spain, in which Catholic sympathies would be enlisted; think also of the gigantic efforts now being made to proselyte the negro element in this country to Catholicism, of the multiplication of Catholic missions and their organized training for this special work; consider when the musket was put in the hand of the black man it became the decided agency which saved the Union, and that the Catholic never forgets history; think also of our reduced army and navy, of the possibility of the failure of appropriations to support even the force we now have; think of the negro, tired of hoping for protection and peace from the agencies he has relied upon unavailingly for ten years, and being driven to accept almost any alternative which promises him that security the nation has failed to give—think of these things, Republicans and Protestants, and say, if you all continue to be blind, if you are determined to remain deaf. The family altars of the North must blaze anew, and save to freedom and Protestantism the class they freed, and maintain their faith and free hearth stones.

The Pope.

As the age grows, on one side enlightened and on the other skeptical, he encounters the skepticism with denunciation, and the enlightenment with retrogression. As he rises higher and higher into the regions of transcendental obscurantism, he departs by wider and wider space from the living intellect of man; he loses province after province; he quarrels with government after government; he generates schism after schism; and the crowning achievement of the Vatican Council and its decrees is followed, and the mysterious counsels of Providence, by the passing over, for the first time in history, of his temporal dominions to an orderly and national Italian kingdom, and of a German imperial crown to the head of a Lutheran king, who is the summit and center of Continental Protestantism. But what then? His clergy are more and more an army, a police, a caste, farther and farther from the Christian commons; but nearer to one another, and in closer subservience to him. They have made him "The Infallible," and they have promised he shall be made "The Great," and, as if to complete the irony of the situation, the owners or the heirs of a handful of English titles, formerly unclaimed, are now enrolled upon the list of his most orthodox, most obsequious followers, although the mass of the British nation repudiates him more eagerly and resolutely than it has done for many generations.—Gladstone.

A man who has been redeemed should be pure. He who is an heir of life should be holy. He who is attended by celestial beings, and who is soon—he knows not how soon—to be translated to heaven, should be holy. Are angels my attendants? Then I should walk worthy of my companionship. Am I so soon to go and dwell with angels? Then I should be pure. Are these feet soon to tread the courts of heaven? Is this tongue soon to unite with heavenly beings in praising God? Are these very eyes of mine soon to look on the throne of eternal glory, and on the ascended Redeemer? Then these feet, and eyes, and lips should be pure and holy, and I should be dead to the world, and live for heaven.—Albert Barnes.

For Notices see 9th page.

Reform News.

—The Jay County, Ind., Association was appointed to meet yesterday, the 28th, at Bellefontaine. This we learn from Bro. Kiggins who was expecting to be present.

—Rev. O. E. Birch of the Huntley M. E. church lectured on the evening of the 15th inst. at Crystal Lake, Ill.

—The DuPage County Association of this State holds its semi-annual meeting in Bloomingdale during the second week in May.

Elders Barlow and Rathbun, Bro. L. N. Stratton of the Wesleyan and Samuel D Greene of Massachusetts were on the programme for the State meeting at Hartford Ct., yesterday.

Secretary's Report of the Michigan Convention.

In response to a call issued by the General Agent of the National Christian Association the friends of the Anti-masonic reform of the State of Michigan, met at Colwell Hall, Fenton, March 30th, 1875. Meeting was called to order by Hon. George Kipp, Vice-president of National Christian Association for the State of Michigan.

Hon. George Kipp was chosen chairman, C. B. Remington, secretary. Committees on enrollment, constitution, finance and permanent organization were then chosen, and while they were making out their several reports, the Convention was favored by an address from Rev. A. H. Springstein.

Committee on enrollment presented the names of ninety-three as members of Convention. The remainder of the afternoon was spent in listening to short speeches.

Rev. J. P. Stoddard recited startling incidents of the progress of the Anti-masonic cause; Rev. R. Faurot speaking strongly in disapproval of secret societies; Rev. D. A. Richards defining his position as an unqualified anti-secret man. N. Willcox of Jackson, by request, gave reminisences of Morgan times. He is an old veteran and an unflinching friend to the anti-secret reform.

The Convention then took a short recess until 6:30 P. M., when they again assembled and spent some time in prayer and praise to God, after which the Convention listened to a powerful address from Rev. R. Faurot, subject, "Effects of Secrecy upon Conscience;" followed by Rev. A. H. Springstein reciting what he went through with when made a Mason. Meeting then adjourned.

At 9 A. M. following day opened by prayer-meeting; after spending a full three-quarters of an hour in prayer the meeting then listened to report of committee on constitution, who presented the constitution adopted by the Ohio Convention which was reviewed, article by article, and adopted as constitution of the Michigan Association opposed to secret societies; except article third of preamble which was made to read: "The Masonic system, its rites, oaths, laws, penalties and morality, are all deistical, heathenish and blasphemous; and are contrary to Christian morality."

The forenoon was occupied in the discussions upon constitution. The afternoon was occupied in the election of officers provided by constitution for the ensuing year.

President, Cornelius Quick, Weston, Lenawee Co.

Vice-presidents, Hon. George Kipp, Goodrich, Genesee Co.; H. M. Rorabacher, Hamburg, Livingston Co.

Recording Sec'y, C. B. Remington, Fenton, Genesee Co.

Corresponding Sec'y, A. H. Springstein, Ypsilanti.

Treasurer, J. H. Willcox, Howell, Livingston Co.

Executive Committee, H. C. Pratt, Fairfield, Seneca Co.; L. J. Wicker, Pontiac, Oakland Co.

After the election of the above officers the Association was privileged by listening for about one and a half hours to an address by General Agent, J. P. Stoddard; Subject, "Masonry and Christian Religion compared." During the whole address a more attentive audience could not have been found. The speaker announced at the close that Prof. Blanchard was present and that he would speak to the Association in the evening. Prof. Blanchard being loudly called for made his appearance upon the stage amid claping of hands and general cheering. He occupied their attention for only a short time, after which the Association took into consideration who they would have for State agent, when D. P. Rathbun was unanimously chosen; then adjourned until 6:30 P. M.

The meeting upon re-assembling took into consideration the place for holding the next meeting of this Association, and finally agreed upon Lansing, the capital of the State. At the evening session the house was jammed to overflowing, order prevailed, all listening with breathless silence to the powerful arguments presented by Prof. Blanchard, who spoke full two hours upon the accursed institution of Masonry.

C. B. Remington, Sec'y.

From the Indiana Agent.

THE COLORED PEOPLE AT RICHMOND—BONES IN A HAY-MOW—DUBLIN AND HOPEWELL—A MINISTER IN THE WRONG PULPIT.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 15, 1875.

Editor of the Cynosure:

My last left me at Newport, Wayne county, where I met Rev. G. P. Riley, the Wesleyan pastor of New Garden circuit. He is just beginning to be aroused to an appreciation of the work of our reform, and I hope to hear from him in this direction in the future. He is quite successful in his labors, especially in revival work. On Wednesday the 7th I left Newport, feeling that my visit had not been entirely in vain. On the evening of the 7th I spoke in the Wesleyan church, (colored) in Richmond, to a small, but apparently interested audience. Here I again met Howell Grave, whose presence was a source of encouragement to me. It is remarkable what a degree of prosperity in temporal affairs is attending many of the colored people here at Richmond. As an instance, Mr. Johnson was a slave till the late war made him free. He came to Richmond soon after, where he now owns a pleasant and valuable home in that city, and is prospering in business. Many similar cases might be mentioned as evidences of the ability of the despised race to compete with their fairer brothers.

A STRANGE AFFAIR

took place here some time since on this wise. Some children engaged in play in the loft of a barn, discovered a coffin containing human bones. They alarmed the inmates of the house with their story, who on examining the matter reported it to the police. It ran over the city like wildfire, and the sensation seems to have been intense. The reporter of the daily paper visited the scene of excitement and wrote up a humorous article upon it, in which after giving a brief description of the coffin and skeleton, (for it proved to be a skeleton entire) he mentions the probability of its having been the property of a defunct Masonic lodge, used in initiation.

Here was a studied attempt to cover a discovered trail. For doubtless the coffin and skeleton were used, (or intended to be used), by the Odd-fellows or Knights of Pythias; or foul play had been practiced upon some individual. One can scarcely conceive of any "order" concealing its "property,"—lodge property,—in such a place. What became of the said "property" the public does not seem to have learned. But the whole gist of the newspaper articles alluding to the affair was intended to cover up this palpable protrusion of the by ridicule. But (not) strange to say the minds of the people intuitively attribute the whole matter to secretism.

CLOVEN FOOT OF MASONRY,

On Thursday morning not thinking I would have the time to spare from the lecture work, I did not remain to attend the Friends Annual First-day School Convention. I took my leave of the Quaker city, and went to Cambridge City where after taking supper with brother Huddlestone, I went with himself and family to prayer meeting at the U. B. chapel in Dublin. The meeting was especially encouraging to me, in that one good brother (James Ware) had the courage and faith to pray for the overthrow of all secret organizations, and to ask God to "bless brother Kiggins in his labors, and to make him efficient in this great reform." It is quite refreshing to meet with such things in some quarters. On Friday morning, in company with our devoted President Butler I went again to the Hopewell neighborhood, where in the evening I attended a social meeting and spoke relative to the danger of too indiscriminate a union of Christians with principles and men, from the words, "Endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." I enforced especially the necessity of being sure that the unity which we keep is "the unity of the Spirit," and not a unity with the spirit of the world; remembering that "whosoever will be a friend of the world, is the enemy of God." James iv. 4. "For if ye live after the flesh ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit, do mortify the deeds of the body ye shall live. For as many as are led by the spirit of God, they are the sons of God." I made an appointment to preach on the following evening in the same place, which I did; I met Rev. Thomas Evans, U. B., who is not unknown to the readers of the Cynosure, and who took especial pains to inform me in the presence of quite a number of young men, that "he takes no stock in Anti-masonic lectures, and to denounce in no delicate terms the course of the Cynosure, in publishing Mr. Darby's letter concerning him.

Mr. Evans is quite a popular minister with the masses, and his course is to be greatly regretted. As a speaker he knows how to reach the people; but his responsibility will be the greater. His plea was identical with that of those who in slavery times dared not to speak out against that vile institution. "My work is to 'preach the Gospel,' and not to lecture against secrecy." Ah! how men do love to shun responsibility without seeming to do so. As though preaching the Gospel did not embrace the duty of "reproving, rebuking" and "warning," men of evil, as well as "exhorting" them.

Well, "to make a long story short," I spoke on Monday eve. at Friends meeting-house at Rich Square; on Tuesday took the train for this place where I arrived in the evening. I find the interest on the increase in Indianapolis. I go to Hendricks county to see friends there and look up the interests of the cause to-morrow. More anon. Sincerely,

John T. Kiggins.

Northwestern Ohio.—Going Forward in Williams County.

West Unity, O., Apr. 19, 1875.

Editor of the Christian Cynosure:

We have had another waking up in our place. Bro. J. P. Stoddard visited us a few days ago on his way home from the Michigan meeting, lectured four times in our county, and preached twice on the Sabbath; in the forenoon for the Presbyterian, and in the afternoon for the U. B. minister, besides doing a great deal of work for our Publishing House. We hope he will be able to make a good report at Pittsburgh of this part of our work. We have no ill-will against Mr. Carpenter, but as he has offered to match his benevolence in the cause against all the rest of the friends, we hope it may be said of him in this respect, "Weighed in the balance and found wanting."

But to the meetings. It would be superfluous, after stating they were addressed by Bro. Stoddard, to add they were good. As usual, circumstances as well as Masonry seemed against us. Meetings in the other churches, evening school in the school-house., etc., but the interest grew till the last, Sabbath night the house was full. His theme was the religion of Masonry, and it was amusing to notice some of the Mason's wives as they would look into their husband's faces with an illy suppressed smile; seeming to ask, Are these things so?—and the embarrassed, serious, and at times troubled look of the husband that as plainly answered, Yes. The meeting was hardly out till some of the cable-towed friends seemed to feel called upon to defend their pet, and we are glad to say they did it with a great deal more decency than when Bro. Stoddard was here before.

With a certain class there seems to be considerable anxiety felt, lest the agitation of this question disturb the churches. Well, if Masonry is ever ready to shield the murderer, the plotter against the government, the libertine, the rum-seller, or the violater of all law, human or divine, provided he don't practice it on a brother Mason, his wife, daughter, sister or mother,—we say if Masonry is ever ready to take this class of men under one wing, provided they can give the grand hailing sign of distress, we think it is not entitled to any more respect because it offers to take the churches under the other wing. Nor have we much faith in that church that forgetting the promise, "Lo, I am with you always," should accept the proffered shelter. We think, put down Masonry as soon as possible, and if a few churches fall, it will only show what they have been leaning on.

Some of the friends ask, Is it best to carry this move into politics? If it is right we see no reason why it should not be. It is evident Masonry does not fit a man for office, and if we can show the young men of this nation that it does not fit a man to run for office, we think it would be the heaviest stroke ever dealt to the craft.

Yours, etc., J. G. Mattoon.

From Wisconsin—A Lodge Argument from Washington County.

WEST BEND, Wis., April 15, 1875.

MR. EDITOR:—After my return to this State to enter upon the work, I was hindered by the bad state of the roads, there having been a heavy fall of snow through the winter, and much of it drifted into the north and south roads, when it began to melt, for about three week, reaching into the first week of April, it was almost impossible to travel. Having received a letter from Bro. Hamlin, started and reached this place on the 9th and was cordially received, and arrangements made for work.

I think there never had been a lecture in Washington county. Bro. Holt is the pioneer here, he having been opposing secretism for years, and a reader of the Cynosure about four; has had the energetic assistance of Bro. Hamlin about one year. It was known that the Baptist church could be had, but the M. E. church was promised by three of the trustees, but one of the five is a Mason and he bullied them out of it.

I preached on Sunday in the Baptist house, and gave the first lecture there Monday evening, and announced for another on Tuesday; but the court-house having been obtained, changed to that place. These two evenings things passed off pleasantly, though it was evident that secretism was disturbed. I was unusually mild and on the first evening indulged in a little pleasantry. On the second among other things showed that the "I will conceal, and never reveal" in Masonry and Odd-fellowship necessitated lying in some instances, and that set the storm to brewing. I agreed the next night to speak on the Master Mason's oath, but at first for a short time, spoke of the evidences that the Masonry of to-day was the same that Morgan had revealed. I had spoken but a short time before a lawyer named Frisbee jumped up and asked me some questions, which of course was designed to get me into a tight place. I gave only such answers as I thought best. He spoke violently for some time giving the old hash of charity to widows and orphans, and it was better than the church, amidst a tumultuous stamping, clatter and confusion. It was very evident the whirlwind had begun, but I kept my position and when he sat down told the people that it was not a "few misguided men that murdered Morgan," but a wide-spread conspiracy, embracing a large portion of the fraternity, and that the institution was supposed to be dead. But I could not proceed. It was evident the mob by previous arrangement had taken possession of the house. They appointed a chairman. I appealed to him to keep order while I should proceed, but was interrupted again and again. I kept my position and was determined not to yield, but was constantly interrupted, and every time it was decided that the rowdy had the floor regardless of the rules governing deliberative bodies, and I so charged him. Whereupon he left the chair and came at me in a rage with his hand extended, but I paid no attention to him. I had but one object in view, the triumph of truth. They had a secretary appointed, and voted that each speaker should have five minutes, and that I might have twenty minutes, then changed it to fifteen, and then amended by putting in a condition that I must not abuse anybody. But I was not there for a discussion, but to lecture. When proper arrangements were made for a debate, I would attend to that. I would not yield, and addressed the chair every opportunity I had, but of course almost certain to be ruled out of order. Finally, Bro. Holt moved that I should quietly withdraw and leave the house. It was seconded, and on that motion I took the opportunity to say that they had given a stronger lecture against secret societies than I could, by their attempt to stop free discussion, which could not be done in this country, and that it would tell heavily against secret societies; then quietly prepared to leave. Amid all the confusion and uproar, I never was more calm and self-possessed in my life, and think all of our friends were in the same condition.

The mob embraced some of the following: lawyers, doctors, preachers, merchants, post-masters and editors; societies represented, Masons, Odd-fellows, Good Templars and grangers. I have been convinced for some time past that secret societies of all names are most terribly demoralizing to poor humanity. For the war,

P. ELZEA.

Southwestern Illinois.—Interesting Meeting at Marissa.

COULTERSVILLE, Ill., April 21, 1875.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—We have had a third meeting in the interests of anti-secrecy in our part of the State. This third meeting was held in "Rankin's Hall," in Marissa, on the afternoon and evening of April 20th, 1875. In the absence of Rev. Thomas Guthrie, D. D., the chairman of the last meeting, the meeting was called to order by Rev. D. S. Faris, and Mr. Samuel Elliott of Coultersville, was chosen chariman, and the meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. Smiley. J. M. Faris of Coultersville, was continued secretary. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, after which the resolutions laid on the table at the last meeting were taken up for discussion and adoption seriatim. After the discussion, amendment and adoption of the first six "charges," about five o'clock a recess was taken till seven and a half o'clock.

At the expiration of the recess the meeting was called to order by the chairman, and prayer was offered by Rev. Glenn. The address of Rev. P. Boyd being the order of the hour, was then delivered to quite a large audience, considering the season of the year and the threatening appearance of the weather. The address was quite appropriate and impressive.

The remaining resolutions were then taken up, briefly discussed, and adopted. The resolutions as a whole were then adopted, and are as follows:

Secret societies modeled like Masonry, with obligations of perpetual secrecy, degrees, signs, and grips, and childish regalia, are of vicious and dangerous tendency; and we believe that a careful scrutiny of their nature and operations will sustain the following charges:

1. They are contrary to the general teachings of the Scriptures.

2. They are not benevolent, but selfish, constituting so many rings that may conspire against fair dealing and equality in social and political relations, and therefore to be opposed and abjured by the truly benevolent, who labor for equal rights and the common good of all.

3. They are contrary in form and operation to republicanism, constituted as they are according to the ideas of despotism, and bearing titles at once childish, despotic, and blasphemous.

4. They are opposed to Christianity as far as they reject the Christ of the Bible, the atonement for sin, and degrade the true religion by making their own the universal religion of which Christianity is only a sect; they teach men to hope for salvation through their own merits, contrary to the whole tenor of the Word of God.

5. They undermine sound morals by substituting for them artificial codes, and setting these above the law of God. They embrace in one confidential brotherhood drunkards, extortioners, murderers, and robbers, and make these the peers or the superiors of Christians seduced into membership of the lodge, thus destroying the very ground of true virtue.

6. They tend to subvert justice by imposing on their members ensnaring obligations, binding them always to give the preference to a fellow-member, other things being equal; to contradict criminal charges, and to suggest mitigation in case of acknowledged guilt.

7. Trustworthy revelations prove that in some of these societies, and particularly in Masonry, the oaths are wicked, horrible and barbarous, administered without jurisdiction of law, and binding the juror to a criminal concealment of things the public have a right to know in order to the preservation of individual rights and the peace and prosperity of church and state.

8. History based on the most undoubted and conclusive testimony, convicts some of these societies, and especially Masonry, of outrageous violations of the law, and in several instances of murder.

9. Such societies keep in working order a devilish machinery which has been and is now called into requisition for the destruction of the best interests of church and state.

We therefore recommend the adoption of the following resolutions:

Resolved 1st, That it is the duty of all good men to withdraw countenance and support from these institutions, one and all; and in case such have been beguiled into membership to renounce the unholy alliance, and warn the public of the dangerous character of such associations.

Resolved 2d, That it is the duty of the church of Christ to debar adhering and officiating members of secret societies from the sacramental membership, until they manifest repentance and reformation by renouncing the diabolical fellowship of the craft and of the works of darkness.

Resolved 3d, That it is the duty of the State to withdraw all charters incorporating such institutions, and to give to other citizens the right to challenge and reject jurymen and impeach witnesses connected with the fraternities on the ground that they are biased to partiality in judgment and testimony by the overruling power of the lodge, and the promise to secrete a brother from punishment and to conceal and never reveal his secrets."

Respectfully submitted,

D. S. FARIS, Chairman.

The meeting adjourned with prayer by Rev. P. P. Boyd, to meet at the call of the chairman and secretary after consultation with those interested in the meetings.

J. M. FARIS, Sec'y.

P. S.—Our meeting was the more interesting from the fact that a person who said he was a Mason of the seventh degree was present and was permitted to speak as often as he choose.

J. M. F.

Correspondence.

Masonry Wormed into the U. B. Church of York County, Pa.

Editor of the Cynosure:

As no member of the United Brethren church, residing in this place, has written anything for the Cynosure, and as you are now giving your readers an account of one Masonic plot against a worthy minister of that denomination, I desire to call your attention to a few facts which should cause all intelligent members of that noble Christian brotherhood to consider well the great ring question, and the necessity for prompt and vigorous action.

Since October, 1868, I have labored amongst the members of the First and Second U. B. churches of this place, including all the ministers stationed here, except the present pastor's. I have scattered amongst them many tracts and papers and some other documents, have talked much, and have used every means in my power to induce action favorable to our cause. Now for the result.

The only minister who has opposed the lodge power was left without work by the last conference; while another pastor who smiled upon the old harlot was lately buried by secretists with white gloves and green sprigs. A third minister refused his church for lectures; while another told me that I was not worthy of a notice by Freemasons of York. Still another pastor argued in defense of Freemasonry, and said our Anti-masonic facts are all lies. I might say much more in regard to these ministers, but I have given enough for one dose.

The members of the two churches are divided on the secrecy question. Some of them hate the lodge but are very careful to keep a good shade on their anti-secrecy candle. Others are a little bolder but still are exceedingly discreet. A large portion, however, are well drilled in Masonic tactics, pantomime, ect. And a few of them can go through the Masonic monkey-shines as gracefully as an organ grinder's monkey can perform his duty. Many of these misguided people have been making the same pantomimical signs at me that Masons, Odd-fellows, and other secretists have made. I am told, too, that many of them belong to the various sly societies. This goes to prove that there really is a great Masonic conspiracy against the United Brethren denomination; and that the members of this promising church are being led astray by their own ministers, and drilled in dark dens by the dupes of the devil.

I have discovered that the U. B. Tribune is, in some cases, taken by lodge people and then passed along to U. B. people who are anti-secret. So we see the old slave power is still at work.

In conclusion, I desire to express my admiration of the U. B. church for its loyalty to the government and its sound morality in regard to rum, tobacco, secretism, etc. And I will add that I have true friends in its ranks.

Yours as ever, E. J. CHALFANT.

How Secrecy is Estimated in the Mountains.

DENVER, Colorado.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I have for some time thought of penning you a few lines on some of the secret orders of the day. This has been some of the results of reading your paper, so you see it has some influence even in the wilde regions of the Rocky Mountains.

We have often thought of the various secret orders prevailing and heard their principles discussed from our boyhood, but not until lately have we seriously reflected on their evil tendency.

Since the organization of the grangers, the matter has been forced on our attention; for we have been solicited to join the order as well as some others that seem to be making a stir just now. This has caused some reflections which we herewith transmit to you.

Of the Masons and Odd-fellows we have but little practical acquaintance, but have never found out of what advantage either has been to the mass of mankind. We have been advised to join the Masons, and thinking it might be to our advantage to do so, we have applied to some of the order for a statement of principles so we might know whether to join or not, but never received a satisfactory answer. Some Masons told us that in foreign travel or among strangers it might be of some use, but at home or among friends it would be of no use whatever. The Bib has been referred to as the best book on Masonry that we could read and so we concluded the order did not have any code of principles, nothing but signs, pass-words, secret mysteries of hob-goblins and midnight ghosts with a mess of nonsensical orgies more fit for maniacs than an assembly of high-minded, honorable men. We gave it up.

Of the Odd-fellows we had a better opinion, being told they were not so pretentious and a good deal more honest in their principles than the Masons. But what was our surprise when told that none but a sound man could be admitted in the order! Here was genuine charity and no mistake! It is a most beautiful philosophy to help a man when he don't need any aid, but the moment he falls, stand aloof and "pass by to the other side," without giving a lift! That's the way the good Samaritan did—was it?

Yes, the Bible teaches a great many good things, and the Saviour came not to heal the afflicted—when you read through Masonic or Odd-fellows glasses. How he went among the sound and those clothed in their right mind helping and speaking words of cheer to those who needed no help, and how he spurned and neglected those poor unfortunate creatures afflicted from birth with disease!

As to the grangers we agree in the need of a great reform of the monopolies, rings, salary and land grabbers, and those oppressive combinations that deprive labor of its just reward. But are the grangers not following in the footsteps of other secret orders that oppress, and of combinations that run into corruption and fraud? Have not the grangers scores of unprincipled men, known tricksters, wire-pullers and office-seekers in their order in its very infancy? Are there not men already admitted who will soon suck the life-blood from the vitals? What has been the chief occupation of some subordinate lodges in this Territory alone? Feasting and dancing. Last 4th of July, at Central Park, near Denver, quite a large concourse of people had assembled and the grangers wouldn't celebrate with other patriotic organizations, but must be exclusive, by themselves! What did they do?—had lawyers and politicians to address them from an ice-cream stand presided over by a middleman! Only a few scattering farmers who had not finished their cream and were too old to dance, were the audience. Up in the dance-hall the room was filled to almost suffocation by the dancers and feasters who were going to march against all monopolies—that set in the way of amusement. Last winter about the same thing was repeated at Guard's Hall in the city, only on a larger scale. Now we don't propose to write down the grangers, but would like to know how soon they will bring the much needed reform by such a frivolous pastime as characterize some of their doings.

Some of the same evils attend the grangers that follow other secret orders. Selfishness, exclusiveness, and neglect are among some evils we notice. Members of the order are not cared for properly, and some of the most bitter lawsuits here have been between the members of the same grange! Instead of being more social, open, free-hearted and genial, they are more exclusive, unfriendly and secret in their intercourse with their fellow man. They will defend and hold up for a member of the order in true Masonic style, and men who were once open to their neighbors, since getting into the grange seem to have a sort of secret fever, and are more reticent and unsocial than before.

The general tendency of secrecy is to destroy some of the noblest emotions of the heart. Why all men (and women too) cannot unite on some general rule of action or principle, to secure the highest and best enjoyment of this life without going into some midnight conclave or dark-lantern order, shutting out the very star-light of the heavens, when honest folks should be at home and abed, is past my calculations. We would like to see men and women act together so as to bring about any reform necessary without banding together in secret conclaves with "strange oaths" like a band of pirates or outlaws ashamed of their own action. On principle, every reform the world needs can be made without secrecy, and we should have the aid and counsel of many good men and women who will never join any secret order whatever. Yours truly,

WM. B. ROBB.

Sound Advice.

Scene 1st.—(Agent for Seaman's Western Aid Society delivering an address on temperance). "May God bless the Good Templars for the noble work they have done in the cause of temperance."

Scene 2d.—(Same place a few weeks later; pastor of Congregational church, a body strong financially and numerically, weak in spiritual powers, also overrun with Masons and Odd-fellows, delivering temperance address to a large audience). "I desire you all, and especially the young, to sign the pledge and join a temperance society, but I do not advise you to join the Good Templars or any secret organization. Doubtless some have been saved by them, but nothing has been accomplished that might not have been done by an open society. I believe they were used by the devil as an agency to kill off the old Washingtonian temperance movement, for as soon as they began to take the place of the open societies the whole movement began to lose ground. It was shorn of its moral strength."

To those who are in the midst of the fight, such an expression may not seem very significant, but to me they seem brave words in the pastor of a church which not long ago dismissed an able and efficient minister who had the audacitity to preach against secret societies. This field is being planted with good seed in the shape of the publications of the N. C. A.; by and by a lecturer can gather a harvest.

WESTERN ILL.

The Corruption of Freemasonry.

A Master Mason swears not to violate the chastity of a Master Mason's wife or daughter he knowing them to be such.

Elder P. of my congregation, who was aware of this fact, heard a Master Mason speak lightly of a certain woman. To test the truth of the case, Elder P. put a question to the Mason, and was answered that as he was a Master Mason he did not dare to have anything to do with her, for she was a Master Mason's wife.

But, continued Elder P., "How would it be with my wife?"

"Oh," said the Master Mason, "That is another matter."

Elder P. could not restrain his wrath, but turning upon the Mason exclaimed, "You villain, your system is of the devil. Just because I am not a Mason you would violate the chastity of my wife if you could get a chance."

This conversation in substance I had from Elder P.; you may make use of it if you please. W.

The Triumph of Christianity.

YORK CENTER, Ohio.

As a system of truth Christianity is prepared to meet an opposing world. It was the design of its divine Author to be the aggressor and this aggressive character has ever marked her progress in the world. Satan is wielding all the power he can bring to bear against her, presenting systems in which there is a designed commingling of truth and falsehood, perverting the Scriptures and yet avowing it to be a moral method by which man may be saved.

This is Freemasonry and the credulous are taken under its tileing; but men that are acute judges of theology are not easily hood-winked. "Artifice in this matter, however ingenious, is very apt to be discovered; it cannot endure severe scrutiny. There are spurious productions in the world, which assume to be of divine authority, which no sober man regards in any other light than mere fabrication, and which are distinguished by nothing more than the absence of every criterion of Divine inspiration."

But Christianity is able to meet this giant foe. God will be glorified in its overthrow, in his own good time. God's ministers must warn the people of the fearful consequence of being found at last leagued together with the workers of darkness, "Cry aloud and spare not." The minister who is an adhering secretist will shun this duty. The man that will be "weighed in the balances and found wanting" will be one that has disobeyed God. Belshazzar "saw the fingers of a man's hand that wrote upon the wall: his countenance was changed and his thoughts troubled him so that the joints of his loins were loosed, and his knees smote one against an other." What trembling then will seize upon the man who has the hand of God against him; not in a few words but in the tenor of God's eternal truth, threatening not the loss of a temporal but of an everlasting kingdom.

Zealous, God-fearing men who hold connection in churches which have a law against secrecy are by some of the craft called bigots, but we mind not those epithets. God has commanded it is the duty of man to obey. May God grant his servants grace to declare the whole truth and seriously perform their work as men knowing that they must shortly give an account of their stewardship. Christianity will continue to move against the powers of darkness with the assured confidence of final triumph. She may have to pass through waters, and the fiery furnace of persecution, yet we may behold with her one "like the Son of God." D. J. HARRIS.

OUR MAIL.

L. C. Koepler, Sandy Bay, Wis., writes:

"It is not only necessary to oppose these societies as true patriots of our country, but it is also our duty to work against these leagues of despotic, atheistic, satanic character if we wish to be true followers of Christ; and as the power of these dark societies has become great we need the help of our Lord, and help will be granted to us as long as we keep on the Lord's side, and as long as we are following Jesus' footsteps watchfully and prayerfully. Many times have I felt sorry for my German countrymen that so many of them are willing to put their souls, bought by Christ's blood, into the hands of the Prince of darkness in joining such societies, and yet—where are our German Christian editors? Where is their voice to be heard?"

This friend desires to form anti-secret societies among the Germans. We hope that the spirit of God will descend mightly on men and raise up wise and faithful workers everywhere.

O. N. Durant, Elkhart, Ind., writes:

"I hope and pray that I may be able to take the Cynosure as long as I live."

S. P. Reed, State Center, Ia., writes:

"I learned Masonry to the seventh degree from John Gilkey, in Mercer county, Pa., ten years before Morgan was killed. I was then a boy, but I still remember the abominable oaths, and am determined to do what I can to let every young man wherever I go, know what the institution is; then if they join they will do it with their eyes open. I am now old, but healthy and strong. You may depend on me as a subscriber for life. I intend to continue the war upon that wicked institution while I live. Go on in the glorious work you have begun."

C. A. Webb, Green Bush, Wis., writes:

"Greenbush supports a grange, an Odd-fellow's and Masonic lodge, and two churches. One Free Methodist and one Methodist Episcopal. Both of the elders belong to the Odd-fellows. . . This plea that ministers and church members can do more good in secret lodges than they can through the church of God, is an insult to the cause of Christ. May God speed the day when the church shall come out from the world."

J. C. Weidler, Boiling Springs, Pa., writes:

"I am feeling the need of the assistance the Christian Cynosure affords, more every day. May your light never go out."

J. H. Snyder, Westfield, Ill., writes:

"I am pleased to see the good cause gaining ground. Victory will come."

Samuel Gorton, Colon, Mich., writes:

"They like to read my paper, and, of course, I let them. But they have not courage to take it out of the office. A brother-in-law or cousin might sneer."

Jeremiah Chadwick, Smeethport, Pa., writes:

"God bless you and the cause you advocate. It is God's cause. My entire, moral being is enlisted in this reform; for I have two boys, adhering Masons. O the soul destroying power of the lodge! Intelligence, Masonry and Christianity cannot unite the same man. Christ and Belial cannot possess the heart at the same time. The Bible first; the Cynosure next. Thrice welcome thou weekly visitant."

A friend at Emporia, Kan., writes:

"Not long since the Presbyterian church, of this place, was the scene of another Masonic funeral. . . The pastor of the Congregational church here is a Master Mason and a granger. He is also Professor of Natural Sciences in the State Normal School here. We understand that he is not very enthusiastic on the subject of secrecy, but why does he belong? . . Spring opens in the Neosho Valley with rather cool weather, and but little provisions for man or beast in the country. Notwithstanding the backward spring, the scarcity of feed, and the almost entire failure of crops last year, there are numerous emigrants coming to the Neosho and the Kansas Valleys this year. Fall wheat promises well, and spring grains are being largely sown."

Frederick W. Arndt, Menasha, Wis., writes:

"I expect to take hold of this work as I never have done; for it is my duty. O the blessing of God, how it inspires us to fight! I know God is for us, and we need not fear."

Arthur Robinson, Indianapolis, Ind., writes:

"The Cynosure is especially valuable for its religious conservatism. The Gospel of Christ, unaffected by modern progress, so-called, is the polar star, kept in view by the editor of the Cynosure. This, combined with an unwavering opposition to Jesuitism, Freemasonry, the American Protestant Association, and kindred orders, makes the paper, in my estimation, the best in the world."

Alfred Cowley, Polo, Mo., writes:

"I have put the paper into the hands of several persons, and they all seem to be very well pleased with it, but times are very hard. We have had poor crops for the two past years, and it is about all that a good many of us can do to keep the wolf from our doors."

J. B. Stinespring, Newton's Retreat, Ind., writes:

"I am surrounded by grangers, but I am giving them the Cynosure to read, and I think some of them will take your paper. There was another secret society organized here called the Independent Champion. Can you tell us anything about them? . . By the help of your paper and books, I have succeeded in getting one young man to forsake the Odd-fellows, and to several who were going to join, I have given the "Phelps" book to read; and by so doing save them from being trapped."

We never heard of the secret order you mention.

Mrs. Coffman, Logan, Ill., writes:

"We love the spirit of your excellent paper."

Austin Birhard, Fayetteville, Vt., writes:

"I fought my battle with Masonry between forty and fifty years ago; but now I am too old and too infirm either to fight or run. Nevertheless, I am willing to do what I can to encourage you, and those acting with you, to prosecute your noble enterprise in checking and putting down, if possible, the accursed thing. . . . I think you did well to publish the address of Hon. Z. Eastman, on Gerrit Smith, as all Vermont Anti-masons had an excellent opinion of Mr. Smith; and some of us count Mr. Eastman as a valued friend."

H. S. Riegel, Auburn, Ill., writes:

"I love the principles that are advocated in the Christian Cynosure. I pray that God will continue to bless you in your noble efforts until universal success shall crown them."

Joel Langton, Ilion, N. Y., writes:

"I came in contact with Masonry in the Methodist Episcopal church. I am now a Free Methodist. My doctrine is that no man can be a Bible Christian and a Mason at the same time. I read the papers and then send them about the country for others to read. I have come to the point in my history that I do not care to hear any man attempt to preach the Gospel who is a Mason. I propose to cut loose from all these entanglements. I am a free man in Christ."

Z. Bishop, Erhard, O., writes:

"I do not wish to lose any paper containing the articles on the grange, as I hope to deter several of my young friends from joining that secret society by it. Is it reliable? If it is it is worth a year's subscription."

The truth of the Grange Exposition which we are publishing has been testified to by one seceding granger, and we know it is correct; also from official documents which we hold.

C. H. Welsh, Degraff, O., writes:

"I have had good success in canvassing (for the Cynosure) so far. (He has secured seventeen subscriptions.) . . . I love to oppose secrecy in every shape and form."

The Sabbath School.

Lesson for May 9, 1875.—Ruth and Naomi.

SCRIPTURE.—Ruth i. 16-22. Commit 16-18; Primary Verse, 16.

16 And Ruth said, Entreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee: for whither thou goest I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God:

17 Where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried: the Lord do so to me, and more also, if aught but death part thee and me.

18 When she saw that she was steadfastly minded to go with her, then she left speaking unto her.

19 So they two went until they came to Bethlehem. And it came to pass when they were come to Bethlehem, that all the city was moved about them, and they said, Is this Naomi?

20 And she said unto them, Call me not Naomi, call me Mara: for the Almighty hath dealt very bitterly with me.

21 I went out full, and the Lord hath brought me home again empty; why then call me Naomi, seeing the Lord hath testified against me, and the Almighty hath afflicted me?

52 So Naomi returned, and Ruth the Moabitess, her daughter-in-law, with her, which returned out of the country of Moab: and they came to Bethlehem in the beginning of barley harvest.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God."—RUTH i. 16.

TOPIC.—"The last shall be first."

HOME READINGS.

M. Ruth 1: 1-22. Naomi Changed into Mara.
T. Ruth 2: 1-23. The Generous Landlord and the Humble Gleaner.
W. Ruth 3: 1-18. The Meeting of Piety and Innocence.
Th. Ruth 4: 1-22. Unselfish Love Rewarded.
F. 2K. 2: 1-15. Elisha's Persevering Devotion.
S. Luke 14: 26-33. The Forsaking of All.
S. Matt. 19: 16-30. The Hundred-fold Reward.

SIDE-LIGHT TRUTHS.

1.—What potent power there is in unselfish love. It is the one on which God relies to overcome the world. Jer. 31. 3; John 3. 6; 6. 44; 12. 32; Rom. 5. 7, 8, 18; Eph. 2. 4, 5; Jas. 2. 8.

2.—The lesson of humility—hard for the world to learn, but indispensable for the Christian. Matt. 11. 29; 18. 4; 20. 26, 27; 23. 11, 12; Mark 9. 35; 10. 42–45; Luke 22. 25–27; John 13. 14, 15; Phil. 2. 3–9. Heb. 5. 8; 1 Pet. 5. 3.

3.—In ten years "Naomi" was changed into "Mara." We should put our trust and our comfort in something better than earthly riches that so readily vanish away. Job. 1. 14–17; Prov. 23. 5; Matt. 6. 20; Luke 12. 33; Col. 3. 1–4; 1 Tim. 6. 9, 10, 17; Heb. 10. 34; Jas. 5. 2, 3.

4.—The care of the poor is to us a sacred legacy. As Bishop Hall says: "If the rich can exchange their alms with the poor for blessings, they have no cause to complain of an ill bargain." Deut. 15. 7–11; Job. 29, 11–16; Ps. 41. 1; Prov. 14. 21; 19. 17; 28. 27; Is. 58. 10, 11; Matt. 25. 40; Luke 14. 13, 14; Acts 20. 35; 2 Cor. 8. 9.

5.—What a bargain Ruth made! She gave up her country and her gods for a home in Israel, a glorious immortality here and hereafter, and a place in the royal line of Christ. She bargained idols for Jehovah, and rags for royalty—a bargain repeated every time that a sinner exchanges his sins for Christ's salvation. Is. 52. 3; 55. 1, 2; Ps. 49. 7, 8; Prov. 3. 13–17; Matt. 16. 26; 13. 44; Luke 9. 35; Eph. 2. 8; 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19; Rev. 3. 17.—Natl. S. S. Teacher.

Forty Years Ago.

An Able Argument for Free Inquiry.

A discourse at Woodstock, Conn., Sept. 11, 1829, by Daniel Dow, Pastor of the church in Thompson.

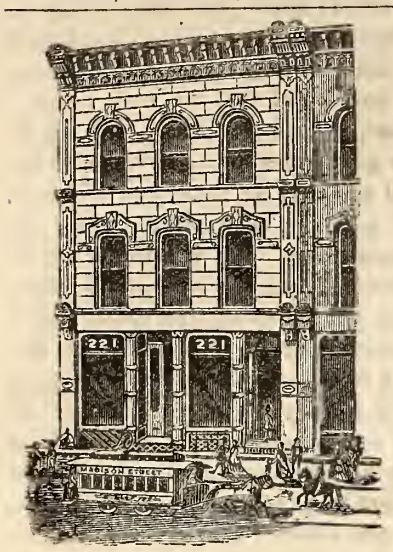
[CONCLUDED.]

But in what manner should the inquiry be made?

1. With the greatest impartiality. There should be no desire on the one hand to find guilt where there is none, nor on the other hand to cover over iniquity and to justify it when it becomes manifest. Evidence alone is to be looked at, and all personal animosities, and favor and all affection, should here be out of sight, and if possible out of remembrance.

2. The inquiry should be made with much prayerfulness. The subject, whatever it may be in itself, is likely to be attended with vast consequences. It has a great bearing, not only upon individual character, but upon the interests of the civil community, and, what is of still higher consideration, upon the interests of Zion. We are not without a hope that the agitation which it produces will terminate in the greater purity of the church, and the greater extension of the Redeemer's kingdom. But it may be for the fall, and for the rising again of many in Israel. What great changes it may produce it is impossible for us to foretell. Surely, then, an inquiry of this kind should not be entered upon without a solemn sense of the important consequences which may be depending, and without looking to God for that wisdom which comes from above, which is always profitable to direct, but especially needful on occasions so momentous.

3. The inquiry should be conducted with decorum. The man who has truth on his side will eventually prevail. If the vision tarry long, in the end it will speak. And it is the truth itself, when clearly discerned, that must produce the desired effect. Let all, therefore, who think they have truth on their side, remember that the weapons of their warfare should be spiritual and not carnal. Leave all noise, and clamor, and reveling, and evil speaking, to them who have the wrong side of the question. "The wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated; full of mercy and good gifts, without partiality, and without hypocrisy."



4. The inquiry should be made with a sincere desire that such as are in darkness, may be enlightened, and come to the knowledge of the truth. Merely to have it said that we have carried a point, or gained a victory, will do little good either to ourselves or others. All this may be done, and still both we and they may remain under the power of sin. But if a sinner can be converted from the error of his way, a soul will be saved from death, and a multitude of sins be covered, and that in a far better way than the covering over iniquity without repentance. In all our investigations, then, and in all our endeavors to enlighten others, we ought to be actuated, and if possible, to give evidence that we are actuated, by a sincere desire to promote their best interest by convincing them of sin and error. Feeling thus, if we are not successful, we shall mourn in secret places, and spread their case before God. And if we are instrumental of doing any good, we shall still walk humbly and give the glory to the Lord. O what joy would there be in heaven if all they who are perishing with famine in this strange land, were to come to themselves, and like the penitent prodigal, form the resolution to return to their heavenly Father's house, where there is bread enough and to spare!

5. The inquiry should be made under a solemn sense of the judgment day approaching. All may rest assured, that if there be any works done in secret, they will then be brought to light. And if we ourselves are influenced by any impropor motives, the secrets of our hearts will then be laid open. Should we not, therefore, even now, anticipate the feelings we shall then have, in the review of all that we have ever done, and the eternal consequences which will follow from it, both to ourselves and our fellow-sinners. Brethren, let us all remember, and endeavor to realize that the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.

The right which free citizens have to assemble, to inquire, and to debate upon whatever concerns their interest in this land of liberty, is not to be called in question. But it is to be desired, and it is to be hoped, that all the transactions of this day will be so conducted as that you will not be afraid to have them re-examined (as re-examined they certainly will be), nor feel dissatisfied yourselves with the future recollection of them. Let truth be your object—let universal benevolence inspire your hearts. Walk as children of the light and of the day, and endeavor to commend yourselves to the approbation of your God, and to the consciences of your fellow-men. "Let all thing be done decently, and in order. Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." Under these restrictions, "If ye will inquire, inquire ye."

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 29, 1875.

THE CARPENTER DONATION.

The above is a front view of the fine stone-front building on Madison street, Chicago, which Mr. Carpenter proposes to give the National Christian Association for head-quarters and publishing house. Ten thousand dollars secures the occupation, and the Association hopes to raise this sum by June 10th next; and $20.000 as soon thereafter as possible to secure the ownership. Send on contributions.

Is Gen. Grant Drunk Again?—The papers tell us that he, with the members of his cabinet are to attend the popish Cardinal McCloskey's inauguration! His patronizing personal attendance on jocky-club horse-racing was neither elevated nor Christian, but if he shall attend and make his high office part of a popish pageant, it is sinister and ominous.

A Beautiful Little Book.—Messrs. E. A. Cook & Co., have just out a "Brief History of the National Christian Association" which is to be an epoch in our cause. It contains a beautiful picture of the Carpenter building with the name of the street "Madison," a street car in front, and the street number, 221, over the door. It is a neatly printed and clear-spoken pamphlet, of about fifty pages, and contains the delicate, clear ring of Mrs. M. E. Cook's pen. It contains a tabular view of our general conventions; brief history of the National Association; our political platform, of which Prof. Sloane said, in the Christian Statesman, that it was the 'best ever put before the American people;' the Carpenter donation; the inauguration of the Christian Cynosure; condensed testimonies of religious bodies vs. secret orders; Dea. S. Town's address to the pulpit on the subject; table of pastors and churches in the reform; brief opinions of eminent men on the same subject; our article of incorporation; by-laws; table of State conventions, and State associations; list of auxiliaries and form of bequest for those who wish to remember the cause in their wills.

This book is the diamond ediiton of our cause, and should be circulated by thousands on thousands. The time will come, if our Republic stands, when it will be treasured as a relic and perused through tears by the children of those whose names it contains, and who are now embarked in this movement for life of our land and the glory of our God and Saviour Jesus Christ. It will be afforded by the hundred at the low price of $8.00; $1.50 per doz.; 25 cts. each.

Another Book.—We have just received from the Author, Rev. Wm. B. Orvis, his volume "Ritualism Dethroned." It bears in its table of contents the works of the writer's earnestness, who states his object to be, "To aid in lessening the too frequent and too manifest idolatrous attachment to rituals, and in the re-enthronement of Christ." The burden of the book is to answer the question, "What is Christian Baptism?" to answer which he travels down the ages of church history. Published by Henry Longstreth, 738 Sansom St., Philadelphia.

SECTARIANISM.

Our good friend, Daniel Countryman, writes us, sending a letter of Rev. I. E. Carey (Presbyterian) on Sectarianism, and asks a frank expression of the Cynosure's opinion which we proceed to give:—And

First, Mr. Countryman does us an unintentional injustice by putting us on a level with the Church Union, whose editor lauded and be-praised Freemasonry, the vilest, or among the vilest sects on earth; one that swears its members to have their throats cut if they violate its sectarian laws or rules. On the contrary, the Cynosure never has advocated sectarianism, but disapproves of it.

Secondly, we dislike Rev. Mr. Carey's letter, which our brother sends us, because this letter itself advocates sectarianism! Thus, Mr. Carey recommends: "As a first step, the merging of a church of one name into that of another name, as Presbyterian into Methodist or Congregational, or Congregational into Baptist, or vice versa."

Now we, for years, have belonged to a church which has no name but "The Church of Christ." Such is The First Church of Christ in Galesburgh, to which we belonged before coming to Wheaton; and we here belong to a church which refuses to be called "Congregational," "Methodist," or by any sectarian designation. And we have suffered reproach for this our anti-sectarian position. True, Mr. Carey recommends this joining churches under sectarian names, only as a "first step," and advocates "bringing Christians together under one new name and polity." What that "new name and polity" are to be he does not inform us. But when he has got his "new name and polity" started it will be only repetition to the weak contrivance of another sect whose creed is that there shall be no sects. This has been tried and failed again and again. Besides, as Mr. Carey advocates joining churches with sectarian names "as a first step," he of course, believes Christians can belong to such Methodist, Baptist, and Congregational churches without sin; otherwise he would not advise us to join such churches "as a first step!" Our friend Mr. Countryman writes us he would not join such a church sooner than he would join a lodge! Yet Mr. Carey advices that very thing "as a first step." Of course he differs with Mr. Carey, and agrees with us who have for twenty years refused to belong to any but a "Church of Jesus Christ." Meantime, we do not, as Mr. Carey does not, unchurch those brethren who do not see this matter as we do.

Then we fear Mr. Carey's "broad basis" church will be like the Church Union's, "a broad-gauge" church, and take in Freemasons and other deists. A church made by dropping all that the sects would object to would be like the husband with two wives. The old wife pulled out his brown hairs to make him look like her; and the young one pulled out the white hairs to make him look like her; so the poor man had soon not a hair left in his head! The only way to destroy sectarianism is to do as we do, cleave to Christ and his church and cast out everything which he has not put into it.

THE MATTER WITH ITALY.

The Chicago Times, whose editor gets persecuted for libel and put in jail for contempt of court, is one of those prints which aspires to be so bad that it can publish good things without being condemned for it, as the quarrelsome negro did not wish the Lord to take him to be in earnest in his prayers. See how the Times' editor handles without gloves that other curse of poor Italy which seeks to supplant popery by itself, and so substitute Protestant Jesuitism instead of Papal. This is what he says:

"The baneful operation of secret political societies was shown in the recent murder of Sonzogno, the Roman editor. Shortly after the entry of the Italians into Rome a secret society was formed in Trastevere, of which Luciani and Sonzogno were members. It had the old-time name of "Carbonari," and one of its old laws, namely that any member opposing the will of the society to gratify a private feeling shall die. Last fall Luciani was put forward as the Carbonari candidate for Parliament. The lodge was overwhelmingly in favor of his nomination. But Sonzogno having discovered that Luciani was his wife's paramour, he became his bitter and open enemy. During the canvass Sonzogno's paper, the Capitale, opposed Luciani's election with all the power at its disposal. A meeting of the lodge was held to consider the editor's conduct, and he was sentenced to death for opposing private vengeance to the will of the society. His assassin was elected by lots, and the choice fell upon Pio Frezza, whose poniard went straight to Sonzogno's heart. Pio was simply the agent of the society, for he did not know Luciani even by sight. Twenty-one persons have been arrested to await trial, and are in solitary confinement."

EVANGELISTS AND PENNY-A-LINERS.

"Many shall run too and fro and knowledge shall be increased," is the type of the latter day preaching given by prophesy. During that time in church history when religious teaching was almost confined to an educated and ordained ministry, "the Satanic press" used to brand revivals as the work of professional and selfish clergymen. But now that Moody, Sankey, Whittle, Varley, Hammond and others, are "scattered abroad" like New Testament disciples and go everywhere, preaching the Word;" and, as then, converts begin to be counted by the thousands, some papers, like the New York Tribune and San Francisco Chronicle, hitherto professing decency, have let loose an army of dissipated and vagabond reporters who vilify and throw mud on these religious movements by their garbled reports, and false colorings.

This shoal of adventurers whose home is where they stop last, and whose irresponsibility for what they write make them waterproof, contrive to caricature and malign some of the best and most popular religious movements of the age, those which are the most democratic and farthest remote from sectarianism or the interest and spirit of caste. It is the malignant spirit of the world against Christ. And it is curious to note how these literary birds of passage fawn on and flatter Jesuits, priests, and their broad-gauge Protestant backers, while they light like flesh-flies on honest, earnest men like Moody, who go forth, like the Judean stripling, naked and without ecclesiastical armor to turn their fellow-men to Christ. The only remedy for this wholesale burlesque and blackening of good men, is to hold papers responsible for their correspondence, and drop all which employ this class of writers without character, whose one merit is a brilliant paragraph. In no other way can the reading public be sure that they are not imposed upon; and that the streams of daily intelligence are not polluted by the minds through which they flow.

NOTES.

—Attention is again called to the matter of rail-road fare to the Anniversary convention at Pittsburgh, June 8th to 10th. There is little or no probability of a general reduction of rates, but it is understood that ten or more tickets from Chicago can be had for $16, go and return. Friends going or returning this way should take the benefit of this arrangement; and to make sure should send their names to the Corresponding Secretary at this office before June 5th.

—The present number closes the series of articles by Rev. W. W. Knipple, detailing the malicious attacks upon his character, as a minister of the United Brethren church faithful to her discipline. They are a strong proof of a conspiracy of the lodge against that godly people, and there is not wanting other corroborating evidence. When Rev. J. T. Kiggins entered on the lecture work, a similar conspiracy, and by some of the same parties, was undertaken to break down his character. Our correspondence with Rev. A. Rose satisfied us on this point. How this league succeeded Bro. Kiggins told us last week. Rose and Warner, and others whose names are dishonorably connected with this latter case are strong supporters of the Masonic United Brethren Tribune, and Rose even aspires to the office of bishop in a church whose life-long principles he belies.

—The centennial of the Pennsylvania Anti-slavery Society was held on the 14th in Philadelphia. Addresses were made by Vice-president Wilson, William Elder, Frederick Douglas, Lucretia Mott, Abby Kelly Foster and others. The last named made a bitter attack on the honor of Abraham Lincoln in connection with the abolition of slavery. Mr. Wilson replied with courtesy and great force, showing the action of Lincoln and Seward to have been patriotic and the best planned for the entire overthrow of the slave system. We notice that Rev. A. L. Post, the well-known and earnest worker in our later reform was present from Montrose, in Susquehanna county.

—Especial attention is asked this week to the Publisher's Department. Some matters are there given which are prepared, not for part, as is expected of some other departments, but for all our readers.

—We should be glad to make additions, especially of later date to the Baptist testimony on the 2nd page. The Free-will Baptists, through David Marks and some of their conferences, have shown their judgment of the lodge anti-Christ, especially in Michigan and Pennsylvania. The Seventh-day Baptists also are well-known in their position, but we do not now recall any conference action against the lodge. The single churches in Cheshire, Mass., and in Zebo, Henry county, Mo., have taken a firm and noble stand recently and their record has been published. Let us have "more light" on this subject.

—While this matter is in mind let our numerous Biptist friends remember the request of Bro. W. W. Ames of Menomonie, Dunn Co., Wis., whose church, the First Baptist, is organized on the basis of opposition to the "orders." He desires information from all similar churches in regard to their location, membership, relative social strength and present standing of the church to this testimony.

—Mention has been made of an attempted falsification of history by the Messrs. Appletons in their new Cyclopedia in regard to Jesuitism, and the present sent them by the Pope. At a grand wedding of a daughter of one of the firm lately, Cardinal McClosky performed the ceremony.

—At the recent Masonic exposition in Chicago by Mr. E. Ronayne, Past Master, the Tribune reporter present was a Mason whom Mr. Ronayne had himself initiated. The report, what there was of it, was naturally written in a "nervous" style. Mr. Ronayne expects to repeat the exposition ere long n different parts of the city, and will if desired present the same to audiences in the country. He has also issued a challenge to the fraternity through the city papers to meet him in debate.

—Freemasonry is not yet through with its support of French communists. It spread its banners and signs on the walls of Paris for them, and now it is reported that the governor of the New Caledonia French colony has been instructed by McMahon to crush out Freemasonry, and several eminent merchants have been sent to France, on suspicion of being either Freemasons or communistic friends of Rochefort.

—The Herald and Presbyter thinks that by proscribing the Good Templars the Romish bishops of England are opposed to temperance. They may be, but this action does not prove it. The Good Templar organization has a dual nature. It has a set of rites of a religious nature to go through, and if any time or disposition is left, may do something for temperance. The action of the papists is just as if Cincinnati Presbytery should forbid active Romanists from its churches.

—Numerous readers will be interested to learn of the celebration of the 90th birthday of Dr. Jacob Ide, the staunch reformer and senior pastor of the Second Congregational Church at West Medway, Mass., which was observed on Monday, the 29th ult, by a gathering of his friends and parishoners at the church, where appropriate exercises were held.

Quarterly Report of Agents.

During the quarter ending April 1st, 1875, the General Agent, Rev. J. P. Stoddard, has been in labors very abundant. In January he was in Ohio assisting Rev. D. S. Caldwell and arranging for the Mansfield Convention. His labors for this meeting were great, and the effect of the meeting was powerful. As one of the delegates who attended it remarked, "It was glorious." In February he attended a good State meeting in Wisconsin and commenced his efforts towards securing $30,000 for the Publishing house. In March he attended a State meeting in Iowa and one in Michigan, traveling 1,529 miles. During the quarter he delivered twenty-nine lectures. Raised in cash and notes $2,292.73. Obtained twenty-five subscriptions for the Cynosure, and reports two new State organizations, one in Iowa and one in Michigan. He has spent his whole time in Association work. Expenses for traveling, etc., $156.48. Total amount due, $406.48. Balance yet unpaid, $87.50. Mr. Stoddard finds it expensive to travel from place to place soliciting funds, but when we remember that he has raised $2,292.73, we cannot but say "well done."

Rev. J. T. Kiggins, State Agent for Indiana, reports seventy-four days spent in Association work. Fifty-eight meetings attended. Thirty-nine lectures delivered. Total expenses, $19.35. Total amount due $120.63. Cash collected $59.75, $60.88 still due, ($25.00 of which has been borrowed and must be returned.) Three 1-4 Cynosure subscriptions reported. Mr. Kiggins has been re-writing his lectures and starts out on the new quarter's work in health and courage. We ask the people of Indiana to rally to his assistance by preparing the way for him to lecture, by contributing to his support and that of the cause for which he labors, and also by their counsels and prayers. State Agent for Illinois, Rev. H. H. Hinman, has had sickness to struggle with, but still reports forty-three days work done, twenty-eight lectures delivered, twenty-eight meetings attended. Eleven Cynosure subscriptions obtained, $44.38 cash collected, $28.20 expenses. Total amount due $121 84, all of which has been paid.

Rev. D. S. Caldwell, State Agent for Ohio, reports all the quarter spent in work except three weeks during which he was sick. $25.00 cash collected, but has not reported farther.

Rev. J. L. Barlow, State Agent for New York, reports 47 lectures during the quarter. Expenses $41.02, cash received, $143.56. One or two Cynosure subscriptions. One town organization at Spencer which promises well. Another at Perry. (Will the secretaries of these organizations please send us their address for record?)

Let us hear from other State agents.

Mr. Stoddard has been at work in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin and Michigan. Mr. Kiggins in Defiance, Ohio, Waterloo, Columbia City, and Larwill, Indiana. Mr. Hinman in the counties of Livingston, Iroquois, Vermillion, Champaign and Jo Daviess, in the towns of Chebanse, Warren, Stockton, Elizabeth, Chelsea, Rush, and Scales Mound. Mr. Barlow in the counties of Clinton, Franklin, St. Lawrence, and Tioga, in Rochester, Perry, Batavia, and Warsaw.

We hope the agents and friends will do all in their power to make our National Convention at Pittsburgh a success. The weather of the present quarter will doubtless be more agreeable than that of the last, and we hope through all its swift flying moments the Anti-masonic army will press on to battle against the powers of darkness for God and for their country.

C. A. Blanchard,
Cor. Sec'y N. C. A.

Chicago, April 20, 1875.

Religious Intelligence.

—At a meeting of Unitarians in Liverpool the chairman spoke approvingly of the movement of Moody and Sankey, and said the evangelists had done more in a month than the Unitarians had done in ten years towards elevating the people. The remark was applauded.

—Some rather startling proofs of the progress of ritualism in London and the suburbs may be gathered from "Mackeson's Guide." It appears from the data given by this publication that Eucharistic vestments are now worn in thirty-six churches against thirty in 1874, incense is burnt in seventeen churches against fourteen last year, and altar candles for ceremonial purposes in fifty-three against thirty-six churches.

—The Danish Lutheran church in America is growing rapidly. Churches have been established in many places in the East, as well as in the West. Last year she counted twelve churches and six ministers. Now she counts twenty-six churches and nine ministers, and 1,600 communicants.

—There is a great work of grace going on in Savannah, Atlanta, Augusta, and many of the smaller cities and towns of Georgia. The daily prayer-meetings in the Presbyterian, Methodist, and Baptist churches of Augusta are crowded, and large numbers have been enrolled on profession in all these churches.

—The Baptists of Pennsylvania propose to celebrate the national centennial year by an offering to the cause of Christian education. They ask $75,000 for the Institution at Mt. Pleasant, and $100,000 for the one at Jefferson, and $500,000 for the University at Lewisburg.

—The aggregate force of all boards and societies in Japan is but one ordained missionary for each million of people.

—In and around the city of Madura, India, there are at least forty church-members who consider it a privilege to go out to the heathen, and preach the Gospel every Sabbath afternoon.

Notices.

The National Christian Association.

President.—B. T. Roberts, Rochester, N. Y.

Directors.—Philo Carpenter, J. Blanchard, A. Wait, I. A. Hart, C. R. Hagerty, E. A. Cook, J. G. Terrill, O. F. Lumry. J. M. Wallace, Isaac Preston, Wm. Pinkney.

Corresponding Secretary.—C. A. Blanchard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Recording Secretary and Treasurer.—H. L. Kellogg, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

General Agent and Lecturer.—J. P. Stoddard, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Auditor.—H. A. Fischer.

Object.—"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, andother anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved; to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

Life membership, $10.00; annual do, 25 cents. The names of members and general correspondence of the Association should be sent to the Corresponding Secretary. To carry on the increasing and successful lecture work by agents in different States and for promoting the general work of the Association donations of any amount are solicited from all friends of the reform. All donations or bequests should be sent to the Treasurer.

The Corresponding Secretary or his assistant may be seen at the Cynosure office from 9 to 11 A. M.

The Seventh Anniversary of the National Christian Association will be held in the City of Pittsburgh, Pa., June 8th to 10th, 1875.

Western New York.

Elder Barlow, State Agent, is expected in Chautauqua and Cattaraugus counties, beginning about the first of May and continuing through the month. Friends in these counties wishing lectures will write to J. B. Nessell, Cor. Sec'y of the Chaut. county Association, and arrangements will be made to facilitate the work and save needless travel.

Rev. H. H. Hinman, the Illinois State Agent, is expecting to start about the twenty-fifth of May for the National meeting at Pittsburgh. He desires to accommodate friends on or near the route which he will take, probably the Pittsburgh and Ft. Wayne, with lectures, and by this means also to pay his expenses to and from Pittsburgh. Are there not friends in the counties of Lake, Marshall and Whitley in Indiana, and in VanWert, Allen, Crawford, Stark and Columbina counties in Ohio, who would be glad to secure the services of Mr. Hinman either on his way to the Convention or on his return, for one or more lectures against Freemasonry and kindred orders? As these counties are on his route the expense of such lectures would be much less than under less favorable circumstances. Let us hear from friends in Hobart, Plymouth, Bourbon and Larwill, Indiana, and from VanWert, Delphos, Elida, Bucyrus, Canton, Salem, Leetonia, and Columbiana, Ohio, on this subject. Consult with friends, see what arrangements can be made, and write to C. A. Blanchard, Cor. Sec'y N. C. A.
13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

The Home Circle.

The Peaceful Mind.

Dear Lord and Father of mankind,
Forgive our feverish ways;
Reclothe us in our rightful mind;
In purer lives thy service find,
In deeper reverence, praise.

Oh Sabbath rest by Galilee!
Oh calm of hills above!
Where Jesus knelt to share with thee
The silence of eternity
Interpreted by love!

With that deep hush subduing all
Our words and works that drown
The tender whisper of thy call,
As noiseless let thy blessings fall
As fell thy manna down.

Drop thy still dews of quietness
Till all our strivings cease;
Take from our souls the strain and stress,
And let our ordered lives confess
The beauty of thy peace.

Breathe through the pulses of desire
Thy coolness and thy balm;
Let sense be dumb—its heats expire;
Speak through the earthquake, wind and fire,
Oh still, small voice of calm!

—Whittier.

The Highlands of Edom.

At the southeastern border of Palestine is a well-defined region, always historically connected with the chosen people. It is a mountainous tract extending north from the Gulf of Akaba to the Dead Sea, bounded on the east by the great desert, and on the west by the long deep trench called the Arabah, the southern continuation of the Jordan Valley. It takes its name from "Esau, the father of the Edomites," who, we are told, (Gen. xxxii. 6) went off with his family and retainers, and property, and took forcible possession of Mount Seir, driving out the Horites (cave-dwellers) who were the original inhabitants. Here his descendants remained for centuries undisturbed, Moses not being allowed to cross their territory on his way with Israel to the promised land. Long after this, the divine prohibition was removed, for we find Edom subdued and made tributary by David and several of his successors. But subsequently they threw off the yoke and became independent, in which condition they were found by Nebuchadnezzar, with whom they co-operated in the overthrow of Jerusalem. In this they appear to have shown peculiar bitterness and ferocity, to which repeated reference is made in the Scripture. Afterwards they spread out over the Negeb or South country of Palestine, and their original territory was occupied by descendants of Nebaioth (Esau's brother-in-law), who founded a little kingdom called by the Romans Arabia Petraea, which subsisted until the Mohammedan conquest, soon after which all became desolate.

The modern traveler, under the escort of a certain Bedouin Sheik, can now traverse this entire region from end to end, but no one ever makes the journey without being filled with wonder. Edom is mountainous, or rather a series of mountains, covering a territory from twenty to twenty-five miles in breadth, but these are intersected in all directions, but mainly north and south, by wide valleys; sometimes opening out into extensive plains. For the first day or two's march, a man must content himself with the execrable water of Akaba, but after that, springs are found in abundance; grass and small patches of grain are not unfrequent; traces of old terraces are seen on the hillsides; heaps of squared stones indicate ancient settlements; and signs of former roads are easily discernible. But no houses are seen, no inhabitants encountered; all looks as waste and deserted as an untrodden wilderness in our own continent. After some day's journey the visitor arrives at the singular city of Petra (the Selah of Scripture) long lost from the knowledge of men, and only discovered and identified in the early part of this century. Here numerous dwellings are cut out of the rock. A natural basin in the mountains has been artificially enlarged until everywhere around it are houses, temples and even a theatre, excavated in the soft lime-stone. Here evidently lived a numerous people. The structures which still remain do not exhibit any noteworthy taste, but they show large resources and an advanced civilization in these successors of the ancient Troglodytes. Yet they have left none to take their places. Nobody lives in Petra, and the only use now made of these costly excavations is to pen sheep or goats. Various tribes of Bedouins are in the vicinity, but they live in tents, and apparently set no store by the rock-hewn city.

It is not easy to see or consider these wastes without recalling the words of the prophets. Take one instance from Jeremiah (xlix. 16):

"Thy terribleness hath deceived thee, the pride of thy heart, O thou that dwellest in the clefts of the rock, that holdest the height of the hill. Tho' thou shouldst make thy nest high as the eagle, I will bring thee down from thence and Edom shall become a desolation. As in the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah, saith the Lord, no man shall abide there."

Now it is true that these words were addressed not to the region itself but to its inhabitants; and these, the hereditary and bitter foes of the covenant people, ages ago met their deserved doom, and other races occupied their homes. Still it can hardly be accidental that these homes, the intermediate inhabitants having perished, should now present the picture they do of unrelieved solitude and decay; the land a desert for want of cultivation, the cities all in ruins, the castles hewn out of the solid rock dismantled and abandoned,—no hum of industry, no sign of traffic, thorns ooming up in the palaces, nettles and brambles in the fortresses, the only human inhabitant an occasional shepherd with his flock or a predatory Arab lying in wait for his foe. It surely seems as if God had stamped his judgment upon the very ground to remind men in all coming time of the fearful wages of sin.

The Edomites, in their spite and bitterness against the people of God, stood pre-eminent among the nations, and hence are fit representatives of all the Lord's foes. As such they are repeatedly set forth by Isaiah, especially in the grand dramatic passage where the prophet sees the conqueror coming back from the conflict, his raiment dripping with the blood of the foe:

"Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah, this that is glorious in his apparel, traveling in the greatness of his strength? I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save. Wherefore art thou red in thine apparel, and thy garments like one that treadeth in a wine-press? I trod the wine-press alone, and of the nations there was not a man with me."

Edom and Bozrah were thus trodden beneath the feet of God as a righteous avenger. And the proper impression to be made by a sight of the gloomy solitudes which stretch from Akaba to the Dead Sea is not, what great sinners were these children of Esau; but, how surely shall all sinners, all oppressors of God, be overthrown, no matter what their numbers, or wisdom, or resources; nay, even though they set their nests as high as an eagle's eyrie, or rise to be among the stars. (Obad. 4.) There is no natural physical reason why this land should lie waste. Its soil might be made to support a dense population, solid highways like those of old Rome might traverse its vallies, and long caravans carry back and forth, as in ancient days, the products of the East and the West. Ships, too, might proceed from the Gulf of Akaba as they do from Suez, and divert in this direction the great India trade. Nothing in the necessary condition of the country hinders such a restoration. Yet it is not attempted, not even dreamed of. Trade, culture, capital, social institutions all have gone, seemingly never to return. And there lies the land, with its hills and vallies, its monuments and ruins, its past memories and present desolation, a living witness to the truth of God's Word, and a memorial of his righteous judgment.—N. Y. Observer.

Watch!

How startling the word! and how important and reasonable. The Master foresaw all our dangers—all the snares throughout our pilgrimage. Yea, he went through and overcame them all. And now the privilege he grants to us is, that we may look unto him when thus exposed. He left us "an example, that we should follow his steps." But we must watch, or discern those steps, and this may be done by studying his Word. To be well guarded against all the devices of Satan, we cannot be too thoroughly acquainted with the Bible. It is "a lamp" to the pilgrim's feet, and "the entrance" of it into our hearts "giveth light." "Whatsoever maketh manifest is light;" the Word of God does this—shows us the nature of our enemy—exposes all the snares laid for our feet, and tells us how we may escape the corruption that is in the world through lust. If, then, we watch the Saviour's steps with a submissive heart, we shall see and overcome the evil; our defense will be prepared, both in answers of wisdom to the gainsayer, and in the thoughts of our minds.

With a vigilant eye, decision of character is also indispensable. For, though a man may see evil before him, and be on his guard, yet if he is not fully decided, he will be likely to fall by the hand of his enemy.

We are to look diligently "lest any root of bitterness springing up" we may get into trouble. We are to "follow peace with all men," "if it be possible."

We are to "take heed" that we are not "overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness;" that is, we are to eat and drink temperately, "with gladness and singleness of heart," "giving thanks to the Lord."

Also, we are to guard against being overburdened with riches, and "cares of the world." What will a practical watching do to avert this evil? To prevent our becoming "very rich," and having "great possessions," we can, we must, we will if we are truly God's children, be ready to distribute" among the poor we have always with us. "Sow bountifully." By thus disposing of God's property, we keep our hearts warm, and the exercise of doing good keeps us awake. With the eye first on the benevolent Jesus, "who for our sakes became poor," and then on our fellow-men in want, seeking to relieve suffering anywhere, everywhere, we shall cheerfully embrace the many opportunities to do good.—Selected.

Superstitious Fears.

"There is no fear in love."—1 John iv. 18.

THE NEW MOON OVER THE LEFT SHOULDER.

It would be sad, were it not so laughable, to what extent certain small superstitions have power to make lives unhappy even in this ripe age. Three friends are walking on the street as the day goes down, a day fair, clear, with stars crowding the sunset. As they walk they talk, when one, gazing up to the western sky—the party were facing northward—exclaims: "Oh, the new moon!" seen, of course, over the left shoulder. You will actually find, and that too, in this late century, one of the party to exclaim: "Why did you call my attention for I saw it over my left shoulder, dread sign of ill-luck! Yet stay; I did not really see the moon, did I!" and, turning, the first (!) glimpse of the crescent is thus received over the right shoulder. You reply I make too much of a fancy; yet it cannot be denied that this old folly has power to confer momentary apprehension or assurance. Dear old simple-faced moon! rolling along in thy cheery, blundering way; peeping into windows, falling into nightly mirrors, thou hast caused more trouble down here on earth with bean patches and other planted fields, with sailors and girls and nervous sleepers more trouble than thou knowest!

UNLUCKY FRIDAY.

Here is another undoubted case. Friday is a day of ill omen. Who first said so can't be told, or why. It is necessary for some reason, suppose, to have the wedding on Friday. What dismay among the female friends of the bride! "Friday? Never!" "She'll be pursued by bad luck!" "Impossible!" "Friday indeed! I'd not be married on Friday if I"— And while the family are discussing, in comes Master Jack the youngest brother of the betrothed, bright, impertinent, fresh from the public school at noon—fourteen. "Grandma, what is the harm of Friday?" "Great harm, my child." "But, grandma, I read in the family record in the Bible how father wrote that sister Susie was born on Friday, April 6, 1852." "Child, child! why did you bring that to mind, when I am always trying to forget the tragic fact!" "But I read in a book that Columbus sailed on Friday, and on that day discovered America, that Washington was born on Friday, the first glorious Fourth of July was on Friday, Saratoga and Yorktown victories were on Friday! Hurrah, grandma, hurrah!" "Alas," bemoans the dear lady, "alas, they are teaching so much to the children nowdays that infidelity is coming in like a flood, and all the old landmarks will soon be gone!" In due time the wedding occurs and on Friday. Lo, it rains also! And this is the "bride's day," prognostic of her life-future! Tell me, out of fifty guests of the parlors, will not four at least go away shadowed by a sign, apprehensive for their young friend. And if by chance some accident or ill does come, will you deny me that these four clap hand to hand with exclamation, "There, married on Friday, and in the rain!" As if the great, good God, who rules this world all or rules it none, could allow one day any mystic power of evil.

DREAMS AND OMENS.

There are those who swear, "I know dreams prognosticate!" There are those who tremble if a hearse chances to stop before their door. Why stopped the hearse? The horse cast a shoe; the driver pulled him up to find it. And the great Father, who rules this world by a law of love, seeing indeed that sombre vehicle, must needs turn to the angel of death, commanding, "Go, therefore, Death, and take a child!" Why dreamed you a "bad dream!" Plum pudding at ten o'clock, night; and great Providence thus foretells sickness in your daughter's family in Chicago. Away! What can be more profane? Surely no oath. Therefore the true Christian uncovers himself, saying: "I so contemn and spit upon these all, that I do imprecate upon my devoted head every bad sign of the hag's art. If I could defy them all at once I would. My God loves me; I love him. He never speaks to me with dread presentiments nor with the snap of a piano string. He speaks by the book, by history, by reason, by the still, small voice."

THD SHOE-BLACK.

"Good evening, Mike." "You didn't guess right that time; Jim, sir, is my name. A shine?" "No, Jim, thanks; father and mother living?" "Don't know 'em sir?" "Ever go to school?" "Not I?" "Church?" "What's church?" Over the river he buys a pie at a low stand, and see, before he eats he crosses himself. "Jim, you told me a falsehood. Why you are a Roman Catholic—you crossed yourself." "Don't know what that is, sir, you call me, but I allus make that sign—it's ag'inst bad luck." All else of religion taught in infancy is gone but this lingering shred of fear. Further up the darker alley from Water street a pistol shot rings out; Jim crosses the street to the opposite side, and retreats upon a run. Why did he not turn in his tracks, retreating on the same side? "A sign, sir, of bad luck." Further up the alley—for, not having the money for Old Bowery and its play, he is going home; up five flights of crazy stairs, in an entry-way at the hall's further end, a dry goods box and straw; before he falls in for sleep he makes a bow to a picture on the night-shadowed wall. The bow is not the crossing genuflection of the Romanist. The picture is not the Virgin nor the Christ, nor the Pope, but an old colored campaign print of Gen. Fremont, which the boy once fished from an ash-barrel by an up-town curbstone. "Jim, why do you bow to that picture?" "It is ag'inst bad luck, sir." And with the watching stars of the good Unknown God looking in at the smutched window, he wraps himself in a religion, not of love, or of any sweet gratitude, but of fear, and sleeps. Go ask those beneficent workers with these gamin of the countless vagaries of "faith" found among them. The same thing is noticeable among ruffians. A burglar creeps towards your house—is half across the lawn—a cock crows! he stops, it is a sign in a religion of fear; or, before he starts upon his errand he tosses up a penny—"Heads I shall win, tails I shall lose," it is tails, and millions would not tempt him to the effort. Gamblers and lottery dealers are among the most "religiously" moved of men—the word of the fortune teller being to them an Elijah's voice.

THE YOUNG MAN.

"I am not a member of your church, yet I would have you understand I am not without religion; I pray." Yes, and the facts are these: the young man is far from home, among strangers, diptheria is prevalent, a fellow-clerk died with it, and another has recently been converted; but our friend is too hard of heart for that, though fearing to be utterly faithless, and hence prays. He repeats the Lord's prayer every night. It is not because he hungers after righteousness, nor loves to talk with Jesus his Saviour; but as a talisman it is used.

FREEMASONRY.

I know Freemasons, respect and value them; I know other similar organizations; and I know some men who embrace and accept these noble, moral [?] bonds, saying: "I dare not be without any religion, yet I cannot bow a mourner at prayer-meeting altars. Will not, O Lord, this fraternization do?" Are there no women who thus present their activity in mission schools, fairs for the church, benevolent societies, unwilling to bend as a "seeker," asking: "Lord, I fear to live utterly without feaity; will not these things do?"

I invite you into the liberty of love, out from the slavery of a fear which counts each prayer, and measures Bible reading by square inches.—Rev. E. J. Haynes in the Methodist.

Children's Corner.

The Verse-a-Day System.

"GIVE US THIS DAY OUR DAILY BREAD."

"Bread of our souls! whereon we feed;
True manna from on high!"

Little folks, do you commit a verse from the Holy Book daily; repeat it likewise at the table spread with heaven's bounties? How many verses will this be in one year? Three hundred and sixty-five? Yes, young friends, three hundred and sixty-five precious texts from the sacred volume, worth more to you, if hid in the heart, than so many gold eagles. Parents, what think you of this system. The responsibility of its success rests on you.

Says the Psalmist: "Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I sin not against thee."

The Bible is full of injunctions to parents to teach their children the Word of God. "Thou shalt teach them to thy children, lying down and rising up, in the house and on the way; line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little."

How important that the parent or teacher remember the injunction, "Search the Scriptures!"

"The commandment is a lamp and the law is a light;" imprint, then, upon the young mind, Bible truths to be hid in the heart, ready to be applied by the divine Spirit whenever temptation assails.

Infinite wisdom could devise no better protection for the morals of the young, no better means for the right formation of character than the early knowledge of his will.

This most important part of education every parent in a Christian land may so control as to be able to say, when his offspring arrive at maturity, "From childhood they have known the Holy Scriptures, which are able to make them wise unto salvation."

We love to think how many a child there is in our country who gets a verse by heart every day. We have seen all the children of a large family busy before breakfast. Every one had a Bible, a "Heavenly Manna," or the attractive little "Dew Drops," each of which have a verse for every day in the year.

When we went to the table, after their father had asked a blessing, all were quiet. The father said a verse; then the large boy at his right hand; then the tall girl that sat next to him; then the noble-looking lady at the corner; then the lady that sat at the head of the table; then the two little ones on our side of the table.

Little folks, is not this beautiful? Will you try the verse-a-day system?

"Blessed Bible, how we love it!
How it doth our bosom cheer!
What hath earth like this to covet?
Oh, what stores of wealth are here!"
—Author of "Home Thrusts."

A Letter for Our Corner.

CONSTABLEVILLE, N. Y.,
April 8, 1875.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I am only 12 years old, but I thought I would try to write to you. I think Masonry a very bad institution. I hope when the present generation of Masons are dead, there will be no more, because there are no children silly enough to join them. I like to read Elder Barlow's letters, because he lectured here two evenings. I have read the history of the abduction and murder of William Morgan, and I think the Masons are very wicked. I think they were very cruel to Elder Rathbun. I hope all the members who are dissatisfied with the order will have the courage to secede, and that the churches will receive no Masons. I read a piece in the Cynosure of some children telling which birds they liked best, and finding verses of Scripture about them. We tried last Sunday, and I send you the names of the birds I found, and some buried animals. Yours truly,

CORA M. FISK.

BIRDS.

Dove,	Gen. viii. 8.
Raven,	1 Kings xvii. 6.
Eagle,	Jer. iv. 13.
Owl,	Job xxx. 29.
Peacock,	" xxix. 13.
Hawk,	" xxix. 26.
Swan,	Deut. xiv. 16.
Stork,	" xiv. 18.
Pelican,	" xiv. 17.
Gier Eagle,	"
Cormorant,	"
Crane,	Isa. xxxviii. 14.
Swallow,	"
Turtle,	Jer. viii. 7.
Glede,	Deut. xiv. 15.
Kite,	"
Vulture,	"
Nighthawk,	"
Cuckoo,	"
Pigeon,	Lev. xii. 8.
Heron,	Deut. xiv. 18.
Lapwing,	"
Bat,	"
Ossifrage,	Deut. xiv. 12.
Ospray,	"

BURIED ANIMALS.

1. Is the queen bee larger than the rest?
2. Norah, Orsen and Ralph rode out.
3. Did Og, King of Bashan, live in Moses' time?
4. Was the city of Dembea very rich?
5. Morocco will always be in Africa.
6. Was Alexander at Persia or Macedon?
7. Was Rachel kind?
8. This is to Ada.
9. The Arab bit his lip.
10. Yes, he came, little girl.
11. They named the babe Arabella.
12. Is the Bishop ignorant of this?

CORA M. FISK.

NOTE.—Others of our little readers may like to write for their "Corner," and Cora has made a good beginning for them. We would be glad to print two or three short letters each week from them. The plan for Bible study is found in the Cynosure for March 25th. It is a very entertaining and useful way of studying the Bible. Cora has twenty-five birds. Who can find others? Our little friends may dig for the answers to her puzzle two weeks before we shall tell them what they are. THE EDITOR.

—When we shall live in that day, we shall look with wonder on one another, and say, "shame! that we were not of better cheer, braver and stronger, and more joyful to trust Christ, and to endure the cross and all tribulations and persecutions, since this glory is so great."

—Afflictions, like medicine, are few of them sweet, but all of them good.

An Open Letter to Men of Means.

Your are, no doubt, well aware that a sentiment averse to lodge principles and practices must be developed, cultivated, and in many instances created, before our reform can realize ultimate success. Such a sentiment, to be efficient must be based upon a right understanding of the nature and tendency of secretism. Thousands who are in sentiment opposed to the lodges, are so instinctively; and their opposition to the lodge is very inefficient, because based in the main upon prejudice.

What the masses need is

EN LIGHTENMENT.

For I am convinced that our people are, in the main, honest, and a knowledge of secretism is all they need to bring them against the myrmidons of night, in solid column.

To diffuse such a knowledge is not the work of the day, nor can it be accomplished without expense. Some of us have given ourselves to the work of the lecture-field, and are receiving constant evidence that this is one of God's chosen ways of spreading the truth, and arousing the sleepy public to action. But there is another mighty engine of successful agitation, the power of which I fear is too little appreciated by those who should use it to the downfall of Dagon. I allude to the Christian Cynosure. It is, without doubt, doing more to educate a thorough intelligent, and yet godly anti-lodge sentiment into the heads and hearts of the people than all the other means combined. And it ought to have a circulation of ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND copies.

But I address this letter to men of means, that is, men who feel that they have means, (however little) to invest in the cause of God's truth, because I see a field opened up, in which you may successfully labor.

In most of our larger towns there are public reading rooms, where scores of young men congregate to read and spend their evenings. Every reading room in America should have the Cynosure placed on its tables, to be read and discussed. It will, in most cases be gladly received, and would accomplish untold good. I visited the rooms in Richmond, and the paper was more than welcomed to their list of periodicals. But I sent it at my own expense. Now Indianapolis has a fine reading room in charge of "the Young Men's Christian Association." The superintendent desires the Cynosure on their tables,—but I am a poor man, and can't send it to more than one Now suppose we have a plan to supply all the reading rooms with the paper? Let the Corresponding Secretary see to getting the addresses of these rooms and furnishing them with the Cynosure, and let us send in to Ezra A. Cook & Co., the publishers, the funds to pay for it. What say you? Who will at once forward $2.00 for the reading rooms at Indianapolis? I am certain your means cannot be devoted to a nobler purpose. J. T. KIGGINS.

April 25th.

—See sixteenth page.

CIRCULAR TO PASTORS.

13 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, April, 1875.

DEAR SIR:

As you are probably aware, Dea. Philo Carpenter, of Chicago, has offered to give to the National Christian Association a building and lot, well located in the city of Chicago, on condition the friends of the Association raise $30,000 in cash or in interest bearing notes, with which to carry on a publishing house. Rev. J. P. Stoddard, General Agent of the National Christian Association, is now doing all he can towards raising the amount needed for securing it. Rev. B. T. Roberts, President of the N. C. A., has several times expressed an opinion that the Free Methodist churches are willing and will be glad to contribute what they can for the support of this Association. We have recently received the following of him, a part of which we emphasize:

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 12, 1875.

MY DEAR BROTHER BLANCHARD:—Our societies, as you know, are poor, and we have everything to do, church edifices to build, and so on, yet I think OUR PEOPLE MIGHT AND SHOULD DO SOMETHING TOWARDS THE PUBLISHING HOUSE. I have not the statistics of the Minnesota or Kansas Conferences, but we are weak in both these conferences. Our societies in this section and in Illinois might help and ought to, and I hope you will GIVE THEM THE OPPORTUNITY."

Rev. L. N. Stratton wrote last September: "It is a good time to ask contributions from churches."

Churches at Wheaton and Coulterville have already taken up contributions for the Association.

In view of the above facts together with our pressing need of funds, we earnestly request you to take up a contribution in your churches for the Publishing House or for the general work (please state when you forward your contribution which it is for) and send the same to H. L. Kellogg, Treasurer N. C. A., 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

We will send you a brief history of the Association, if you request it, which gives further information about our work. When we secure $10,000 we can have the use of the building. About $3,000 has already been obtained. Will you do all you can to help us raise the rest before the first of June? Send interest-bearing notes or pledges from those who will contribute but cannot now pay cash. Will you help on in this good work? We will send you subscription cards or blank notes on application

Yours in Christ,

C. A. BLANCHARD, Cor. Sec'y. N. C. A.

EXPOSITION

—:OF:—

THE GRANGE.

—to—

Illustrated with Engravings, showing the Lodge Room, Signals, Grips, etc.

EDITED BY REV. A. W. GREESLIN.

—:o:—

Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 1875,
BY EZRA A. COOK & CO.,
In the office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, D. C.

—:o:—

HUSBANDMAN DEGREE CONTINUED.

Part of the following may now be sung.

SONG.

1. There are many friends of summer
Who are kind while flowers bloom;
But when winter chills the blossoms,
They depart with the perfume.
On the broad highway of action,
Friends of worth are far and few;
So when one has proved his friendship,
Cling to him who clings to you.

2. Do not harshly judge your neighbor—
Do not deem his life untrue
If he makes no great pretensions,
Deeds are great though words are few.
Those who stand amid the tempest
Firm as when the skies are blue,
Will be friends while life endureth—
Cling to those who cling to you.

3. When you see a worthy brother,
Buffeting the stormy main,
Lend a helping hand fraternal
Till he reach the shore again.
Don't desert the old and tried friend
When misfortunes come in view,
For he needs true friendship's compass—
Cling to those who cling to you.

Assistant Steward to Overseer:—Worthy Overseer, our brothers are on their way to receive their reward and desire counsel from you.

Overseer to Candidates:—Brothers, you are now about to receive your reward as faithful laborers. It is to be made Husbandman in our Order, a position reached by merit alone. There are duties devolving upon you in this degree which must not be overlooked, and in their proper observance, your example will reflect credit upon you and our Order. As a Husbandman, look with earnest solicitude upon children and their welfare, and remember that they are to follow in our footsteps and occupy our positions. If we desire to encourage them to love rural life, we must make its labors cheerful. What a child sees makes the most lasting impression. We may tell them of the pleasures and independence of the farmer's life, but if their daily intercourse with us shows it to be tedious, irksome labor, without any recreations of body or mind, they will soon loose all interest in it and seek fascinations elsewhere. Therefore strive to make your home pleasing, make it more and more attractive. Adorn your grounds with some of those natural attractions God has so profusely spread around us; adorn your family circle with the noble traits of man, a kind disposition, govern them with affection, teach them to love and not fear you, for love is power. (They sing another song.)

Assistant Steward to Master:—Worthy Master, our brothers are now ready to receive their reward.

Master to Candidates:—Brothers, you have labored diligently, and I say to you, "Well done, good and faithful servants." As Husbandmen I now decorate you with the sash. Wear it with honor and dignity. You will now be instructed in the lessons of the signs of the degrees. The first you will receive from Ceres.

Ceres to Candidates:—Worthy brothers, I greet you as Husbandmen. Have faith. In the child where love is instilled by kind parents, its faith in them to protect and provide for its safety and wants is unbounded. So the Husbandman has faith in the Great Provider. He prepares his ground, puts in the seed, having faith in its resurrection. No man comes closer to God in his daily labor than the Husbandman. Constantly surrounded by, and coming continually in contact with, his beautiful creations, let your life show that you appreciate your honored position. Let corn be to you an emblem of faith.

Assistant Steward to Candidates:—Brothers, give heed to further lessons from Pomona.

Pomona to Candidates:—I also welcome you as Husbandmen. I need not prompt you to nurture hope. It is the beacon light that guides us in our labors. Were we deprived of that source of consolation, life would indeed be dreary. When you see the blossoms open in the Spring, hope is there for the luscious fruits, and the Husbandman's labors encourage hope at every turn. Let fruit be to you an emblem of hope.

Assistant Steward to Candidates:—From Flora you will be further taught.

Flora to Candidates:—Brothers, my tribute is the flower seed. Flowers are emblematical of charity; they do not display their beauties to the rich alone. Nay, God decorates his footstool with them. They are everywhere and cover many a deformity; their colors may be admired by all. Their fragrance fills the air and is wafted on the breeze to all alike. Encourage their culture, and dispense your charities as freely and modestly as the rose imparts its perfume.

Assistant Steward to Candidates:—We will now to the Master.

Master to Candidates:—Let the Agate be to you an emblem of fidelity. May your principles of manhood be as firmly impressed, as the lasting colors in the stone, and may our friendship be as firm as the rock itself. The sign of a good Husbandman is that he places Faith in God, nurtures Hope, dispenses Charity, and is noted for his Fidelity. I now give you the sign in this degree. I will also impart to you the signal, annual password, grip, sign of recognition, and patrons test.

Sign Husbandman Degree.

SIGN: Place the open right hand, thumb concealed in the palm, over the heart.

The sign signifies that a good Husbandman is noted for his fidelity, or that he places faith in God, nurtures Hope, dispenses Charity, and is noted for his fidelity.

SIGNAL AT OUTER DOOR: Same as the other degrees, (three raps).

SIGNAL AT INNER DOOR: Five Raps, given thus: Two raps, then a short pause, then one, followed by two more.

PASSWORD: Husbandman.

ANNUAL PASSWORD: (Changed annually, for 1875) Farming. To be given in connection with degree word at inner gate

GRIP: Join right hands, as in shaking hands, place thumbs on the knuckle joint of fourth fingers, rather on outside of joint next to the little fingers, press hard. (This is seldom used).

Sign of Recognition.

Second Position.

Third Position

SIGN OF RECOGNITION: FIRST POSITION, Put the fore-finger of the right hand to the under lip at the right corner of the mouth, the other fingers being yet closed.

SECOND POSITION: Bring the second finger along side of it on the lip.

THIRD POSITION: Bring up the third and fourth fingers; this will open the hand.

ANSWER: Put the right hand to the mouth as the sign given above is completed, and then close, first the third and fourth fingers, then the second, then the first, and let the hand fall to the side. Next, the one that first gave the sign will say: "It appears to me that I recognize you; where have we met?" The other answers: "In the Grange." They shake hands.

PATRON'S TEST. (Master calls on one of the members present to assist him.)

Master to Member: Are you a Patron?
Member: Yes.
Master: How may I know you to be a Patron?
Member: By my words and sign.
Master: Will you give them?

They take positions facing each other, right foot advanced, the member having his thumb placed in palm of right hand as if to give the sign of one of the degrees, the arm hanging by side, slightly inclined outward. They spell together the annual password, (for 1875, Farming) and the Fourth degree word, (Husbandman) beginning with the second syllable:

MEMBER:—I.	MASTER:—B.
MASTER:—N.	MEMBER:—A.
MEMBER:—G.	MASTER:—N.
MASTER:—F.	MEMBER:—D.
MEMBER:—A.	MASTER:—M.
MASTER:—R.	MEMBER:—A.
MEMBER:—M.	MASTER:—N.
	MEMBER:—H.
	MASTER:—U.
	MEMBER:—S.

PATRON'S TEST: (Given as the last letter is pronounced.) Pass right foot to rear (right foot was in front) and right hand to back, quickly.

ANSWER: Same

Master to Chaplain:—Worthy Chaplain, our harvest being ended and the fruits thereof spread before us, it is meet that we return thanks to the Great Creator for these blessings.

PRAYER HUSBANDMAN DEGREE.

Heavenly Father, who openest thine hand and satifiest the desires of every living thing, make us grateful for thy present provision and may the strength it imparts be expended in thy service and that of humanity. Amen.

(Here all enjoy the feast, indulging largely in social intercourse.)

The feast being over, the Master rises in his place at the feast and (calls up) pronounces the closing lecture of this degree.

CLOSING LECTURE BY MASTER, HUSBANDMAN DEGREE.

Another season in the work of our Order has passed. The lessons we have endeavored to inculcate are appropriate to all the walks of life. In the morning, or Spring-time, as Laborers, we are admonished to be diligent and persevering in our researches for truth, and to a faithful discharge of the various duties that devolve upon us. As cultivators we are impressed with maxims that lead to habits of observation, industry, and order. As harvesters, to be joyous and thankful for the blessings that reward our efforts to increase the store of comforts and happiness vouchsafed to man, that when the ripened fruits and falling leaves of autumn, gives place to winter's storm, as Husbandmen, we can enter into the enjoyment of that rest from physical labor which gives us leisure for mental and social culture, and in our Order brings us into that circle where unbounded confidence prevails, and where we study the good of all. Let us treasure up the lessons we have learned both by successes and failures, renew our hopes for the future, and strive to make our lives as harmoniously beautiful as are the works of nature.

A short recess is now taken.

REMARKS ON HUSBANDMAN DEGREE.

Early in this degree the Candidate renews his obligation never to reveal the secrets of the order. He afterwards receives from the Overseer some good instructions to look after the welfare of children with earnest solicitude; to strive to make home pleasing, especially to adorn it with a kind disposition and govern with affection.

This degree contains to some extent the same mixture of falsehood that is found in the other degrees. For instance, the Overseer tells the candidates that the degree of Husbandman in the Grange is "a position reached by merit alone." This cannot be true. A man, however meritorious, would not be allowed to become a 'Husbandman' unless he had paid his initiation fees. Nor unless he had submitted to the ceremonies of the previous degrees; nor could he receive those ceremonies without first having been voted in, unless he was a charter member. Again, "No man comes closer to God in his daily labors than the Husbandman." This is sometimes true, sometimes false.

MATRON, OR FOURTH DEGREE FOR WOMEN.

The feast being over, the Overseer calls to order, giving one rap with the gavel.

Overseer to Master:—Worthy Master, there are several of our worthy sisters, who desire to receive the degree of Matron.

Master:—It will give us pleasure to comply with their request, and the worthy Steward will assemble them for that purpose. (Lady Assistant Steward assembles Gleaners before Overseer.)

Overseer to Candidates:—Worthy sisters, permit me to congratulate you in your desire to advance to the highest degree in a subordinate Grange. May the occasion be one to which you can in after years look back with pride and pleasure. (Lady Assistant Steward conducts them to Chaplain.)

Lady Assistant Steward to Chaplain:—Worthy Chaplain, our sisters come first to you for counsel.

Chaplain to Candidates:—Sisters, speak not evil one to another. Be kind one to another. Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering. Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report—if there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think on these things. Let no man deceive you with vain words. Let nothing be done through strife or vain glory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem others better than themselves.

SONG.

"All blind and deaf the soul may be,
To God's o'erruling plan.
And nothing hear and nothing see
Of truth exalting man.
But they who look with curious eye,
And list with spirit ear,
Shall see bright visions ever nigh,
And heavenly music here."

They pass around the hall during the song and come to the altar.

Master to Lady Assistant Steward:—Worthy Assistant, whom bring you to our altar?

Lady Assistant Steward to Master:—Sisters who have gleaned in the field.

Master to Lady Assistant Steward:—Have you a precedent?

Lady Assistant Steward to Master:—I have.

Master to Lady Assistant Steward:—Will you give it to me?

Lady Assistant Steward to Master:—In Ruth, the Moabitess, who gleaned in the fields of Boaz.

Master to Lady Assistant Steward:—When urged by Naomi to return to her kindred, how did she reply?

Lady Assistant Steward to Master:—Entreat me not to leave thee, or return from following after thee for where thou goest, I will go, and where thou lodgest I will lodge. Thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God. Where thou diest I will die and there will I be buried; the Lord do so to me, and more also, if aught but death part thee and me.

Master to Lady Assistant Steward:—Right, sister, let us trust that equally strong devotion to principles of friendship may exist between us all in our fraternity. Do you vouch for sisters as gleaners?

Lady Assistant Steward to Master:—I do.

Master to Candidates:—As you were not obligated then, it is necessary you now give us a final pledge, for which, if you have no objections you will now be prepared. Gleaners stand around the altar, when they are met by the Master, who gives the same obligation as "Husbandman." (see Page 25) They are now conducted to Ceres.

Lady Assistant Steward to Ceres:—Worthy Ceres, our sisters come to pay their respects to their worthy patroness.

Ceres to Candidates:—Worthy sisters, as nature bestows her favors bountifully, so may you as Matrons, liberally dispense good to your fellow-beings.

Pomona to Candidates:—Wherever you go, whatever do, be as choice fruits, ever welcome.

Flora to Candidates:—Weave for yourself garlands of noble deeds, that shall adorn your path on earth, and on their fragrance rise to immortality. They sing another song here.

Lady Assistant Steward to Candidates:—Let us now to the Lecturer.

Lady Assistant Steward to Lecturer:—Worthy Lecturer, greet our sisters on their way.

Lecturer to Candidates:—Worthy sisters, the Great Creator has appointed to each creature the place it is to inhabit, and each finds on entering the world everything necessary to the preservation of life. How many enjoyments and pleasing sensations does he grant with life to animated beings and particularly to mankind. With what magnificence has he embellished and adorned the world which man inhabits! what sweets social life affords! what tender ties, what warm affections, what delightful sentiments has he created for the heart to enjoy. These are ours; let us appreciate them, and let us never be ungrateful to such a bountiful Creator, and since we are endowed with reason. Let us acknowledge with transports of joy that the earth is full of His mercies. (They sing again.)

SONG.

"The breezes that blow o'er the broad fields of corn
Are music to them who of Spirit are born;
The blossoms that blow on the tree and the vine,
Direct, by their beauty, to wisdom divine;
The voices unite, unite to impart
A lesson of trust to the lonely of heart,
And sounding from earth to the kingdom above,
Is heard the high anthem of gladness, of love.

Lady Assistant Steward to Overseer:—Worthy Overseer, our sisters have been obligated, and now desire further instructions.

Overseer to Candidates:—As Matrons in our Order, remember that the mother writes her own history on the imperishable mind of her child. That history will remain indellible. On the tablet of the mind you write for everlasting good or ill, which storms cannot wash out, nor the slow-moving ages of eternity obliterate. Be careful, then, to engraft those truths which shall be a guide and teacher when your voice shall be silent and you have passed from this to another world. song During the song the sisters pass to the altar, and join hands the Master (calls up) meets them; joining hands, they form a circle around the altar, and all the members join theirs, making a grand circle enclosing the Master and sisters within.) This song is sung as the Grange join hands.

SONG.

"Come, Patrons, let us join our hands,
Around our sacred shrine,
We'll pledge to each fraternal love
As sacred and divine."

Master to Candidates:—Here, sisters, around our altar, with hands united we pledge to you our friendship. We accept your pledge of fidelity, and in turn as we in form enclose you within our sacred circle, so will we in life shield you from harm.

SONG.

"We pledge fidelity, hold fast unto your vow,
In love, in truth, in charity, the pledge you give us now."

I now give you the sign of a Matron, who, with heart and hands, gives aid and succor to our cause. I also give you the annual password, signal, grip, sign of recognition and Patron's test. The Master gives explanation of salutation and all instructions, same as for "Husbandman." As with the Husbandman, the sign of a good Matron is, she places faith in God, nurtures hope, dispenses Charity, and is noted for her Fidelity.

REMARKS ON THE INITIATION CEREMONY OF THE PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY.

"A nation may lose their liberties in a day and not discover the loss for years."

"We have a ceremony of initiation which binds us in mutual fraternity as with a band of iron; but although its influence is so powerful, its application is as gentle as that of the silken thread that binds a wreath of flowers."—Constitution of the Preamble to the Nat'l. Grange.

It will be seen by all who will read carefully the preceding pages that the Grange is but a branch of what is really a religious society. You will observe that it has its mode of divesting its member's "minds" of "prejudices" and impurities. The members are "raised" from the lower to the higher degrees because of merit; that which merits a member to the immunities of the higher degrees is fidelity to his pledges, and obedience to the injunctions of the Order. The Grange proposes to the members of the Order a "law" better than the Bible. "Have we not a better law? Bear we not God's image? Are we not all brethren?" What makes them brethren? Connection with the Order. And, finally, the members are promised the privileges of the "broad and bright plains of the Eden above" as a reward for their labors below. No system of religion in existence, not even the Christian proposes to do more than to "purify the minds of its members, keep them faithful" and finally give them a crown of life.

[TO BE CONTINUED.

News of the Week.

The City.

At an election Apr. 23d for adopting or rejecting a new charter under legislative act of 1872. The Mayor and other officials formed a ring and run up a majority of 1,400 for the measure. The election will be contested for alleged frauds. The new charter would leave the city without any government for six months and would be a golden age for thieves.——J. V. Farwell, the great dry goods merchant, is reported to have gone to England to assist Mr. Moody.

The Country.

The Union Pacific Road has been broken for some time in Wyoming by heavy floods in Weber and Echo canons. Great efforts have been made to relay the track but a transfer has yet to be made with teams for several miles.——Three steamboats burned last Friday at New Orleans at the wharf. From 20 to 100 persons, were burned or drowned.——The Union League Club-house in New York was partially destroyed by fire on Sunday morning.——The centennial celebration of the battle of Lexington took place on the 19th. Great preparations were made at Concord and Lexington. Pres. Grant and members of the cabinet with many other prominent men were present. Orations were delivered by G. W. Curtis and R. H. Dana, Jr. Over 50,000 people attended from Boston and vicinity.——The Sioux City party of miners, taken out of the Black Hills by Superintendent Mix, arrived at Fort Lorraine on Monday. They had to leave half their stock in the hills, as the troops would not wait to find them.

Foreign.

The London revival is increasing. Several hundred ministers were present at one of Messrs. Moody and Sankey's meetings.——The Lower House of the Prussian Diet has passed the bill abrogating those clauses of the Constitution which allow the independent administration of ecclesiastical affairs, the unimpeded intercourse of religious bodies with their superiors, and freedom of clerical appointment.

Address of Anti-masonic Lecturers.

General Agent and Lecturer, J. P. STODDARD, Christian Cynosure Office, Chicago.

State Lecturers:

Indiana, J. T. Kiggins, Waterloo City, DeKalb county, Ind.

Illinois, H. H. Hinman, Wheaton, Ill.

Ohio, D. S. Caldwell, Nevada, Wyandot Co., Ohio.

New York, Z. Weaver, Esq., and J. L. Barlow, 89 Mulberry St., both Syracuse, N. Y.

Pennsylvania, J. W. Raynor, Montrose, Susquehanna Co., Pa.

Wisconsin, Philo Elzea, Delavan, Wis.

Michigan, D. P. Rathbun, (present address) Lisbon Center, N. Y.

Iowa (nominated by State Convention) James Hankins, Mason City, Iowa.

Lecturers at Large:

I. A. Hart, Woodstock, Ill.
C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
W. A. Wallace, Bentonville, Ind.
J. B. Nessell, Ellington, N. Y.
John Levington, Detroit, Mich.
S. Smith, Ionia, Iowa.
R. B. Taylor, Summerfield, O.
L. N. Stratton, Syracuse, N. Y.
N. Callender, Green Grove, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
Linus Chittenden, Crystal Lake, Ill.
P. Hurless, Polo, Ill.
J. R. Baird, Royalton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
C. Wiggins, Angola, Ind.
E. Johnson, Bourbon, Ind.
Josiah McCaskey, Fancy Creek, Wis.
C. F. Hawley, Millbrook Pa.
W. M. Givens, Center Point, Ind.
J. L. Andrus, Mt. Vision, N. Y.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
Wm. Dillon, Dayton, O.
Samuel Hale, Mallet Creek, O.
A. Mayn, Promise City, Wayne Co, Ia.
A. H. Springstein, Ypsilanti, Mich.
R. Faurot, DuPlain, Mich.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, Ashland Co., O.

Home and Health Hints.

KALSOMINING.—Buy the best bleached glue, if the walls are to be white or some light tint (if dark it is immaterial so the glue is clean), and use it in the proportion of a quarter of a pound to eight pounds of whiting. Soak the glue over night; in the morning pour off the water, as it simply swells while soaking. Add fresh water, put it in a pail, and set that in a kettle of boiling water. When dissolved, stir it into the whiting, adding enough water to make it after mixing, of the same consistency as common whitewash. It may be tinted any color, and is applied with a whitewash brush. If the color is rubbed smooth in a little water and then mixed with the wash it will be more even. If the walls have been previously whitewashed scrape away all that will come off, and wash with a solution of white vitriol—two ounces in a pail of water. The vitriol will be decomposed, forming zinc white and plaster of paris, to which the kalsomining easily adheres. It is important to dissolve the glue in a hot water bath, for if scorched by too great heat, its tenacity is impaired or destroyed. Whiting is simply chalk freed from impurities and reduced to a fine powder, and is also known under the names of Paris and Spanish white, though the latter is really a white earth found in Spain. There is a great difference in whitewash brushes, and the beauty of the work as well as the ease of performing it depends very much on a good brush, making it well worth while to pay the difference between that and a cheap one. For the inexperienced it is more difficult to lay on tints evenly than pure white.—Country Gentleman.

DEAFNESS.—Prof. Geo. Buchanan of Edinburgh, in a late address told the following: "At this time a young lady, in a family upon whom I was making a professional visit, asked me if I could do anything for deafness. I said I did not profess to practice aural surgery; but requested her, after I left, to swallow some water two or three times while she held her nostrils compressed between her finger and thumb. Judge of my surprise when I called next morning, to be told that after swallowing the third time, she experienced a sensation of crackling in her ear, and the deafness instantaneously disappeared and did not return. In 1862, Poltizer, of Vienna published his new method of restoring Eustachian deafness, by the very means I have described, with the addition of the introducing a stream of condensed air, admitted to the pharnyx by a tube passed through one of the compressed nostrils.

—To mend rubber goods, take pure rubber and dissolve it in naphtha so as to make a mucilaginous compound. Bring the broken edges of the boot or other article together and fasten them; then with the brush apply the liquid until a thick coating has been formed. It dries rapidly, and the repairing occupies only a few minutes.

Two parts gum camphor, with one part of crystallized carbolic acid, the whole rubbed together with whitening, is an excellent disinfectant and preservative for furs. The odor of the acid is mostly dissipated by the camphor.

To take ink-spots out of mahogany, touch with a feather dipped into a teaspoonful of water to which a few drops of spirits of nitre have been added, and rub quickly with a wet cloth.

To each bowl of starch, before boiling, add a teaspoonful of Epsom salts. Articles prepared with this will be stiffer and in a measure fireproof.

Farm and Garden.

THE CATERPILLAR AND HOW TO DESTROY IT.—This has been a most serious enemy for the last few years to fruit trees in all parts of the country. Some years it has nearly stripped the orchards of foliage to the great destruction of the fruit crops, and if left to accumulate and gather strength, it will finally very much enfeeble the tree. At this season of the year will be seen a small glutionus ring around the small branches, and at or near the extremities of these. This ring is composed of eggs in number from three to five hundred. In the winter the eggs are protected by a water proof varnish which can be destroyed neither by frost nor rain. There is no trouble about detecting the little knots to which reference is here made. And now is the time for their speedy destruction. For this purpose it is best to select a cloudy day, as on a bright one the continuous round of inspection which is carried on is painful to the eyes. Take a basket and ladder so that you may be able to ascend at pleasure. Scrutinize the branches closely, and cut off all those on which eggs are located and burn them. In this way, in one hour, more of the pests can be destroyed than in a whole day further on the season, when they are scattered about on the trees. If any of the eggs chance to be overlooked they will be hatched about the time the leaves begin to open. At this stage the most effectual method is to take a long pole, at the end of which attach a sponge. Finally swab the nest of caterpillars thoroughly, and every single insect that the sponge comes in contact with will be killed.—Cor. Farmer's Home Journal.

ROLLING THE GROUND.—A correspondent of the Germantown Telegraph writes: "On dry or wet ground the effect of the roller is found to be salutary. Plowed and prepared for sowing, dry land is much helped by the roller. The blades of grass spring up sooner and retain a firmer hold in the earth. In a season of drought, rolling has saved the crop when, without it the seed would have never sprung from the ground. In wet and heavy ground it is believed the roller smoothing and strengthening the surface, will leave the soil immediately beneath the surface in a better condition to generate the seed. On grass ground that has been heaved by the frost, the roller has an excellent effect in fixing the roots. Rolling the ground is also good when the land has been laid down unevenly the previous yesr. If the land is too dry, wait till just after a soaking rain, and it will work capitally. It is a good idea to roll ploughed sowed land before harrowing, as it presses down the furrows that would be turned back and makes the surface less uneven, and the harrow pulverizes it much. We find that on an average not one farmer in four has a roller.

SUNDRY MATTERS.—A list should be made of all work that must be done, and that which may be done. Fix a time for doing that which must be done, and stick to it. Do that which may be done in the intervals. This is how leisure is made. This is what is meant by looking ahead. There is much now to be looked to ahead. It is needless to point out what these things are. No man is a true farmer who is ignorant of them, but many farmers fail to think of them in time. We do not pretend to tell a farmer everything that he must do, or how he must do it; our object is rather to remind him of many things that are frequently forgotten until it is too late.

Masonic Books,

FOR SALE AT THE CYNOSURE OFFICE.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and blisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

Allyn's Ritual of Masonry,

Illustrated by a large number of engravings, and ontaining a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, Orange nd Odd-fellows' societies. Price, $5.00.

Mackey's Masonic Ritualist;

OR

MONITORIAL INSTRUCTION BOOK

BY ALBERT G. MACKEY,

'Past General High Priest of the General Grand Chapter of the United States, Knight of the Eagle and Pelican, Prince of Mercy," Etc. Etc. Price, $1 75

Mackey's Lexicon of Freemasonry,

Containing a Definition of Terms, Notices of its History, Traditions and Antiquities, and an account of all the Rites and Mysteries of the Ancient World. 12 mo. 526 pages, $3 00.

MACKEY'S MANUAL OF THE LODGE,

OR

Monitorial Instructions in the Degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft, and Master Mason; with Ceremonies relating to Installations, Dedications, Consecrations, Laying of Corner-stones &c. Price, $2 00.
Paper Covers 2.00.

MACKEY'S TEXT BOOK

OF

MASONIC JURISPRUDENCE.

Illustrating the Laws of Freemasonry, both written and unwritten.
This is the Great Law Book of Freemasonry 570 pages, Price, $2.50

Webb's Monitor of Freemasonry,

LARGE EDITION, WITH NOTES

By ROB. HORRIS, Price, $1.50.
Pocket Edition, 75 cts.

SICKELS' FREEMASON'S MONITOR.

Containing the Degrees of Freemasonry embraced in the Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery, embellished with nearly 300 symbolic illustrations. Together with Tactics and drill of Masonic Knighthood, Also, forms of Masonic Documents, Notes, Songs, Masonic dates, installations, etc. By D. Sickels, 32 mo uck. Price $1.50.

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry,

A Practical Guide to the Ceremones in the Degrees conferred in Masonic Lodge Chapter, Encampments, etc. Illustrated Edition. In cloth, $1 25; paper, 75 cts.

Chase's Digest of Masonic Law.

Comprises a Complete Code of Regulations, Decisions and Opinions upon Questions of Masonic Jurisprudence. Price, $2 25.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor

Illustrated with Explanatory Engravings Price $2.50.

Books on Odd Fellowship.

Donaldson's Odd Fellow's Text Book, By Pasonal Donaldson, D. D.,

GRAND MASTER OF THE GRAND LODGE OF NORTHERN N. Y.,

Ilinstrated with numcrous engravings, showing the emblems of the order. A detailed account of the Forms, Ceremonies, Funeral Services and Odes with music, and a complete mannal for the guidance of Officers and Lodges. Pocket edition Tuck, $1.50.

Grosh's Manual of Odd Fellowship

BY REV. A. B. GROSH.

Containing the history, defence, principles and government of the order; the instructions of arch degree and duties of every station and office with engravings of the emblems of the orders, etc
Price in Cloth, ... $2 00
" Tuck, abridged edition, 1 50

ANTI-MASONIC BOOKS,

(Not our own Publications.)

For Sale by EZRA A. COOK & CO

13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

[FOR CATALOGUE OF PUBLICATIONS OF EZRA A. COOK & CO., See page 15.]

All books sent post paid, on receipt of retail price, bnt BOOKS SENT BY MAIL ARE NOT AT OUR RISK.

Books ordered by express are sold at 10 per cent. disconnt and SENT AT OUR RISK. Party ordering must pay express charges.

Elder Stearns' Books.

Stearns' Inquiry Into the Nature and Tendency of Masonry

With an Appendix.

SEVENTH EDITION.

338 Pages, in Cloth.....60 cents.
" " " Paper.....40 "

Stearns' Letters on Masonry.

Showing the antagonism between Freemasonry and the Christian Religion,
Price, 30 cents.

Stearns' Review of Two Masonic Addresses.

In this scathing review the lying pretentions of the order are clearly shown.
Price, 10 cents.

Levington's Key to Masonry.

This is Rev. Mr. Levington's last, and in the judgment of its anthor, best work on Masonry. The contents of the first chapter are as follows:

"Commencement and growth of Speculative or Symbolic Freemasonry—A table showing the thing at a glance—The use that the Atheists made of it—Identical with Illuminism—Its connection with the French Revolntion, and with the Irish Rebellion—The action of the British Parliament with regard to it—Proofs of its diaholical purposes—Its Introduction, doings, progress and designs in the United States."

The contents of the Eleventh chapter are thns startling:

"Knights of the Golden Circle—Graphic account of them by a seceding Knight, and remarks thereon, showing the identity of the order with Masonry—Qnotations from Sir Walter Scott."

This work is thrilling in statement, and powerful in argument. 425 pages,
Price $1.35.

Light on Freemasonry,

BY ELDER D. BERNARD,

TO WHICH IS APPENDED A

Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship by a Member of the Craft.

The whole containing over five hundred pages lately revised and republished. Price $2,00

The first part of the above work, Light on Freemssonry, 416 pages in paper cover, will be sent post paid on receipt of $1.

MASONRY A WORK OF DARKNESS

ADVERSE TO CHRISTIANITY,

And Inimical to a Republican Government
BY REV. LEBBEUS ARMSTRONG,
(Presbyterian.)

A Seceding Mason of 21 degrees.

This is a very telling work and no honest man that reads it will think of joining the lodge.
PRICE, 20 cents each; $1.75 per doz., post paid

Walsh's Review of Freemasonry

REVISED EDITION,

Is a Scholarly Review of the Institution, by REV JNO. T. WALSH.
Price 25 cts.

Finney on Masonry.

BOUND IN CLOTH, PRICE $1.00.

CHEAP EDITION,

Twenty-five dollars per hundred, by express and not less than 25 copies at that rate.

BY MAIL, POST-PAID:

Per doz.....$3 75.
Single copy,..... 35 c.

THIRTEEN REASONS

Why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

BY

REV. ROBERT ARMSTRONG.

The author states his reason clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the Lodge.

Single copy, by mail post paid..... 05
Per doz., " " " 50
" 100, express charges extra.....3 50

Descriptive Catalogue of Publications of Ezra A. Cook & Co.

13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

BOOKS.

FREEMASONRY EXPOSED,

by CAP'T. WILLIAM MORGAN.

THE GENUINE OLD MORGAN BOOK:—repuhlished with engravings showing the Lodge Room, Dress of candidates, Signs, Due Guards, Grips, Etc.

This revelation is so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. Thousands have testified to the correctness of the revelation and this hook therefore sells very rapidly.

Price 25 cents.

Per Doz. Post Paid..... $2.00
Per hundred hy express, (express charges extra.)..... $10.00

ODD FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

A complete exposition of the Lodge Encampment and Rebecca (Ladies') Degree. The Signs, Grips, &c., shown by engravings.

Single copy, post paid,..... $ 25
Per Doz., " " 2 00
Per Hundred, Express charges extra,..... 10 00

EXPOSITION OF THE GRANGE.

EDITED BY REV. A. W. GEESLIN.

Illustrated with Engravings showing Lodge Room, Signs, Signals, etc. NOW IN PRESS; will be completed about June 1st.

All orders for 10 or more copies, with Cash, received before June 1st, will he filled at 100 rates.

Single Copy, post paid..... $ 25
Per Doz., " " 2 00
Per 100 Express charges extra..... 10 00

Judge Whitney's Defense Before the Grand Lodge of Ill.

Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the Lodge when S. L. Keith, a memher of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, hy attemptiug to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the Lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masoury.

Single Copy, post paid..... $ 2)
Per Doz. " " 1 50
Per 100, Express charges extra..... 8 00

THE BROKEN SEAL.

OR PERSONAL REMINISCENCES OF THE ABDUCTION AND MURDER OF Wm. MORGAN,

By SAMUEL D. GREENE,

Price in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

In Paper Covers per Doz. Post paid.....$4 50
" per hundred hy express (ex. charges extra $25.00

That the book is one of great interest and value is shown hy tho following

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"A MASONIC REVELATION.—Mr. Samuel D. Greene is a venerahle gentleman of the highest respectability, whose statements seem to be worthy of full credence. The Broken Seal: or, Personal Reminiscences of the Morgan Abduction and Murder, is the title of a book of some three hundred pages just issued by him, purporting to give a full and accurate account, from personal knowledge, of the Morgan 'ahdnction,' and other masonic matters which made such an excitement in this country, now almost half a century ago."—Congregationalist and Recorder, Boston.

"We are acquainted with Mr. Greene. and have no donbt that his account is entirely reliable, and of great historic and moral interest. Capt. Wm. Morgan was Mr. Greene's neighbor in Batavia, N. Y.,. and a membcr of the same lodge with him at the time of the great excitement in 1826. The titles to these chapters are sufficiently exciting to give the hook a large sale:—'The Storm Gatherlug;" "Abduction of Morgan;" "Attempted Abduction of Miller and his Rescue;" "What became of Morgan;" "What Morgan Actually Revealed;" "Confession of the Murderer;" "Allegations against Freemasonry, etc."—Boston Daily News.

History of The Abduction and Murder of Cap't. Wm. Morgan,

As prepared by Seven Committees of Citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgau.

This book contains indisputahle, legal evidence that Freemasons, ahducted and Murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offcnco thau tho revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, lncluding Morgan's wife, and no candid person after reading this hook, can doubt that many of the most respectable FREEMASONS. in the Empire State, with others were concerned in this crime.

Siugle Copy, post Paid,... ..... 25 cents.
Per doz. " .....$2,00.
Per 100, Express Charges Extra,..... 10.00.

Valance's Confession of The Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.

This confession of Henry L. Valance, one of the three Freemasons who drowned Morgan. in the Niagara River, was taken from the lips of the dying man by Dr. John C. Emery, of Racine County, Wisconsin in 1848; The confession bears clear evidence of truthfulness.

Singlo copy, post paid,..... 20 cents.
Per doz. " ..... $1.50.
Per 100 Express Charges Extra,..... 8.00.

The Mystic Tie or Freemasonry a League with the Devil.

This is an accomnt of the Church Trial of Peter Cook, and wife of Elkhart, Indian', for refusing to support a Reverend Freemason; and their very ahlo defence presented hy Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry, is antagonistic to the Christian Religion. Single Copy, post paid,..... 20 cents
Per dozen, post paid..... $1 50
Per hundred Express charges Extra, ... 9 00

NARRATIVES AND ARGUMENTS,

showing tho Conflict of Secret Societies with the Constitution and Laws, of tho Union and of the States.

by FRANCIS SEMPLE of Dover, Iowa.

The fact that Secret Societies, interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of Law is here clearly proved. price 20c.

Per dozen, post paid..... $1 75
Per hnndred Express charges Extra..... 9 00

The Antimason's Scrap Book,

CONSISTING OF

21 CYNOSURE TRACTS.

In this hook are the views of more than a Score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of Secret Societies.

The dangerous tendency and positive evil of organized Secrecy is here shown by the most varied and powerful arguments and illnstrations that have ever been given to the puhlic.

Lecturers and othcrs who wish to find the best arguments against the Lodge, should send for this hook.

Those who wish to circulate Antimasonic Tracts ought to have the book to select from.

Single Copy, post paid, ...20 cents.
Per Doz. " $1.75
Per 100, Express charges Extra,.....$10.00

PHELPS' SECRET SOCIETIES Ancient and Modern.

A NEW BOOK OF GREAT INTEREST.

This work is particularly commended to the attention of Officers of The Army and Navy, The Bench and The Clergy.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

"THE ANTIQUITY OF SECRET SOCIETIES, THE LIFE OF JULIAN, THE ELEUSINIAN MYSTERIES, THE ORIGIN OF MASONRY, WAS WASHINGTON A MASON? FILMORE'S AND WEBSTER'S DEFERENCE TO MASONRY, A BRIEF OUTLINE OF THE PROGRESS OF MASONRY IN THE UNITED STATES, THE TAMMANY RING, MASONIC BENEVOLENCE, THE USES OF MASONRY, AN ILLUSTRATION, THE CONCLUSION."

Single Copy, Post Paid..... 5
Per Doz " " $4 75
Per Hundred, Express Charges Extra.....$33 00

MINUTES OF THESYRACUSE CONVENTION,

Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. D. Greene, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathhun, Rev. S. D. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. Unpublished Reminiscences of the Morgan Times, hy Elder David Bernard; Recollections of the Morgan Trials, as related by Victory Birdseye, Esq., and presented by his daughter, Mrs. C. B. Miller; Secretary's report; roll of delegates; songs of Mr. G. A. Clark; paper hy Enoch Honeywell; Constitution N. C. A.; reports of committees, and a report of the political meeting.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion.

A clear cutting argument against the Lodge, from a Christian stand point.

Single Copy.....$ 05
Per 100..... 3 00

SERMON ON MASONRY,

BY REV. W. P. M'NARY,

Pastor United Presbyterian Church, Bloomington, Ind.

This is a very clear, thorough, candid and remarkahly consice Scriptural argument on the character of Freemasonry.

Single Copy, Post Paid,..... 5
Per Doz,..... 50
Per Hnndred, Express Charges Extra.....$3 00

COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES.

Their Customs, Character and the Efforts for their Suppression.

BY H. L. KELLOGG.

Containing the opinion of many rominent College Presidents, and. others, and a FULL ACCOUNT OF THE MURDER OF MORTIMER LEOGETT

Single Copy, post paid.....$ 35
per Doz " " 2 50
per 100 Express charges extra..... 15 00

ANTIMASONIC TRACTS.

WE NOW HAVE 22 ENGLISH TRACTS, ONE GERMAN, AND ONE SWEEDISH

These tracts are sold at the rate of $1.00 per 1000 pages.

A Tract Fund for the Free Distribution of Tracts,

HAS BEEN SECURED AND WE HOPE WILL NEVER BE EXHAUSTED. A friend has pledged this fund a dollar for every other dollar received, so EVERY NEW SUBSCRIPTION TO THE TRACT FUND COUNTS DOUBLE.

Many of our most ea rnest workers in this cause of God are poor men, who would he glad to circulate thousands of pages of Antimasonic literature if they could have them free.

SHALL WE NOT HAVE AN INEXHAUSTIBLE TRACT FUND?

"THE ANTI-MASONS SCRAP BOOK."

Contains our 21 Cynosure Tracts, bound together, price 20 cents. See advertisement.

Address EZRA A. COOK & Co.,

13 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

TRACT NO. 1:

HISTORY OF MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT J. BLANCHARD, OF WHEATON COLLEGE.

This is now published in three tracts of four pages each. Price of each, 50 cents per 100; $1 per 1000.

TRACT No. 1, PART FIRST—Shows the origin of Speculative Freemasonry, and is entiled "HISTORY OF MASONRY."

TRACT No. 1, PART SECOND—Is entitled "DESPOTIC CHARACTER OF FREEMASONRY"

TRACT No. 1, PART THIRD—Is entitled "FREEMASONRY A CHRIST-EXCLUDING RELIGION."

TRACT NO. 1, IN SWEDISH;

translated by Prof. A. R. CERVIN. A 15-page tract at $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 2:

MASONIC MURDER,

By REV. J. R. BAIRD, of Pleasantville, Pa., a seceding Mason who has taken 17 degrees. A 2-page tract at 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 3:

SECRETS OF MASONRY,

BY ELI TAPLEY.

This is a 4-page Illustrated Tract, showing the signs, grips and pass-words, of the first three degrees. 50 cents per 100, or $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 4:

GRAND! GREAT GRAND!!

BY PHILO CARPENTER.

This is a 2-page tract, calling the attention of the public to the despotic and ridiculous titles of Freemasoury. Price 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1,000.

TRACT. NO. 5:

Extracts From Masonic Oaths and Penalties, as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.

This tract is a reprint of a tract published in 1834, and is a very weighty document. A 4-page tract at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 6:

Hon. John Quincy Adams' Letter.

Giving His and His Father's Opinion of Freemasonry (1831.);

AND

Hon. James Madison's Letter,

Giving His Opinion of Freemasonry (1832).

Both of these letters, in one 4-page tract, at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 7:

SATAN'S CABLE-TOW.

A 4-page tract. This is a careful analysis of the character of Masonic oaths, and shows them to be most blasphemous and unchristian; and the Masonic Cable Tow is clearly shown to he the Cable Tow hy which Satan is leading thousands to eternal death. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 8:

Is a 2-page double tract, "ILLUSTRATED." The first page represents a Mason proclaimimg the wonderful wisdom and benevolence of the order, with an article below, entitled "Freemasonry is only 152 Years Old," and gives the time and place of its birth.

The second side is entitled, "Murder and Treason not Excepted," and shows that the Masonic order is treasonahle in its constitution, and is both anti-Republican and anti-Christian. Price 25 cents per 100; $2 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 9, ILLUSTRATED:

FREEMASONRY IN THE CHURCH.

Copy of a petitiou for the higher degrees of Freemasoury, in which Blasphemous and Despotic Titles are enumerated and prayed for. The Copy was printed for the use of "Occidental Sovereign Consistory S. P. R. S," 32d degree—a Chicago Lodge—and was ordered by a deacon of a Christian Church who is Grand Orator of the Grand Lodge of Ill.

TRACT NO. 10:

CHARACTER AND SYMBOLS OF FREEMASONRY.

A 2-page tract, (ILLUSTRATED) hy its "Graud Secretaries, Grand Lecturers, Perfect Prince Freemasons, Grand Inspector, Inquisitor Commanders, Grand High Priests," etc. The wonderful symbolical meauing of "the Cable Tow," "the Square and Compass," "the Lamb Skin, or white Apron,'' and "the Common Gavel," are given in the exact words of the highest Masouic authority. 25 cents per 100 or $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 11;

Address of Niagara County Association, New York,

TO THE PUBLIC;

Concerning the Morgan Murder, and the character of Freemasonry, as shown by this and other Masonic murders. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 12:

JUDGE WHITNEY AND MASONRY.

This tract contains a condeused accouut of Judge Whitney's Defense beforo the Grand Lodge of Illinois, on charge of unmasonic conduct in bringing Samuel L. Keith the murderer of Ellen Slade, and a memher of his Lodge, to justice, with Judge Whitney's subsequent renunciation of Masoury,

An 8-page tract, $1.00 per 100; $8.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 13:

DR. NATHANIEL COLVER ON MASONRY,

and

HOWARD CROSBY, D. D.,

Chancellor of the Unlversity of New York, on SECRET SOCIETIES.

A double 2-page tract 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 14:

GRAND LODGE MASONRY.

ITS RELATION TO CIVIL GOVERNMENT AND THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION.

Opening address before the Monmouth Conventiou, by PRES. J. BLANCHARD of WHEATON COLLEGE. This is a 16-page tract at $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 15:

MASONIC OATHS NULL AND VOID.

A clear and conclnsive argument proving the invalidity of any oath or obligation to do evil. By REV. I. A. HART, Secretary National Christian Association. Published by special order of the Association. 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 16:

HON. SETH M. GATES ON FREEMASONRY.

PROOF THAT THE INSTITUTION THAT MURDERED MORGAN IS UNCHANGED IN CHARACTER

This Is a letter to the Monmouth Convention by Hon. Seth M. Gates who was Deputy Sheriff of Genesee County, and also Secretary of the Leroy Lodge at the time of Morgan's Abduction. A 4-page tract, 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 17:

Origin, Obligations and Expenses of The Grange,

WITH A CONSTITUTION OF A FARMERS' CLUB.

This little tract ought to be put into the hands of every Farmer in the United States. Four-page tract, 50 cents per 100; $4 00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 18:

HON. WM. H. SEWARD ON SECRET SOCIETIES.

Extracts from a Speech on Know-Nothingism in the U. S. Senate in 1855.

The testimony of JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, MILLARD FILLMORE, CHIEF JUSTIC MARSHALL and others, is added.

A 2-page tract, 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO, 19.

BRICKS FOR MASONS TO LAY.

WASHINGTON, MADISON, MARSHALL, RUSH, HANCOCK, ADAMS AND WEBSTER, give brief clear testimony against the Lodge A 2-page tract 25 cents per 100; $2.00 per 1000.

TRACT NO. 20:

OBJECTIONS TO MASONRY.

By A SECEDING MASON, of Corntou, Vermont.

This tract contains many strong arguments against the Lodge drawn from persoual experience, observation and study of its character. A 4-page tract at 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

TRACT NO. 21:

MASONIC CHASTITY.

BY EMMA A. WALLACE.

The author, by wonderfully clear illustration and argument, shows the terribly corrupt nature of Freemasonry. No true woman who reads this will ever speak with approhation of this institution A 4-page tract 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1,000.

GERMAN CYNOSURE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason

By REV. A. GROLE, Pastor, German M. E. Chur

WORCESTER, MASS.

This is our first German tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. Price 50 cents per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

ENOCH HONEYWELL'S TRACT

TO THE YOUNG MEN OE AMERICA. Postage, 3 cents per 100 Tracts. Tracts Free.

Publishers' Department.

A friend writes: "I want, if I can by the help of God, to get into the company of our good friend Clark by getting the number of subscribers required." That number is five for a year. We need forty-three more volunteers for this company. Fill up the ranks.

We thank our working friends for their good words, their efforts and the fruit of their efforts (new subscriptions).

This is the last issue of the paper that those whose subscriptions expire in April receive, unless they renew their subscriptions or order the paper continued.

If any have overlooked this matter, will they be so kind as to attend to it now?

Do you Understand the Situation?

We wish especially to ask the officers and members of the State Anti-secrecy organizations, together with all workers for the overthrow of secretism, to look at the present condition of the Cynosure for a few moments.

There are, we believe, more men in the ranks working against Freemasonry now than there have been at any previous time since the Cynosure was started. There seems to be a general awakening on the subject in different parts of the country. During the last nine months ELEVEN State conventions to consider the evils of secret societies have been held; and six States have been organized in opposition to secrecy for the first time, this year; while last year only three State meetings were held.

One question these friends ask is: "How shall I work in this reform?" No veteran in this work can be found, we think, who would not tell you that the extensive circulation of the Cynosure is a FUNDAMENTAL necessity in waging aggressive warfare. Read the extracts of letters in "Our Mail," published from week to week, and you will see testimonies to that effect which come from all parts of the country. The Cynosure is a weekly lecturer and enlightener. It is a good fore-runner of sermons and lectures on Masonry, and it is a good follower of them. It answers multitudes of questions which arise after the lecturer has departed. On account of the value of the Cynosure to this reform, we wish we could make every reader of its pages an enthusiastic agent for increasing its circulation.

There is also another reason for increasing its circulation. If the publishers of the paper receive more money for it they will be able constantly to improve it. President Blanchard receives no salary for his work, and the paper is conducted as economically as possible, and yet during the year ending the first of this month, the Cynosure receipts did not pay current expenses but three months, viz.: during November, December and January. In the other nine months a debt has been constantly increasing. It was $1,398,-13. But the increase of receipts over expenses during November, December and January reduced it and it is now $942. 83.

Do not let us have an opportunity to say the first of next April (1876) that the receipts only paid expenses three months out of the twelve. A little effort, or perhaps we should say a persevering and vigorous effort, on the part of the friends of this reform will make the Cynosure pay expenses and relieve the publishers and all who desire its success of an injurious anxiety and care which ought to be unnecessary. Will you each do what you can cheerfully and faithfully, asking God for success in obtaining subscriptions, and praying that the Cynosure may prove a blessing to all who read it?

EZRA A. COOK & Co.,
Publishers.

A Popular Book at a Popular Price.

The price of "Phelp's Secret Societies" has been reduced to $25.00 per 100, 25 per copies at same rate. The retail price is 50 cents post paid. This book contains a vast amount of information on the subject of secret societies that cannot be found elsewhere without buying at least a dozen expensive books. This is readily seen from the following table of contents:

"The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Filmore's and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A brief outline of the progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion.

Mount Union College—Its Distinctive Features and Late Improvements.

The late Chief Justice Chase, as Trustee, sonnded the key-note. "Mount Union having the elements of being the best College in the land, should the most freely and widely extend its superior advantages equally to our country's worthy poor or self-dependent." Attendance in departments past year, 1,197; different students from first 11,027, of whom 7,519, one-third ladies, have taught public schools. The departments—ancient and modern Classical, Philosophic, Scientific, Normal, Commercial, Musical, Fine Art, Preparatory—unsurpassed in modern Facilities, and Competent Professors. Apparatus and museums, worth over a quarter million dollars, best in the United States, for objective teaching, applying Science. Superior advantages in Music, Normal Training, Commercial Science; over 2,000 commercial students now fill good situations. College property, donated for the benefit of students, worth $451,235.00, enables any person of either sect to obtain thorough instruction in any study, and support themselves; income last year, $26,540.00, benefiting students; three regular Terms, (Spring, Summer, Fall,) enable students to earn their college expenses by teaching winters, without falling behind college classes; special Winter Term for others; call for teachers greater than supply. This College, by having erected buildings, keeps Board at about $3.00 per week—club and self-board much less. Tuition but a trifle; no contingent or extra charges; students enter any time in term, at proportional rates; for catalogues, address Pres. O. N. Hartshorn, L. L. D., Alliance, or Mt. Union, O. Location, healthy, moral, accessable—15 minutes by the omnibus from Union Depot, Alliance, Stark Co., O., the junction of Pittsburgh, Ft. Wayne and Chicago and Cleveland and Wheeling Railroads. If attendance increase, another excellent building will be added this season, Summer term opens May 11, offering special advantages.

MARKET REPORTS

CHICAGO, April 26, 1875.

The following are the latest advices:

Grain Wheat—Spring, No. 1..	$	1 05
" No. 2	1 01¼	1 02
" No. 3	96	96½
" Rejected		90
Corn—No. 2	72	73½
Rejected	70	70½
Oats—No. 2		61½
Rejected		59
Rye—No. 2	1 06½	1 08
Flour—Winter	5 00	7 00
Spring	3 75	5 25
Hay—Timothy	15 00	19 00
Prairie, "	9 50	14 00
Lard		15½
Mess pork, per bbl		21 80
Butter	17	32
Cheese	10	17½
Eggs	13	13½
Potatoes, per bus	60	90
Broom corn	06	14
Seeds—Timothy	2 20	2 45
Clover	6 60	6 70
Flax	1 85	1 90
HIDES green to dry salted	07	15
Lumber—Clear	37 00	55 00
Common	11 00	12 00
Lath		2 25
Shingles	1 50	3 25
WOOL—Washed	40	58
Unwashed	27	37
LIVE STOCK Cattle, extra	6 75	7 25
Good to choice	5 85	6 60
Medium	5 50	5 75
Common	4 00	5 00
Hogs	7 50	9 25
Sheep	5 00	7 00

New York Market.

Flour	$ 4 70	8 35
Wheat	1 14	1 41
Corn	93	94
Oats	73	77
Rye	97	1 06
Lard		15½
Mess pork		22 00
Butter	12	22
Cheese	12	16
Eggs	16	16½

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED DURING WEEK ENDING APRIL 24TH, FROM Mrs M A Adams, J Ackart, J K Alwood, M A Butts, N B Blanton, J M Bryant, M Campbell, J H Craig, L Crisler, S H Crosby, D S Caldwell, Wm Cheetham, G W Clark, W Cook, Wm N Dean, J R DeJournette, B DeLany, P Elzea, L C Gaskill, A Hard, A Hadley, G Helber, D H Harrington, C Hepler, J S Hickman, W Johnson, D King, J T Kiggins, M Liscomb, H E Linse, S T A Lindahl, D Mackey, J S T Milligan, Wm Miller, L Meier, Wm Millet, N C Moore, A Mitchell, G Nolin, J B Nessell, H Pierce, Wm Patterson, G J Payne, C M Preston, L Pettibone, L Reeve, O J Rose, J P Stoddard, J Stubbs, M C Salisbury, A Smith, A Sutor, H T Slaughenhaupt, W D Sherwood, M H Sly, C Stegner, J Simons, P Smith, W J Sloan, E Trumbull, J Temple, C H Welsh, J Warner, E B Webster, S Wood.

Agents Wanted!

TO SELL THE PUBLICATIONS OF

EZRA A. COOK & CO.

Liberal Terms Offered.

Capable persons who are in need of pecuniary aid may clear

Handsome Profits,

While at the same time aiding the cause of Reform. Apply to EZRA A. COOK & CO., No. 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

SOMETHING NEW.

A CHART OF MASONRY

Showing the degrees from the first to the thirty-third, entitled

Degrees of Ancient Accepted Scottish Freemasonry,

According to a Mannal by Wm. M. Cnnningham. 33d Degree.

Designed by Rev. P. Stoddard, to explain Freemasonry, as shown by Morgan's Exposition and Richardson's Monitor.

A Neat Lithograph 22x28 Inches.

Single copies finely colored, post paid	$ 75
Per dozen " " " "	5 00
Per 100 " " " " Express charges extra	35 00
Single copy, colored, varnished and mounted postpaid	1 00
Per dozen colored, varnished and mounted, post paid	7 50
Per 100, colored, varnished and mounted, express charges extra	50 00

25 COPIES OR MORE SENT AT THE 100 RATES.

TERMS FOR THE CYNOSURE.

$2.00 per annum, in advance.
20c " " " " for postage.

All who canvass for the CYNOSURE are allowed a cash commission of twenty per cent. or twenty-five per cent in books at retail prices, one-half this percentage on renewals, and any one sending $100. for the CYNOSURE during three months, will be entitled to an extra five per cent.

All responsible persons who desire to promote this reform are authorized to act as agents.

CLUB RATES.

No commission is allowed on club rates. Club rates are intended for those who wish to give the commission to subscribers.

Subscriptions may all be sent at one time, or at different times, and in all cases the sender should keep an account of the names and amounts sent.

CLUB RATES, INCLUDING POSTAGE.

Two new subscriptions, one year	$3.00
One new subscription and one renewal, sent ten days before expiration of subscription,	3.00
4 new subs., 1 year., 1 copy free to sender,	8.75
5 " " 1 " 1 " "	10.50
6 " " " " " "	12.25
7 " " " " " "	14.00
8 " " " " " "	15.75
10 " " " " " "	19.50
20 " " " " " "	36 00
10 Renewals " " " "	22.00
50 " " " " " "	95.00

Twenty subscriptions for six months count the same as ten for a year.

How to Send Money.

Post office orders, checks or drafts on Chicago or towns east of Chicago, and currency by express may be sent at our risk. If it is not possible to send by either of the four ways named, money in a registered letter may be sent at our risk, bnt it is not as safe.

The date at which subscriptions expire is with each subscriber's name on the address label. Send renewals before this date occurs. Notice if this date is changed to correspond; if not or if the paper fails to come, write without delay.

We discontinue during the first part of each month all subscriptions which expire during the preceding one except such as are ordered continued with a promise to forward the money soon. We do not like to lose a single subscriber and will not remove names simply because the cash is not received promptly, if we understand that the paper is wanted. Address all letters with subscriptions or orders for Books, Tracts and donations to the Tract Fund to EZRA A. COOK & Co., 13 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1	square, 1 insertion,		$2.00
1	square (1 inch deep)	one month	7.00
1	" "	2 "	10.00
1	" "	3 "	15.00
1	" "	6 "	25.00
1	" "	12 "	40.00

Discount for Space.

On 2 squares 5 per cent, On 3 squares 10 per cent
On 4 " 15 " " On 5 " 20 "
On ¼ col. 25 per cent On one col. 30 per cent

Postage on the Cynosure.

THE POSTAGE ON THE CYNOSURE MUST BE PAID AT CHICAGO. It is twenty cents a year.

The cost of postage now depends entirely on the size and weight, and therefore some smaller papers charge but fifteen cents; and others about the size of the Cynosure charge twenty-five cents a year for postage.

If the subscription price of the CYNOSURE was $2.50 or $3.00 a year, the price of many religious papers containing no more reading matter, we might afford to pay the postage ourselves, but at $2.00 a year we cannot do this with our present Subscription list.

Therefore let all send the postage, 20 cents a year, 10 cents for half a year with their renewals.

The commission on one new subscription for a year will pay the postage on your own and the new subscriber's paper. We would rather have the postage paid by commissions than in any other way.

When postage is not paid we shall have to shorten the time of subscription sufficiently to pay it.

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

"In Secret Have I Said Nothing."—Jesus Christ.

EZRA A. COOK & CO., PUBLISHERS, NO 13 WABASH AVENUE.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MAY 6, 1875.

VOL. VII., NO. 30.—WHOLE NO. 265. WEEKLY, $2 00 A YEAR.

Contents.

	Page
TOPICS OF THE TIME	1
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
Our Pittsburgh Anniversary	8
God Gives the Rain	8
The New Masonic Departnre	8
Jews as Freemasons	8
Notes	9
CONTRIBUTED AND SELECT ARTICLES:
The Mason's Wife (Poetry)	1
Freemasonry Pagan and Idolatrous	1
Warning	2
The Responsibilities of the Present Century	2
Temperance History	3
The Infidel Bradlaugh a Freemason	3
REFORM NEWS and NOTICES: H. H. Hinman in Amboy, Ill.; From Washington county, Wis.; A Veteran Seceder still Lecturing; Association Work in Harrison Co., O; From Chantanqua Co., N. Y.	4
CORRESPONDENCE: The Lutheran Churches; A Suggestion; An Ex-Mason's Offer; An Old Man Pleads for Massachusetts; Our Neighbors; From Rev. S. Ranks; What followed Daniel Dow's Sermon; From the Pine Woods; Our Mail	5, 6
The Lodge Takes a New Departure	7
Another Veteran Fallen	9
Exposition of the Grange (Continued)	12
THE HOME CIRCLE	10
CHILDREN'S CORNER	11
The Sabbath School	7
Home and Health Hints	14
Farm and Garden	14
Religious Intelligence	12
News of the Week	13
Publishers' Department	16

Topics of the Time.

The Philadelphia ministers, in their Union, composed of all the evangelical denominations of the city, made lately an opportune move which may be wisely followed throughout the country. The duty of ministers to solemnize marriage under the existing divorce laws of the State being under discussion the following was passed:

WHEREAS, The law of Christ recognizes but one, or at most two cases of divorce, namely, adultery and wilful and final desertion; therefore,

Resolved, That as Christian ministers, we pledge ourselves not to unite in marriage persons divorced by the State for other causes than those specified, and also that we will teach from our pulpits the truth in relation to this matter, so important to the family, the church, and the Christian State.

George William Curtis, in his finished and eloquent oration at the Concord Centennial, marshalls the internal enemies of our Republic, but forbids despondency or fear of their number or power. He has opened a subject where opinions are neither few nor harmonious. To the evils which threaten through foreign immigration, commercial and political monopolies and the slave system, among others he might have added these,—no less obvious, but more harsh to the public ear—strong drink which is besotting and destroying the bodies, and the lodge, the consciences of our countrymen. The latitudinarian spirit of Mr. Curtis himself, which calls that careful and solicitous guardianship of our institutions, "cynicism" and "one of the foes that we must meet and conquer," wears too roseate hues under his pencil. The "fashion of scepticism of American principles" is indeed one of the "oldest," but far from one of the "worst" of our peculiarities. Washington, Adams and Jefferson gave the warning; and while there shall be a "power of the air" at war with liberty of conscience and of the citizen, so long will fast liberty demand the dower of ceaseless vigilance. Such influences as have driven other republics from the earth operate on ours. Are we to regard our exceptional character the only needed safe-guard? Do we not rather prove and cherish our faith in the future of the nation by watchfulness and activity against suspected enemies?

Another change from the condition of our fathers which calls for most serious reflection is that secularizing spirit which has crept over us, turning the people to mercenaries and unbelievers, and Christ their King to a sectary. We have become liable to the same punishments and the same fate of other nations which have forgotton God. Apprehending such a condition Washington in his Farewell Address, that "Deuteronomy of American history," speaks almost with inspiration: "Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensible supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of patriotism who should labor to subvert these great pillars of human happiness, these firmest props of the duties of men and citizens. The mere politician, equally with the pious man, ought to respect and cherish them. And let us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion. Whatever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure, reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principles."

Since we proved in arms our right to to the "Declaration" of 1876, "American" has been a proud title, of which no man was ashamed in any quarter of the globe; and if—

"In that elder day
To be a Roman was greater than a king,"

much more might the patriotic heart glory in the distinction given by the later Republic. But Mr. McCloskey of New York thinks the fine old sentiment gone into decay; that to be a prince of an Italian power in its whining dotage, so weak it cannot stand alone, is worth more than the privileges and honors of an American citizen. And so last week, with all the pomp and tinsel and imposing ceremony and bewildering rites of popery he took his disfranchisement under this clause in the Constitution of the United States: "If any citizen of the United States shall accept, claim, receive, or retain any title of nobility or honor, or shall, without the consent of Congress, accept or retain any present, pension, office or emolument of any kind whatever, from any emperor, king, prince, or foreign power, such person shall cease to be a citizen of the United States, and shall be incapable of holding any office of trust or profit under them or either of them." Without reference to any question of legality, it certainly is one of honor to what extent an alien may undertake to lead an open war upon one of the most cherished and fundamental institutions of the nation on which he has turned his back. But such is the relation "Cardinal" McCloskey is understood to hold toward our public schools.

The Mason's Wife.

Why stays he still? the lonely hours,
Drag by, in solemn silence deep.
Save the slow ticking of the clock;
While I my lonely vigil keep.

The old clock in the corner there,
Has told the midnight hour drear;
But still he lingers at the lodge,
While lonely I await him here.

Five years ago, when I became
His own, his joyons, happy bride,
He vowed I should be all to him,
Whatever here should ns betide.

But to the Masons' lodge he's gone,
There swearing ever to conceal,
From me his loving, faithful wife,
What they may there to him reveal.

God's word of truth has plainly said,
They twain shall ever be as one;
One's joys shall be the other's joys,
Shall share in all in shade or sun.

But in his breast he ever holds,
A casket I may never see,
May never here its contents know
"A silent tongue" its lock and key;

I hear the longed-for footstep now,
I'll haste with loving words to greet;
I'll ask no questions,---but, ah me!
Where is our converse once so sweet?

E. J. H.

Freemasonry Pagan and Idolatrous.

MR. EDITOR:—It being the usual custom "adopted and practiced in all regular and well-governed lodges (of Freemasons) from time immemorial" to give a lecture to the candidate after initiation, and as I have "regularly" initiated my clerical friend whom, for want of a better name, I call the "Rev. Septimus Jones, D. D.," I shall proceed to explain the ceremony through which he has passed, feeling assured from the vehemence and earnestness with which the Tiffanys, the Feltons, the Parkhursts, the Gurneys, and the entire Methodist church generally in Chicago maintain and adhere to the peculiar institution of Freemasonry that they look upon the ceremonials of the lodge as of equal if not more importance than the pure and simple worship of "Our Father who art in heaven" as represented in the Holy Bible, and which Freemasonry falsely asserts to be "the rule and guide of our faith."

The first or Entered Apprentice degree in Freemasonry may appropriately be and indeed usually is divided into five parts, namely: the Preparation, the rite of Induction, the rite of the Wanderer, the rite of Illumination and the rite of Investiture;" and it shall be my purpose in this and subsequent communications to examine into the origin of each of these ceremonials and to show how utterly at variance are the practices of the Masonic lodge with that divine Gospel which alone can effect man's salvation and which our Lord and Saviour commanded his apostles to go into all the world and preach to every creature.

Preparation.—Under this head the Masonic ritual teaches that the candidate was "neither naked nor clothed, barefoot nor shod, blindfolded, and with a cable-tow around his neck." And being thus prepared, Dan. Sickels, "Past Grand High Priest" and "Secretary General of the Supreme Council Northern Jurisdiction," etc., etc., in his celebrated Masonic work, the "General Ahiman Rizon," acknowledged by the Grand Lodge of Illinois to be one of the most authentic works extant on monotorial and lodge discipline, further instructs the newly initiated (page 5) that "coming from the ignorance and darkness of the outer world his first craving is for light. . . Hence the great the primary object of the first degree, is to symbolize that birth of intellectual light into the world, and the Entered Apprentice is the type of unregenerate man, groping in moral and mental darkness and seeking for the light which is to guide his steps and point him to the path which leads to duty and to Him who gives to duty its reward."

This is authentic Masonic teaching. The minister of God, the dispenser of his holy Word, the divine Redeemer's chosen and annointed embassador is here represented as "coming from the ignorance and darkness of the outer world"—the "type of unregenerate man"—"groping in moral and mental darkness"—"and seeking for light" (of course from the Masonic lodge) which is to point him "to duty and to Him who gives to duty its reward." I need scarcely enter into any refutation of the blasphemous doctrine stealthily concealed under the sophistry of the preceding extract. I will inquire, however, how would the Apostle John or Paul or Peter or James or Jude look had they appeared half naked and blindfolded, with a rope around their necks, at the door of a Masonic lodge seeking for light "to guide them to God the Father, God the Son and God the Holy Ghost? Is this the doctrine they learned at the Mount of Transfiguration, in the Garden of Gethsamene, or at the foot of the Cross? Is this the doctrine which they preached and for which they suffered martyrdom, that we must put a hoodwink over our eyes, a rope around our necks, old drawers upon our person and an old slipper on one foot, and thus present ourselves at the door of a Masonic lodge to learn the way to God, to holiness, to righteousness and to pure and undefiled religion? And yet this is just what Freemasonry does. It presents itself to us as a religion capable of "leading us to duty and to God who gives to duty its reward," and claims our approbation and allegiance on the ground that outside of Freemasonry we are groping in "moral and mental darkness and that it fur-

